The show's newspaper offices, its newsroom and its staff, their attitudes and priorities, ring true - particularly if you allow them some minor dramatic license in such details as exploding computer terminals.

Considering the way the press usually is portrayed in television dramas - as a ravening pack of insensitive animals - this is a welcome change. Here are bright, ambitious, literate and likeable people, who you get to meet through the gimmick of introducing new staffer Anne McKenna (Helen Slater) to her coworkers.

They include William Russ (Roger Lococco on "Wiseguy") as star reporter Redmond Dunne, Kathryn Harrold as Mary Ward, another newsroom star who has been working with a whistle-blower on the missile story.

Kurt Fuller puts in a wonderfully funny performance as Miles Plato, gossip columnist extraordinaire. There's stiff competition between national editor Edison King (Mark Blum) and the more sympathetic metro editor, Clay Gibson (Michael Woods). They are just a few of the people you'll get to know.

The last big series about newspapering was Edward Asner's "Lou Grant," very issue-oriented and intense. "I think 'Capital News' is bigger," Bridges said in an interview. "It involves more people. There are about a dozen characters in this besides myself. The newsroom, everything, is kind of a larger picture. Jo-Jo Turner is quite different from Lou Grant. He's pretty cool - might be dull because of that - and he doesn't explode like Ed used to do, and do very well.

"We are going to deal with a lot of issues - the homeless, the economy, the environment that needs so much attention - but I think it will be a background for what we hope will be entertainment, not a lesson."

Bridges has played a newspaperman before - his first stage role was in a way-off-Broadway production of "The Front Page." He went on to a career in films and has starred in six previous TV series.

"I swore I'd never do another TV series, but here I am," Bridges said. "I love to act and I suppose I just got itchy. If I don't work for a few weeks, I feel like I won't ever work again."

This is the first series for Russ, whose Redmond Dunne looks like a prime candidate for the romantic lead of the series. To that suggestion he said, sounding a little uncomfortable, "Yeah, I guess so, I don't usually think of myself in those terms. I'm an actor and I just kind of show up."

He is intrigued with Dunne. "I love the character because I think he's sort of undefinable with a lot of possibilities," Russ said. "I think he can be smart and he can be stupid, he can be obnoxious, he can be charming, whatever he needs to be at the time.

"One thing I know about him is that he has an enormous amount of integrity which I think will get him into trouble sometimes. He's a very principled character."

He also likes the story lines, which he said come from newspaper people. "One interesting story involves an old friend of mine, a radical SDS type of guy, who brings me some stolen pages from a book that a general is writing. These were the first galleys in which the general talks about knowing Manuel Noriega and how he was going to be a good friend of ours and a strong military leader. After the Noriega affair, he changed it say he always knew he was a dangerous man and we had to keep our eye on him.

"We have a dilemma about whether we should publish these papers, because they were stolen in a sense, yet they do exist. Where to you go? How does the reporter protect his source? How far down the line does Redmond go? He's one of those people who will go all the way if he think it's right."

Russ said the show will focus on the newspeople and their lives. "This show is more oriented to the characters than 'Lou Grant' was," he said, "as opposed to 'L.A. Law,' which is not really about the law but about lawyers."

Russ sees a similarity between acting and reporting. "It reminds me of being an actor a lot of times. As an artist - at least I try to be an artist - you search for the inner feeling, where you say, 'Oh yeah, that's it, that's the truth, that's right.' I think a reporter is trying to do the same thing, find the objective truth of what's going on, whatever the story, and do it with an enormous amount of empathy."

KATMANDU, NEPAL (APRIL 6) UPI - King Birendra fired his government and promised broad reforms Friday but the pro-democracy opposition rejected the overture as an empty gesture and at least 17 more demonstrators were killed in massive protests.

State-owned Radio Nepal announced late Friday the military had been deployed in certain sections of the city ''to maintain law and order.''

At the end of the day, official Radio Nepal announced the government will release everyone arrested during the 6-week-old pro-democracy movement except those who have been charged for criminal offenses.

Throughout the day, demonstrators went on a rampage through the streets of Katmandu, destroying government buildings and houses belonging to pro-government politicians. They tried to set the mayor's office afire in Katmandu, drawing gunfire from police.

In the evening, Katmandu residents blacked out the capital and dug trenches in the inner cities to prevent police vehicles from entering.

Demonstrations were reported in at least five other cities, where protesters clashed with police, who fired tear gas and bullets.

At least seven people were killed in Butwal, two died in Janakpur and eight were killed in Katmandu, bringing to at least 40 the nationwide death toll in six weeks of unrest.

Doctors at Bir Hospital in the capital said a British national, Richard William, was among the dead and reported another British and a Dutch national were injured in the Katmandu shooting.

In the western city of Pokhara, eight demonstrators were wounded, reports from the resort town said.

''The demonstrations today show that the people are not satisfied with the royal address,'' the alliance of eight opposition parties said in a statement. ''The movement will continue until full multi-party democracy is restored.''

Birendra dismissed the government of hard-line Prime Minister Marich Man Singh Shrestha, saying it failed to maintain law and order. He named a former prime minister, Lokendra Bahadur Chand, to replace Shrestha, who had become the nation's longest serving prime minister after taking over in mid-1986.

Birendra also called for a special session of Parliament and said he would order an investigation into the ''unfortunate incidents'' that have accompanied six weeks of unrest.

The king authorized Chand's new Cabinet to open talks with Nepal's growing opposition, which has demanded the kingdom abandon its party-less ''panchayat'' system of government in favor of a multi-party system. He also vowed to begin constitutional reform.

''We will ... be constituting a constitutional reforms commission to make recommendations for political reforms which the Nepali people desire,'' the king said.

''Respect for the ideals and values of democracy has always guided us in the conduct of the affairs of state,'' the 44-year-old king, one of the last absolute monarchs in the world, told his 19 million subjects shortly after dawn in a four-minute Radio Nepal broadcast.

The king did not mention opposition demands for a multi-party system.

''The movement will continue with even greater force,'' said Ganesh Man Singh, leader of the banned Nepali Congress Party, in a message smuggled by opposition activists from a hospital where he is being detained.

Singh asked the international community ''not to be fooled into believing that the royal address will solve the present crisis.''

''If the movement turns against the king, it is the king who is to be blamed,'' Singh said.

Balaram Upadhaya of the extreme United National People's Movement said, ''The royal address is a conspiracy to thwart the ongoing movement, which will continue.''

Immediately after the king's speech, thousands of demonstrators jammed the streets of the capital, waving flags of the Nepali Congress and Communist parties.

About 200,000 people later attended a mass meeting after opposition organizers broke open the locked doors of an open-air theater. Police responded by firing tear gas shells and charging the crowd.

The emergency ward at Bir Hospital in Katmandu, Nepal's largest, said by nightfall it was treating about 100 victims of gunfire, stampeding and beatings. Government soldiers surrounded the facility, where doctors were working overtime to treat the injured.

ANALYSIS BY JOAN HANAUER

NEW YORK (APRIL 6) UPI - Meet Donald and Ivana Frump, a couple vacationing in Acapulco who bear a strange resemblance to Bob Hope and Ann Jillian.

That's because The Frumps are one of the skits to air on ''Ole! It's Bob Hope Acapulco Spring Fling of Comedy and Music,'' to air on NBC Monday, Apr. 9, 8-9 p.m. Eastern time.

''Ivana and Donald are in Acapulco for a reconciliation,'' Hope said in an interview, outlining the sketch. ''I play him and I've got girls stashed away all over the hotel. A chambermaid comes in with our towels. 'No,' I say, 'we only use silk towels, honey - cashmere in a pinch.''

Ivana comments on how hard it is to get good help these days, while Donald makes a date to meet the maid in the linen closet in 30 minutes.

''Would you have married me if my father hadn't left me a fortune,'' Hope said Donald asks Ivana. She reassures him, ''I'd have married you no matter who left you a fortune.''

During the scene the phone rings and Donald makes a deal - no, not for more hotels. He just bought Ted Turner and half of Merv Griffin. The skit ends when Ivana, tired of her husband's philandering, says the first woman who walks in can have him.

In walks Phyllis Diller and Donald exits complaining about a ''hostile takeover.''

''I don't know how he's going to take it,'' Hope said of Trump. Hope, who knows the billionaire and his estranged wife, said, ''I like them both.

This is Hope's 40th anniversary on NBC television - the comedian will be 87 in May. His first stint was a two-hour live production from the New Amsterdam Theater Roof in New York City.

''I came back to do a second show and took a cab from the Waldorf-Astoria hotel,'' Hope said. The cabbie recognized him.

''You gonna do another TV show?'' the drive asked. ''The first one wasn't too good, you know.''

''Who told you?'' Hope asked. ''I'm the public,'' the cabbie replied.

Diller loves working with Hope.

''My idea of the most fun you can have is to do a special with Hope,'' she said in an interview. ''The writers are there and they are funny and there are lots of jokes and fun and giggles and laughs and nothing ever gets tense.

''Whenever anything goes wrong, Hope just hums. He's unflappable, never ruffled. He likes to do things in one take but he's a perfectionist. He's been humming for 40 or 50 years - no tune, just humming. It's a nice habit. He never mouths off. Then everybody stays calm.''

Diller, who is joined by guest stars Jillian, Kirk Cameron and Clint Black does her own monologue on the show, from which she recalled what may be her best line:

''The big Hollywood news is that they're doing a miniseries on Elizabeth Taylor's life and the role is alternately played by Cher and Roseanne Barr.''

TOLEDO, OH (APRIL 6) UPI - The Champion Spark Plug Co. said a continued slump in the aftermarket prompted a decision to phase out plants in Toledo and Detroit by 1992 and move the work to facilities in Burlington, Iowa, and Cambridge, Ohio.

William Basedow, Champion's director of employee relations, said the move was decided some time ago but consolidation was delayed to determine whether the aftermarket would recover enough to maintain production at all four plants.

''Champion has been plagued by overcapacity for a number of years,'' Basedow said. ''The decison is forced by conditions beyond the control of the company.''

There are 430 salaried and hourly workers at the Toledo facility and 245 in Detroit. Champion's headquarters, research and development and sales force will continue to operate from Toledo.

''Recommendations were made to the prior management several years ago, that manufacturing facilities be consolidated, but a decision was postponed in the hope that market conditions would improve,'' he told a news conference.

Champion has operated in Toledo since 1910 and Detroit since 1915. The company was acquired by Cooper Industries of Houston in March 1989 in an $800 million stock deal.

Basedow said transfers will be offered to the manufacturing employees, but he was uncertain how many people would be needed at the other plants. The company said it will meet with the union regarding the timing and effects on the employees.

The United Auto Workers union, which was holding its Region-2B conference in Lima, could not be reached immediately for comment.

Basedow said the union's international unit was told of the move, but he said the decision had nothing to do with labor costs. The Burlington plant which has 80 percent of Champion's automotive business, has a ceramic manufacturing plant that ''played a large factor in the decision.''

''In Cambridge we have a natural gas well,'' he said.

During the past several years Champion has been shifting production to other states, including moving its aviation spark plug division to Liberty S.C.

Champion spokesman George Braatz said the South Carolina plant operates as a separate entity that reports directly to Cooper.

In May 1989, Champion laid off 255 hourly workers, nearly half of its Toledo manufacturing work force, and between 30 and 40 related salaried jobs. The layoff was part of a series of moves that have steadily reduced the size of the Toledo work force.

Five years ago, Champion employed about 2,000 salaried and hourly people in Toledo.

The UAW has made several concessions to keep the plant open and in January 1988 the union signed a four-year agreement that was reached before the old agreement expired.

During the past decade Champion has been dogged by sluggish sales of its spark plugs, based largely on their longer lifespan and smaller engines that require fewer plugs. Basedow said Champion supplies the Chrysler Motors Corp. and sells the rest of its product in the aftermarket.

The company has been branching out into ancillary automotive products made for it, but sold under the Champion name.

Champion has about 10,000 employees with plants, assembly operations or joint ventures in 16 countries. The company is the world's leading manufacturer of spark plugs for all types of internal combustion engines.

It had sales of $738 million in 1988, the last year it reported separate financial figures.

Champion joins a growing list of large companies that have kept their headquarters in Toledo, but have either moved their manufacturing operations or drastically reduced their employment levels during the past five years.

Those companies include the Dana Corp., Owens-Illinois Inc., Owens-Corning Corp.; Libby-Owens-Ford. Co., and Therma-Tru Inc.; Sheller-Globe Corp., and the DeVilbiss Co., which Champion sold in 1988.

BEIRUT, LEBANON (APRIL 6) UPI - A radical Palestinian group holding hostages said Friday it has contacted French officials to discuss freeing a French woman, a Belgian man and a child they conceived in captivity, but not a second child and four other Belgians.

''I am glad to announce that our group has agreed to respond to an appeal by (Libyan leader Col. Moammar) Gadhafi ...'' said Walid Khaled, spokesman of the Fatah Revolutionary Council of Abu Nidal, in a statement delivered to a Western news agency in Moslem west Beirut.

Gadhafi appealed on Tripoli Radio Wednesday for the release of hostages in the Middle East to mark the Moslem holy month of Ramadan.

Khaled said, ''I am glad to announce that dialogue and contacts now under way include Mrs. Jacqueline Valente, her boyfriend Fernand Houtekins and their child, Sophie Houtekins.''

He said ''efforts have been exerted by Col. Moammar Gadhafi and through dialogue with representatives from the French government'' and ''congratulated (French President Francois) Mitterrand for this triumph.'' He did not elaborate.

The statement, which also was released in Paris, implied the Abu Nidal group was not considering the imminent release of four other Belgians also kidnapped Nov. 8, 1987, from a yacht off the Israeli-occupied Gaza Strip, and a second child Valente reportedly gave birth to in captivity.

Thursday in Beirut, a statement from the group said it was ''engaged in immediate contacts with the concerned parties'' regarding Gadhafi's appeal particularly in the case of ''Jacqueline Valente and her family.''

The Palestinian group did not then identify the ''concerned parties'' but analysts suggested French and Libyan diplomats were involved.

Khaled Friday criticized ''Belgian authorities for not having deployed any effort despite direct contacts with our group to free the prisoner Fernand Houtekins.''

The Abu Nidal group spokesman said he hoped the negotiations ''draw the attention of the Belgian Government on the importance to fulfill its commitments ... and to limit the hostile Zionist activity against our people's revolution and our nation's cause.''

The Fatah Revolutionary Council claimed responsibility for kidnapping those on the yacht, accusing them of being Israeli spies. The accusation has been repeatedly denied by their families.

The other Belgians held have been identified as Houtekin's brother Emmanuel Houtekins, his wife Godelieve Kets and their children Laurent and Valerie.

When the group was taken hostage, Valente had two older children with her. Those two were freed and surfaced in Libya in December 1988 after an appeal by Gadhafi, but Valente has given birth twice in captivity.

A Lebanese security source in Beirut, who requested anonymity, has predicted ''a breakthrough in Valente's plight'' on Monday.

Aside from those kidnapped from the yacht, 18 other Westerners are believed held hostage in Lebanon by Moslem fundamentalist groups: eight Americans, four Britons, two West Germans, two Swiss, one Irishman and an Italian.

In Beirut, the International Committee for the Red Cross published in Lebanese newspapers Friday a copy of a poster appealing for the release of the two Swiss nationals, who work for the humanitarian agency.

The poster is part of the agency's campaign to free Elio Erriquez and Emmanuel Christen, orthopedic technicians who were training local Lebanese in the making and fitting of artificial limbs.

Elio, 23, and Christen, 32, were kidnapped near the refugee camp of Ein El Helweh on the outskirts of Sidon, 24 miles south of Beirut, Oct. 6.

There was no claim of responsibility, but the camp is controlled by various guerrilla factions loyal to Palestine Liberation Organization Chairman Yasser Arafat and radical groups supported by Syria, Libya and Iran.

''Release Elio and Emmanuel. Victims need their humanitarian assistance,'' said the poster showing an olive branch and a dove flying in the horizon with the picture of the two captives in the middle.

The agency has repeatedly appealed for help in securing the release of the two men.

BY JOSEPH COLEMAN - UPI

BOGOTA, COLOMBIA (APRIL 6) UPI - The drug war in Colombia has become a battle of nerves, with both the government and the cocaine cartels shifting positions and making contradictory moves to keep each other off balance.

The Medellin cartel has played a double game, mixing terrorist attacks with conciliatory gestures. On Thursday, cartel thugs planted a 1,500-pound bomb in northern Bogota that was then defused by police. Cartel hitmen continued targeting Medellin police agents, killing 16 of them this week.

At the same time, the drug lords on Thursday released kidnapped Liberal Party Sen. Federico Estrada Velez, abducted in Medellin on Tuesday, just 24 hours after theatening to ''execute'' him unless the government freed two cartel gunmen. The government announced the two were not being held by authorities.

The administration of President Virgilio Barco has also shifted its weight between hard- and soft-line stances. Last week, the government took the hard line when it broke a two-month lull in extraditions by sending alleged cartel member Fernando Gutierrez Perez north to the United States for trial and authorizing the extradition papers for five others.

But Barco followed that get-tough action this week by hinting from Europe that if alleged drug cartel chief Pablo Escobar surrendered, he might not be extradited to the United States and would stand trial in Colombia instead.

On Thursday night, the National Security Council issued a communique roundly condemning cartel terrorism and the police-killing spree in Medellin, but remained vague on the extradition question.

When asked Thursday night by reporters if the government would try Escobar in Colombia if he surrendered, but would extradite him if he were captured by the police, Interior Minister Horacio Serpa Uribe said, ''That's your interpretation, and it's very interesting.''

The ambiguous government position has been matched by similar statements by Liberal Party presidential candidate Cesar Gaviria Trujillo promising ''flexibility'' for traffickers that hand themselves in.

Social Conservative candidate Rodrigo Lloreda Caicedo this week outlined a less obscure plan, offering to exempt the drug lords from extradition if they give up the cocaine business and surrender.

The government was clearly stung last month when Carlos Lemos Simmonds quit as interior minister and accused the Barco administration of going soft on the drug lords. The charges were followed by revelations of secret negotiations with the cartel for the release of the kidnapped son of a close presidential advisor, negotiations that might have involved the government.

The administration countered the bad publicity with the Gutierrez Perez extradition and Barco went on national television to deny the accusations of a retreat in the drug war.

But he is apparently holding out the possibility of an end to extradition in the hope that the drug lords will surrender.

His aim may be to make the kingpins think they can strike a deal with the government and reconsider launching a bombing and assassination campaign similar to the one last year that killed more than 200 people in four months.

The drug lords, on their side, may be looking to work out an agreement with the government, avoiding both lengthy prison sentences in the United States and the bloody fate of Medellin cartel military chief Jose Rodriguez Gacha, who was shot to death fleeing police helicopters in northern Colombia in mid-December.

HAVANA, CUBA (APRIL 6) UPI - Authorities arrested at least 24 people in March and are holding them without charge in solitary confinement cells in the latest crackdown on human rights activities, a human rights spokeswoman said Friday.

Aida Valdez Santana, chief spokeswoman for the independent Cuban Human Rights Committee, said the detainees are being held in high security prisons and face long prison terms or even the death sentence.

''Our situation is becoming very dangerous. We are sitting on a volcano,'' Valdez told United Press International. ''Since March there has been a wave of repression against us.''

The 51-year-old Valdez, who fought in the 1959 revolution in which Fidel Castro overthrew dictator Fulgencio Batista, has been given jail sentences three times between 1967 and 1988 for disagreeing with the Cuban Communist Party.

''We have reports of at least 24 people detained in March and being held in high security state prisons in solitary confinement cells,'' Valdez said, adding that all 24 are members of her committee.

Although Valdez said she had not received any reports of torture or beatings, she added, ''I was in one of those cells and I know how terrible it is to be there.''

The government has not pressed formal charges against those arrested, but family members have been told by investigators they may be tried for rebellion.

High-ranking Cuban officials have said recently they will prosecute people they accuse of trying to destabilize the government by giving false information to foreign journalists.

Groups such as the Human Rights Committee are illegal in Cuba, where the only party permitted by constitution is the Cuban Communist Party, headed by Castro.

''The charge of rebellion against the state is very serious and it carries 10 to 20 years in prison or even the death penalty,'' Valdez said. ''The government is trying to stop our movement, but it cannot persuade people like me.''

Valdez said authorities have also attacked the homes of two senior human rights activists, Gustavo Arcos Begnes, secretary general of the committee and his brother Sebastian.

''They came, surrounded their houses and threw stones. They also painted the walls,'' said Valdez.

The Cuban Human Rights Committee was founded in 1986, and has a large number of activists across the island. Valdez declined to reveal how many for safety reasons.

''I was a revolutionary ... I love our revolution, but man is not a robot. He has the right to express his ideas,'' said Valdez. ''People do not have all their rights here. They cannot travel abroad, they cannot express themselves freely.''

''Castro is struggling against the world alone,'' Valdez said.

PARIS (APRIL 6) UPI - French police said Friday they dismantled a Basque terrorist commando unit they believe responsible for attacks that killed 29 people in Spain.

Police seized 17 suspects in the French Basque country Wednesday and Thursday in the largest operation against the Basque separatist group ETA in two years. The operation followed the arrest in southern Spain last Monday of Henri Parrot, a French national captured while transporting more than 660 pounds of explosives and several bomb detonators.

A series of searches along the Basque coast by French police also resulted in the seizure of arms, including four grenades, two Kalashnikov automatic rifles, three machine pistols and several rockets as well as nearly 9 pounds of amonal, an explosive frequently used by ETA military commando groups.

French police sources said most if not all of the 17 persons arrested in Bayonne, Saint-Jean-de-Luz and other smaller Basque towns are French citizens.

The dismantling of the French ETA unit is particularly significant, the sources said, because although French Basques have long given refuge and moral and technical support to their Spanish counterparts, the discovery of the French ETA unit marks the first time that French nationals have been suspected of actually taking part in ETA guerrilla activities.

The French government began extraditing some suspected ETA terrorists back to Spain and expelling others to third countries several years ago in a major policy change that has led to improved relations between Paris and Madrid.

Among those being held by French police Friday were Frederic Haremboure, 36, and Jacques Esnal, 39, who with Parrot are considered by the Spanish Interior Ministry as the principal members of ETA's French unit.

The two men are believed to have been helping Parrot transport the explosives when they were intercepted last Monday by Spanish Civil Guards near Seville in southern Spain. Parrot was captured after shooting at the guards, wounding two of them, but Haremboure and Esnal managed to escape and return to France.

The three men were on their way to plant explosives at Seville's main police station, according to the authoritative French newspaper Le Monde, which cited Spanish sources.

Spanish authorities quoted by Le Monde say the French unit is responsible for 27 attacks in Spain since 1978, including the murders of two judges, three generals and the 1978 killing of Vice Adm. Ramon Prado Colon de Carvajal.

The sources said the group is also believed to be responsible for an attack on a Civil Guard garrison in Saragosa on Dec. 11, 1987, that killed 11 persons, including five infants.

Some of the attacks now attributed to the French group, however, werepreviously blamed on ETA's Madrid commando by Spanish authorities.

The French commando is believed to have been formed in 1978 by Domingo Iturbe Abasolo, who was one of ETA's founders. Iturbe Abasolo, who was expelled from France to the West African country of Gabon in 1987, was killed in a car crash in Algeria later that year.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 6) UPI - The cost of repairing America's battered and bruised savings and loan industry will cost taxpayers at least $68 billion more than estimated for a grand total of $325 billion, congressional auditors said Friday.

The administration had figured the unprecedented rescue, which dwarfs the Marshall Plan that reconstructed Europe at the end of World War II, would cost $257 billion.

The latest price tag tallied by the General Accounting Office is subject to ''significant change'' as federal officials take over and close thrifts that lost mountains of money through bad loans, poor management and outright theft.

''We believe that it is vitally important to provide the taxpayers a complete and accurate accounting of the costs to put the savings and loan crisis behind us,'' said Charles Bowsher, comptroller general of the United States.

''The American taxpayers are having to pay billions of dollars to resolve the savings and loan crisis,'' he said. ''We owe it to them to vigorously go after those who helped cause the crisis.''

In testimony to the Senate Banking Committee, Bowsher said the increase is based on the need to further shore up ailing institutions, cover interest on government bonds issued to finance the bailout, and pay escalating administrative costs.

''It is likely that ... costs to resolve troubled institutions will be higher than (the increase of) $68 billion,'' he said, and the total cost could eventually rocket to $400 billion or even $500 billion.

The increase will be covered by tax money, the sale of savings and loan assets as well as higher premiums on deposit insurance.

The chairman of the banking committee, Sen. Donald Riegle, D-Mich., said the GAO estimate was probably ''on the conservative side.''

At the White House, presidential economic adviser Michael Boskin said, ''We will be taking a thorough look at the GAO report ... and we will analyze it in detail.''

The GAO's estimates are based on a final audit of the defunct Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp., or FSLIC, which used to insure deposits at the nation's savings and loans. That responsibility has been transferred to another agency.

In July 1989, the Office of Management and Budget projected it would cost $257 billion to settle the FSLIC's obligations over 33 years and mend other damage caused by the financial fiasco.

''After losing $100 billion from 1984 through August 8, 1989, FSLIC has now closed its doors with an $87 billion capital deficit - the largest ever reported by a public or private corporation,'' Bowsher said.

''These statements raise the important issue of how much money will be needed to resolve the savings and loan crisis,'' he said.

In addition, Bowsher called for more federal action ''to prevent another crisis of this magnitude.''

''Positive action to identify, correct, and prevent the internal control, and compliance abuses of the past is critical,'' he said.

TOKYO (APRIL 6) UPI - Sigourney Weaver, star of the movie ''Gorillas in the Mist,'' blasted the mayor of a Tokyo suburb for purchasing two endanged wild gorillas to display in the city zoo, according to a copy of her letter obtained Friday.

Weaver, who was nominated for an Oscar for her portrayal of gorilla researcher Diane Fossey, told the Mayor of Chiba City his record $550,000 purchase of two infant gorillas will encourage poachers to continue smuggling the endangered species.

Trade in gorillas is prohibited by international treaty, but a loophole in Japanese law allowed Chiba City to purchase the gorilla pair from a Tokyo animal dealer, according to the World Wildlife Fund conservation group.

Weaver's popular movie illustrated how poachers kill mothers and other adults to capture infant gorillas for export.

''Chiba City is sending a clear signal of encouragement to poachers and illegal gorilla traffickers all over the world that gorilla poaching will be richly rewarded in Japan,'' Weaver said in her letter to Mayor Asahi Matsui.

The mayor was unavailable for comment, but a Chiba City spokesman confirmed the gorillas had been purchased.

''Your actions demonstrate an unconscionable contempt for the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Fauna and Flora, effectively subvert gorilla conservation efforts throughout Africa and undermine the international struggle to protect all wildlife,'' Weaver said in the letter obtained by United Press International.

The two lowland gorillas were imported to Japan in May 1987 by a Tokyo animal dealer, Aritake Chojuten, with papers saying they had been bred in captivity in Spain, according to Traffic Japan, a division of the World Wildlife Fund which monitors wildlife trade.

The Convention on International Trade on Endangered Species investigated the gorillas and determined they had not been bred in captivity and were most likely smuggled from Africa to Spain where false documents were written to allow them to be exported.

Despite the findings of the convention, Japanese authorities could not confiscate the gorillas because Japanese law does not allow retroactive confiscation of animals once authorized for importation, said Tom Milliken of Traffic Japan.

The World Wildlife Fund said the gorillas were originally purchased for $80,000 and sold to the Chiba Zoo for $550,000 thus ''stimulating the commercial market for rare and protected species.''

(APRIL 6) UPI - NO clean-up was necessary to handle a spill this morning on the Arthur Kill waterway between New Jersey and Staten Island. About 15-thousand gallons of the light gasoline additive naptha spewed into the Arthur Kill when a gasket on a pipeline burst. The waterway was closed for about two hours, but re-opened later when officials determined that the spill was evaporating quickly.

Officials say the chances are poor for global eradication of diseases such as measles, rabies, tuberculosis and leprosy. But the International Task Force for Disease Eradication says there's a good chance for eliminating polio, river blindness and another parasitic illness common in developing counties. In its investigation of measles, the task force determined that a vaccine must be developed for infants before the childhood disease can be completely eliminated. Measles were blamed for two-Million deaths world-wide in 1989.

LIVERMORE, CA (APRIL 6) UPI - Federal inspectors found many deficiencies but no criminal wrongdoing or need to shut down work at the U.S. nuclear weapons research lab at Livermore.

John Tuck, undersecretary of the Department of Energy, reported Thursday on a six-week "tiger team" probe of the top-secret Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory, a home of "Star Wars" research, but gave no details.

The Energy Department is conducting a review of the nation's 17 nuclear weapons research and production facilities for environmental problems and compliance with health and safety regulations.

Tuck said the findings of the 60 inspectors will be released in two weeks after Energy Secretary James Watkins, lab officials, Congress and regulatory agencies review the preliminary report.

Team leader Ed Cumesty said "numerous deficiencies" were found in lab management and record-keeping for health, safety and environmental matters. But, he said, "no basis to curtail or cease any ongoing operations" at the lab were discovered.

Environmentalists seeking to halt the lab's nuclear weapons work said they feared the report would "gloss" over problems at the facility, which is managed by the University of California under contract to the Energy Department.

Marylia Kelley, spokeswoman for Tri-Valley Citizens Against a Radioactive Environment, charged that the lab has a 30-year history of accidents, toxic leaks and nuclear contamination. Lab director John Nuckolls pledged an improved, "self-correcting" management system that will make future inspections unnecessary.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 6) UPI - President Bush has invited Prime Minister Choanhavan Chatichai of Thailand to make a ''working visit'' to Washington June 14-15, a spokesman said Friday.

White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said that Bush would meet

BOSTON (APRIL 6) UPI - A USAir jet carrying 68 people made an emergency landing Friday at Logan International Airport after a smoke indicator light warned of a possible fire on board, officials said. The plane landed safely and there were no injuries.

Flight 768, a Boeing 737, was traveling to Providence, R.I., when the warning light went on, said Dee Clarke, spokeswoman for the Massachusetts Port Authority.

Air traffic controllers declared an emergency and the craft was diverted to Logan, the nearest airport. The plane landed without further incident at 1:04 p.m., Clarke said.

The jet was carrying 63 passengers and five crew, she said. Clarke did not know the plane's point of origin. She said there were no visible flames when the plane landed, but authorities were going over the craft to make sure there had been no fire.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 6) UPI - Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze, wrapping up more than two hours of talks with President Bush, held out hope Friday that agreement would be reached on a nuclear arms reduction treaty in time for the upcoming superpower summit.

Shevardnadze, standing outside the White House in pouring rain, said he and Bush had discussed a broad range of issues during the session, which he called ''not only rather lengthy but also very substantive.''

''The presidents will sign very important documents during the summit,'' he said, ''and that will include certain agreements on arms control.''

He predicted specifically that the Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty to slash strategic nuclear arms would be ready for Bush and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev to initial when they meet May 30-June 3 at an undisclosed location.

''During the summit ... we'll try to initial the (START) treaty during the summit, although a lot of work remains to be done,'' said Shevardnadze. ''All missiles, all strategic systems will be included.''

His optimism appeared to conflict with diplomats on both sides who said the earlier-than-expected summit meeting - the second for the two leaders - would make it unlikely that work on various arms accords could be completed.

Shevardnadze's extended White House visit preceded his last scheduled meeting with Secretary of State Baker. The two men have been leading three days of pre-summit talks on a wide range of issues.

White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater also expressed hope that the pacts would ready in time but sounded more doubt.

''Both presidents indicated (in Malta) they would like to the objective of getting a treaty to sign at the June summit. That remains our goal and that remains our hope. But I think that the nature of some of these issues is difficult enough that there is certainly no guarantee at this time that we'll have a final treaty ready to sign. ... We are certainly going to push for it.''

Fitzwater, calling the talks ''extensive, cordial and productive,'' also quoted Bush as saying, ''Ours is a vitally important relationship. We have problems, including Lithuania. We are determined to resolve current arms control issues and move forward with the process. And finally, we acknowledge the changes in Europe and share a conviction that stability is important.''

Shevardnadze also discussed the explosive situation in Lithuania, telling reporters the Soviet Union felt pressure to maintain order in the breakaway Baltic republic.

''It is something we don't like but we have to do it,'' the foreign minister said.

He declined to disclose specific discussions other than to say that both he and Bush raised the subject during the session, which ran an hour and 20 minutes over the hour set aside on the president's schedule.

''We're not avoiding discussion of this question because we have a clear conscience,'' Shevardnadze said.

Shevardnadze also declined to discuss a letter for Bush he brought from Gorbachev and said that he was sure that a solution to the problem of German reunification will be found ''that would be acceptable both to the NATO countries and to the Warsaw treaty countries.''

The May 30-June 3 summit was announced Thursday, but neither the Kremlin nor the White House disclosed the precise meeting dates or the summit site. Shevardnadze said he expected a ''few more days'' will be required to agree on specifics.

The first summit between Bush and Gorbachev was last December at the Mediterranean island of Malta, largely a get-acquainted weekend session.

Since Malta, the political composition of Eastern Europe has changed dramatically and Gorbachev has been under pressure in the Kremlin to contain the rebellious Baltic states, particularly Lithuania's bid for secession and the threat of similar moves by Estonia and Latvia.

Shevardnadze said it was not ''appropriate to speak here of assurances'' he may have made to Bush on Lithuania, where the administration has repeatedly called for dialogue and rebuked the possible use of force.

''Again, this is a domestic affair for the Soviet Union,'' he said.

At the same time, asked if the republic would be allowed independence, Shevardnadze replied: ''This is a question that the Lithuanian people will have to decide. The people have not yet spoken.''

WASHINGTON (APRIL 6) UPI - America's civilian jobless rate declined to 5.2 percent in March but the slim 26,000 increase in the number of new non-farm jobs suggests a rather stale economy, the Labor Department said Friday.

Factory jobs continued to vanish in March, and the overall increase in new jobs was the smallest gain since June 1986 when the number dropped by 110,000, government economists said.

''Little job growth took place in the nation's business establishments,'' said Janet Norwood, commissioner of the department's Bureau of Labor Statistics, which compiled the monthly report.

The national jobless rate for January and February stood at 5.3 percent and the December rate was 5.2 percent. Including military personnel, the March jobless rate was 5.1 percent.

The figures are adjusted to reflect seasonal factors.

After strong gains in employment in January and February, most economists expected little change in the March jobless rate, which has hovered in the same range for the last 18 months.

''We believe the economy is growing moderately after a period of robust growth,'' presidential economic adviser Michael Boskin said at a White House news briefing.

But construction hiring slowed last month, in the wake of massive hiring during the unseasonably warm winter, while the number of jobs at the nation's factories dropped by 30,000.

''Manufacturing is clearly at a steady decline that has continued even though the rest of the economy is healthy,'' said Russell Sheldon, an economist at Mellon Bank in Pittsburgh.

Over the past year, the number of factory jobs has plummeted by 250,000.

''Employment declines have been particularly pronounced in the major metal and metal-using industries within the durable goods sector and apparel in the non-durable sector,'' Norwood said.

With the 26,000 gain in non-farm jobs, the total for that category stood at 110.3 million people in March, while the average weekly hours worked held at 34.6 hours for the second straight month, the Labor Department said.

Economist Allen Sinai, of the Boston Co., said an increase in average non-farm hourly wages to $9.92 in March from $9.88 in February works out to an annual wage inflation rate of 5 percent.

Most of the increases were in the services sectors, where employers had a hard time filling jobs, Sinai said.

The Labor Department's latest estimate of discouraged workers, those who have given up looking for jobs, stood at 747,000 for the first three months of the year - the lowest number since the first quarter of 1979.

Since November, the number of new government jobs has grown by more than 400,000, and 55,000 temporary workers hired to assist with the 1990 census accounted for a further increase in March.

More than 200,000 census takers are expected to be added to the government payroll in April, officials said.

(APRIL 6) UPI - Today's People:

SIMON PLAY WON'T SEE BROADWAY: Is there such a thing as a Neil Simon flop? Apparently, since he's decided to fold his latest play, "Jake's Women," in San Diego and not take it to Broadway as planned.

"I just didn't think that this particular product was worthy of bringing into New York, especially at the prices they charge (for tickets) today," he told The New York Times. The semi-autobiographical play, starring Peter Coyote and Stockard Channing, received mostly unflattering reviews in its San Diego run and was beset by problems.

Simon had done considerable rewriting while the first director was fired because of differences with Simon and his replacement was pre-occupied with a TV movie. "Friends liked the play but didn't think there was enough there, that it needed a great deal more work - work that I can't do now," Simon said.

That's because on Monday Simon starts in on a movie, "The Marrying Man" with Kim Basinger and Alec Baldwin, for which he has written the screenplay. Simon says he's unsure if he'll try to revive "Jake's Women" later.

THE GORILLA'S FRIEND: Sigourney Weaver, star of "Gorillas in the Mist," is sticking up for primates. She wrote a blistering letter to the mayor of the Tokyo suburb of Chiba City because officials there bought two endangered gorillas for $550,000 to display in their zoo.

Trade in gorillas is prohibited by international treaty but a loophole in Japanese law allowed Chiba City to purchase the pair from a Tokyo animal dealer and Weaver, who was nominated for an Oscar for her portrayal of gorilla researcher Dian Fossey, told Mayor Asahi Matsui that the purchase will encourage poachers.

"Your actions demonstrate an unconscionable contempt for the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Fauna and Flora, effectively subvert gorilla conservation efforts throughout Africa and undermine the international struggle to protect all wildlife," Weaver said in her letter.

2 LIVE CREW BRIEFLY GROUNDED: An airplane carrying the 2 Live Crew skidded off a runway in Orlando, Fla., Friday and the controversial rap group had to take another plane.

The group was bound for Dallas when a tire blew out on the twin-engine Westwind turbo jet owned by the group's lead singer, Luther Campbell, who goes by the name Luke Skyywalker. No one was hurt and the crew switched to a commercial flight.

Protesters opposed to the group's sexually explicit lyrics and anti-censorship activists both had gathered at the group's Thursday night show in Orlando but there were no incidents. The 2 Live Crew's album, "As Nasty as They Wanna Be," has been banned as obscene in four Florida counties.

HOSPITAL LIST: Singer-songwriter Neil Sedaka is hospitalized in Danbury, Conn., with diverticulitis, an inflamation of the colon. Sedaka, 51, who lives in nearby Westport, Conn., was admitted Tuesday and doctors are considering surgery.

Country Music Hall of Famer Eddy Arnold was released Friday from a Nashville, Tenn., hospital where he underwent double bypass surgery. A spokesman said doctors were pleased with Arnold's recovery and he's planning to resume performing in the fall.

Richard Sterban of the Oak Ridge Boys underwent a successful operation in Hendersonville, Tenn., Friday to correct a hernia that's plagued him for five years. The Oaks had to cancel an appearance set for Tuesday on The Nashville Network but Sturban will be ready to perform at their April 13 show in Owensboro, Ky., although he will be forced to sit on a stool.

Still another country star, Webb Pierce, 63, is in stable condition at a Nashville hospital following abdominal surgery.

NORVILLE RESPONDS: When Deborah Norville found out about the things ex-boyfriend Harmon Wages said about her on "A Current Affair," she called up the show to get equal time.

In an interview aired Friday, Wages, a former Atlanta sportscaster, says that Norville was already talking about dethroning Jane Pauley on the "Today" show when she was still working in Chicago. "Once I get to 'Sunrise' (NBC's early morning news show), I'll give the midget six months " Wages quoted Norville as saying.

Norville denies ever saying such a thing about Pauley. "The conversation that he alleges took place never happened," she said. "I don't speak that way. One of the joys of being promoted to the 'Today' program was working with Jane Pauley. She was a friend and still is a friend. I never said that."

CHICAGO (APRIL 6) UPI - UAL Corp. directors reached agreement with United Airlines employees Friday on a $4.36 billion buyout whose financing remains uncertain but which the airline unions hope to secure by proposing $2 billion in concessions over five years.

The crucial agreement was struck in round-the-clock negotiations between the UAL board and a group the employee unions set up to stage a buyout - United Employee Acquisition Corp.

The agreement averted a showdown with UAL's major shareholder, Condor Partners, which owns 11.8 percent of the outstanding stock and had threatened to oust the company's board if directors did not accept the offer.

In New York, executives of the three unions representing United employees - the Association of Flight Attendants, the Air Line Pilots Association and the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers - announced new labor bargaining agreements and pledged not to strike the second-largest U.S. airline after the buyout.

''At the time of the acquisition, the three unions will enter into new collective bargaining agreements which, together with projected cost modification on a comparable basis for non-contract employees, will result in substantial labor cost savings,'' the executives said.

John Peterpaul, the machinists' general vice president, disclosed details of the bargaining agreements, which include across-the-board wage cuts amounting to $2 billion over five years.

''We propose $2 billion in concessions which have not yet been approved by the unions and will be put to a vote,'' Peterpaul said.

Employees covered by the three unions will vote on the concessions the last week of April.

Rick Dubinsky, chairman of the Airline Pilots Association UAL-MEC, said he was ''confident the negotiations will be finalized in early May.''

The proposed wage and benefit concessions would amount to savings of $300 million in the first year and increase to $500 million in the fifth year.

The concessions would affect all unionized United employees as well as non-contract employees, mostly managers.

The executives also said the new labor contract, if approved by the employees, will include a ''no-strike commitment.'' It was unclear whether workers would waive strike rights for the first five years of the agreement or permanently.

The executives said they had no definitive plan for the financing yet but expected the new deal to attract investors.

''I am optimistic we will find the financing because this time we have an agreement with the board and we are offering $2 billion in concessions,'' Peterpaul said. ''Our financial people have taken the agreement to the banks.''

The new deal, if completed, which make UAL the largest employee-owned company in the world.

Last October, failure to secure funding for the employees' $300-a-share UAL bid led to the collapse of the plan and triggered a chain reaction on Wall Street, which suffered its worst one-day fall - more than 190 points on the Dow Jones industrials average - since the October 1987 crash.

Announcement of a new agreement, however, did not initially attract much confidence from stock investors. UAL shares were trading down $2, at $163.50 a share, in early afternoon trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

Directors, who had convened a special session Thursday afternoon to consider the employees' new offer, agreed on the proposed deal by early Friday.

The buyout proposal provides $155 a share in cash - up $5 from the original offer - plus $35 a share in senior subordinated notes bearing 16 percent interest, and a proportional stake in a new security of Covia Corp., the UAL subsidiary that holds a 50 percent stake in the Apollo computer reservations system. Analysts estimate the Covia interest to be worth between $500 million and $750 million.

A UAL statement announcing the two sides had reached an agreement in principle said the company's financial advisor estimated the value of the Covia security, on a fully distributed basis, at about $11 a share. That would bring the total value of the deal to $201 a share, or about $4.36 billion.

Under the new plan, an Employee Stock Ownership Plan would hold 100 percent of UAL.

UAL Chairman Stephen Wolf, a participant in the employee-led $6.75 billion bid that collapsed last October for lack of financing, was denied a role in the new buyout, and the unions have indicated he will be fired if their takeover succeeds.

AUSTIN, TX (APRIL 6) UPI - Attorney General Jim Mattox vehemently denied Friday a report that he smoked marijuana in the 1970s, saying he would tell his accusers "they're liars to their face."

Mattox, locked in a bitter runoff campaign with Treasurer Ann Richards for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, also pressed his charge that Richards has used illegal drugs, but he declined to offer proof. Mattox and Richards face each other in a Tuesday runoff.

When asked at a news conference if he would take a polygraph test to disprove the allegations against him, Mattox said he would, but he added: "I want you to get Miss Richards strapped in right beside me when we do it OK?

The Dallas Morning News reported Friday that a former Dallas police vice officer provided the newspaper with signed affidavits that he had seen Mattox smoke marijuana in the 1970s.

The former officer, Edward H. Lowe, said he "saw Jim Mattox smoking dope" in an East Dallas apartment where Lowe was investigating a prostitution ring. Lowe said he did not arrest Mattox or others in the room because his assignment was to confirm a tip about prostitution that he eventually determined was unfounded.

Mattox disputed Lowe's account, saying he was a prominent Dallas lawyer who was not on good terms with the police department at the time. "If there had been a vice squad officer sitting in the room with me, smoking a drug for which I could have been arrested for a felony violation, he would not have been worried about a $200 misdemeanor prostitution case. I can assure you of that," Mattox said.

In a second affidavit, Houston lawyer Jim Sharp recalled seeing Mattox smoke marijuana in 1974 while in a car after the Democratic state convention in Austin. Mattox also denied the allegation by Sharp, whom he recalled as someone who "hung around" the political scene.

"I have never been in any car any place anytime where marijuana has been smoked," Mattox said. "I don't know anything about that individual (Sharp). If it's the person I'm thinking about, he has over the years repeatedly ask me for jobs, and I have not given him a job because of the fact that I did not think much of him and his kind of hanging on.

"I'm willing for you (reporters) to get these two folks and sit them right here with me, and I'll tell them they're liars to their face," he said.

With the runoff less than a week away, Mattox has continued to ask Richards if she has ever use illegal drugs and she has refused to answer. Richards, a recovering alcoholic, has only replied that she has not used a "mood altering drug" since she was treated for alcoholism a decade ago.

Mattox claims he has statements from witnesses to Richards' drug use, but has offered no evidence. Instead, he has challenged the news media to find its own witnesses.

PRAGUE, CZECHOSLOVAKIA (APRIL 6) UPI - Czechoslovakia's interior minister Friday proposed creating an employment program for out-of-work secret police in an effort to defuse discontent and possible subversive activities.

Minister Richard Sacher said that leaving former members of the notorious STB secret police unemployed, or conducting a vendetta against them, could only lead to violent reactions.

''There is a view, and I think it is erroneous, that all former members of the STB are terrorists,'' Sacher told journalists. ''They are fairly well-trained professionals.''

He said he has submitted a program to the Federal Assembly, the Parliament requesting that former secret policemen continue to receive their salaries for several more months while efforts are made to find them new work.

Psychiatric counseling would also be made available for those having difficulty adapting to their loss of power and influence.

Sacher dismissed any immediate threat of armed action by former STB officers to disrupt the country's transition to democracy.

''If they want to affect the (June 8 parliamenary) elections, they can do so with stronger weapons than those found in holsters,'' he said.

Sacher said recent reports of potential terrorism and drug trafficking also persuaded him not to conduct a witch hunt against secret policemen who abused their power under the former communist regime. He gave no details of the extent of the terrorist or drug activity.

''The security situation is deteriorating in Czechoslovakia,'' he said. ''The threat of drug abuse is real, and terrorism is here. We can only resist these threats with highly trained agents. We need to keep them in our forces.''

Sacher also spoke about the arrest Monday of Gen. Alois Lorenc, former head of the STB. He said the key to his apprehension was the arrest of ''Ruzicka,'' the alias of a student suspected of being the ''agent provacateur'' who led peaceful student protesters in a march down Narodni Street last Nov. 17.

The subsequent attack by STB, riot police and commandos, in which dozens were injured, sparked nationwide protests that led to the downfall of the communist regime.

Sacher said that although he still carries a Czech-made Taurus pistol in his briefcase, he does not feel personally threatened by former STB members.

''I must say I have stirred some hatred of people about me. I have lost the trust of the people who helped build the totalitarian system since 1948,'' he said.

NEW YORK (APRIL 6) UPI - American builders and retailers will get the first boosts from Japan's promise to make it easier for foreigners to do business in the thriving industrial country, economists said Friday.

A sweeping trade agreement between the United States and Japan announced Thursday marks a shift in Japan's basic trade policies and is designed to reduce the barriers that contributed to a $49 billion U.S. trade deficit last year.

While effects of the multipoint agreement are not expected to be noticeable for some time, the economists said U.S. engineering and construction companies should benefit in the near future from provisions that will allow them to compete for massive public works projects in Japan.

Japan's rapid growth is fast outstripping its infrastructure, and the country is in dire need of new roadways, airports, harbors and other major public works, said Robert Gay, senior economist at Morgan Stanley & Co.

''Engineering and construction companies are likely to be long-term beneficiaries,'' he said.

Investors also took note of the new opportunities for these types of companies, and the stock of many shot up during trading Friday.

The accord also snips away some of the red tape that made it all but impossible for foreign retailers to enter the coveted Japanese market.

Japan said it would shorten the process by which merchants are granted permission to operate in the country and ensured that any delays would not last more than a year. The efforts of some foreign retailers, whose plans were were waylaid by independent Japanese retailers, had previously been blocked for up to 10 years.

''Opportunities should be especially good for specialized retailers who are already global in scope,'' said David G. Hartman, a managing partner in DRI-McGraw Hill, an economic consulting firm in Lexington, Mass.

Toys ''R'' Us Inc., the Paramus, N.J.-based toy retailer that has outlets in nearly every industrial market, has been seeking permission to operate in Japan for some time and should benefit from the new accord, observers said.

Susan Douglas, a professor of marketing and international business at New York University's Stern School of Business, cautioned that even if U.S. retailers gain access to Japan, they may find it tough going despite eager and acquisitive Japanese consumers.

''The whole issue of trust and confidence and personal relationships with distributors is very important in Japan,'' she said. ''Many U.S. companies don't understand this and when they don't make a profit in six months they'll start to divest. That's not the way to get to be successful in Japan.''

Economists pointed to telecommunications and computers as industries that should also broadly benefit from the easing of Japanese trade restrictions.

The agreement also reduces barriers to foreign investment in Japan.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 6) UPI - Japan has pledged to lower trade barriers to reduce its $49 billion trade surplus with the United States in a historic agreement between the two economic superpowers.

The pact will allow U.S. entrepreneurs the opportunity to do in Japan ''the same things that the Japanese investor and trader does happily and frequently in our market,'' U.S. Trade Representative Carla Hills said Friday.

U.S. economists said the tax and investment provisions of the trade pact could make it easier for American engineering and construction companies to be awarded work in Japan, a goal that proved elusive in the past.

Certain restrictions also were lifted that had made it difficult for U.S. retailers to do business in the Asian nation.

In Tokyo, Japanese Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu said in a nationally televised address that Japan must bear the pain of the measures promised to open its markets.

''It is my conviction, however, that they are essential in furthering Japan's own national interest, and that they are the kind of duties Japan must discharge as a responsible member of the international community,'' Kaifu said.

White House aides said Kaifu telephoned President Bush Friday morning and Bush thanked Kaifu for the ''new spirit of cooperation'' between the two countries.

In what White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater called a ''cordial conversation,'' the president also pledged that the United States would carry out its own commitments under the agreement.

''These commitments are important, they indicate the direction we are going in,'' Fitzwater said.

Charles Dallara, assistant treasury secretary for international affairs, denied the pact would influence the critical weekend meeting of the finance ministers of the Group of Seven industrial powers in Paris.

The G-7 nations - the United States, Japan, West Germany, Britain, France, Canada and Italy - will discuss the state of the global economy and the rise of the dollar in relation to the Japanese yen, which is playing havoc with the Japanese stock market and threatens to intensify Japan's inflation.

In four days of talks in Washington under the so called Structural Impediments Initiative, which ended Thursday, Japan promised changes in six areas that contribute to the U.S. trade deficit.

The United States made far fewer commitments than Japan to work on problems in its own economy that contribute to the trade deficit. U.S. officials promised to reduce the federal budget shortcoming by perfecting the Gram-Rudman-Hollings deficit reduction law, to increase savings by liberalizing Individual Retirement Accounts, to cut the costs of capital by slashing the capital-gains tax, and to reduce the public debt.

John Taylor, a member of the White House Council of Economic Advisors, said the Japanese will curtail the government's authority to limit foreign investment on economic grounds, and committed themselves to abolish prior notification for foreign direct investment.

The Japanese will also introduce legislation to reduce to 18 months the process under which great retail stores can establish branches in urban areas of small mom-and-pop establishments. U.S. companies have complained that current retail practices do not allow them to expand in Japan, and thus also keep U.S. goods out of Japanese markets.

The Japanese promised to increase investments as a way of diminishing their imbalance between savings and investment, now used to heavily invest overseas, mainly in the United States, where Japanese purchases of companies and real estate have provoked criticism.

Japan will revise its land taxation laws and introduce a long-term program for increased investments in housing. Current Japanese land-use and taxation laws increase the costs of housing and investments, particularly for foreigners.

The Japanese government will fight exclusionary and monopolistic business practices introducing legislation to impose criminal penalties, including incarceration, for breaches of the law.

Exclusionary practices in public and private procurement, and interlocking business groups that favor each other's products and services, keep U.S. companies and products from the Japanese market.

Japan will introduce laws that could compel Japanese companies not only to break up interlocking structures but also to divest if that were necessary to fight exclusionary business practices.

(APRIL 6) UPI - The death toll from an early morning fire that swept through a South Miami Beach, Florida, residential hotel today now stands at three, with 16 people still missing. More than 200 others were left homeless by the blaze, which collapsed the roof of the three-story Fontana Hotel. 18 people were hurt.

White House aides say Japanese Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu telephoned President Bush this morning. The conversation apparently dealt with the Japanese trade talks, but NO details were released. White House reaction to yesterday's trade compromise with Japan has been measured but supportive of Kaifu.

Marathon negotiations between U-A-L Corporation's board of directors and United Airlines employees have resulted in a four-point-six-BILLION-dollar merger agreement. The deal, reached early today at a Chicago hotel, would make United Airlines the largest employee-owned company in the nation.

Talks aimed at forming a governing coalition in East Germany are intensifying today after several overnight protests. More than 200-thousand people demonstrated in several East German cities last night to protest the proposed cost of monetary unification with West Germany.

In London, a new survey indicates that British Prime Minister Thatcher's popularity is at a record low, largely because of her upopular new head tax. The latest Gallup poll shows that only 24 percent of Britons support Thatcher, the lowest standing of any British leader since the survey began monitoring the public mood in 1937.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 6) UPI - Rates on 30-year fixed mortgages increased 0.04 percentage points to 10.26 percent and adjustable-rate mortgages held steady at 8.56 percent this week, the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. said Friday.

The fixed rate last week was 10.22 percent, according to the agency that buys mortgages from lenders and packages them as securities.

The fixed-rate average is for a 30-year loan covering 80 percent of a home's cost. The average adjustable-rate mortgage also is for 30 years, but for 75 percent of the home price.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 6) UPI - A congressional report made available Friday said a workhorse Army helicopter has had mechanical problems that have led to 15 deaths and a number of near crashes.

A General Accounting Office report on the CH-47D, a remanufactured version of the Chinook helicopter built by Boeing Helicopter in Philadelphia, said the Army has been slow to respond to the helicopter's problems and as a result pilots have ''expressed a loss of confidence'' in the aircraft.

The report was released by the House Energy and Commerce Committee's subcommittee on investigations.

The Army, in a statement on the report, said that in all cases where problems were found its aviation command took steps to resolve the problems.

''Soldier safety is the Army's primary concern and the Army would not allow the CH-47D to continue flight opertions if it were not a safe aircraft,'' the Army said.

Congressional investigators said flight commanders have issued flight restrictions and even grounded the aircraft. Some of the problems, the report said, involve a malfunction of the helicopter's ''combining transmission.'' The report said the transmission fan rotates out of balance, causing the fan shaft to shear into pieces and toss metal fragments into critical engine parts.

The Army blames lax maintenance on the problem.

One of the aircraft crashed in February 1988 near Chico, Texas, killing 10 soldiers and seriously injuring eight others. The Army said the apparent cause of the crash was a cracked driveshaft.

BEVERLY HILLS, CA (APRIL 6) UPI - Hilton Hotels Corp. expects to report first-quarter earnings of about $25 million, an increase of about 90 percent over the same period last year, a spokesman said Friday.

The hotel chain, whose board scrapped plans to sell itself last month after two offers failed to meet an asking price of as much as $5 billion, also forecast first-quarter revenues of about $264 million, an increase of about 17 percent over the year-ago quarter.

Hilton's operating profit for the quarter was up about 7 percent, despite a three-week strike at the Hilton Hawaiian Village property and continued softness in the San Francisco market following last October's earthquake, spokesman William Lebo said.

Gains during the quarter stemmed partly from strong occupany rates at hotels in New York, Chicago, New Orleans and other major cities, he said.

The company is expecting Hilton's two major hotel-casinos to post record results despite increased competition and sees the operating profit from Hilton's gambling segment increasing significantly, Lebo said.

Earnings are expected to be released next week, he said.

For the first quarter of 1989, Hilton reported earnings of $13.1 million, or 27 cents a share, on revenues of $225.1 million. At the time, the company said the results reflected a 50 percent decline in gambling revenues, due to an expensive boxing promotion, a low win percentage at gaming tables, construction distruptions in Reno and start-up costs from two new hotels.

Hilton's stock was off 50 cents to $53 a share in early afternoon trading Friday on the New York Stock Exchange.

Analysis By: Vernon Scott

HOLLYWOOD (APRIL 6) UPI - Elias Koteas is fortunate to be one of the few recognizable characters in "Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles," except that anyone who sees him is likely to be under 15 years old.

The shy, quiet, introspective actor was an unknown until this month. Now he is very well known indeed thanks to his starring role in the biggest hit of the year.

Koteas' involvement with the phenomenally successful action comedy is a mixed blessing. He may become familiar to every kid in the world - and a major hero to his little sister - but remain a nonentity to everyone else.

All the same, Koteas, whose quick brown eyes, shaggy black hair and funky clothes give him the look of a young rebel himself, is pleased to be part of the resounding smash.

His is one of the few recognizable characters in the film. The other principals - excepting co-star Judith Hoag - are giant sewer-dwelling turtles.

For those too enraptured with the turtles to remember anything about the picture except the hard-shelled crime-fighters, Koteas is the guy who plays Casey Jones, the vigilante and martial arts expert who first challenges turtle Raphael and then joins the ninjas to help stop the Foot Clan.

At lunch in the Polo Lounge of the Beverly Hills Hotel, Koteas looked as much at home as a Ninja Turtle in the Court of St. James. When first approached to star in the film, he had never heard of the Ninja Turtle comic books or the kiddie TV cartoon series on which the picture is based. "I couldn't even remember the title for a long time," he admitted with a grin.

What Koteas and many another adult may not know is that "Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles" is the No. 1 selling comic book in the country and the No. 1 syndicated children's cartoon show on the air.

Ninja Turtles are the top-selling line of toys on the market, No. 1 licensed product and top Nintendo game sales. There are claims that turtle fan clubs are recruiting at the rate of 1,000 new members a day.

Koteas is a man who finds himself beset by a publicity hurricane, a whirlwind of madness he was not prepared for and over which he has no control. He is, after all, a dedicated, serious young dramatic actor. A graduate of the American Academy of Dramatic Arts, he has appeared on stage in "The Cherry Orchard," "Bent," "Death of a Salesman" and "Kiss of the Spider Woman."

His movie credits include "Full Moon in Blue Water," "Tucker," "Gardens of Stone," "One Magic Christmas" and "Some Kind of Wonderful." His performance in "Malerek" won him a nomination for Canada's coveted Genie Award.

A native of Montreal, Koteas starved in New York for years, delivering pizza, driving a cab, bussing tables and working at other menial jobs to scrape a living.

He met the challenge of playing Casey Jones head on, taking the part as seriously as he would any other role. "I accepted the part the minute they offered it to me," he said. "I wanted the chance to be ten or 12 years old again.

"I told my younger sister about the job and she went crazy. All kids know about the Ninja Turtles. They love 'em. And now they love Casey too. They may make a sequel or two from this picture because it's so popular.

"I'm a serious actor, but I wouldn't mind playing Casey again. When Harrison Ford played Han Solo in the 'Star Wars' pictures it didn't hurt his career. He went on to make some fine dramatic pictures. He wasn't type cast.

"(Director) Steve Barron saw me playing a skinhead in 'Some Kind of Wonderful' and thought I had the right kind of energy, I guess. We had a meeting and filmed a little bit as an audition. It worked out OK."

It was a new experience for Koteas to act with animatronic reproductions of creatures in costumes worn by human beings but largely operated by technicians who manipulated the turtles' facial expressions on the set.

His next film is "Almost an Angel" starring Paul Hogan, which promises to be another box-office winner. "I can't really say what kind of character I play because they'll kick my butt if I do," said Koteas, lighting an after-lunch cigarette.

Koteas has rented a home in the Hollywood hills, but retains his apartment in Queens - just in case. "You never know what to expect in this business " he said. "I'm always thinking about the options. With 'Ninja Turtles' doing so well, it might help my career here in Hollywood."

LOS ANGELES (APRIL 6) UPI - A spokeswoman for Live Entertainment Inc. Friday denied a report that the entertainment concern has signed an agreement to buy troubled Vestron Inc.

''We are in negotiations, but the report is premature,'' said spokeswoman Vicki Greenleaf of the report in Friday's edition of The Hollywood Reporter, an entertainment trade publication.

Live disclosed in late February that it had been holding discussions with the home video company, which has become financially strapped since the failure of its move into the movie-production business two years ago. Vestron began defaulting on its debt agreements after a $100 million loan agreement with Security Pacific Bank Corp. was withdrawn.

Vestron, of Stamford, Conn., has a catalog of more than 2,000 titles, a 40-store retail video chain and sequel rights to the hit film ''Dirty Dancing.''

Live, of Los Angeles, is a video producer, distributor and retailer. It earned $19.4 million on sales of $437.3 million last year.

Live's stock was up 50 cents to $19.75 a share in over-the-counter trading Friday.

MANAGUA, NICARAGUA (APRIL 6) UPI - Contra leaders will demand the dismissal of all high-ranking Sandinista army officials as a condition for disarming and disbanding rebel forces in Nicaragua, a Contra commander said Friday.

''We are prepared to hand in our weapons (if there are) guarantees for our lives and our combatants,'' Contra leader Oscar Sovalbarro, popularly known as Commander Ruben, told United Press International.

Sovalbarro signed an agreement March 23 with the incoming government of Nicaraguan President-elect Violeta Chamorro to begin disarming Contras in Honduras by April 20, followed by the concentration of rebel forces inside Nicaragua in cease-fire zones monitored by the United Nations and the Organization of American States.

''Our army will lay down its arms. We insist on the elimination of all high-ranking military officials, without this being interpreted as replacing the Popular Sandinista Army,'' Sovalbarro said.

A spokeswoman for the United Nations in Honduras said Thursday that 350 Venezuelan paratroopers armed with light weapons will begin arriving in Honduras in the next week as part of the U.N. peacekeeping forces that will disarm Contras at Yamales, near the Nicaraguan border.

The Honduran government estimates that some 5,000 Contras remain at Yamales.

Sovalbarro will meet Saturday with Roberto Ferrey and Leopoldo Navarro, both members of Chamorro's National Opposition Union, or UNO, to discuss the demobilization.

Ferrey, a former Contra leader, said there are some 10,000 Contras inside Nicaragua. Many of them have crossed the border from Honduras since Chamorro won elections Feb. 25.

Ferrey and Navarro have held meetings with Gen. Antonio Quezada, chief of the U.N. Organization for Central America, with leaders of the U.N.-O.A.S. Commission for Support and Verification, and with Joaquin Cuadra, the Nicaraguan army chief of staff.

Ferrey said his delegation would submit a proposal from Cuadra that the Contras inside Nicaragua congregate in a 240-square-mile area inside Nicaragua, divided into five zones.

''We hope that in the meeting with the resistance, the zones will be approved by all parties, in this case, the Sandinista army and the Nicaraguan Resistance. There are five security zones,'' Ferrey said.

Ruben said he hoped new proposals for the demobilization would come out of the meeting, ''including a formal commitment to dismiss all high-ranking military officials in the Sandinista army.''

''This demand is vital,'' Ruben said, adding that after April 25, when Chamorro is scheduled to take office, ''all these officials will return to civilian life.''

UNO members have been at odds in the past two weeks over the possible naming of Nicaraguan Defense Minister Humberto Ortega as armed forces chief of staff under Chamorro's government.

Ortega, brother of outgoing President Daniel Ortega, said he wanted to stay in the army, even if it meant giving up his position in the Sandinista Front.

BRUSSELS, BELGIUM (APRIL 6) UPI - The adviser to aging nuns who sold their convent for $1.4 million and left in a Mercedes for the south of France was freed from jail Friday, saying the sisters knew exactly what they were doing.

Ronny Crab had been accused of conning the eight nuns into selling the Order of the Poor Clares convent in Bruges. His release after 39 days in jail ''shows it was a trumped-up case all along,'' his lawyer said.

''The nuns wanted the proceeds from the convent to go to their families rather than the church after they all died, so they changed the statutes of the convent,'' lawyer Clive Van Aerden said.

Under the old bylaws, the diocese of Bruges would have received the property and goods of the convent after the death of all the sisters, ages 62 to 93.

The nuns changed the bylaws several months ago and sold the convent to textile firms, said the lawyer, who spoke for Crab at a news conference outside the jail in Ghent.

The convent has the status of a non-profit association, so it is governed by its own bylaws.

The proceeds from sale of the convent were used to buy a chateau in the south of France and a farm. The nuns' other new-found assets include 11 horses and six luxury cars, among them three Mercedes-Benz models equipped with telephones and televisions.

Most of the sisters rode last month to their new home in France in a $110,000 Mercedes limousine. The 93-year-old nun, who cannot see, hear or walk, tailed behind in an ambulance.

The appeals court did not give a reason for its decision to free Crab, 35, but his lawyer said the judges ''realized it was a blown-up case.''

The lawyer charged that church officials ''used their powers to provoke a criminal inquiry because it wants reasons for a civil trial to obtain the goods of the convent, or what's left of it.''

A spokesman for the bishop of Bruges denied the accusation.

''The church has never wanted the goods of that convent,'' the spokesman said. ''The bishop was only interested in the welfare of the sisters.''

The lawyer for Crab said he read, in investigatory files, a deposition given in the south of France by one of the elderly nuns, Sister Josephine, whom he described as ''very clear of mind, not senile.''

''She declared to the police that she knew her convent was on a list where the bishop didn't allow any new nuns to come in,'' the lawyer said. ''So she said, 'Why should we just let it bleed to death and let the diocese get all the gond back?'''

The bishop's spokesman said one problem in the modern-day church is a lack of young women wishing to join the sisterhood, but maintained the Order of the Poor Clares could still have been around for a while.

''They (the eight nuns) were old, but they could have lived for many more years,'' he said.

Crab's lawyer said proceeds from the convent's sale are invested in the property in France, the automobiles, ''and the rest in bank accounts.''

''The court knows exactly where all the money went,'' the lawyer said.

He says the convent's old bylaws prohibited all luxuries, and Crab was proud to teach the nuns a new lifestyle.

But why the six showy cars, considering that none of the nuns can drive?

''They wanted them, so they bought them,'' the lawyer said. ''It's as simple as that. That's why this whole inquiry is so silly.'' mostly elderly and young people. 18 people were injured in the blaze and at least 15 others are missing. The entire Miami Beach Fire Department responded to the fire, along with units from the city of Miami and elsewhere in Dade County.

The Labor Department says the latest unemployment figures suggest a rather stale economy. Department figures released today show that America's civilian jobless rate actually declined last month... but only by one-tenth of one percent. The March jobless rate stood at five-point-two percent after a slim increase of 26-thousand in the number of new NON-farm jobs.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 6) UPI - CBS News anchorman Dan Rather told the nation's newspaper editors Friday that today's journalism depends too much on polls and research to determine the reporting of news.

In a tough speech to the American Society of Newspaper Editors, Rather said the news profession is in danger of attracting ''lightweights,'' and he denounced news decisions made by accountants.

In particular, Rather was critical of television and newspaper executives who cut back on the coverage of international news because of its cost and because ''real people'' are not interested.

Rather said journalists must be careful in criticizing political leaders for avoiding controversy and using market research, polling and so-called focus groups to shape their stance on issues.

''I do think a lot of politicians are ducking leadership. I do know we do '' Rather said of the news industry. Editors and broadcasters, he said, have to ''distinguish between what's interesting and what's important.''

Rather, who in 1981 succeeded veteran CBS newsman Walter Cronkite as anchor of the ''CBS Evening News,'' criticized ''accountants who mill and swarm,'' complaining of the high cost of international news coverage ''at a time when it has become indisputedly clear that Americans need an understanding of the world'' that is developing.

Market research, he said, is a tool that is too often used as a defense for trash telvision and trash tabloids. ''Being slaves to them is even worse,'' he said.

''Where are the publishers and editors with grit, gumption and guts?'' he asked.

Rather said it is an ''elitist'' attitude that says people are not interested in issues ranging from the budget deficit to apartheid in South Africa, the attitude that says ''real people won't care unless it bleeds or burns.''

''Real people know what is going on,'' Rather said, ''and are struggling to understand.''

Noting that during democracy demonstrations in Eastern Europe, South Africa, China and other parts of the world in the past year, many of the protest signs were in English, Rather said: ''We have become a part of a worldwide electronic democracy.''

Journalism, especially television, is part of ''a visual, two-way telephone. But if we (U.S. journalism) shut down one end of the telephone, we won't lead and we will have prostituted a public trust,'' Rather said.

Rather also defended the use of the ''traveling anchor,'' by which much television news was delivered last year, saying it was part of a tradition going back as far as broadcast pioneer Edward R. Murrow and Cronkite.

But he acknowledged ''there is always some danger of the traveling anchor becoming a part of a circus'' and can be misused to ''jiggle the ratings.''

But he said, ''Used thoughtfully and judiciously ... it is helpful to the viewers.''

Rather predicted there will not be as much of the ''traveling anchor'' used this year because of the extraordinary nature of news in 1989.

MONROVIA, LIBERIA (APRIL 6) UPI - Guerrillas ambushed a mining company train in northeastern Liberia Friday, leaving three of the passengers missing, including Mark Huband, a British journalist who wrote for United Press International and The Financial Times.

British Embassy officials said two inspections by Liberian authorities of the ambush site found no trace of the three.

They said no blood stains or other signs of foul play were found, and authorities planned a more extensive inspection.

''Liberian troops are on the edge of the area, but the search had been suspended for the night,'' a diplomat said.

The ambush was apparently staged by followers of Charles Taylor, a former civil servant who since last December has waged a rebellion against the government of President Samuel Doe and controls the area in which the ambush took place.

Taylor had threatened in an interview last week to sever the rail link.

Liberian officials said the train left the port city of Buchanan at about 5 a.m. and the ambush occurred three hours later near Ganta town, 150 miles northeast of Monrovia.

They said an unspecified number of rebels opened fire when the train slowed down. The train engineer and a guard escaped and reached their destination, the Liberian Mining Corp. mine in Yekepa, near the nation's eastern border with Ivory Coast.

Huband and the two others were in a carriage farther back in the train. The two other passengers were not immediately identified, but were apparently not journalists.

Huband, 26, based in Abidjan, Ivory Coast, as a West Africa correspondent for UPI and The Financial Times, had been invited to visit the mine along with other journalists. Reporters for Reuters and the British Broadcasting Corp. traveled to the mine by car and arrived safely.

Huband worked as parliamentary correspondent for the Wales on Sunday newspaper before he went to Africa. Previous assignments had taken him to the area where the ambush occurred.

(APRIL 6) UPI - This is the fifth day of deliberations for the jury in the Iran-Contra trial of former national security adviser John Poindexter. The eight women and four men have been sequestered since Tuesday after two of them were contacted by reporters Monday night. Poindexter is the highest Reagan administration official to stand trial in the scandal. He is accused of five felonies including lying to Congress.

A Colombian senator is free after being kidnapped by the Medellin drug-trafficking cartel. The official was released unharmed yesterday... two days after he was abducted in retaliation for what the group assumed was the arrest of two cartel suspects. The group threatened to kill the senator unless officials released the suspects... but the government said the two were NOT in custody.

Negotiations are said to be under way in the latest effort to free some of the Western hostages in the Mideast. MIAMI BEACH, FL (APRIL 6) UPI - An early morning fire raced through a 39-year-old hotel Friday, killing three persons, injuring 18 and leaving 14 others missing, authorities said. At least 78 mostly elderly residents escaped the flames clad only in their pajamas.

Assistant Miami Beach Fire Chief John Reed said the three-story Fontana Hotel was gutted by the fast spreading flames and small blazes kept firefighters and an investigative team from the U.S. Alcohol Tobacco & Firearms Bureau from searching the debris for other possible victims for hours.

The fire forced evacuation of residents of the adjacent St. Michael hotel. "We have to put out the spot fires," said Reed. "There are areas we haven't been in and out of it yet because of the structural damage. The possibility certainly exists (for finding more victims)."

Firefighters did not know how many people were in the building at the time of the fire. One resident vacationing in New York called to confirm that she was not in the hotel, dropping the official number of missing to 14 people.

Reed said the fire was not being treated as an arson investigation, but noted that the flames spread rapidly through the building unlike most fires started by accidents.

"The way the fire spread at least prompted the very serious question this might have been intentionally set," said Miami Beach Mayor Alex Daoud.

The 102-room hotel, which catered mostly to elderly residents who rented their rooms on a yearly basis, had been equipped with a system of pipes needed for a sprinkler system, but the sprinkler heads had not been installed. "Under Florida law, not until October 1991 are sprinklers required here," said Dauod. "These buildings were up to code."

The hotels residents, who were awakened at 3 a.m. EST by smoke, scrambled out broken windows and fled down the hallways banging on doors to awaken their neighbors.

Sandra Major was staying on the first floor of the hotel when the fire broke out. "I got up, pulled the curtains and didn't see anything," she said. "Then, I heard a loud noise, looked to the lobby and saw smoke and flames shooting out."

Sadie Jackowitz, 87, who has lived at the hotel for the past eight months, was pulled from her first floor room by three men who broke an outside window to reach her.

"I lost everything I had. I lost my teeth, my eyeglasses, I need everything. I don't know how I'm going to supply myself with the stuff I need."

The three alarm fire caved in the roof of the hotel, which was sold in May 1989 for $1.6 million to the Mihai Hotel Corp. The entire Miami Beach Fire Department responded to the fire along with units from the city of Miami and elsewhere in Dade County.

The fire appeared to be under control at one point but it flared up again, preventing firefighters from going in until after daybreak to look for the missing.

The Red Cross set up a center for evacuated residents of the Fontana and the adjacent St. Michael Hotel. Residents of the St. Michael Hotel were allowed to return to their rooms 12 hours after the fire rousted them from their beds.

The South Beach area is the site of several historic hotels and other structures. It has recently been undergoing a resurgence with new clubs and restaurants bringing back the old nightlife.

WARSAW, POLAND (APRIL 6) UPI - Poland's Solidarity government said Friday it has virtually eliminated the telephone wiretapping that was widespread under the old communist regime and disclosed that only one phone in the nation - linked to suspected terrorists - is now being bugged.

Interior Minister Czeslaw Kiszczak was responding to questions during parliamentary debate on legislation to split up his ministry and govern the conduct of police as Poland moves from a Marxist political system to a democratic one.

In other developments:

-The government confirmed that a split has emerged over the issue of German unification between Polish Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki and President Wojciech Jaruzelski.

-Canadian Deputy Prime Minister Don Mazankowski wound up a three-day trip by signing a series of economic agreements with Poland.

During more than four decades of communist rule in Poland, the Interior Ministry ran a vast electronic eavesdropping operation in which thousands of telephones were tapped, including those of government officials and Communist Party members as well as dissidents.

During debate on the bill, Democratic Party parliamentary deputy Kazimierz Ujazdowski asked for an amendment calling for approval of wiretaps by both the interior minister and the chief prosecutor, who in Poland is also the justice minister.

Kiszczak readily agreed to the proposal, noting that, otherwise, he could eavesdrop even on the premier without anyone else knowing.

''There is one telephone in Poland bugged, with the approval of the justice minister,'' Kiszczak said. ''Prime Minister Mazowiecki knows about it. This eavesdropping deals with foreign terrorists.''

He gave no further details.

The discussion follows a scandal over police surveillance in 28 hotels around Poland since the Mazowiecki administration took power last autumn.

The Interior Ministry at first claimed it had nothing to do with the surveillance, but Polish television showed one of the bugging rooms with an Interior Ministry seal on the wall. A spokesman later said the eavesdropping was stopped sometime last year.

On the question of German reunification, Jaruzelski is said to favor neutrality for a united Germany, while Mazowiecki wants to see it remain in NATO.

''There isn't a conflict, but one cannot say there is not a convergence of views,'' government spokesman Malgorszata Niezabitowska said.

Asked which view will be presented at the ''two plus four'' talks with the Allied powers on unification, she said: ''We think that Poland will be represented mainly by the government side, but who will go hasn't been settled yet.''

Canada and Poland signed a number of economic agreements to wind up Mazankowski's visit to Poland ''to show Canada's presence in Poland and Europe.''

One agreement is a $30 million guarantee for Canadian businessmen investing in Poland. A pact was also signed on cooperation in agriculture, under which Polish farmers will be trained to be managers in Canada.

Several individual agreements were signed with Polish firms, including on genetic upgrading of Polish cattle, modernization of the dairy industry and processing of rape seeds.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 6) UPI - President Bush warned Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze Friday that the use of force in Lithuania could ''adversely affect'' U.S.-Soviet relations and possibly hamper arms control talks.

The president has been purposefully circumspect in his comments on the furor surrounding secession-minded Lithuania, but he noticeably sharpened his tone in comments at a convention of American Association of Newspaper Editors.

''We're not telling them what to do. We're telling them what not to do. Do not use force,'' Bush said. ''Do not use force because we have an awful lot at stake in the U.S.-Soviet relationship, an enormous amount at stake.''

Shevardnadze, in Washington for three days of top-level talks to lay the groundwork for the May 30-June 3 superpower summit, went to the White House to talk directly to Bush and deliver a letter from Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev.

In describing the two-hour-plus White House meeting with Shevardnadze, Bush told the editors that ''Lithuania was a key point of discussion.''

''I reiterated the strong U.S. view that the issue must be dealt with through peaceful means,'' he said. ''And ... I told Minister Shevardnadze that this is an issue that could adversely affect the prospects for progress in these important U.S.-Soviet relations.''

It appeared Bush was increasing the pressure on the Kremlin by linking U.S. concerns about the handling of Lithuania to other aspects of U.S.-Soviet ties.

''I urged the Soviet Union to begin a good-faith dialogue with Lithuania. We want, and we believe the Soviets want, to make further progress in U.S.-Soviet relations. And we're working toward important agreements in the area of arms control, and to make progress on human rights and the solution of these regional conflicts.''

Bush pointed to West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher in the audience and said he also was in agreement.

''I'm not going to violate a confidence but he (Genscher) points out to me how important this relationship is, in arms control and on the peace of a emerging democratic Europe,'' Bush said. ''So I want to keep that going. So we're not dictating or attempting to ... but we are saying that we want to see it be peaceful.''

Since the situation developed with Lithuania's vote for independence last month, the administration has repeated calls for peaceful dialogue and warned against the use of force in the Baltic state.

But Bush and his spokesmen have been very careful not apply too much pressure to Gorbachev, who also faces calls from the Kremlin to contain the rebellious Baltic state, and the threat of similar moves by Estonia and Latvia.

Nonetheless, Bush emphasized that the United States would ''continue to keep the pressure on, to make it clear that the U.S. relationship is at stake in this matter and that peaceful dialogue is the right approach,'' White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said.

Shevardnadze, speaking with reporters after meeting with Bush, said it was not ''appropriate to speak here of assurances'' he may have made to the president on the Lithuanian situation.

''Again, this is a domestic affair for the Soviet Union,'' he said. ''This matter was discussed.''

At the same time, he defended Soviet actions to date, saying ''The most important thing right now is to make sure that there is really good public order there.''

''Unless the Soviet Union agrees with the decisions of the Lithuanian Supreme Soviet (to secede), it is possible that there might be conflicts '' said Shevardnadze, comparing the situation to ethnic problems that have plagued other Soviet republics.

''Unfortunately, we have the bitter experience, the bitter lessons of inter-ethnic conflicts that we've had, and if some of the administrative measures are taken, it is something that we don't like, but we have to do it in order to make sure there is public order,'' he said.

ISLAMABAD, PAKISTAN (APRIL 6) UPI - Gunmen opened fire Friday on a ceremony at which a guerrilla group was to surrender to the Soviet-backed government, igniting a gunbattle in which at least 12 people including five senior military officers and a high government official died, BBC reported.

The Afghan government, in a statement on official Kabul Radio, confirmed an incident took place but did not give a breakdown of casualties. Kabul radio said the attack came from a ''small terrorist group'' firing from a secret position.

A British Broadcasting Corp. correspondent, reporting from the scene in a field outside Herat city in western Afghanistan, said firing started as the provincial governor, Abdul Haq Khaliqar, moved to embrace a guerrilla commander who was surrending along with his fighters to the government of President Najibullah.

The correspondent recorded the sounds of automatic weapons fire during the 15-minute attack. Herat is about 400 miles west of Kabul near the Iranian border.

Two government tanks returned fire at the assailants, the report said. The report did not say how many attackers were involved.

''The shooting went on for more than 15 minutes. When it ended, a large number of Afghan soldiers, government officials and civilians, including children, could be seen lying dead or seriously wounded,'' the reporter said.

He said 12 people were killed, including five senior military officers, some of the assailants and a deputy minister for state security who was a chief negotiator with the guerrillas.

A later broadcast quoted a spokesmen for the Jamiat Islami, a Pakistan-based rebel group, as saying his group carried out the attack with another group opposed to reconciliation. The spokesman said some of the group's members were killed in the attack.''

The BBC reporter said the governor was critically wounded in the attack.

''I, along with Eastern bloc diplomats and other foreign journalists, dived to the ground, and stayed there until the shooting had ceased. All foreigners have survived. Although many have received minor injuries, none was hit by a bullet,'' the reporter said in his broadcast.

Kabul Radio said the function was organized to acknowledge the surrender of followers of Burhanuddin Rabbani, head of one of the seven main U.S.-backed guerrilla groups based in Pakistan fighting the communist government in Kabul since 1978.

''A small terrorist group fired from a secret position on a function held to receive four groups of Rabbani party members, killing some of our compatriots and wounding some others,'' the broadcast said. It said two of the wounded were in serious condition, but gave no further casualty details.

The radio confirmed Khaliqar was present at the ceremony but did not indicate whether he was hurt in the incident.

MOSCOW (APRIL 6) UPI - Mainly Russian workers in Lithuania held a warning strike Friday against the Baltic republic's independence declaration, and a Soviet legislative panel criticized U.S. lawmakers for interfering in Moscow's affairs.

In the Latvian capital of Riga, the republic's Communist Party opened its 25th Congress with most members expected to follow the lead of Lithuania and break with the Soviet Communist Party.

Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze, meanwhile, discussed the Lithuanian crisis with President Bush in Washington, and told reporters that Moscow has a ''clear conscience'' about its handling of the nearly four-week showdown.

About 2,000 non-Lithuanian workers at nine plants in Vilnius walked off the job for an hour to support President Mikhial Gorbachev's demand that Lithuania rescind its independence act of March 11, the official news agency Tass said.

''Why doesn't (Lithuanian President Vytautas) Landsbergis go to a factory or two and talk with people?'' a Russian worker at one plant told Soviet television. ''It is difficult to understand why emotions are running so high now. Everything started because of his politics.''

Radio Moscow's Interfax news service said workers at 20 industrial plants participated in the warning strike.

The labor protests occurred at factories where the bulk of the workers come from the 730,000 Russians, Poles, Byelorussians and other non-Lithuanians who make up about one-fifth of the republic's 3.7 million people.

In twin appeals to the Lithuanian people and Parliament last Saturday, Gorbachev demanded that the local legislature rescind its unilateral act of independence as a condition for negotiations with Moscow within the framework of the Soviet constitution.

The Lithuanian parliament, in the most recent of several steps back from the defiant declaration, sent Gorbachev a conciliatory response Thursday and said for the first time it would be willing to consider Soviet constitutional requirements in any talks.

Rimvydas Jasinavicius, minister of industry in Lithuania's young government told Soviet television: ''We do not want and are not going to break our good, friendly and economically beneficial links (with Moscow) because of our ideological differences.''

The Soviet Parliament's international affairs committee, meanwhile, issued a statement criticizing the U.S. Congress for recent resolutions in support of Lithuania.

''Just as in any federal state, Soviet legislation has priority over legislation of a constituent republic, and this should be known to the U.S. lawmakers,'' the statement said.

''The American attempts to influence events will not promote an early settlement of the problem,'' it said.

The House by a nearly unanimous vote Wednesday passed a resolution calling on Moscow to negotiate with Lithuania and warning that any use of force to suppress its ''democratic aspirations'' would cause ''a serious and tragic setback'' in U.S.-Soviet relations.

The Senate on March 21 approved a measure urging Bush to recognize Lithuania as an independent nation.

''Ultimatums and attempts to tell the Soviet Union how it should solve its domestic problems are tactless and infringe on the sovereign rights of the Soviet people and their constitutional institutions of power,'' the Soviet legislative panel said.

The committee's admonition went unheeded by Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, whom Soviet officials turned back at the Polish-Lithuanian border when he tried to enter the republic with only a Lithuanian visa. The New York Republican warned that Moscow risks losing U.S. economic aid if it restricts Lithuania's freedom.

A bloc of about 300 Soviet deputies - called ''Soyuz,'' or Union - urged Gorbachev to institute presidential rule in Lithuania and dissolve its government, which the Sajudis nationalist movement took over in Feb. 24 parliamentary elections.

Sajudis planned a rally Saturday to demonstrate support for the declaration of independence, Tass said.

In a separate dispatch from Moscow, Tass said: ''The present crisis in Lithuania was brought about neither by the Lithuanian people's movement toward independence, nor by Moscow's desire to stop it, but by the means chosen by the leaders of the Lithuanian parliament.''

LIMA, PERU (APRIL 6) UPI - Political unknown Alberto Fujimori, capitalizing on his Japanese ancestry and voters' distaste for politicians has surged into a strong second place in opinion polls in advance of Sunday's presidential election, pollsters said Friday.

In a continuing wave of pre-election violence, communist Shining Path guerrillas killed three navy officers early Friday and five bombs exploded in Lima, police said. A bomb hidden in a spare tire blew up about 11:30 a.m. Friday in a bus, wounding 12 passengers in the city of Cerro de Pasco 110 miles northeast of Lima, the radio station Radio Programas reported.

Pollsters from several private public opinion research companies said Fujimori is in a position to seriously challenge conservative front-runner Mario Vargas Llosa, a well-known novelist turned politician, in the likely event of a second-round vote.

Polls taken in the past two weeks show Vargas Llosa likely will gather the most votes, about 35 percent, far short of the 50 percent needed to win the election outright. A second round vote is required if no candidate gets more than 50 percent.

Fujimori in the past month has surpassed Luis Alva Castro, candidate of incumbent President Alan Garcia's American Popular Revolutionary Alliance Party and trails Vargas Llosa in second place. The polls show him winning about 20 percent of the vote. Fujimori has capitalized on his independent status and fear of Vargas Llosa's announced ''shock'' plan to contain Peru's raging inflation.

''They (voters) are saying if they are going to vote for someone new, an independent, and also if they really want modernization and foreign investment, then why not vote directly (for Fujimori) who is a representative of Japan because he could have the best contact with what could be the biggest investor,'' said Alfred Torres, a pollster with the Apoyo public opinion research firm.

''The people believe he is going to bring Japanese investment. And this is going to be done without a social cost, without the 'shock.'''

Known as ''El Chinito'' - ''The Little Chinaman'' in English - the 52-year-old agriculture engineer is running as the candidate of the ''Change '90'' party. His parents migrated to Peru from Japan some 70 years ago.

''I believe it helps to be a 'little Japanese,''' Fujimori told reporters Friday.

He refused to give details of his proposal to control inflation and spoke vaguely about his plans for government, a practice the pollsters said had helped him among voters afraid of Vargas Llosa's aggressive economic program.

''The economic problems cannot be resolved abruptly, freeing our economy, thinking of a 'shock' or recession, halting inflation from one day to the next,'' Fujimori said.

Three navy officers were killed about 6:30 a.m. Friday when the truck in which they were riding struck a mine believed planted by Shining Path guerrillas, National Police said. Another officer and a sailor were wounded in the mine explosion in the guerrilla-infested Ayacucho Department, 225 miles southeast of Lima.

Five bombs exploded Thursday night in Lima, damaging a bank and four branches of the state water company, police said. No one was reported wounded.

Also, guerrillas attacked a state agency that helps provide food for the poor and dynamited a bridge in other parts of the country, the newspaper El Comercio reported. No one was wounded in the incidents.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 6) UPI - President Bush, grappling with weighty matters of state Friday, squeezed in time for another celebrity at the White House - Granite, the lead sled dog of the winning team of the annual race across Alaska.

At a rainy and cold Rose Garden ceremony - delayed for more than two hours by a meeting with the Soviet foreign minister, Eduard Shevardnadze - Bush welcomed the furry beast with words of congratulations for his team's winning effort.

Bush also told Susan Butcher, 33, Granite's owner, ''We asked you guys to come to the White House - not bring the Alaska weather with you.''

The photo-op was held to mark Granite's performance in the Iditarod Trail Sled Dog Race last month marked Butcher's fourth victory in the 1,158-mile Anchorage-to-Nome sled dog marathon. The official running tme for Butcher, Granite and the rest of the team was a record 11 days, one hour, 53 minutes and 23 seconds.

The president, who invited the dog to the White House, has an affinity for canine companionship, including first dog, Millie, and one of her offspring, Ranger. But though both roam the White House grounds virtually at will, neither was present for the ceremony.

During his visit in Washington, Granite has reportedly been entertained lavishly at the Four Seasons Hotel in Georgetown, provided with a fluffy bathrobe, a red-white-and-blue collar, and raw hamburger galore.

Said White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater of the special treatment: ''Any dog that runs across Alaska deserves to stay at the Four Seasons.''

For Bush, the visit climaxed a week of celebrity entertaining. After a star-studded tennis match Wednesday was turned into a private party by the weather, the president met the following day with singer-star Michael Jackson.

AMSTERDAM, NETHERLANDS (APRIL 6) UPI - An unemployed man sprayed acid on the Dutch painter Rembrandt's most famed painting Friday but the artwork was saved by guards who were nearby, a museum spokesman said.

''The acid the man sprayed on the painting has not reached the paint layer. Damage is not as bad as we first thought,'' said National Museum spokesman Pieter van Thiel.

Van Thiel said the unidentified 31-year-old man sprayed acid on the 141-inch by 168-inch ''The Night Watch,'' painted in 1642 and generally accepted as one of Rembrandt's major works.

But guards were able to knock the plastic acid container out of the man's hands after only two squirts, and handed him over to the police.

One museum attendant dashed a neutralizing base liquid on the painting to stop the acidifying process as museum restorers were called to remove traces of the acid, which had attacked the varnish of the painting but had not penetrated through to the paint.

Dutch police said they had not been able to determine the man's motive for trying to damage the work of art.

It was the third time ''The Night Watch'' has been attacked this century. In 1917 a man, also unemployed, slashed the painting and in 1975 it was slashed again by a teacher.

''The Night Watch'' is Dutch state property and as such is not insured. Nor has the work ever been definitively valued.

Van Thiel said the painting would be returned to its spacious room in the National Museum after restoration but the museum had no plans to step up security after Friday's attack, which took place only a few hundred yards from the Van Gogh Museum where an exhibition opened last week showing the largest international collection of Holland's other main artistic son

Vincent Van Gogh to mark the centenary of the artist's death.

NEW YORK (APRIL 6) UPI - The dollar was slightly lower against most currencies in New York trading Friday as players acted on weaker-than-expected U.S. jobs data to trim dollar holdings ahead of a weekend Group of Seven meeting.

The Labor Department said U.S. nonfarm employment rose by just 26,000 jobs in March, far less than most analysts expected, suggesting considerable weakness in the manufacturing sector if not in the wider economy.

That pushed the dollar down, but the weakness was not as greatas it might have been. Players didn't want to pile up new currency positions with the Group of Seven industrial powers assembling Saturday in Paris to review monetary policy.

Betsy Reetz, a Union Bank of Switzerland assistant vice president, said that ''people who were looking to take positions (on the employment data) changed their minds when they realized the timing was bad.''

The dollar's fall also was checked by rumors of a Soviet nuclear power plant accident, which Soviet officials quickly denied.

In late New York trading, the dollar was quoted at 1.6950 West German marks, off from 1.7005 marks Thursday. It was changing hands at 157.65 Japanese yen, up from 157.40 yen late Thursday.

Bank of New York foreign exchange manager Robert Ryan doubted G-7 officials would take major steps to boost the weak Japanese yen.

G-7 conferees ''will come out and tell the market what their thoughts are, but they won't actually do anything,'' he said. ''If they haven't done it already, it's very unlikely anything major will develop.''

Reetz said the monetary policymakers ''could turn up with a stringent (final) communique or nothing.'' But as even Japan has not taken any large-scale measures to reinforce its currency, ''it may not be cause for action,'' he said.

Other dollar rates: 1.50 Swiss francs, down slightly from 1.5005; 5.6950 French francs, off from 5.7185; and 1,245.25 Italian lire, down from 1,250.25.

The British pound nudged up to $1.6420 from $1.6415.

In Europe, the dollar closed mostly lower. It finished in Frankfurt at 1.6955 German marks, off from 1.6995 Thursday, and also moved down in Zurich to end at 1.4965 Swiss francs compared with 1.5035.

In London the pound eased to $1.6385 against $1.6420 after a poll showed that the ruling Conservatives trailed the opposition, while Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's approval rating slumped to a record low 24 percent.

The U.S. currency was down in Paris, Milan and Brussels, where it closed at 5.7010 French francs against 5.7140, 1,248.05 Italian lire against 1,251.30, and 35.08 Belgian francs against 35.1750.

In Tokyo, the dollar fell against the yen for the fourth straight day as the U.S. unit was sold off in position-adjusting ahead of the G-7 meeting, closing at 157.47 yen against Thursday's finish of 157.90 yen.

The yen also was boosted by news of the U.S.-Japanese trade agreement signed late Thursday in Washington, said analysts.

Republic National Bank in New York closed cash gold at $380.75 an ounce, up from $375. The New York Commodity Exchange settled gold at $380.70 an ounce, up from $374.80. In Zurich, gold fell to $378 an ounce from $378.50. London gold moved up to $377.75 an ounce from $377.25.

Republic closed cash silver at $5.18 an ounce, up from $5.155. Comex spot silver closed at $5.164, up from $5.141. Zurich silver slipped to $5.15 an ounce from $5.20. London silver fell to $5.13 an ounce from $5.20.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 6) UPI - Gray-haired alumni of President Lyndon B. Johnson's Great Society held a 25th anniversary reunion at the White House Friday, where President Bush saluted the former leader as someone who ''tried his damnedest.''

''He loved this country, loved her land, loved her people,'' Bush said of Johnson, who waged a war on poverty, signed landmark civil rights legislation - yet was driven from office by the Vietnam War.

The gathering of about 350 people included friends, family and former aides, many from Johnson's home state of Texas. Among them: his wife, Lady Bird, former House Speaker Jim Wright, and Jack Valenti, who served as a presidential assistant.

The reunion marked the 25th anniversary of Johnson's inauguration.

Bush made no mention of Vietnam during his remarks in the East Room, and instead focused on how Johnson reached out to the poor.

''He tried with all his heart to be the best president this nation ever had for people who were pressed against the wall, whose cries were often not heard,'' the president said. ''Lyndon Johnson heard.''

Bush said Johnson ''often spoke of spotting a tombstone he admired in West Texas that carried these four words: 'He tried his damnedest.'

''Some say that tombstone never existed. But it does now. No one ever earned that epitaph more than Lyndon Johnson - 'he tried his damnedest.'''

Bush said, ''Historicans continue to argue about his legacy.''

''Some people say the greatest thing he ever did was heal the nation after a tragic loss (the assassination of President John F. Kennedy). Others say it was the 1964 Civil Rights Act, the Voting Rights Act of 1965.''

''But whatever the greatest thing he ever did ... there was no doubt about the best thing he ever did - that was marry Lady Bird.''

Standing beside the former first lady, Bush said above a burst of applause ''She was his anchor and his strength.'' (APRIL 6) UPI - Driven by a new market psychology since mid-week, crude oil prices plunged Friday to their lowest level in seven months on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Gasoline again led the way, recording a drop of more than a penny a gallon for the third consecutive day.

The benchmark West Texas Intermediate crude for May delivery dove 28 cents to $19.15 a barrel on the Merc, the lowest closing price since Sept. 5, the exchange said. The loss on the week was $1.13 a barrel.

On the U.S. Gulf Coast spot market, where crude is bought and sold for cash, prompt delivery WTI dropped 30 cents to $19.15 a barrel, $1.20 below a week ago.

And three major oil companies - Sun Co., Radnor, Pa.; Marathon Oil Co., the Findlay, Ohio, unit of USX Corp. and the Conoco Inc. unit of Du Pont - lowered the posted price they will pay for crude at the wellhead by 50 cents to $18.25 a barrel for WTI, the lowest price since Sept. 22.

They made a similar 50 cent reduction Wednesday.

''There's been a change in the market psychology since Wednesday,'' said Randall Rothenberg of Dean Witter Reynolds' International Energy Futures Group in New York.

Late Tuesday, the oil industry's American Petroleum Institute reported the nation's crude inventories rose 11.8 million barrels in the previous two weeks.

The market elected Wednesday to follow this price-depressing signal rather than a price-supporting 12.9 million-barrel decline in gasoline supplies in the same period. Gasoline fell 1.02 cents Wednesday.

''Ever since Wednesday, when gasoline took it on the chin, the pressure on crude prices has been heavier. The APIs were probably the last straw. The market is still feeling the weight of too much crude,'' Rothenberg said.

The trader said, ''The market needs to bring down the price enough to sop up the excess crude.'' He estimated that price to be about $18.50 a barrel on the Merc.

Unleaded gasoline for May delivery fell 1.18 cents on the Merc to end the day at 62.11 cents a gallon, 3.25 cents less than a week ago.

On the New York Harbor cash market, prompt delivery unleaded gasoline dropped 1.10 cents to 62.20 cents a gallon.

On the European spot market, Britain's widely traded North Sea Brent lost 35 cents to $17 a barrel, down $1.25 on the week.

United Arab Emirates' Dubai light - the key OPEC crude from the Middle East shipped mainly to the Far East - dropped 35 cents to $14.85 a barrel, 75 cents less than a week ago.

On the Merc, heating oil for May delivery finished the day at 53.71 cents a gallon, a gain of 0.40 cent on the day but a loss of 0.63 cent on the week.

Prompt delivery heating oil rose 1.40 cents to 58.45 cents a gallon on the New York Harbor cash market.

(APRIL 6) UPI - Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze and President Bush huddled for more than two hours at the White House today. Afterwards, the Soviet official told reporters that arms control agreements will be ready for approval at the coming super-power summit. On Lithuania, Shevardnadze said the Soviet Union feels pressure to maintain order in the rebellious Baltic republic. He added- quoting now- ''It is something we DON'T like but we have to do it.''

There are still at least 15 people unaccounted for in an early morning fire at a Miami Beach hotel. Crews are working their way through the rubble of the Fontana Hotel, looking for more victims of a blaze that has already left at least three people dead and 18 injured. Some of the survivors say they NEVER heard a fire alarm. But others say they were awakened by the sound of auto burglar alarms set off by falling debris in the downstairs parking area.

A report out of London says ''a large number'' of Afghan officials and citizens were killed today in a surprise attack by a group of Afghan rebels. The guerrillas had informed authorities in western Afghanistan that they would give up their weapons, but then opened fire at a ceremony for their alleged surrender. The report says at least five senior Afghan military officers were killed.

New York Senator Alfonse D'Amato embarked on a 100-mile journey today from Warsaw to the Polish-Lithuanian border... only to be turned back. D'Amato challenged the Soviet Union's virtual closure of the frontier by presenting a visa issued to him by Lithuania's rebel government. It was rejected. D'Amato says he made the crossing attempt to show the U-S lawmakers' support for Lithuania.

(APRIL 6) UPI - There are NO details yet on the financing of a buyout proposal that would place control of United Airlines into the hands of its employees. U-A-L Corporation directors reached agreement with United workers this morning on the four-point-six-BILLION-dollar deal. The buyout would make the airline the largest employee-owned company in the nation.

In Nepal, King Birendra fired his government today and promised broad reforms amid six weeks of pro-democracy unrest in his tiny Himalayan kingdom. But the pro-democracy opposition is rejecting the monarch's overture as an empty gesture. Massive protests erupted as demonstrators chanted and marched through the streets of Katmandu and at least five other cities. At least 10 demonstrators were killed in clashes with police.

More legal arguments were heard today in the trial of accused family killer John List in Elizabeth, New Jersey. Attorneys are wrangling over whether the jury will be told that List's wife had syphilis before she was killed by the devout Lutheran. The 64-year-old List is charged with shooting his wife, his mother and three children in November 1971. List faces multiple life sentences if convicted of five counts of murder. The case is expected to go to the jury early next week.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 6) UPI - President Bush, acknowledging the need for additional safeguards for visiting Chinese students, issued an executive order Friday to prevent them from being forced to return to their homeland.

Bush issued the order after pledging just hours earlier to make good on his word - on an action he promised five months ago when he vetoed legislation to the same end.

In a statement, Bush said since he issued a Nov. 30, 1989, presidential directive, ''I have recognized that there are two issues important to the Chinese nationals here that were not addressed by (the congressional legislation) or by my November 30 directive.''

Specifically, the order will direct Attorney General Dick Thornburgh to extend the deferral of enforced departure for Chinese citizens through Jan. 1, 1994. The deferral is currently scheduled to expire on June 5 of this year.

''This will provide assurance to Chinese nationals that they can remain in this country for the entire period'' promised earlier, Bush said.

The order also directs that ''steps be taken to alleviate concerns that have arisen recently about'' revocation by the government in Beijing of passports belonging to Chinese nationals.

Bush said the order also will include all facets of his original directive though he contended the directive ''had precisely the same legal effect as an executive order.''

''We don't want to take a chance on somebody being mistreated, brutalized, if you will,'' Bush earlier pledged to the American Society of Newspaper Editors.

The president's pledge was applauded by Rep. Nancy Pelosi, D-Calif., whose legislation to allow Chinese students to remain in the United States was vetoed by Bush in November.

The veto drew outrage from Democratic congressional leaders, who accused Bush of using it as a concession to the Chinese government to help smooth the way for a secret U.S. diplomatic mission to Beijing in December, just six months after the massacre of pro-democracy demonstrators in Tiananmen Square.

Seeking to defeat congressional attempts to override his veto in January, Bush promised in a letter to Sen. Connie Mack, R-Fla., to issue an ''executive order'' that ''does better by the students'' than the legislation.

Bush's pledge played a key role in narrowly sustaining his veto in the Senate.

But the White House acknowledged this week that Bush never issued an executive order, deciding instead to direct Thornburgh to take steps necessary to ensure that no Chinese nationals are deported against their will.

The administration said the difference between an executive order and a presidential directive amounted to semantics.

But Pelosi and others sharply criticized the president for not keeping his promise, saying that without a formal order published in the Federal Register, the Immigration and Naturalization Service lacked firm guidlines to follow.

On Friday, Bush shifted his position.

''I have every intention of keeping my word,'' he said. ''We have kept it by this presidential directive, but I did say 'executive order,' so this will formalize it in an official, executive-order fashion.''

Bush said he would extend until Jan. 1, 1994, a blanket waiver to an immigration rule requiring some 32,000 Chinese students in the United States to return to their homeland for two years when their student-exchange visas expire.

During that time, the students may seek to remain in the United States under a new immigration status or visa after completing their course of study.

A previous waiver, or deferral of enforced departure, announced by Bush last year is due to expire June 5, 1990.

WARSAW, POLAND (APRIL 6) UPI - Canadian Deputy Prime Minister Don Mazankowski ended a three-day official visit to Poland Friday by signing a series of economic agreements.

''Canada's presence here reflects our interest in Poland and in Europe,'' Mazankowski said at a news conference after signing a $30 million package of guarantees for Canadian investors.

Mazankowski, accompanied by 29 Canadian businessmen, held talks with Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki, President Wojciech Jaruzelski, Solidarity leader Lech Walesa and other officials during his visit.

''The government of Poland is in good hands,'' he said.

Mazankowski signed an agreement on cooperation in agriculture aimed at modernizing Polish farms. The pact initially calls for training 100 Polish farmers in management starting in June.

Another project calls for genetically upgrading cattle breeds, while others would modernize the Polish dairy industry.

''There is an idea to set up a Canadian model dairy farm in Poland,'' Mazankowski said.

Unitra, a Polish company that produces radios, signed a contract with Memotec Data Inc., on the production of sophisticated electronic equipment in Poland under license.

Memotec will also offer the latest computer telecommunications products to Polish markets.

''The agreement will bring the newest technology to Poland,'' Adam Bardach Memotec's vice president, said.

Polish Radio and Radio Canada International reached an agreement on the daily exchange of programs.

Mazankowski said Canada's philosophy is to boost trade with Poland and in this way help the country earn funds for the repayment of the nation's external debt.

''The more trade with Poland, the better chances are for rescheduling of Poland's debts,'' he said.

He explained Canada's interest in boosting Polish trade by noting it is Poland's fourth largest creditor.

(APRIL 6) UPI - Authorities say a South Miami Beach hotel where a fire killed three people today did NOT have a sprinkler system. At least 15 people are missing and 18 others were hurt in the early morning blaze at the three-story Fontana Hotel, which housed mostly elderly residents and young people. Authorities suspect arson because the fire spread so quickly.

Government accountants say the rescue of the America's savings and loan industry will cost at least 68-BILLION dollars more than estimated. The General Accounting Office in Washington today estimated the cost of the program at 325-BILLION dollars. That's far more than any other U-S bailout including the Marshall Plan to reconstruct post-war Europe.

It DIDN'T seem much like spring today in parts of the nation as snow fell in states from the southern Plains to the East. The National Weather Service says light snow fell in the northern mountains of Vermont and in parts of West Virginia, Pennslyvania, Maryland, Wisconsin, Michigan, Colorado, Arkansas, Oklahoma and the Texas Panhandle.

United Airlines employees have struck a four-point-six-BILLION-dollar buyout deal with U-A-L Corporation's board of directors. The accord was reached early today during 'round-the-clock negotiations... and averted a showdown with U-A-L's biggest stockholder. The buyout makes United Airlines the largest employee-owned company in the United States.

NEW YORK (APRIL 6) UPI - The stock market stood firm in the face of a 700-point decline in the Tokyo market this week, managing a small gain thanks to a surge in prices Tuesday.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 4.05 Friday to close at 2717.12, posting a gain of 9.91 points, or about 0.4 percent, on the week.

Among the broader market averages, the New York Stock Exchange composite index lost 0.07 points to close the week at 186.78. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index edged up 0.14 to 340.08.

Declines led advances 1,055-818 among the 2,161 issues traded this week. Big Board volume totaled 719,984,020 shares, compared with 662,125,494 a week earlier and 794,718,430 a year ago.

Analysts said the market acquitted itself well in what was a dismal week for the Tokyo market. For the week, Tokyo's blue-chip Nikkei index tumbled 701.67 points.

On Monday, stocks closed slightly lower after the blue chips almost erased an early sharp drop sparked by the second-worst loss ever on the Tokyo market.

Tokyo stocks suffered their second-largest one-day decline Monday, losing 6.6 percent of their value, or 1,978.38 points, amid speculation that Japan's economic boom could be coming to an end.

Analysts blamed the plunge on a falling Japanese yen, rising interest rates and a report that insurance companies, major investors in the market had moved to sell stocks. The Finance Ministry, attempting to stop the market plunge, said it investigated and found the report to be groundless.

Tuesday saw recoveries in both markets. The Dow industrials surged 36 points after prices in Tokyo bounced back on late bargain hunting. The blue-chip Nikkei index surged 757.65 points.

On Wednesday, stocks closed about 315 points lower in Tokyo, but the Dow industrials lost just 17 points, pressured late in the session by fears of a sharp decline in the Tokyo market Thursday. There was speculation that some firms in Tokyo were in financial trouble and might not be able to meet margin calls.

But those fears proved unfounded. After an early drop, the Tokyo exchange denied the rumors and stocks recovered almost all their losses. The Nikkei closed just 193 points lower after being off more than 1,000 points in early trading.

On Friday Tokyo had its best day of the week, jumping over 1,000 points, but investors in New York decided to take profits after an early rise in prices and the market closed with a slight loss.

The profit taking was sparked by uncertainty about what would come out of the meeting in Paris this weekend of officials of the major industrial nations, known as the Group of Seven.

''I think the market has learned to live with the ups and downs in Japan '' said Jim Andrews, first vice president in charge of institutional trading at Janney Montgomery Scott Inc. in Philadelphia.

''We lived through the big down day there (Monday), but our big up day this week came on very light volume. We're going to have to see more volume if the market's going to make a run at 2800 or 3000 (on the Dow).

''There's just been a lack of institutional interest,'' he said. ''Anyway, now we're waiting to see what happens at the G-7 (Group of Seven) meeting.''

Target levels for the world's major currencies, especially the dollar and theyen, are expected to be the main topic of discussion at the talks. The dollar was weaker against most currencies but up against the yen, and investors were nervous Friday about what might be done at the talks to shore up the yen.

''The dollar's weakness prompted some selling in the market Friday and also sent many traders to the sidelines before the meeting,'' said Alan Ackerman, senior vice president at Gruntal & Co.

On the trading floor this week, Philip Morris was the most active issue, up 1 5/8 to 41 1/4, as consumer stocks, seen as unlikely to deliver earnings disappointments, attracted interest.

Baxter International followed, down 2 to 22 1/4. The company said it would take a $566 million first-quarter charge to cover plant closings.

Tandem Computers was third, sinking 5 1/4 to 22 5/8 after saying slowing revenue growth would cause a drop in earnings for its March quarter compared with the prior three months.

Among other blue chips, AT&T lost 3/8 to 41 5/8, IBM fell 3/8 to 105 7/8, American Express added 1 1/8 to 26 5/8, Eastman Kodak rose 1/2 to 39 3/4, and General Motors tacked on 1/8 to 46 1/8.

On the American Stock Exchange, the Amex Market Value index eased 0.74 to close Friday at 361.01. Declines led advances 462-335 among the 998 issues traded.

Amex volume totaled 80,654,380 shares, compared with 69,026,360 traded a week earlier and 52,652,015 traded in the same week a year ago.

Salomon's put warrants on the Tokyo market's Nikkei index led the Amex actives, up 1/8 to 10 3/8.

The National Association of Securities Dealers index lost 4.64 to end the week at 430.90.

LOS ANGELES (APRIL 6) UPI - Lockheed Corp. said Friday it received a $259.7 million contract from the U.S. Navy to continue providing missile-engineering services for the U.S. and British navies.

Most of the contract, which covers more than six years, is for work on the Trident II (D-5) Fleet Ballistic Missile program, Lockheed spokesman Martin Belles said. Less than $30 million of the contract is for work on the British Navy's Polaris A3 missiles, he said.

Belles also said Lockheed had been expecting the contract to be awarded at about this time.

Lockheed's Missiles Systems Division in Sunnyvale, Calif., has been the prime contractor for submarine-launched missiles ballistic missiles since 1956. by 1989, it had produced 1,153 Polaris missiles, 619 Poseidon missiles and 570 Trident missiles.

DETROIT (APRIL 7) UPI - Toyota Motor Sales U.S.A. confirmed Friday it has renewed its dealer incentive programs until June 4, offering up to $1,200 cash for each of its mid-sized Camry cars sold.

The program determines the cash amount of the incentives based on individual sales objectives set between the carmaker and each of its 1,100 U.S. dealerships, a company spokeswoman said from Toyota's U.S. headquarters in Torrance, Calif.

Unlike top U.S. carmakers, Toyota does not offer any direct-to-customer cash rebates. It also does not openly advertise any specifics of its incentives paid directly to dealers to sell vehicles.

''Toyota has a very conscious policy of keeping these programs as quiet as possible,'' said industry analyst Michael Luckey of The Luckey Consulting Group, in Tappan, N.J.

However, a suburban Detroit Toyota dealer confirmed Toyota's new program offers dealers cash awards of between $400 and $1,200 on all new Camrys, and between $200 and $1,000 back on Corollas and Tercel cars.

Most 4x4 light truck models have dealer rebates between $200 and $500, while rebates between $700 and $1,200 a vehicle are offered on certain 4x2 trucks, depending on model.

Toyota's new models, like its MR2 sports coupe, 4Runner sport utilty vehicle, of Previa minivan, are not covered by any sales discounts under the new program.

''They see the domestic industry has painted itself into a corner by creating a dependency on part of consumers who expect cash rebates as a normal part of the deal,'' Luckey said.

Such incentives are also part of the reason why some domestic manufacturers appear to be doing so poorly, while U.S. sales of import brands are faring relatively well.

''Toyota's sales results in part reflect the pretty generous dealer offers operating behind the scenes,'' Luckey said, noting that Toyota must push sales of its Camry because it has capacity to build more than 200,000 of them at its Georgetown, Ky., plant that opened in 1988.

''The same is true of a lot of luxury import dealers that have factory-subsidized leasing rates,'' Luckey said.

Toyota posted a 22.5 percent increase in U.S. sales of both its domestic and import cars and trucks in March from year-ago levels.

''We had an excellent month in March,'' said David Wagner, of Suburban Toyota, in Bloomfield Hills, Mich.

''But in the Detroit area, dealers usually have to pass on the full amount (of the dealer incentive) to customers as part of the discounted price.''

Several other Japanese carmakers, like Honda and Subaru, currently have dealer incentives in place. Mazda Motor Co. offers discounts directly to the customer.

(APRIL 7) UPI - The union representing striking Greyhound drivers appealed to the company's board of directors and its investors Friday to demand a settlement of the five-week walkout against the nation's largest intercity bus line.

A prolonged strike, the union said in a letter, will force the company into bankruptcy.

A Greyhound spokesman said he had not seen the letter, but that the company is in no danger of bankruptcy and that strike-related revenue losses are shrinking as the company hires more replacement drivers and resumes more of its routes.

''The company is in sound financial condition and there is no danger of the company going into Chapter 11 (bankruptcy) proceeding,'' said George Gravley, the company spokesman. ''(The union's) conclusions have no foundation in fact.''

But in his letter, James La Sala, president of the Amalgamated Transit Union, said ''a prolonged strike ... could seriously jeopardize Greyound Lines' financial position and its future ability to operate successfully and to meet its debt covenants.''

''Unless the board of directors instructs management to act responsibly and negotiate a fair and equitable settlement of the labor differences, then the inevitable outcome will be a bankruptcy,'' La Sala said.

His letter, sent to members of Greyhound's board of directors and some of the company's major investors, also said the union ''is prepared to negotiate a realistic settlement.''

Gravley, acknowledging ''the strike has been costly to us,'' said revenues are currently running about 58 percent of pre-strike levels and are increasing as more routes are resumed with replacement drivers.

''As the company builds back and we have more passengers and more buses running, our revenues are increasing and losses declining,'' he said.

He also said Greyhound planned to announce a major service expansion Thursday in time for Easter weekend.

As the strike enters its sixth week, no talks were scheduled in the bitter and sometimes violent labor dispute between Greyhound and its more than 9,000 striking employees. The company has said it would not resume talks until seven consecutive days have passed without violence.

The nationwide walkout March 2 by members of the Amalgamated Council of Greyhound Local Unions has been marred by numerous shootings and the death of a striking driver who was accidentally crushed by a bus last month in Northern California.

Greyhound, based in Dallas, has accused its drivers, who now average $24,700 a year, of demanding wage increases that could be financed only through fare increases. The drivers accepted wage cuts of 8 percent and 23 percent in their 1983 and 1987 contracts, respectively. The company carried 22 million passengers last year.

NEW YORK (APRIL 9) UPI - International Business Machines Corp. barely kept its No. 1 position on Business Week's list of American's 1,000 most valuable companies, losing nearly $4 billion in market value in 1989, the magazine said in a report released Monday. Exxon Corp. ranked second and would have overtaken IBM if not for the cost of the Valdez oil spill in Alaska, the magazine said in a bonus issue.

Rounding out the top five were General Electric Co., American Telephone & Telegraph Co. and Philip Morris Cos., the magazine said. IBM lost six percent in market value in 1989, Business Week said.

The newly merged Bristol-Myers Squibb Co. moved up to eighth position on the list, 22 notches above from Bristol-Myers' standing last year, Business Week said. The No. 8 ranking places the pharmaceutical company just below Merck & Co., its arch competitor, according to the list.

In another big merger completed since the 1989 rankings, Time Warner Inc., placed 109th, lower than either Time Inc. or Warner Communications Inc. did last year. The magazine said investors are hesitant about the media giant's heavy debt load and the threat of cable re-regulation.

The most dramatic move upward was Costco Wholesale Corp., a chain of retailing clubs based in Kirkland, Wash., which moved up 376 positions. Conversely, the mail-order clothier Lands' End Inc. slipped 271 places, thanks to a 43 percent loss in market value, the magazine said.

Overall, the most valuable companies increased in market value 15 percent, to $2.7 trillion, over last year, the magazine said. Their performance lagged, however, behind the 16.8 percent gain in 1989 by the Standard & Poor's 500-stock index, according to Business Week.

(APRIL 7) UPI - Veteran's Day arrived early this year in baseball Friday, when the attention centered on three players who could be playing old-timers' games.

Bill Buckner, 40, won a spot on the season-opening roster of the Boston Red Sox, who obviously forgive the first baseman best remembered for letting a ground ball go through his legs in the sixth game of the 1986 World Series.

Nolan Ryan, baseball's all-time strikeout leader, has agreed to a one-year contract option for the 1991 season. Ryan, 43, signed with the Rangers as a free agent in December 1988, after nine years with the Houston Astros.

Last season he won 16 games, led the major leagues with a club-record 301 strikeouts and had a 3.20 earned run average. He became the first pitcher to throw 5,000 strikeouts and finished the season with 5,076.

Pitcher Jerry Reuss was not as fortunate. The 40-year-old lefthander was released by the Chicago White Sox and left their camp for a tryout with the Houston Astros.

''Somewhere, some place there will be an opening for a guy like me,'' he said. ''When there is, I'll be ready.''

In exhibition games, Baltimore defeated the New York Yankees 4-2, Kansas City beaned Boston 9-1, Texas edged Chicago White Sox 4-3, a split Detroit squad defeated Houston 6-5 in 10 innings and another Tigers side lost to Cincinnati 6-5, St. Louis shut out Pittsburgh 1-0, Philadelphia blanked Toronto 2-0, Atlanta pounded Baltimore 8-1, the Chicago Cubs shut out Milwaukee 7-0, and Cleveland edged Seattle 7-6.

At Lakeland, Fla., Rich Rowland singled in Steve Pegues with a hit off Charlie Kerfeld in the bottom of the 10th inning to give the Tigers a split-squad victory over the Astros.

At Plant City, Fla., Paul O'Neill hit a mammoth home run with two outs in the bottom of the ninth to lift the Reds to a victory over the other half of the split-squad Tigers. O'Neill's homer was estimated to have traveled 430 feet.

At Dunedin, Fla., Terry Mulholland gave up two hits in six innings to lead the Phillies to a victory over the Blue Jays, who have dropped four straight.

At St. Petersburg, Fla., Jose DeLeon pitched five scoreless innings and struck out six, leading the Cardinals to a victory over the Pirates. The game closed the Cardinals' Florida exhibition schedule.

At West Palm Beach, Fla., Nick Esasky, readying for his first season with Atlanta, belted a three-run homer in the third inning and Pete Smith allowed one run in five innings to help the Braves to a victory over the split-squad Orioles.

At Fort Lauderdale, Fla., the New York Yankees suffered a double loss. Billy Ripken broke a sixth-inning tie with a two-run single to spark the split-squad Orioles to a victory over the Yankees. After the game, the Yankees placed pitcher Lance McCullers on the 15-day disabled list. McCullers had collided with Oriole Stanley Jefferson at the plate.

At Winter Haven, Fla., Kevin Seitzer and Bo Jackson each drove in three runs in a 17-hit attack that lifted the Royals to a victory over the Red Sox.

At Sarasota, Fla., a throwing error by second baseman Scott Fletcher led to two unearned runs in the third inning to propel the Rangers to a triumph over the White Sox.

At Tempe, Ariz., consecutive RBI doubles by Cory Snyder, Candy Maldonado and Chris James keyed a three-run sixth as the Indians overcame the Mariners. Seattle shortstop Omar Vizquel suffered a sprained ligament in his left knee and will be sidelined for four to six weeks.

At Mesa, Ariz., Mark Grace collected four hits and Luis Salazar drove in three runs in the Cubs' victory over Milwaukee. The Cubs also received good news when tests on pitcher Rick Sutcliffe's right shoulder showed only inflammation. He will be eligible to return April 21.

In later games, Montreal played Minnesota, Los Angeles faced California, and Oakland played San Francisco.

(APRIL 6) UPI - The Soviet foreign minister holds out hope for early approval of an arms reduction pact... congressional auditors give a new estimate of the cost of the S-and-L bailout... and three people are killed in a Miami Beach hotel fire. Those and other stories, next, from U-P-I.

Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze and President Bush discussed a broad range of subjects during lengthy talks today at the White House.

An upbeat Shevardnadze, who called the meeting ''substantive,'' says he hopes agreement can be reached on a nuclear arms reduction treaty in time for the super-power summit that starts next month.

Shevardnadze predicted specifically that the Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty to cut nuclear arms would be ready for Bush and Soviet President Gorbachev to initial when they meet from May 30th to June 3rd at an undisclosed U-S location.

But the Soviet official's optimism apparently is NOT shared by diplomats on both sides. They say the earlier-than-expected summit will make it unlikely that work will be completed on various arms accords.

Shevardnadze also discussed the situation in the Soviet republic of Lithuania. He told reporters that Moscow is under pressure to maintain order in the breakaway Baltic state, conceding- ''It is something we don't like but we have to do it.''

(APRIL 6) UPI - Authorities in Miami Beach, Florida, still DON'T know what caused a deadly fire that destroyed the Fontana Hotel early today.

The casualty toll from the blaze so far stands at three dead, 18 injured and at least 15 missing.

Officials say the fire erupted early this morning at the three-story hotel which homean it was intentionally set. The hotel did NOT have a sprinkler system.

Miami Beach Police Chief Jim Reed says firefighters may find more bodies when they are able to search underneath the collapsed roof.

When the fire broke out, managers of the hotel ran from door to door, pounding and yelling for people to get out. One woman says she and her husband had to crawl down a hallway, choking from the smoke, before finding their way out.

Congressional auditors say the government's bailout of the nation's savings and loan industry will cost taxpayers at least 68-BILLION dollars more than estimated.

The administration had figured the rescue would cost 257-BILLION dollars. But the latest price tag tallied by the General Accounting Office is 325-BILLION.

The G-A-O cautions that the figure is subject to ''significant change'' as federal officials take over and close thrifts that lost money through bad loans, poor management and outright theft.

In testimony to the Senate Banking Committee, U-S Comptroller General Charles Bowsher says the increase is based on the need to further shore up ailing institutions... cover interest on government bonds issued to finance the bailout... and pay escalating administrative costs.

Bowsher says the total cost of repairing America's thrifts could eventually rocket to 400-BILLION or even 500-BILLION dollars.

(APRIL 6) UPI - Pope John Paul met at the Vatican today with with Palestine Liberation Organization leader Yasser Arafat.

The pope said he hopes negotiations will enable Israelis and Palestinians to live in peace and liberty... each in their own country.

A statement from the Vatican also emphasized avoiding ''violence exercised through terrorist means and reprisal.''

Arafat previously had audiences with the pope in 1982 and 1988.

The pope for years has backed proposals for a Palestinian homeland.

Arafat said the two discussed peace efforts, and what Arafat called ''dangerous demographic changes'' in Jerusalem.

That's an apparent reference to the Israeli settlement of Soviet Jews in East Jerusalem. Pope John Paul has frequently called for international status for Jerusalem to guarantee access to shrines for Christians, Moslems and Jews.

Katmandu and other cities in Nepal are taking on the appearance of war zones. At least 17 more pro-democracy demonstrators were killed during massive protests today.

State-owned Radio Nepal said the military has been deployed in parts of the city ''to maintain law and order.''

The violence came even though the king today fired his government and promised broad reforms. Radio Nepal said the government will release everyone arrested during the six-week-old democracy movement except those who have been charged for criminal offenses.

But demonstrators put NO faith in the moves and rampaged through the streets of Katmandu, destroying government buildings and drawing gunfire from police.

Demonstrators in at least five other cities reportedly clashed with police who fired tear gas and bullets.

(APRIL 6) UPI - U-A-L Corporation's board of directors averted a showdown with its major shareholder by reaching a multi-BILLION-dollar buyout agreement early today with United Airlines employees.

The crucial four-point-three-BILLION-dollar deal was struck during 'round-the-clock negotiations between the U-A-L board and a group the employee unions set up to stage a buyout... United Employee Acquisition Corporation.

There's NO definite financing for the buyout, but the airline unions hope to secure financing by proposing two-BILLION dollars in wage cuts over five years.

The new deal, if completed, would make U-A-L the largest employee-owned company in the world.

U-A-L's major shareholder, Condor Partners, had threatened to oust the company's board if directors did NOT accept the buyout offer.

The United Employee group is made up of three unions representing flight attendants, pilots and machinists.

Government numbers show a slight drop in the nation's unemployment rate in March, but NOT many new jobs.

The increase of 26-thousand NON-farm jobs is the smallest gain of that type since June 1986.

After seasonal adjustments, the national jobless rate fell to five-point-two percent in March. That's one-tenth of one percent less than the previous two months.

Most economists had expected little change in the jobless rate, which has hovered in the same range for the past 18 months.

Presidential economic adviser Michael Boskin said the economy is growing moderately after a period of robust growth.

But construction hiring slowed last month, and the number of jobs in the nation's factories dropped by 30-thousand.

Gadhafi appealed on Tripoli Radio on Wednesday for the release of hostages in the Middle East to mark the Moslem holy month of Ramadan.

The Fatah spokesman said efforts have been made through Gadhafi and through the French government.

The statement implied that the Abu Nidal group was NOT considering the imminent release of four other Belgians also kidnapped in 1987 from a yacht off the Israeli-occupied Gaza Strip. The statement also did NOT mention a second child the French woman reportedly gave birth to in captivity.

NEW YORK (APRIL 7) UPI - The New York Islanders Friday were fined $25,000 and Coach Al Arbour $5,000 by the NHL as a result of an altercation at the conclusion of their Stanley Cup playoff game the previous night against the New York Rangers, league president John Ziegler announced.

Also, NHL Executive Vice President Brian O'Neill announced that forward Mick Vukota is suspended for 10 games and forward Ken Baumgartner for one, effective immediately.

Arbour sent Vukota and Baumgartner out on the Madison Square Garden ice near the end of the third period, and when the final buzzer sounded the two began fighting with the nearest Rangers players.

Referee Don Koharski assessed Baumgartner a double game misconduct, calling for an automatic one-game suspension. O'Neill rescinded a game misconduct but not the suspension.

Ziegler, who has been criticized in the past for not responding to NHL playoff controversies, made an unusually harsh statement.

''For 59 minutes and 58 seconds, I and thousands of our fans were treated to an outstanding athletic event,'' said Ziegler. ''Thereafter, the beauty the effort, the discipline, the dedication and the skill that had been invested was trashed by a complete lack of respect for NHL rules and principles.

''The game was, for all pratical purposes, over... Islander Coach Al Arbour sent out for the closing face-off players who led his team in fighting majors and misconducts... What next ensued will be replayed to all of our embarrassment hundreds of times throughout North America and the rest of the world.''

Ziegler called the action ''shameful disgraceful, degrading,'' and described the Islanders and Arbour as ''dishonorable.''

(APRIL 6) UPI - Authorities have lowered the official number of missing people to 14 in this morning's fire that gutted the Fontana Hotel in South Miami Beach, Florida, and killed three people. Officials say one resident vacationing in New York called to confirm that she was NOT in the hotel at the time the blaze erupted. Authorities say 78 mostly elderly residents escaped the flames clad only in their pajamas.

Government estimates of the price tag for saving the largely bankrupt savings and loan industry went up by 68-BILLION dollars today. At a Senate committee meeting in Washington, the General Accounting Office raised the estimate for the bailout to 325-BILLION dollars. But U-S Comptroller General Charles Bowsher said the final cost will ''likely'' be higher. Bowsher said officials owe it to taxpayers to ''go after'' those who caused the crisis.

Economists say American builders and retailers will be the first to benefit from Japan's promise to make it easier for foreigners to do business in Japan. They note that Japan's rapid growth is fast outstripping its infra-structure, and the country is in dire need of new roadways, airports, harbors and other major public works.

An unemployed man in Amsterdam, Netherlands, today sprayed acid on Dutch painter Rembrandt's most famous painting- ''The Night Watch.'' But guards at the National Museum quickly grabbed the man and sprayed a neutralizing liquid on the work. A National Museum spokesman said the acid did NOT reach the paint layer. This was the third attack on the painting this century.

A Contra commander in Nicaragua today said the rebels will NOT disarm unless all high-ranking Sandinista officers are dismissed. The Contra rebel leader popularly known as Commander Ruben told United Press International in Managua that there must be safeguards for the rebels after the Sandinistas leave office on April 25th.

(APRIL 6) UPI - Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox faced new charges today in his campaign in the Democratic runoff with fellow gubernatorial candidate Ann Richards. Mattox denied a newspaper report that he smoked marijuana in the '70's. The report was based on a signed affidavit by a former Dallas vice cop. But Mattox called his accusers ''liars.''

Peru's presidential campaign is in its final days leading up to Sunday's voting. Shining Path guerrillas killed three navy officers in an attack today, and five bombs exploded in Lima. Another bomb injured 12 bus passengers in a city outside the capital. 11th-hour polls show Alberto Fujimori gaining on the front-runner, novelist Mario Vargas Llosa.

A ceremony advertised as an Afghan rebel surrender turned into a bloodbath today in a western city in Afghanistan. Guerrillas aligned with what's described as a ''small terrorist group'' opened fire on the ceremony, triggering a gunbattle. Broadcast reports say at least 12 people died. Five senior military officers and a high-ranking government official were reported among the dead.

A self-declared ''seventh-generation magician'' from New York's Staten Island celebrated the 116th birthday of the escape artist Houdini today by re-creating his stunt of freeing himself from a locked box immersed in the East River. The man- who identified himself only as ''Laurice''- was shackled with chains before going in the box. He surfaced seven seconds after it hit the water.

(APRIL 6) UPI - The Soviet Union foreign minister today expressed hope that his country and the United States will be ready for initial approval of a strategic arms agreement at the May 30th summit. Eduard Shevardnadze also said a unified Germany should NOT be included in NATO. But he said the idea it might belong both to NATO and to the Warsaw Pact should be explored. He also expressed a strong desire that Germany's borders remain unchanged.

President Bush says he told Soviet Foreign Minister Shevardnadze today NOT to use of force in Lithuania because it could hurt U-S-Soviet relations. Bush later reported to a convention of editors in Washington that the two superpowers ''have an awful lot at stake.'' But Shevardnadze implied force might be used. He said there might be conflicts in Lithuania, and added ''the most important thing'' is to ensure public order.

Democratic Representative Pat Schroeder of Colorado today announced seven members of the House are about to travel to the Pacific and East Asia. They'll look for possible alternatives to U-S military bases in the Philippines. The delegation also will visit Vietnam and Cambodia to see how much the Soviet Union has reduced aircraft and ships. They also will explore Vietnamese troop withdrawal from Cambodia. The 10-day trip starts tomorrow.

Three people died today in a Miami Beach, Florida, fire at a hotel equipped with pipes for a sprinkler system, but NO sprinkler heads. Officials say the sprinklers are NOT required until next year, and the Fontana Hotel was up to code. Fire officials say the speed with which the early-morning fire spread raises questions of arson. Most of the residents were elderly. 18 are injured and 14 are still missing.

(APRIL 6) UPI - A radical Palestinian group in Lebanon is offering to release three hostages- a Belgian man, a French woman and a child they conceived in captivity. Abu Nidal's Fatah Revolutionary Council says it has contacted French officials to arrange the release. But the group is NOT freeing four other Belgians and another child reported to be in its custody.

President Bush made good on his pledge today and issued an executive order allowing visiting Chinese students to remain in the United States until 1994. The students fear repressive measures on their return to China in the wake of last year's crackdown on student protests. Bush vetoed a congressional measure protecting the students last year, promising he would make sure NO one would be forced to return to China.

An adviser to the Belgian nuns who sold their convent has been freed from jail. (APRIL 6) UPI - The latest news from around the world and across the nation... U-P-I has the details and developments.

The Soviet foreign minister says President Bush and Soviet President Gorbachev will sign some ''very important documents'' during their summit in late May.

Eduard Shevardnadze says more than 10 documents for signing will include arms control agreements.

The foreign minister spoke in Washington today after meeting with President Bush and Secretary of State Baker.

Shevardnadze said negotiators will try to have a strategic arms pact ready for initial approval, but ''a lot of work remains to be done.''

Baker also was hopeful of an agreement, but he said the main sticking issues are air- and sea-launched missiles.

Shevardnadze noted that the new Soviet national legislature will have to ratify the treaty, as will the U-S Senate.

He also voiced objections to a unified Germany becoming part of NATO but suggested it might be part of both NATO and the Warsaw Pact.

President Bush today gave his strongest warning so far against Soviet force in Lithuania.

Bush said he told Soviet Foreign Minister Shevardnadze today that the use of force in Lithuania could ''adversely affect'' U-S-Soviet relations and possibly hurt arms control talks.

The president has been careful in his comments about Lithuania's declaration of independence last month. But his tone was more stern at the convention of American Association of Newspaper Editors.

Bush maintained he's NOT telling the Soviets what to do... he's- quote- ''telling them what NOT to do.'' Bush said- quoting again- ''Do NOT use force because we have an awful lot at stake in the U-S-Soviet relationship.''

Shevardnadze told reporters Lithuania ''is a domestic affair for the Soviet Union.'' He said the most important thing is to ensure public order in the republic.

He said conflicts that have arisen in other Soviet republics might strike Lithuania. If so, Shevardnadze said, the Soviet Union will have to take what he called ''administrative measures.''

(APRIL 6) UPI - Fire officials are calling in trained dogs to help sift through the wreckage of the Fontana Hotel in Miami Beach, were at least three people were killed and 14 were missing following a fire this morning.

The 39-year-old, 102-room hotel rented rooms by the month and catered mostly to elderly residents.

The search for bodies has been hindered by new fires breaking out in the building's east wing. Police and fire officials also report that parts of the building are ''structurally unsound'' and that the number of missing persons may increase.

21 people were reported injured in the blaze, including three firefighters. At least 86 residents escaped.

Cause of the blaze is unknown. While it spread remarkably fast, officials say they have NO evidence leading them to suspect arson.

A team of federal officials is to arrive in Miami Beach tomorrow.

A former Philippine banker testified today in the Marcos racketeering trial in New York that he routinely sent bundles containing 100-thousand-dollars to Imelda Marcos during her visits to New York.

Oscar Carino testified Millions of dollars were delivered to Imelda Marcos in this fashion.

Carino is a former vice president and manager of the New York branch of the Philippine National Bank.

He also testified today that he owes more than 200-thousand dollars in U-S back taxes and interest.

Marcos is facing charges of racketeering, conspiracy, fraud and obstruction of justice in an alleged scam to siphon off Philippine government money to Marcos holdings in New York.

(APRIL 6) UPI - A psychiatrist testifying in the New Jersey murder trial of John Emil List today compared the defendant to ''a small rubber band'' that ''snapped.''

Dr. Sheldon Miller said List was a hard-working, God-fearing man who went around the bend when he lost his job and then discovered that his wife had an advanced case of syphilis.

List is charged with the 1971 murder of his mother, his wife, and their three children.

Dr. Miller speculated today that List believed- quoting here- ''he was sending them to join God and saving them from the embarrassment of having to be on the public dole.''

The medical evidence on Helen List's history of syphilis was admitted earlier in the day by the judge after Miller told him during a hearing that List had learned of his wife's disease before killing her.

List disappeared for more than 17 years after the murders. The 64-year-old faces multiple life sentences if found guilty.

The Medellin cocaine cartel today accused Colombia's government of torture and killings in the drug war.

The drug mob vowed to ''respond to extraditions and disappearances with bombs and executions.''

In a statement to the media, the cartel said it would suspend an assault on Medellin police that has left 17 police agents dead in three days.

The self-named ''Extraditables'' said they will instead attack torturers, and industrial and political powers involved in disappearances and torture.

The new announcement came one day after police deactivated a truck bomb planted in a rich neighborhood near government homes in Bogota .

Colombian Senator Federico Estrada Velez says Colombia should stop extraditing drug lords to the United States. Estrada Velez was kidnapped and released by the Medellin cartel earlier this week.

He says the average American automatically considers guilty any Colombian (APRIL 6) UPI - NASA astronomer Edward Weiler is ready to culminate 11 years of work with the impending launch of the space shuttle Discovery.

Like other astronomers, Weiler arrived today at Cape Canaveral, Florida, to get ready for the start of the countdown tomorrow. Weiler has been working for more than a decade on the shuttle's payload- the Hubble Space Telescope.

Weiler says he's never had emotions like the ones he felt seeing the shuttle on the launch pad. He's so excited he says he's ''on the verge of breaking up half the time.''

A series of problems have delayed the flight seven years and pushed the price tag to one-point-five-BILLION dollars- one-BILLION more than expected.

Work is now on schedule to start Discovery's three-day countdown tomorrow afternoon.

The tank-car-size Hubble telescope is expected to revolutionize optical astronomy, and perhaps discover evidence of planets orbiting other stars.

A 90-year-old woman nabbed a burglar trying to rob one of her rental units in Dallas earlier this week by lying in wait for the man until he emerged from the house window.

She then convinced the man to surrender... using a borrowed 22-caliber revolver.

A neighbor told Gena Scarbrough Tuesday afternoon that one of her rental homes was being burglarized.

Scarbrough owns a revolver and keeps a loaded shotgun by her bed, explaining she's never been afraid to handle firearms because- in her words- ''my daddy showed me how to use them while I was growing up on a farm.''

But in all the confusion, she left behind her shotgun when she went to investigate.

So the neighbor allowed her to borrow a .22-caliber revolver, and Scarbrough waited outside a broken window until the burglar emerged carrying a stereo and speakers.

Scarbrough says she told the man to put it down or she'd shoot him.

Police soon arrived and took 33-year-old Manfredo Barrios into custody.

White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater expressed hope today that a strategic arms reduction treaty will ready for approval at the upcoming superpower summit. Fitzwater says that is the goal of the summit. But he cautioned there's NO guarantee the treaty issues will be worked out. Soviet Foreign Minister Shevardnadze in Washington today said there is enough time to resolve differences.

The search for those missing following a fatal fire in a Miami Beach hotel has been called off for the night. TAIPEI (APRIL 7) - Panic selling sent prices plunging 612.45 points, or six per cent, Saturday in the worst even crash on the Taiwan stock exchange.

Dealers said the crash was caused by tight liquidity and a finance ministry report showing it had collected 73.1 billion dollars (3.6 billion U.S.) in the first quarter of the year from a recently imposed stock transaction tax.

Bearish sentiment pushed prices down at the opening Saturday, and the Weighted Index of 196 shares closed the two-hour session at 9,828.22, down 612.45 points, following a 466-point drop on Friday.

Some 94.3 billion Taiwan dollars (3.6 billion U.S.) worth of shares changed hands on Saturday morning.

The finance ministry started levying a 0.6 percent tax on all stock transactions in January to discourage speculation on the stock exchange.

As a result, some of the speculative investment has been shifted from the island's exchange to overseas markets, dealers said, adding that individual and institutional investors were also waiting to buy new shares due to be issued by three government banks and the state-run China Steel Corp.

A substantial amount of capital is also expected to be directed to private banks here after the government lifted its monopoly on the banking sector.

The Taiwan bourse posted transactions worth 25.67 trillion Taiwan dollars (987.46 billion U.S.) last year, the third highest in the world after Tokyo and New York.

ROME, April 7 (AFP) - PLO chief Yasser Arafat said he had secret contacts with senior Israeli officials and had received messages from Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir and Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin, in an interview with Italian television.

The Palestine Liberation Organization chief, on a visit to Italy at government invitation, said the messages had concerned "peace initiatives" but did not elaborate.

He was responding to a question during the interview, broadcast Friday night, on whether there was any truth in reports that he had had secret, high-level contacts with Israeli goverment officials.

"Yes, this exists," he said, stating there had been "numerous contacts between Palestinian leaders and Israeli officials".

"For example, Rabin sent an envoy with a message for me. Even Shamir did the same thing," he said.

When pressed for details, he said the messages concerned the Intifada, the Palestinian uprising in the Israeli-occupied West Bank for more than two years. Mr. Rabin and Mr. Shamir "illustrated their point of view" and discussed "pece initiatives", he said.

Mr. Shamir is head of the right-wing Likud bloc, which has opposed dialogue with the PLO. His coalition government collapsed last month over a row with its Labour partners on U.S. proposals for Israeli-Palestinian talks.

Labour, of which Mr. Rabin is a member, backs the proposal. Its leader, Shimon Peres, has been asked to form a new government.

Mr. Arafat, who was on a two-day visit to Rome, met with President Francesco Cossiga and Prime Minister Giulio Andreotti, and had an audience with Pope John Paul II during his stay.

OSNABRUECK, West Germany (APRIL 7) - West German labor leader Franz Steinkuehler said in an interview published Saturday that he is utterly opposed to merging West Germany's powerful DGB labor federation with the East German FDGB federation.

Mr. Steinkuehler, president of the IG-Metall metalworkers' union, told the Neue Osnabruecker Zeitung that such a merger "is absolutely out of the question".

He said that the FDGB was the type of organization "where not even a dog would look for a piece of bread", meaning that the East German federation, heavily compromised because of its relationship to the former Communist Party, has no credibility.

He said his union would stay in the DGB after the latter's merger with certain unions in East Germany, since DGB will be the umbrella organization for all German unions. It is looking for East German partners not strongly involved with the FDGB.

He added that his IG-Metall union could merge with the East German IG-Metall union within three years.

KUWAIT (APRIL 7) - The Kuwait Oil Tanker Company has put in an order for construction of two tankers and two methane carriers by Japanese and South Korean firms costing 295 million dollars, KOTC president Abdel Fattah al-Badr said in a report published here Saturday.

In a statement to the daily Al Watan newspaper, Mr. al-Badr said KOTC, the region's leading oil transport company, would take delivery of the two tankers and two methane carriers in early 1992.

The tankers, with a capacity of 280,000 tons each, will be built by South Korea's Hyundai and Daewoo companies, while Japan's Mistubishi will undertake construction of the methane carriers, which will each be able to transport 150,000 cubic meters of gas, he added.

KOTC, which owns more than 20 vessels, decided in 1987 to place 11 of its tankers under the U.S. flag to secure U.S. naval protection after Iran and Iraq attacked ships during the eight-year Gulf war, which ended with a cease-fire in August 1988.

Kuwait had also reflagged three tankers to Britain and leased three others to the Soviet Union's merchant marine.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 7) - U.S. officials were Saturday assessing the results of three days of talks here ith Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze and were clearly disappointed by the lack of progress on strategic arms control.

Secretary of State James Baker said following the talks that ended Friday the fact that the two sides had not settled the issue of air-launched and sea-launched cruise missiles was "a disappointment."

Some U.S. officials even indicated that the Soviet negotiators seemed to renege on concessions they made on arms control at the last ministerial meeting in Moscow last February. The Soviets, however, countered that their positions had been misunderstood.

Following the progress made at the Baker-Shevardnadze meeting last September in Wyoming and the superpower summit at Malta in December, U.S. diplomats may have underestimated the pressure the Soviet Union's domestic problems was exerting on international negotiations.

According to Western diplomats in Vienna, talks on the reduction of conventional forces in Europe have been stalled for several weeks. In Washington, Mr. Baker said the question of limits on combat aircraft remained a bone of contention, and described the latest Soviet proposal on the matter as "unattractive."

Whether the crisis in the Baltic countries have distracted the Kremlin's attention, or whether the most conservative Soviet leaders found concessions to the United States excessive, Mr. Shevardnadze has shown himself more optimistic than Mr. Baker about reaching a rapid agreement on the Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty (START), which would reduce the strategic arsenals of the two superpowers.

"I think that at the next meeting, which by mutual agreement will be held from May 16 to 19, we will be able to overcome most of the problems and find mutually acceptable solutions on the remaining issues in dispute on START," Mr. Shevardnadze told a news conference Friday.

Mr. Baker has not ruled that the major problems may be resolved at the next summit between President George Bush and his Soviet counterpart May 30 to June 3, but he emphasized that the negotiators would have to redouble their efforts to do it.

The Soviet minister said the fact that his talks here had produced dates for the next summit proved that "a sustainable development of Soviet-American dialogue demonstrates the continuation of a course that is resilient to changes, to fluctuations caused by the rapidly changing international situation."

HOUSTON (APRIL 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Coastal Aruba Refining Company N.V., a subsidiary of the Coastal Corporation, today announced its intention to establish a crude oil storage and transshipment facility at San Nicolas, Aruba.

The transshipment facility would include construction of storage tanks with a capacity for six to eight million barrels of crude oil and a dock capable of handling ocean tankers of more than 500 thousand deadweight tons. This facility would be in addition to approximately 3.4 million barrels of storage capacity in existence and under construction at Coastal Aruba Refining Company's refinery in San Nicolas, Aruba.

The company said the new facility would store crude oil designated for reshipment to refineries within the Coastal System as well as for other customers.

The Coastal Corporation is a houston-based energy holding company. It has consolidated assets of $8 billion and subsidiary operations in natural gas transmission and storage, oil and gas exploration and production, refining and marketing, coal and chemicals, and independent power production.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 8) UPI - President Bush warned Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze that the use of force in Lithuania could ''adversely affect'' U.S.-Soviet relations and possibly hamper arms control talks.

The president has been purposefully circumspect in his comments on the furor surrounding secession-minded Lithuania, but he noticeably sharpened his tone in comments at a convention of American Association of Newspaper Editors Friday.

''We're not telling them what to do. We're telling them what not to do. Do not use force,'' Bush said. ''Do not use force because we have an awful lot at stake in the U.S.-Soviet relationship, an enormous amount at stake.''

Shevardnadze, in Washington for three days of top-level talks to lay the groundwork for the May 30-June 3 superpower summit, went to the White House to talk directly to Bush and deliver a letter from Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev.

In describing the two-hour-plus White House meeting with Shevardnadze, Bush told the editors that ''Lithuania was a key point of discussion.''

''I reiterated the strong U.S. view that the issue must be dealt with through peaceful means,'' he said. ''And ... I told Minister Shevardnadze that this is an issue that could adversely affect the prospects for progress in these important U.S.-Soviet relations.''

It appeared Bush was increasing the pressure on the Kremlin by linking U.S. concerns about the handling of Lithuania to other aspects of U.S.-Soviet ties.

''I urged the Soviet Union to begin a good-faith dialogue with Lithuania. We want, and we believe the Soviets want, to make further progress in U.S.-Soviet relations. And we're working toward important agreements in the area of arms control, and to make progress on human rights and the solution of these regional conflicts.''

Bush pointed to West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher in the audience and said he also was in agreement.

''I'm not going to violate a confidence but he (Genscher) points out to me how important this relationship is, in arms control and on the peace of a emerging democratic Europe,'' Bush said. ''So I want to keep that going. So we're not dictating or attempting to ... but we are saying that we want to see it be peaceful.''

Since the situation developed with Lithuania's vote for independence last month, the administration has repeated calls for peaceful dialogue and warned against the use of force in the Baltic state.

But Bush and his spokesmen have been very careful not apply too much pressure to Gorbachev, who also faces calls from the Kremlin to contain the rebellious Baltic state, and the threat of similar moves by Estonia and Latvia.

Nonetheless, Bush emphasized that the United States would ''continue to keep the pressure on, to make it clear that the U.S. relationship is at stake in this matter and that peaceful dialogue is the right approach,'' White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said.

Shevardnadze, speaking with reporters after meeting with Bush, said it was not ''appropriate to speak here of assurances'' he may have made to the president on the Lithuanian situation.

''Again, this is a domestic affair for the Soviet Union,'' he said. ''This matter was discussed.''

At the same time, he defended Soviet actions to date, saying ''The most important thing right now is to make sure that there is really good public order there.''

''Unless the Soviet Union agrees with the decisions of the Lithuanian Supreme Soviet (to secede), it is possible that there might be conflicts '' said Shevardnadze, comparing the situation to ethnic problems that have plagued other Soviet republics.

''Unfortunately, we have the bitter experience, the bitter lessons of inter-ethnic conflicts that we've had, and if some of the administrative measures are taken, it is something that we don't like, but we have to do it in order to make sure there is public order,'' he said.

(APRIL 7) UPI - President Bush met with Soviet Foreign Minster Shevardnadze at the White House Friday, the last day of the Soviet official's visit. Bush warned Moscow could ''adversely affect'' U-S-Soviet negotiations by using aggressive action in Lithuania. Shevardnadze said the matter is a ''domestic affair for the Soviet Union,'' and he wouldn't elaborate on any assurances he gave President Bush.

Fire investigators in Miami Beach say they'll resume their search for more possible victims of Friday morning's fire at a hotel. Three people died in the fire and 21 others were injured. At least 86 mostly elderly residents escaped the burning Fontana Hotel, which is located in the southern part of the city.

The General Accounting Office says the price tag for bailing out the savings and loan industry will come to at least 325-BILLION dollars... at least 68-BILLION dollars more then originally expected. The comptroller general of the United States, Charles Bowsher, told the Senate Banking Committee- quote- ''We owe it to the American taxpayers to vigorously go after those who helped cause the crisis.''

(APRIL 7) UPI - The U-A-L Corporation directors reached an agreement for a buyout with United Airlines employees Friday. The two sides agreed to a four-point-three-BILLION-dollar buyout that would make the airline the world's largest employee-owned company. Financing remains uncertain but union leaders say they hope to attract investors by proposing two-BILLION dollars in wage cuts during the next five years.

Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley released a grim environmental report on his city Friday. Titled ''State of the City's Environment,'' the study portrays the nation's second-largest city as overwhelmed by foul air, trash, water shortages and explosive growth. The report also says the city is running out of landfills for its garbage and has been forced by drought to ration water.

Doctors at Queen of the Valley Hospital in West Covina, California, say they are almost 100 percent certain that a baby conceived with hopes she'd be able to provide her terminally ill sister with a bone marrow transplant will match perfectly. The father, Abe Ayala, says newborn Marissa has brought joy to the family, but he adds that does NOT lessen his fear about his older daughter Anissa who suffers from leukemia. The baby will be able to donate the marrow in six months.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 8) UPI - Senate Democrats, saying uninsured people are being ''held hostage by this ivory tower debate,'' called on the administration to stop studying the problems with U.S. health care and take action.

The calls came at a Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee hearing Friday on the report issued in March by the bipartisan congressional panel on comprehensive health care, known as the Pepper Commission.

The panel proposed using a mixture of public and private insurance to provide care for the up to 37 million Americans without health insurance and called for a federal program to cover some of the costs of long-term care. The plan would require about $66 billion a year in federal spending.

Meanwhile, President Bush has asked Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan to find ways to help the uninsured. The help would be based on the Pepper plan and studies by two administration panels that will report later this year.

In a speech earlier this month Sullivan stressed, ''It is important to give the other groups time to finish their work in the coming months.''

But at the hearing, Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., chairman of the committee, questioned the need for more study, saying the ''whole range'' of solutions had been discussed by the Pepper Commission.

Sen. Jay Rockefeller, D-W.Va., chairman of the panel named for the late Sen. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., agreed, saying, ''The time for talk has passed.''

''I'll be the first to admit that what we propose is not everybody's notion of an ideal solution,'' Rockefeller said.

''But in my view, too often in the past, we have sacrificed the good in health care reform for the sake of the perfect,'' he said. ''It is time for us to release the uninsured and the underinsured Americans who have been held hostage by this ivory tower debate.''

Larry Gage, president of the National Association of Public Hospitals, also demanded action, saying the problems of the uninsured are overwhelming public hospitals. He said the hospitals are being asked to care for more patients at the same time they face a greater range of problems, such as AIDS and drugs.

''The only reason we have had the luxury of debating rather than enacting universal health coverage for all these year is because of the continued existence of a small and extremely fragile safety net ... no more than two to three hundred public and non-profit hospitals,'' Gage said.

''The condition of many of these essential safety-net providers has deteriorated substantially in recent years,'' he said. ''As a result, our nation's health system is facing a crisis today of unprecedented proportions.''

WASHINGTON (APRIL 8) UPI - The cost of repairing America's battered and bruised savings and loan industry will cost taxpayers at least $68 billion more than estimated for a grand total of $325 billion, congressional auditors said.

The administration had figured the unprecedented rescue, which dwarfs the Marshall Plan that reconstructed Europe at the end of World War II, would cost $257 billion.

The latest price tag tallied by the General Accounting Office is subject to ''significant change'' as federal officials take over and close thrifts that lost mountains of money through bad loans, poor management and outright theft.

''We believe that it is vitally important to provide the taxpayers a complete and accurate accounting of the costs to put the savings and loan crisis behind us,'' said Charles Bowsher, comptroller general of the United States.

''The American taxpayers are having to pay billions of dollars to resolve the savings and loan crisis,'' he said. ''We owe it to them to vigorously go after those who helped cause the crisis.''

In testimony to the Senate Banking Committee Friday, Bowsher said the increase is based on the need to further shore up ailing institutions, cover interest on government bonds issued to finance the bailout, and pay escalating administrative costs.

''It is likely that ... costs to resolve troubled institutions will be higher than (the increase of) $68 billion,'' he said, and the total cost could eventually rocket to $400 billion or even $500 billion.

The increase will be covered by tax money, the sale of savings and loan assets as well as higher premiums on deposit insurance.

The chairman of the banking committee, Sen. Donald Riegle, D-Mich., said the GAO estimate was probably ''on the conservative side.''

At the White House, presidential economic adviser Michael Boskin said, ''We will be taking a thorough look at the GAO report ... and we will analyze it in detail.''

The GAO's estimates are based on a final audit of the defunct Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp., or FSLIC, which used to insure deposits at the nation's savings and loans. That responsibility has been transferred to another agency.

In July 1989, the Office of Management and Budget projected it would cost $257 billion to settle the FSLIC's obligations over 33 years and mend other damage caused by the financial fiasco.

''After losing $100 billion from 1984 through August 8, 1989, FSLIC has now closed its doors with an $87 billion capital deficit - the largest ever reported by a public or private corporation,'' Bowsher said.

''These statements raise the important issue of how much money will be needed to resolve the savings and loan crisis,'' he said.

In addition, Bowsher called for more federal action ''to prevent another crisis of this magnitude.''

''Positive action to identify, correct, and prevent the internal control, and compliance abuses of the past is critical,'' he said.

(APRIL 7) UPI - A half-dozen nerve-jangling earthquakes jiggled both ends of California Friday, including one that hit as the San Francisco Giants again faced the Oakland Athletics at Candlestick Park.

No injuries or serious damage was reported.

Last October's devestating 7.1 quake in Northern California hit just before Game 3 of the World Series was to get under way at the park between the Giants and Athletic's.

Friday evening's quake, measuring 4.5 on the Richter scale, was the third small temblor of the day in the San Francisco Bay area and was followed a few minutes later by two more, including a 3.5. All were centered east of Berkeley, officials said.

Earlier in the day, two other earthquakes rattled the same densely populated areas of Contra Costa County but police reported only minor damage and no injuries.

''These are the largest quakes we've had in the Bay Area since the October quake,'' said Pat Jorgensen of the U.S. Geological Survey in nearby Menlo Park.

All were on the Concord fault - on which 77 tiny tremors were recorded by seismographs during the day - and were similar to an ''earthquake swarm'' in the early summer of 1970.

The USGS said the first quake of the day in the Bay Area hit at 1:55 p.m. and registered 3.5. The second, at 3:30 p.m. registered 3.8. Both were centered near Walnut Creek, about 20 miles northeast of San Francisco.

The 4.5 quake, the third, hit at 7:39 p.m.; the fourth at 7:51, a 3.5, and the fifth at 7:59 p.m., a 3.1, she said. The epicenter for all was 15 miles east of Berkeley or eight miles south-southeast of Concord.

''Oh no, the Giants and A's again?'' said Sam Skinner, a sportswriter who was in the press box at the big stadium when the 7:39 p.m. tremor hit during an exhibition game. The crowd did not seem to notice, he said, adding: ''We weren't sure whether we felt anything or not.''

Chandeliers and hanging plants began swinging in residences in the East Bay during the shakers but no damage or injuries were reported.

The earlier quakes in the San Francisco Bay Area tumbled goods off of grocery shelves but caused no injuries.

In Southern California, another quake measuring 4.1 rattled the desert outside Indio, near Palm Springs, at 6:07 p.m.

The quake was centered 8 miles north of Indio, a sparsely populated area about 130 miles east of Los Angeles, a spokesman for the Caltech Seismology Laboratory in Pasadena said.

Hall Daily, the Caltech spokesman, said the quake was related to several other small shakers to hit the area this week.

Indio police dispatcher Maria Hernandez described the quake as a rolling motion that lasted about eight seconds.

(APRIL 7) UPI - Now that New York clinched a playoff spot with a victory over Philadelphia, 76ers star Charles Barkley predicts an early exit from the postseason for the Knicks.

''Anyone who knows anything about sports knows we won't have to play the Knicks again,'' Barkley said Friday night after Philadelphia lost 114-104 at Madison Square Garden.

The Knicks' third straight victory clinched the playoff berth and snapped the 76ers' eight-game winning streak.

''They won't get past Boston in the playoffs,'' said Barkley, who was engaged in a shoving match with New York star Patrick Ewing during the first period. Ewing was knocked down but still led the Knicks in scoring, totaling 37 points with 19 rebounds. Barkley led his team with 39.

''It feels like things are starting to click for us again,'' said Ewing. ''Last three games were the best we've played in a long time.''

''We want to go to the playoffs on a high note and hopefully get past Boston for the home court advantage,'' said Ewing.

Kiki Vandeweghe scored 24 points for New York, Gerald Wilkins 15 and Kenny Walker 13 with 12 rebounds.

''I'm very, very happy about this win,'' Knicks Coach Stu Jackson said. ''We probably beat the team in the NBA that's playing the best basketball right now.''

Celtics 109, Cavaliers 104

At Richfield, Ohio, Kevin McHale scored 30 points, Reggie Lewis added 24 and Larry Bird had his ninth triple-double of the season to lead Boston past Cleveland. McHale had 11 rebounds and Bird 11 points, 15 rebounds and 10 assists. Cleveland was led by 30 points each from Brad Daugherty and John ''Hot Rod'' Williams, and Daugherty had a game-high 16 rebounds.

Bucks 92, Pistons 84

At Auburn Hills, Mich., Brad Lohaus scored 11 of his career-high 25 points in the fourth quarter to pace Milwaukee to victory over Detroit. Lohaus also hit a team-record six three-point shots. Fred Roberts added 23 points for Milwaukee, while Jack Sikma scored 20. James Edwards led the Pistons with 25 points, while Vinnie Johnson added 21.

Warriors 123, Nets 117

At East Rutherford, N.J., Tim Hardaway scored 21 points to lead eight Golden State players in double-digit scoring and the Warriors held off a New Jersey rally. Chris Mullin scored 20 points, Sarunas Marciulionis 17 and Terry Teagle 15 to help the Warriors. Sam Bowie scored 29 points for New Jersey and set a career high with 20 of New Jersey's team-record 74 rebounds.

At Orlando, Fla., Reggie Miller scored 16 of his game-high 38 points in a fourth-period span of 4:46 to propel Indiana. Jerry Reynolds scored a career-high 34 points for the Magic in the team's eighth consecutive loss.

Hornets 108, Timberwolves 93

At Charlotte, N.C., Kelly Tripucka scored 21 points and Armon Gilliam added 19 points and 14 rebounds against Minnesota. Charlotte also got 19 points from Dell Curry, while Tripucka added nine rebounds and nine assists. Tyrone Corbin and Tony Campbell pumped in 22 points apiece to lead the Timberwolves.

Bullets 121, Rockets 110

At Landover, Md., Jeff Malone scored 29 points and Bernard King added 27, sparking Washington to victory over Houston. The Rockets, battling Seattle and Denver for the final two playoff spots in the Western Conference, lost their second straight of a four-game road trip. Akeem Olajuwon finished with 36 points and 17 rebounds and Buck Johnson added 18 points for Houston.

Nuggets 119, Sonics 103

At Denver, Alex English scored 25 points in a victory over Seattle that snapped the teams' tie for the seventh playoff slot in the Western Conference. Walter Davis finished with 20 points off the bench for the Nuggets. Sedale Threatt led Seattle with 22 points. Officials ejected Seattle starter Xavier McDaniel and Denver reserve Todd Lichti for fighting in the second quarter.

Trail Blazers 106, Clippers 99

At Portland, Ore., Clyde Drexler scored 35 points and Jerome Kersey added a season-high 28 against the Los Angeles Clippers. Benoit Benjamin had 20 points and a season-high 22 rebounds to lead Los Angeles.

Lakers 103, Suns 99

At Phoenix, James Worthy scored 29 points, including four free throws in the last 30 seconds, to lift the Los Angeles Lakers. Magic Johnson added 22 points. Tom Chambers led Phoenix with 25, followed by Kevin Johnson with 24 and Mark West with 20, which tied his season high.

(APRIL 7) UPI - Tulips bowed under the weight of wet snow and and fruit blossoms fought off a hard freeze as an early spring storm whipped up winter-like conditions Saturday from the Plains to the East Coast.

Temperatures dipped into the low 20s from the northern Plains to the upper Great Lakes. Freezing temperatures spread from the central Plains to the East Coast, and as far south as the Carolinas, the National Weather Service said.

Snowshowers were scattered over Michigan and in the East from Cape Cod to North Carolina. Most areas were reporting an inch or less of snow, but several inches were forecast for southern Massachusetts.

The NWS posted freeze warnings across the Midwest into the East, advising gardeners and fruit growers to protect blossoms and other tender vegetation.

Rainshowers fell across southern Georgia, into Florida. Rain also was reported in the Sierra Nevada.

In the Pacific Northwest, Friday marked the 14th straight day without measurable rainfall in Seattle - a very unusual weather pattern for this time of the year. Sunny and dry conditions continued across the entire state as a ridge of high pressure remained established along the Washington seaboard.

Temperatures were in the 40s in the Northwest, the Rockies, the southern Plains, and the Gulf Coast. It was in the 50s in California and 60s and 70s in Florida.

(APRIL 7) UPI - Going into the playoffs, the experts predicted an early exit for the St. Louis Blues - who now are the first team with a 2-0 lead in the Stanley Cup playoffs.

The Blues, who staggered through a horrendous slump including six straight losses at the end of the season were matched against the end of the season were matched against the Toronto Maple Leafs, who went 7-1 in their regular season series.

Rookie goaltender Curtis Joseph led St. Louis to a 4-2 victory Friday night, running his record to 3-0 against the Maple Leafs, including both playoff victories.

In the other Campbell Conference series, the Calgary Flames defeated the Los Angeles Kings 8-5, the Chicago Blackhawks rallied past the Minnesota North Stars 5-3, and the Edmonton Oilers nipped the Winnipeg Jets 3-2 in overtime. Each of those series is tied 1-1.

The Wales Conference resumes its series Saturday with the Haretford Whalers at the Boston Bruins, Montreal Canadiens at Buffalo Sabres, New York Islanders at New York Rangers and Washington Capitals at New Jersey Devils.

All series are best-of-seven.

Norris Division
Blues 4, Maple Leafs 1

Joseph stopped 27 shots and Brett Hull scored once and assisted on two of St. Louis' three second-period goals to pace the Blues.

The best-of-seven Norris Division semifinal switches to Toronto for Games 3 and 4 Sunday and Tuesday.

Joseph, a rookie who joined the team after the All-Star Game, posted the Blues' only regular-season win against the Maple Leafs and finished with a 9-5-1 record.

''They did kind of dominate us,'' Joseph said. ''But the guys have stayed positive. We had strong forechecking, a lot of hustle, and we buried our chances. Everyone played so well it was hard not to win this game.''

''I've put up with so much B.S. about how we're not supposed to beat Toronto,'' said Blues Coach Brian Sutter. ''People can say what they want, but we challenged for first place.''

Paul MacLean started the second-period barrage and scored what stood up as the game-winner, and Rich Sutter and Paul Cavallini added goals to pace St. Louis.

''They haven't caught us off guard. They have players with roles,'' Toronto Coach Doug Carpenter said. ''And they have great goaltending.

''Tonight we played too much in our own end. When you're constantly playing defense you get fatigued. It's the old story of when you let them get ahead you're playing into their strength - their grabbing and interference.''

Hull, who led the NHL with 72 regular-season goals, scored on the power-play at 4:52 of the first period, his second goal of the playoffs.

Blackhawks 5, North Stars 3

At Chicago, the Blackhawks fell behind 3-0 less than 12 minutes into the game before scoring five unanswered goals.

''It was a helluva victory for us to overcome a three-goal deficit in this league,'' Blackhawks coach Mike Keenan said.

Wayne Presley, riding the bench most of the season, scored twice to lead the comeback. Presley said he was inspired by a pep talk given by goaltender Greg Millen between periods after Millen was pulled from the game for letting in the three Minnesota goals.

''Greg Millen stood up and said there's some guys in this room that may not play next year, and this may be their last chance to get to the Stanley Cup,'' Presley said. ''He told us to work hard more or less, and that's what we did during the second and third period.''

Smythe Division
Flames 8, Kings 5

At Calgary, Alberta, Calgary evened the series with Los Angeles, but the team is still struggling to find its best form.

''We are not happy with our goals against and specialty teams,'' said center Joe Nieuwendyk, who scored a goal and two assists.

Los Angeles outplayed the Flames on special teams, scoring on three of six power-plays, and shutting out Calgary's power play in six attempts.

''We did what we had to do early and got stupid,'' said Flames Coach Terry Crisp.

The Flames moved out to a 5-1 lead at 12:16 of the second period, but Luc Robitaille and Larry Robinson cut the margin to 5-3 within the next two minutes.

''You do not like to let any team back into the game,'' said Doug Gilmour, whose second goal of the game gave the Flames a 6-3 lead after two periods.

Los Angeles pulled within 7-5 in the final period before Dana Murzyn scored an empty-net goal to finish the scoring.

''The real Calgary team played tonight, they had four lines going,'' said Kings Coach Tom Webster.

Oilers 3, Jets 2, OT

At Edmonton, Alberta, Mark Lamb split the Winnipeg defense and lifted a backhand shot in at 4:21 of overtime.

The Oilers got key goals from the third and fourth lines to cap a three-goal rally.

''I was surprised the defensemen didn't come over quickly and move me off the puck,'' he said. ''I just wanted to get the shot up and it went between (Jet goalie Stephane Beauregard's) arm and body,'' said Lamb, who rides bucking broncs at rodeos in the off-season.

The goal was Lamb's first in the playoffs.

Oilers goaltender Bill Ranford came to life after his bad performance cost Edmonton Game 1.

''Winnipeg's goaltending was good and I was glad to see Billy bounce back, especially in the third period,'' said Oilers coach John Muckler. ''It was a pretty nasty game with lots of good hits and was very intense.''

Craig Simpson scored his third goal and Joe Murphy also tallied for the Oilers to overcome a 2-0 deficit in the third period.

''They had us in trouble for two periods but we kept our cool,'' Muckler said.

ATHENS, Greece (APRIL 7) UPI - Hundreds of thousands of people began an exodus from major Greek cities Saturday, heading for their home villages and islands to vote Sunday in the country's third general election in 10 months.

Some 8 million voters were eligible to choose among 300 deputies to the Vouli, or parliament.

Sources in the political parties said about 400,000 people left Athens for villages and islands where they were registered to vote. More left Thessaloniki and other major cities.

Officially, 40 political parties are contesting the elections but three large parties that dominated the last two rounds of balloting, in June and November, are expected to repeat the performance, with slight variations in the outcome.

Conservative leader Constantine Mitsotakis, heading the New Democracy party, needs a boost of only 1 percentage point or less in the party's popular vote to win an overall majority in parliament and become Greece's next prime minister.

The majority that would have made him premier just eluded him in both previous elections, partly because of a change in the electoral law that Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou put through before he was ousted from office last year.

New Democracy won 44.2 percent of the popular vote in June and 46.2 percent in November, winning 145 and 148 seats in the Vouli, just six and three short of an overall majority.

In 1985, under the old electoral law, Papandreou's Pan-Hellenic Socialist Party, or PASOK, won 161 seats in Parliament even though it garnered only 45.8 percent of the popular vote.

Papandreou was able to win his majority under a device called the reinforced proportionate electoral system, used for decades in Greece to allow the largest party to form a stable government even if it did not win more than 50 percent of the popular vote.

Political analysts said Papandreou changed the law when he foresaw PASOK's fall from power because he was determined to keep the conservatives from forming a government and to leave open an option for PASOK to form a coalition with the communists.

Ironically, the communists rejected him in both June and November.

Harilaos Florakis, the chief of the communist-led Alliance of the Left, said he would not form a coalition with PASOK as long as Papandreou headed the party.

This time, Mitsotakis hopes to become prime minister by winning an overall majority by one or two seats. But the communists have undergone a change of heart in their attitude toward PASOK. Papandreou said at an election rally Friday the Alliance of the Left would form a coalition with his party if the opportunity arose after the election.

The Alliance of the Left's changed attitude, political analysts said, stemmed partly from the changes in Eastern Europe that have cost the communists in Greece a loss of ideological prestige.

The hard-line communists were also disenchanted because the Alliance of the Left chose to form a coalition with conservative New Democracy after the June elections. This left the communists in disarray and they suffered a considerable loss of the popular vote in November.

Prior to Sunday's election, PASOK and the Coalition of the Left announced they would cooperate in a few constituencies, considered crucial for winning a left-wing majority.

Members of the two groups would, however, run on separate tickets in the rest of the country, political sources said.

But Gregoris Farakos, secretary-general of the Moscow-oriented Communist Party, said, ''Cooperation with PASOK after the elections will depend on several considerations,'' which he left unclear.

Also dependent on the outcome of the elections will be the choice of Greece's next president, who is elected by parliamentary vote. An overall majority for New Democracy in parliament could give Greece a conservative president.

Elder statesman Constantine Caramanlis, a former president, said early this year he was not a candidate. Political sources said New Democracy's next choice may be Ioannis Georgakis, member of the Academy of Athens and president of the Onassis Foundation.

The left-wing parties have not agreed on a single candidate. PASOK is currently backing Yannis Alevras, the former speaker of Parliament, and the Communists want President Christos Sartzetakis re-elected.

KATMANDU, Nepal (APRIL 7) UPI - The government imposed a 24-hour curfew on the capital at dawn Saturday and began releasing opposition prisoners in an effort to stop the bloody battles between pro-democracy protesters and police.

But within hours, three people were killed by police when they were caught outdoors in the nearby historic town of Patan, which also was under a 24-hour curfew, and there were reports of six shootings and one serious injury in Katmandu itself.

A curfew was imposed in Butwal in southwest Nepal in mid-afternoon after demonstrators joined nationwide protests over a royal proclamation Friday by setting two buses ablaze, residents said. In the town of Bhaktapur, where the curfew was not in effect, about 13,000 people rallied to press for government reform, witnesses said.

A prominent opposition member released from prison Saturday said movement leaders rejected a personal plea for cooperation from the kingdom's newly appointed prime minister, vowing to press on for an end to the impoverished nation's party-less system.

At least 17 people were killed in massive protests Friday sparked when King Birendra fired his government, appointed a new one and promised new reforms that the pro-democracy opposition rejected as insufficient.

The new government, moving immediately Saturday to fulfill one of the reform promises, began releasing prisoners detained during the 6-week-old pro-democracy movement, including Devendra Raj Pandey, president of the Forum for the Protection of Human Rights.

Pandey said after his release he was taken Friday to meet with newly appointed Prime Minister Lokendra Bahadur Chand, who asked his cooperation in defusing the crisis.

Pandey said he took the prime minister's plea to Ganesh Man Singh, the hospitalized leader of the banned Nepali Congress party and one of the most powerful leaders of the opposition. But he said Singh rejected the offer.

Singh - a bed-ridden 70-year-old in a country where the average life expectancy is 51 - said the opposition would stick by its demands for an interim national government and the immediate establishment of a multi-party system in the impoverished country, which Birendra has ruled as an absolute monarch for 18 years.

Soldiers were ordered to shoot anyone caught violating the curfew in Katmandu and Patan except between 4 p.m. and 6 p.m. when the curfew was to be suspendedfor emergency travel. The relaxation of the curfew was later canceled.

State-owned radio reported six people were killed and 107 injured when police and soldiers fired on demonstrators Friday but hospital sources said eight were killed in the capital, including a British national.

The sources said at least seven people were killed in Butwal and two died in Janakpur, where demonstrators attacked a railway station and a police station.

Some opposition members have said many more were killed and a doctor Saturday said he saw numerous dead in the streets of the capital on Friday.

''I saw the army turning back an ambulance and they were picking up bodies from the streets,'' Bhojendra Sharma said. ''I do not know now many people were dead and put into trucks.''

The embattled Nepalese government also established a three-member commission Saturday to investigate loss of life during the movement, adhering to another promise made by the king during his speech to the nation Friday.

The streets of the capital were mostly cleared of civilians Saturday because of the curfew, which also affected tourists in the Himalayan country. Witnesses said some tourists were stranded.

As protests flared in the capital Friday, witnesses said troops fired on demonstrators marching to the palace. Barbed wire fencing was erected around the palace after the incident.

Throughout the day, demonstrators went on a rampage through the streets of Katmandu, destroying government buildings and houses belonging to pro-government politicians.

In the evening, Katmandu residents blacked out the capital and dug trenches in the inner cities to prevent police vehicles from entering.

Violent demonstrations were reported in at least five other cities.

Birendra, one of the world's few absolute monarchs, dismissed the government of hard-line Prime Minister Marich Man Singh Shrestha, saying it failed to maintain law and order. He named former prime minister Chand to replace Shrestha.

LONDON (APRIL 7) UPI - Authorities frustrated by a weeklong prison siege that has left one dead and scores wounded used scare tactics Saturday against a group of hard-core inmates refusing to surrender.

A police helicopter swooped low over Strangeways Prison and directed its klaxon siren and searchlights at about 25 holdouts clustered inside the Victorian-era facility in Manchester, 200 miles orthwest of London.

Officers in riot gear massed in the main yard and thumped truncheons on shields, taunting the prisoners with insults and cries of ''beasts,'' jail parlance for sex offenders.

In a strategy reminiscent of that used by U.S. troops to harass Manuel Noriega in the Papal Embassy after the U.S. invasion of Panama last Dec. 20, speakers blared constant heavy metal music toward the convicts, who have controlled a portion of the overcrowded prison since last Sunday.

The confrontational tactics failed to drive the inmates from a central rotunda from which they control upper floors of five main wings of the looming red-brick complex.

Convicts on the roof feigned dance moves to the music. Paul Taylor, the self-declared ringleader of the uprising, took out a guitar and began strumming tunes and used a megaphone to hurl invective at the guards.

''If you think you are going to get me out, you have got no chance,'' one prisoner shouted to the officers.

The uprising, called the most destructive in Britain's penal history, has left one prisoner dead and at least 60 people - 35 prisoners and 25 prison employees - wounded. A guard on duty during the riot died of a heart attack.

Independent observers have been monitoring the gradual surrender of most of the prisoners in the prison, which was built in 1868 for 970 inmates but has recently housed about 1,600.

Prison Governor Brendan O'Friel said authorities identified about 25 inmates still holding out and that seven are unaccounted for and could be dead. Numerous prisoners who have emerged from the jail said they witnessed killings during the first outbreaks of violence.

''Making noises at the barricades was another quite deliberate management ploy,'' said O'Friel, who explained the insults delivered by his guards are not official policy, but that ''there are very substantial difficultes in ensuring that staff are fully briefed.''

A Home Office spokeswoman said the main aim was to wear the prisoners down and deny them sleep, while also offering them the option of surrendering.

''They are getting dirtier, hungrier and colder,'' said Ivor Serle of the Prison Officers Association. He said it would not be prudent to use force because ''it is too dangerous to go in there.''

Elsewhere, about 60 inmates for seven hours took over the top floor of Glen Parva youth custody center near Leicester, 120 miles northwest of London.

The prisoners, five of whom had been transfered temporarily from Strangeways, overwhelmed a guard, dislocating his shoulder, and smashed windows and furniture. Some sat on the roof before the group decided to surrender.

XICHANG, China (APRIL 7) UPI - A Chinese rocket lit up the night sky and thundered into space Saturday with a refurbished U.S.-made satellite aboard, entering China in the lucrative international space-trucking business with its first commercial launch.

The launch and deployment of Asiasat 1, the first satellite to be returned to space after being retrieved from orbit, appeared flawless and put China's 2-decade-old space program into the commercial launch market now dominated by the United States and the European Ariane program.

The gleaming white three-stage ''Long March 3'' rocket, emblazoned with the gold-starred red flag of the People's Republic of China, roared off the pad at the Xichang space center in remote southwest Sichuan Province at 9:30 p.m. (9:30 a.m. EDT).

''Fire,'' the mission commander ordered. The rocket motors ignited in a ball of orange flame and hurled the satellite above the gantry, set in a hilly farm area.

The launch was originally scheduled for 7:49 p.m., but was delayed by concern over thick clouds over the launch site. It was broadcast live nationwide on government television, but the flaming rocket exhaust soon disappeared into the cloud cover.

The satellite, manufactured by Hughes Aircraft Co. of Los Angeles, is owned by a $120 million consortium of British, Hong Kong and Chinese companies that plans to sell television and telecommunications relay services in Asia.

U.S. officials, including military personnel, were in Xichang to ensure against Chinese snooping into the satellite's sophisticated technology.

Chinese and foreign officials gathered in the Xichang control center broke into applause about 25 minutes after the launch as controllers announced that the payload had separated from the rocket and achieved its initial transfer orbit.

A ''kick'' motor on the satellite was later to lift it into a circular orbit, where its antenna array and solar power panels were to be deployed.

The satellite was then to achieve a geostationary orbit some 22,300 miles above the equator, hovering roughly over Singapore, and become operational in about six weeks.

Asiasat 1 was originally Westar 6, put into space by the U.S. space shuttle in 1984. It later malfunctioned and was plucked from orbit by a later shuttle mission for repairs.

The satellite, with a 10-year lifespan, has 24 transponders for television and telecommunications relay and is capable of reaching 30 Asian nations with a potential audience of 2.5 billion.

As its first commercial launch, Asiasat 1 was critical to China's goal of earning badly needed hard currency by providing an alternative to the U.S. and European space programs.

But it was nearly derailed by disputes with the U.S. government over an export license for the satellite.

U.S. officials negotiated for months before agreeing in 1988 to Chinese assurances on safeguarding high technology. The United States had also been concerned that China, through government subsidies, would unfairly offer bargain-basement launch prices.

The export license was again held up last spring following China's violent crackdown on the pro-democracy movement. But President Bush approved the license last December, citing U.S. commercial concerns.

Asiasat reportedly paid nearly $50 million for the satellite. The consortium has declined to disclose the launch charge, but sources have estimated the cost at around $30 million. The U.S. and Ariane programs charged an average of around $45 million.

Before this first commercial launch, China had launched 26 satellites, including weather, communications and spy vehicles, since the first, a small 380-pound satellite, went up on April 24, 1970, and circled the Earth broadcasting the Chinese Communist song, ''The East is Red.''

The Chinese have already contracted to launch two more Hughes satellites for Australia's Aussat telecommunications concern in 1991 and 1992, and recently won a bid to launch a communications satellite for a consortium of Arab nations.

The Asiasat consortium, consisting of Britain's Cable and Wireless PLC, Hutchison Whampoa of Hong Kong and the China International Trust and Investment Corp., has signed contracts or letters of intent with seven Asian nations.

(APRIL 7) UPI - A deadly fire on a ferry in the North Sea... at least four are dead.

The first round of pre-summit talks ends in Washington.

U-P-I has this and other top news today.

Norwegian and Danish rescuers are searching for about 150 people missing after fire raced through a ferry, killing at least four people. The vessel's captain says the blaze may have been arson.

A Norwegian rescue service spokeswoman confirms four people died and firemen found 10 other passengers injured and still aboard the blazing ship. They were airlifted to nearby hospitals in Denmark.

The Scandinavian Star was traveling from Norway's capital at Oslo to Frederikshavn in Denmark when two fires.

The captain ordered the 395 passengers and 100 crew-members evacuated into lifeboats. Rescuers say between 150 and 160 passengers remain UNaccounted for, but they WON'T speculate on whether they stayed aboard the burning ship.

Rescue officials say the fire may have been deliberately set. Denmark rescuers say the captain reported two fires erupted on board... the first was extinguished, but the second and more serious blaze broke out 15 minutes later.

Police in Frederikshavn plan to question passengers and crew when they arrive.

(APRIL 7) UPI - Secretary of State Baker and Soviet Foreign Minister Shevardnadze wrapped up three days of talks yesterday... expressing cautious confidence that U-S-Soviet relations will continue to improve.

The two pow-wowed in Washington to set the agenda for the summit between Presidents Bush and Gorbachev that's scheduled to open May 30th.

After yesterday's session, the pair said they anticipate reaching a bilateral strategic arms agreement. Their stated confidence comes despite differences.

Shevardnadze refused to specify the obstacles in devising a pact. Baker told reporters the main differences are air-launched and sea-launched missiles.

The White House described the Baker-Shevardnadze talks as productive. President Bush also met with the Soviet official. Bush says he told Shevardnadze that Soviet use of force to quell Lithuanian nationalism could ''adversely affect'' U-S-Soviet relations.

Bush later told a convention of American Association of Newspaper Editors that he did NOT tell the Soviets what to do with the rebellious Baltic republic.

Bush told the newspeople that he told the Soviets... in his words... ''what NOT to do. Do NOT use force.''

(APRIL 7) UPI - President Bush lived up to his word yesterday when he signed an executive order preventing Chinese students from being forced to return to their homeland.

Bush made the pledge five months ago, when he vetoed a congressional measure that provided similar relief to Chinese nationals.

Under the terms of the executive order, about 32-thousand Chinese nationals can remain in the United States through January 1st, 1994. Originally, the Chinese citizens were due to be forced to return to their homeland in two months, when their student-exchange visas expire.

When Bush vetoed the bill, Democrats on Capitol Hill accused him of bending to Beijing.

California Democrat Nancy Pelosi, a congresswoman who sponsored the bill Bush vetoed, applauded Bush's executive order.

(APRIL 7) UPI - A series of earthquakes shook both ends of California yesterday... wreaking havoc with residents' nerves, but causing NO reports of injuries or damage.

Especially nerve-jangling was a tremor... measuring four-point-five on the Richter scale... that rocked Candlestick Park, where the San Francisco Giants were battling the Oakland A's.

It bore an eery resemblance to last fall when a quake- measured at seven-point-one on the Richter scale- hit Northern Calfornia just before Game Three of the World Series.

Yesterday's quake was the third small tremor of the day in the Bay Area. It was followed minutes later by two quakes of three-point-five. Officials say all of them were centered near Berkeley.

The southern end of California had its own quake... this one centered in a sparsely populated desert area near Palm Springs, about 130 miles east of Los Angeles. It measured four-point-one on the Richter scale.

(APRIL 7) UPI - The parents of a baby girl set ethical questions aside to celebrate her birth and the hope she will provide a bone marrow transplant for her older sister.

Doctors say the birth of Marissa Eve Ayala virtually assures a matching bone-marrow transplant for her 18-year-old sister, Anissa. She has leukemia, but the transplant will have to wait until the baby is older.

Three month ago, the girl's parents announced they conceived their first baby in 18 years to provide a donor to save Anissa's life. Doctors say if Anissa receives compatible bone marrow, her chances of recovery are 70 to 80 percent.

The infant weighs six pounds, four ounces and went home from a hospital in West Covina, California, yesterday with her 43-year-old mother, Mary.

Tests to determine conclusively that the bone marrow is compatible cannot be conducted until the baby is about two months old. The surgery cannot be done until she is at least six months old.

The girls' father, Abe, told reporters yesterday- quoting here- ''Marissa is our miracle baby and we are amazed that anyone would talk about the ethics of having her.''

University of California professor Alexander Capron is among those questioning the birth. As he put it- ''There is the psychological issue that the baby is her sister's organ bank.''

(APRIL 7) UPI - Dutch police say they have NOT determined what prompted an unemployed man to spray acid on the most famous painting by the Dutch painter Rembrandt.

Security guards at the National Museum in Amsterdam witnessed the man squirt liquid on the three and one-half century-old work ''The Night Watch'' yesterday. The pair knocked the vial out of the man's hand before he could spray the painting more than twice.

Their quick action may have saved the painting.

A museum spokesman says it does NOT appear as if the 141-inch by 168-inch painting was damaged by the attack. A museum attendant quickly dashed a neutralizing liquid on the painting to stop the acidifying process, while museum restorers rushed to remove the traces of acid.

As it turns out, the acid appears to have eaten only the varnish covering the painting.

Yesterdy's attack was the third time this century that ''The Night Watch'' has been vandalized.

Museum authorities say they'll return the painting to its spacious room as soon as it's restored.

HANOI, Vietnam (APRIL 7) UPI - Bright red cans of American soft drinks are stacked throughout the markets of Hanoi, but the U.S. economic embargo against Vietnam is still in place 15 years after the end of the war.

''American companies and American businessmen want to be allowed to compete for the new opportunities that are opening up in Vietnam,'' said David Gibbon, president of the American Chamber of Commerce in Bangkok, Thailand.

The embargo, slapped on North Vietnam in 1964 and extended to the entire nation after the communist victory in 1975, prevents companies and citizens from the United States from carrying out any commercial transaction with Vietnam. Even private humanitarian aid requires a government license.

The embargo meant little to U.S. business as long as Vietnam was a closed, centrally-planned economy.

But since 1987, Vietnam has made rapid economic reforms, actively courting foreign capital with a liberal investment law. It has also permitted private enterprise and expanded exports.

More than 2,000 foreign business delegations have rushed in to investigate the possibilities. Although cautious about investments until Vietnam proves itself, they have approved projects worth more than $850 million.

Gas and oil exploration has been a favorite target of investment, with companies from France, Britain, the Netherlands, Sweden, Belgium, Canada, and India snapping up the best concession areas. Ironically, the embargo has kept out U.S. firms, which discovered offshore oil in the waning days of the war.

Key opportunities are being lost in telecommunications.

The Australian government-owned company OTCI has already built satellite ground stations in Hanoi and Ho Chi Minh City.

Mai Liem Truc, director of the Telecoms Department in Hanoi, said he has had talks with AT&T, but Washington has rejected plans to allow direct telephone calls to be made from the United States to Vietnam. As a result, hundreds of thousands of Vietnamese in the United States cannot call their relatives.

''It is very barbarous,'' said Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach in an interview. ''It is the thinking of the Middle Ages.''

U.S. companies have lost out on tourism - another area of natural advantage, but not for want of trying.

Lindblad Travel Inc., a leader in tours to Vietnam for Vietnamese-Americans and Vietnam War veterans, last year was convicted of violating the ''Trading with the Enemy Act.'' The company went out of business.

Under the Reagan administration, Washington stipulated relations could not improve unless Vietnam stepped up cooperation in accounting for the nearly 1,700 American servicemen listed as missing in action from the war, and Hanoi withdrew its troops from Cambodia.

Vietnam has since announced that all its troops were out, but the Bush administration has insisted on a comprehensive settlement of the Cambodian conflict. Repeated attempts at negotiating a settlement have broken down.

Nguyen Xuan Oanh, a Harvard-educated economist and member of the Vietnamese National Assembly, said American companies were missing out on the chance to become established in an economy he predicted would boom within 10 years.

''By the time the Americans come in, the cream of the pie will have been eaten,'' he said.

But some Americans have doubts how lucrative that pie may be.

''It's difficult to make money right now because the Vietnamese don't have any capital - its all barter or counter trade,'' said David Lyman, senior partner of Tilleke and Gibbins, a Bangkok law firm that advises companies on investments in the region.

But Lyman also said that was partly due to U.S. policy of blocking most loans to Vietnam from the International Monetary Fund, the World Bank and the Asian Development Bank.

Non-American businessmen in Vietnam, meanwhile, complain about excessive bureaucracy, the lack of a banking system, overlapping authority and growing corruption.

Some of them profit by selling U.S. goods that Americans are forbidden to sell themselves.

Kodak film, Coca-Cola and Pepsi-Cola are everywhere.

L.N. Harvey, chief executive for the regional operations of the Coca Cola Export Co., said the company found that the soft drink was being shipped into Vietnam from Singapore by non-American wholesalers.

''We did good business in Vietnam during the war years and we would like to go back, but we have no official business there now,'' Harvey said.

Speaking for Americans eager to explore business opportunities in Vietnam, Gibbon said: ''It is now 15 years after the end of the war with Vietnam. And we would like to see the embargo re-evaluated in the light of today's realities.''

WASHINGTON (APRIL 7) UPI - A jury found John Poindexter guilty Saturday of all five Iran-Contra charges against him, including conspiracy to obstruct Congress and to destroy official government documents.

Poindexter, 53, Ronald Reagan's former national security adviser, rose to face the jury and hear the verdict. He showed no emotion as the jury foreman intoned the word ''guilty'' to all five counts.

His wife, Linda, an Episcopal priest, looked distressed and clasped her hands on her lap.

U.S. District Judge Harold Greene set sentencing for June 11. Poindexter faces a maximum sentence of 25 years in prison and fines of $1.25 million. No Iran-Contra figure, however, has yet been ordered behind bars.

Poindexter is the highest-ranking official of the Reagan administration to be convicted of Iran-Contra crimes by a jury. He also was the last of the original eight Iran-Contra defendants.

Poindexter's predecessor as Reagan's national security adviser, Robert McFarlane, pleaded guilty to withholding information from Congress and was sentenced last March to two years probation, a $20,000 fine and 200 hours of community service.

Poindexter, a retired Navy rear admiral, was found guilty by a jury of eight women and four men that deliberated for some 25 hours over six days. Poindexter, carrying a cap in his hand to court, wore a grey suit, a blue striped suit and a patterned tie.

When Poindexter arrived for sentencing, he looked solemn but calm - his demeanor during the entire trial, in which jury selection began March 5. Poindexter shook hands with his lawyers, then sat down.

The jury reached its verdict at 11:20 a.m. EDT, but it was not announced in court until about 12:30 p.m.

After the verdict was read, Greene thanked the jury, saying, ''Five weeks is a fairly long time and a week of deliberations is a long time.'' Greene thanked the jury for its service, commenting that its members had been very attentive.

The trial ''had a great deal of public attention and a great deal was at stake,'' Greene said, as reflected on the fact that it featured videotaped testimony by Reagan.

The judge told jurors they were now free to talk to the press - ''it's entirely up to you'' - but suggested that they not make themselves available for comment on their deliberations.

Poindexter was found guilty of conspiracy to obstruct the congressional investigation of the Iran-Contra scandal, making false statements to congressional committees and inducing his former aide, Lt. Col. Oliver North, to falsify, remove and destroy official government documents.

Poindexter also was found guilty of lying to Congress in July 1986 when he wrote three letters on White House stationery denying that the National Security Council had violated a two-year ban on U.S. military aid to the Nicaraguan Contras.

The jury also found Poindexter guilty of obstruction of Congress in November 1986 by claiming he did not learn until January 1986 about the first shipment of U.S. Hawk missiles to Iran in November 1985 when, in fact, he supervised details of the shipment.

The Iran-Contra scandal involves the Reagan administration's secret arms sales to Iran in an effort to win freedom for American hostages held in the Middle East. Profits from the arms sales were then covertly diverted to assist the rebel Nicaraguan Contras at a time when Congress had outlawed direct or indirect U.S. aid.

The verdict supported the key argument by deputy Iran-Contra special prosecutor Dan Webb - that Poindexter masterminded a high-level White House coverup aimed at protecting Reagan's presidency.

Special Iran-Contra prosecutor Lawrence Walsh issued a statement within minutes of the guilty verdict against Poindexter.

''The trial was exemplary,'' Walsh said. ''The verdict speaks for itself. The government was exceptionally fortunate to be represented by Dan Webb and an outstanding trial team.''

North, a gung-ho former Marine who also worked in the White House complex, was found guilty of three Iran-Contra felonies on May 4, 1989. He was sentenced July 5, 1989, to a three-year suspended prison term, two years probation, $150,000 in fines and 1,200 hours of community service.

North is appealing but has started the community service portion of his punishment.

''High men in government office who have the responsibility for the national security of this nation ought not to be allowed to commit crimes to pursue their own self-interest,'' Webb told reporters in a light snow outside the courthouse.

Crediting Walsh, head of the special Iran-Contra prosecutor's office, Webb said, ''Lesser people would never have had the dedication and perseverance to bring this case to trial and to ultimately expose a course of misconduct that had to be prosecuted in open court so the public understood what happened in connection with the Iran-Contra affair.

''If you look at the facts of this case, there's no question that, even being charitable to Admiral Poindexter, he did it to protect the political viability of Ronald Reagan,'' Webb said.

BOGOTA, Colombia (APRIL 7) UPI - Authorities announced Saturday that Medellin drug trafficking cartel chief Pablo Escobar is planning to flee the country, and said 20 police have been killed this week by drug figures.

Newspapers reported the capture of a close Escobar associate, known as ''El Zarco,'' implicated in the March 22 killing of leftist presidential candidate Bernardo Jaramillo, but the reports could not be independently confirmed with the police. Authorities accused Escobar of ordering the assassination.

National Police operations chief Octavio Vargas Silva said Saturday that Escobar, who heads the U.S. Justice Department's list of the 12 most-wanted Colombian drug traffickers, has taken steps to obtain a false passport to escape a nationwide manhunt.

Vargas Silva said some of Escobar's associates had surrendered and said Escobar was trying to leave the country.

''We have information that Escobar Gaviria is trying to leave the country. He is looking for a document with a false name so we have alerted all airport authorities,'' the general said on RCN Radio in Bogota.

''We have informed the international police to stop him from fooling the different authorities, inside the country and abroad,'' Vargas Silva said.

Escobar is believed to have had plastic surgury to conceal his identity.

''We know he's changed his face but we have technical means of identifying the person,'' said Vargas Silva, adding the manhunt for Escobar was ''intense, tireless.''

Escobar, one of the richest men in the world, went into hiding last August when the government launched a massive crackdown on the drug lords, responsible for a string of assassinations last summer.

Authnreties say they have come close several times to capturing Escobar, who once was a congressman from his native Antioquia state.

Fifteen Colombians have been extradicted to face drug charges in U.S. courts since President Virgilio Barco re-established the extradition treaty with the United States in August 1989 to battle rampaging traffickers.

Leading politicians have called for flexibility in the government stand on extraditions and Barco hinted Wednesday the drug traffickers would be tried in Colombia and not in the United States if they surrendered.

The drug traffickers, who killed more than 200 people last year in a bombing campaign against extradition, have offered to surrender and give up the cocaine trade if the government agreed to try them in Colombia and not send them to the United States.

Police said Saturday cartel hitmen killed two policemen Friday in Medellin where the powerful cartel is headquartered. Another officer wounded Thursday died late Friday, raising to 20 the number of officers killed in a week.

The cartel, which has reportedly offered $4,000 for each police officer killed, unleashed a fresh offensive in late March to battle the extradition policy.

The police killings persisted despite an announcement by the cartel Friday that it would stop them and instead ''respond to extraditions and disappearances with bombs and executions.''

The communique was signed by the ''Extraditables,'' as the leaders of the Medellin cartel call themselves.

In guerrilla violence Saturday, at least four police officers were killed when more than 100 leftist rebels attacked a police station in southern Colombia.

Authorities said 13 rebels died in ensuing battles with army helicopter reinforcements and radio reports said two civilians were also killed in the battles in Sibundoy, 300 miles southwest of Bogota.

The rebels belonged to the Revolutionary Armed Forces, the largest and oldest guerrilla group in the country, and the Popular Liberation Army, a small Maoist-inspired group. There are 10,000 armed leftist guerrillas in Colombia, comprising four major groups.

Secretary of State Baker and Soviet Foreign Minister Shevardnadze say they're hopeful of working out a general agreement to reduce nuclear weapons before they meet in the Soviet Union in mid-May. The two concluded three days of talks in Washington yesterday. The talks were designed to set the agenda for the U-S-Soviet summit. Presidents Bush and Gorbachev are scheduled to meet in the United States May 30th through June 3rd.

President Bush continued his method of subtle pressure on the Soviet Union with respect to Lithuania. Bush met with Shevardnadze yesterday, and emphasized that the use of force by the Kremlin to resolve the situation in the Baltic republic could upset U-S-Soviet relations. Shevardnadze told reporters after the meeting that he could NOT comment on any assurances he had made to Bush regarding Lithuania.

PARIS (APRIL 7) UPI - Finance ministers and central bank governors from the globe's seven richest nations agreed Saturday to fight the ''undesirable consequences'' of the Japanese yen's recent decline, but took no major new positions on promoting an East European economic revival.

The Group of Seven industrial powers, meeting for the first time since a wave of revolution brought democracy and free market reforms to Eastern Europe, hailed the ongoing transformations. But a final statement made no mention of a proposed East European reconstruction bank.

The final communique spoke optimistically about German monetary and political reunification as an engine for world economic growth. But it took no stance on the politically and financially sensitive issue of the rate at which East German marks should be converted into West German marks.

On the prospects for world growth, G-7 ministers were cautiously optimistic, noting that economic growth has ''slowed down in several countries, toward more sustainable rhythms.'' But global economic growth prospects are ''good,'' with strong investment and currency stability, they said.

French Finance Minister Pierre Beregovoy, host of the meeting, read the final communique in a news conference after the session. No other G-7 ministers were present, hinting at possible divergences of opinion within the group.

The G-7 officials ''discussed developments on financial markets as a whole in particular the fall of the yen with regard to other currencies and the undesirable consequences on the global process of adjustment. They agreed to follow these developments closely,'' the statement said.

''They reaffirmed their commitment to coordinate their economic policies and to cooperate on the exchange markets,'' it said. The last phrase suggested central banks of the Group of Seven nations could mount a concerted program of intervention in foreign exchange markets to shore up the yen.

The statement also said countries with large trade surpluses, such as Japan and West Germany, must reduce them ''by favoring a non-inflationary growth of their internal demand'' through appropriate policies.

The Group of Seven - the United States, Japan, West Germany, France, Italy Great Britain and Canada - ''expressed satisfaction on the economic reforms in Eastern Europe on the path to a market economy, reforms that they consider as the most important for decades,'' the statement said.

The officials ''expressed their willingness to contribute to the success of the process under way, through appropriate multilateral and bilateral assistance.'' They offered to help with reforms to liberalize the movement of private capital.

But there was no specific reference to the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development being planned to help the Eastern European countries and the Soviet Union turn to market economies. The U.S. earlier disagreed with its European partners on providing assistance to the Soviet Union through the bank.

Beregevoy told reporters in off-the-cuff remarks only that ''the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development will be put in place on schedule.'' He said the process of creating the bank proposed by French President Francois Mitterrand is ''well under way,'' but gave no details.

On German reunification ministers simply ''noted that German economic and monetary union could contribute to improving world growth and reduce external disequilibria in Europe,'' the statement said.

The communique's language on the yen appeared to respond to Japan's desire for joint action on the decline of its currency, which has lost about 11 percent of its value against the U.S. dollar since January.

U.S. Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady and Japanese Finance Minister Ruytaro Hashimoto met privately Saturday before the wider meeting started.

Sources said the Group of Seven was more disposed to help Japan because of the trade pact it signed with the United States last week. The accord on ''structural impediments'' proposes to remove the invisible barriers keeping U.S. businesses out of Japanese markets.

The diplomatic sources said another consideration was that yen weakness could thwart efforts to trim the $49 billion U.S. trade deficit with Japan. The yen's decline makes Japanese products less expensive in the United States, and U.S. goods costlier and less competitive in Japan.

Previously, the United States and West Germany - the key players - had shown little interest in bailing out the yen. They discreetly suggested Japan should help itself by further raising its interest rates.

The Bank of Japan increased its official discount rate by 1 point to 5.25 percent March 20, but that had little effect. Japanese officials feared higher rates would wreak havoc on the shaky Tokyo Stock Exchange.

LIMA, Peru (APRIL 7) UPI - Peruvians vote Sunday for a new president and congress during some of the darkest days of the nation's history, battered by runaway inflation and threatened by bloody communist guerrilla movements.

In the latest pre-election violence, National Police said guerrillas assassinated Julio Roberto Santa Maria Diez, 42, a regional official and leader of the ruling party in the Tocache area, 260 miles northeast of Lima.The area is in the Upper Huallaga Valley, the world's most productive producer of the coca leaf, cocaine's main ingredient, and a turbulent haven of guerrillas and cocaine traffickers.

A regional mayor was murdered Friday night in the Cajabamba area, 300 miles northwest of the capital, police said. A guard at the home of the editor in chief of the Lima newspaper El Nacional, Jose Olaya Correa, exchanged shots Saturday with four people apparently about to attack the home, police said.

Four trucks were burned Saturday morning and 12 dynamite explosions ripped through a bridge in other parts of the country.

An ''armed stoppage'' called by the ruthless Shining Path guerrilla movement paralyzed Ayacucho, a city of 100,000 people 200 miles southeast of Lima. The Shining Path called the stoppage through Monday.

The city was without transportation and businesses remained closed Saturday. Streets were virtually deserted except for police and army units guarding voting locations and patrolling the streets.

Eight departments and four provinces have been declared in a state of emergency and were under police and army control because of actions by the guerrillas. The guerrillas have called for a boycott of the election and have backed up their call with a wave of violence that included assassination of six congressional candidates.

Polls show novelist Mario Vargas Llosa likely to garner the most votes but not enough to win the election outright, throwing the race into a second round. In a second vote, pollsters said he likely will face the ''Fujimori Phenomenon,'' the name the pollsters have attached to the skyrocketing campaign of independent candidate Alberto Fujimori.

Fujimori, 51, the son of Japanese immigrants, came from obscurity two months ago to a strong second in recent polls. ''El Chinito,'' the ''Little Chinaman'' as he is affectionately known, surged into second place.

Pollsters have attributed Fujimori's rise to Peruvians' disenchantment with politicians under President Alan Garcia, fears raised by Vargas Llosa's announced plans for an economic ''shock'' program to control inflation and Fujimori's own connection to the much-admired Japan.

Other major candidates include Luis Alva Castro of Garcia's American Popular Revolutionary Alliance Party, who is burdened by his association with the highly unpopular president.

Garcia was elected in 1985 and his policies of increasing salaries and of subsidies for basic products made him popular for his first two years in office. But when the nation's foreign reserves were spent and Peru was cut off from international credit because of Garcia's payment moratorium on foreign debt, inflation began to spiral. It reached 2,775 percent in 1989, the highest in Peruvian history.

Also running were Alfonso Barrantes Lingan of the Socialist Left and Henry Pease of the United Left, the two major leftist factions. Four other minor candidates also were on the ballot.

Vargas Llosa is the author of such novels as ''Aunt Julia and the Scriptwriter,'' ''The Green House,'' ''The City and the Dogs,'' and ''The War at the End of the World.'' In his campaign, he lashed out at the left and spoke passionately of the ''culture of liberty'' he is promising to bring to Peru.

In the 10 years since the Shining Path first surfaced, more than 18,000 people have died in political violence. An average of eight people per day died in 1989 in political violence.

The group with some 5,000 followers is led by the elusive Abimael Guzman Reynoso, a former philosophy professor. Another guerrilla group, the Tupac Amaru Revolutionary Movement, also carries out attacks within the country.

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (APRIL 7) UPI - The shuttle Discovery's enthusiastic crew flew to Florida Saturday for the start of the ship's countdown to blastoff Tuesday on a historic mission to launch the revolutionary $1.5 billion Hubble Space Telescope.

Discovery's intricate countdown began on time at 3 p.m. EDT and, if all goes well, the shuttle and its precious cargo will blast off at 8:47 a.m. EDT Tuesday to kick off the 35th shuttle flight, the third of nine planned for 1990.

''It's been a long time happening and now it's really here, for real,'' commander Loren Shriver said of the space telescope, originally scheduled for launch in 1983. ''We're looking forward on Tuesday for good weather, a good liftoff and then about a day and five hours later to start lifting the telescope out of the payload bay.''

The veteran four-man, one-woman crew, strapped into three sleek blue-and-white T-38 jet trainers, swooped over launch pad 39B for a closeup look at Discovery before landing at the Kennedy Space Center's 3-mile shuttle runway about 2:10 p.m.

After talking briefly to reporters, Shriver and his crewmates - co-pilot Charles Bolden, 43, Steven Hawley, 38, Bruce McCandless, 52, and Kathryn Sullivan, 38 - departed for the pad for a final pre-launch look at the $1.5 billion telescope in Discovery's cargo bay.

''It's an exciting time for NASA and it's certainly an exciting time for the thousands of people who have worked on this project for a long time,'' said astronomer Hawley, who plans to launch the telescope Wednesday with Discovery's 50-foot-long robot arm.

''I think over the next 10 or 20 years, perhaps more, that it'll be a tremendously exciting time for astronomy as a result of this mission.''

The weather forecast for launch time Tuesday called for winds out of the southeast at 12 mph gusting to 16 mph, well within allowable limits. But NASA managers were considering whether to strengthen already-tough post-Challenger wind guidelines, which could cause problems.

Otherwise, processing at the launch pad was on track Saturday after work overnight to replace a lens on one of the TV cameras attached to the robot arm, which will be used to lift the telescope out of Discovery's cargo bay.

Work to charge the telescope's batteries was completed shortly before 1 p.m. Saturday and NASA spokeswoman Lisa Malone said engineers planned to close Discovery's cargo bay doors early Sunday after final inspections, setting the stage for launch.

The Hubble Space Telescope is the most expensive satellite ever built and one expected to revolutionize modern astronomy from its vantage point high above Earth's turbulent atmosphere.

So sensitive that it can spot a firefly 10,000 miles away, the space telescope will see objects with 10 times greater clarity than ground-based instruments, allowing astronomers to search for planets around other stars and to look for signs of galactic evolution shortly after the birth of the universe some 15 billion years ago.

''There's nothing any better,'' NASA astronomer Edward Weiler said. ''The European Space Agency, the Russians, the Japanese, even the U.S. has nothing on the drawing boards that even competes with it.

''Yes, there will be bigger telescopes on the ground (in the future) and so on, but we will still have that advantage that we are not looking through the atmosphere.''

Launch originally was scheduled for 1983, six years after Congress approved the project, but the flight was delayed until now by a series of technical problems and the 1986 Challenger disaster.

The telescope's big advantage over ground-based instruments, Weiler said, is its resolution, that is, its ability to see fine detail in a target. The power of the space telescope can be seen by comparing its performance with that of its larger, ground-based cousins.

The most distant object ever seen with a ground telescope is a mysterious high-energy ''quasar'' 12 billion light years away - the distance that light, traveling 186,000 miles per second, covered in 12 billion years.

''If the universe is 15 billion years old, this quasar is at 12 billion light years away,'' Weiler said. ''Because we have more sensitivity with the space telescope, we can see objects like that, if they exist, back to about 93 percent of the age of the universe.

''If the universe is 15 billion years old, we can see back to 14 billion years. But the really important thing is not just seeing an object like a quasar at 10 or 14 or whatever billion light years away, it's resolving it. And that's where we really have the big advantage over the ground.''

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (APRIL 7) UPI - The white minority government and the African National Congress announced Saturday their first round of power-sharing talks, postponed last month by the ANC to protest a police attack, would begin May 2.

The announcement came on the eve of ANC leader Nelson Mandela's departure to Lusaka to brief ANC officials in exile there on the outcome of a three-hour meeting with President Frederik de Klerk Thursday.

The talks, first set for April 11, were postponed by the ANC to protest the killing of at least 11 anti-government demonstrators and the wounding of 450 others in police gunfire in the black township of Sebokeng, outside Johannesburg, on March 26.

De Klerk agreed during his meeting with Mandela to appoint a judge to conduct an inquest and raised the possibility of a judicial inquiry into the incident.

That put back on course talks aimed at clearing obstacles in the way of formal negotiations on power sharing meant to end the apartheid country's racial conflict.

Key issues include ANC demands for the release of some 300 political prisoners, the lifting of a nearly 4-year-old state of emergency and an end to all political trials.

ANC Secretary Genereal Alfred Nzo announced separately Saturday that the 71-year-old Mandela and his family would move into a 15-room mansion in Orlando West, a suburb of the black satellite city of Soweto containing comparatively middle- and upper-black-middle-class homes.

Dogged by controversy, the Orlando West home was financed by foreign donations during Mandela's 27 years of incarceration. The house was never occupied due to allegations that his wife, Winnie Mandela, would be turning her back on the mostly poor people of Soweto by living there.

Since his Feb. 11 release, Mandela has been living in the family's cramped and poorly secured four-room dwelling, which is similar to other ''matchbox'' homes surrounding it.

Nzo said the ANC's National Executive Committee had decided to move Mandela into the larger house after considering ''organizational obligations of the deputy president and the rest of his family'' and consulting with local ANC officials.

In another development Saturday, police said heavily armed rival black factions fought running battles and police came under attack in strife-torn Natal province, leaving at least 19 more dead and hundreds homeless over the past two days.

Police said intense fighting broke out again Thursday between ANC supporters and the rival Zulu movement Inkatha of Mangosuthu Buthelezi, especially in the area of Hammersdale, midway between the port city of Durban and the provincial capital of Pietermaritzburg.

At least 70 houses were burned and five people killed, a police statement said.

In Hammersdale, ''running battles took place between the rival groups and, as police intervened to stop the fighting, they too came under attack,'' a police statement said. ''Heavily armed groups shot at police with, among others, automatic weapons.''

No police or army casualties were reported. De Klerk on Monday ordered additional army units into the Pietermaritzburg area to quell fighting that has left more than 80 dead, scores wounded and thousands homeless in the past two weeks.

Mandela, who has refused to hold peace talks with Buthelezi because the ''climate is not right,'' welcomed the deployment of the troops after accusing police of siding with Inkatha forces. Some 3,000 people have died in the conflict since 1987.

The bodies of nine people were found in Hammersdale Friday, including a woman and a baby killed when a mob armed with weapons and gasoline bombs fired shots and set fire to their house, one of 30 more houses razed in the area.

Five others were killed in gunbattles between the two groups and two more people stabbed to death.

In the area of Table Mountain in Natal, police found the bullet-riddled bodies of five people along a road Friday in another incident linked to the conflict.

(APRIL 7) UPI - Firefighters battling a blaze aboard a Danish ferry have discovered 75 bodies. The head of the battalion combatting the fire says the dead were found on the 10-thousand-ton vessel's upper decks. Up to 70 people have NOT been accounted in the hours since the Scandinavian Star was evacuated. 10 others are injured.

Secretary of State Baker and Soviet Foreign Minister Shevardnadze concluded three days of pre-summit talks yesterday. They say it looks as if Presidents Bush and Gorbachev will have a rough draft of a U-S-Soviet arms reduction pact to consider when they meet in the United States beginning May 30th.

The union representing more than 11-thousand health workers employed by Southern California's Kaiser Permanente will present its rank-and-file with the company's latest contract proposal Monday. Union leaders have NOT made a recommendation. The proposal came after three days of federally mediated talks.

Congresswoman Pat Schroeder, a Colorado Democrat, is heading a group of seven lawmakers who'll begin a trip to the Pacific and East Asia today. They will look for possible alternatives to U-S military bases in the Philippines. The legislators are members of a House Armed Services subcommittee.

Chinese and Western sources say a Beijing government policy that limits overseas study by Chinese students could be backfiring. Since the plan was implemented, there has been a marked increase in the number of students withdrawing from classes and applying for NON-student visas to travel abroad.

(APRIL 7) UPI - U-S Comptroller General Charles Bowsher says it could cost American taxpayers as much as 500-BILLION dollars to take care of the nation's failing savings and loan industry. So far, congressional auditors figure it will run the government 325-BILLION dollars to repair the S-and-L crisisBILLION dollars more than originally estimated.

NASA says things are proceeding smoothly at Cape Canaveral in preparation for the start of the countdown for Tuesday's launch of the shuttle Discovery. Countdown is scheduled to start today. Discovery will fire into orbit the Hubble Space Telescope, one of the most advanced optical pieces ever created.

Police in Karachi, Pakistan, say random violence in the capital city last night left at least 11 people dead and another dozen wounded. The bloodshed was sparked by a band of young people with assault rifles. They opened fire on a fruit-stand set up by an opposition party. Six people died in the initial attack.

Afghanistan's radio station says gunmen disrupted a ceremony at which a terrorist group was scheduled to surrender to the Soviet-backed government. But Afghan radio did NOT comment on foreign reports which said at least 12 people died in the gunbattle that took place yesterday.

In what appears to be an UNprecedented action... Southern California's South Coast Air Quality Management District has voted to move toward phasing out by 1995 the use of a deadly gas at five major industrial plants. Yesterday, the agency's board approved a ban on the bulk use of hydrogen fluoride.

TEL AVIV, Israel (APRIL 7) UPI - Tens of thousands of Israelis angered over repeated government coalition crises and backroom political bargaining jammed a downtown Tel Aviv square Saturday to demand electoral reform.

Organizers estimated 60,000 to 70,000 people had joined the rally in the Kings of Israel Square, making it the largest protest since the 1982 peace demonstration following the Sabra and Shatila massacre in Beirut. No police estimate of the crowd was available.

The demonstrators, carrying Israeli flags and waving signs reading ''We are fed up,'' called for ''a change in government'' as they packed the square and filled nearby streets.

One demonstrator, Moshe Meirowitz, 64, of Tel Aviv, said he had come to the rally, his first since an anti-British protest in 1945, to force the politicians ''to be responsible to us.''

''The last time I was in a demonstration I was a kid. It was against the English here,'' said Meirowitz, who was holding a blue and white Israeli flag. ''Until now I didn't feel it was so serious like (it is) today.''

The demonstrators said they had lost patience with the political system and charged the religious parties were ''blackmailing'' the major Likud and Labor parties in return for support.

Organizers of the rally are calling for direct election of the prime minister and members of Parliament. Some also have proposed the adoption of a bill of rights or a constitution to ensure the elected leaders do not abuse their power.

Since the collapse of the Likud-Labor government coalition in mid-March and the subsequent political bargaining to form a new government, a movement for electoral reform has swelled with the increasing voter disillusionment about the political system.

Two army reserve officers who began a hunger strike nearly two weeks ago have been joined by more than 20 other Israelis. The hunger strikers have held a vigil outside the Israeli Parliament, the Knesset, where they have been collecting signatures to support their cause. More than 20,000 signatures have been collected nationwide.

Most of the strikers agreed to give up their fast Saturday evening after an appeal by President Chaim Herzog that they not harm their health.

Herzog, the Israel Bar Association and mayors from most major cities and townshave expressed support for the reform movement. The Association of Americans and Canadians in Israel collected 40,000 letters of support for the effort.

Under the current system of proportional representation, Israeli voters select party lists, not individual candidates. The low qualifying threshold of 1 percent has allowed many small parties to win seats in 120-member Knesset and exert a powerful influence. There are 13 parties with six seats or less, including four religious parties.

Israel's two major parties, the right-wing Likud and center-left Labor, which both lack majorities in the Knesset, need the support of the small parties to form ruling coalitions. The political maneuvering and promises of ministerial posts and funding to the small parties, especially the ultra-Orthodox, have angered many Israelis.

In the occupied Gaza Strip Saturday, at least four Arabs were wounded by army gunfire in clashes, Palestinians sources said.

In the Ketziot detention center in the Negev Desert, prisoners killed a fellow inmate, Idris Abdallah Imkhat, 44, who was suspected of collaborating with Israeli authorities, Palestinian sources said. The army confirmed a body was found Saturday morning and said it was investigation the slaying.

More than 200 Palestinians suspected of collaborating or immoral behavior have been killed since the start of the 27-month-old Palestinian uprising against Israeli occupation.

RALEIGH, N.C. (APRIL 7) UPI - North Carolina State University Saturday dismissed embattled basketball coach Jim Valvano in an $238,0000 buyout agreement.

The university will complete paying Valvano's $106,000 a year salary with a $26,509.24 payment May 15, the end of the academic 1989-90 year and pay Valvano an additional $212,000 within 30 days, said Larry Monteith, acting N.C. State chancellor.

''We believe firmly that this settlemnt is in the best interest of our students, faculty, alumni and everyone associated with North Carolina

State University,'' Monteith said in a statement.

The chancellor refused to answer reporters' questions about the agreement.

Valvano, who led the Wolfpack for 10 years, came under pressure following allegations of improprieties during the past 16 months.

University trustees voted 9-3 on March 21 to remove Valvano. In the meeting, Monteith told the trustees of the 41 players Valvano has coached in 10 seasons, 30 had a grade point average below a 2.0 on a 4.0 scale.

The stumbling block to fire Valvano was the buyout clause in his five-yearcontract requiring the university to pay him $500,000 if he was terminated for any reason other than a felony conviction or involvement in a major NCAA violation.

On March 26, the University of North Carolina board of governors granted permission to N.C. State to take Valvano to court for breach of contract for failing to encourage his players' academic progress. No suit has been filed.

Valvano's problems started last year when sports author Peter Golenbock wrote in the book ''Personal Fouls'' about widespread corruption in the Wolfpack basketball program - including allegations that players retain eligibility when failing grades were changed and positive drug tests were hidden.

Those allegations led to an investigation by the State Bureau of Investigation for the UNC Board of Governors. In a report on the probe, C.D. Spangler, UNC system president, said no evidence was found to support those claims.

But Spangler said evidence showed academic policies had been ''bent'' to accommodate basketball players. That report was followed by an NCAA investigation that found eight NCAA violations, the most serious being that players sold complimentary game tickets and game shoes.

The NCAA placed N.C. State on two-years' probation and banned the Wolfpack from the NCAA Tournament this season.

Another problem surface for Valvano when former cager Charles Shackleford, now with the New Jersey Nets, admitted he took about $60,000 during the 1987-88 season from an agent and a New Jersey businessman.

ABC News interviewed an unnamed man who said he was a member of the 1987-88 Wolfpack basketball team and that Shackleford paid him and three other players to shave points - to play poorly to influence a final score to benefit gamblers.

Shackleford has denied that allegation. Valvano has not been accused of direct involvement in any of the allegations.

PARIS (APRIL 7) UPI - This is the official English text of the final statement of the Group of Seven meeting held Saturday:

''The finance ministers and central bank governors of Canada, France, the Federal Republic of Germany, Italy, Japan, the United Kingdom and the United States, met on April 7, 1990, in Paris for an exchange of views on current global economic and financial issues. The managing director of the (International Monetary Fund) participated in the multilateral surveillance discussions.''

''The ministers and governors reviewed their economic policies and prospects. They noted that since their last meeting, economic growth had been slowing in several countries to more sustainable levels. However, overall growth prospects remain good, with strong investment providing a major stimulus to their economies, inflation remains contained and external imbalances have been reduced although unevenly.

''The ministers and governors expressed the need for continued close coordination of their macroeconomic and structural policies, to obtain sustained growth, low inflation and greater stability of exchange rates. In this respect, they agreed that current inflation rates require continued vigilance.''

''They agreed that countries with fiscal and current account deficits should reduce budget deficits and increase private savings.''

''They also agreed that countries with external surpluses should, at the same time, continue to contribute to external adjustment by promoting non-inflationary growth of domestic demand, through appropriate macroeconomic and structural policies. They also agreed that savings should be promoted in all countries through the use of appropriate structural policies.''

''The ministers and governors discussed developments in global financial markets, especially the decline of the yen against other currencies, and its undesirable consequences for the global adjustment process, and agreed to keep these developments under review. They reaffirmed their commitment to economic policy coordination, including cooperation in exchange markets.''

''The ministers and governors welcomed the reforms in Eastern Europe

towards market-oriented economies which, they believe, are the most profound in decades. They expressed their willingness to contribute to the success of the ongoing process, through appropriate bilateral and multilateral assistance, through helping countries undergoing reforms to remove obstacles to private capital flows, and exchange of information and expertise. They reviewed and assessed the possible effects of these reforms. They noted that German economic and monetary union could contribute to improved global growth and to a reduction of external imbalances in Europe.''

(APRIL 7) UPI - Norweigan and Swedish rescuers say a total of 72 people are dead and at least 70 passengers are UNaccounted for after an early morning fire on a ferry off the coast of Norway. Firefighters found another 10 passengers injured, but alive on the blazing ship. It took fighters seven hours bring the fire under control. Officials say the ferry ride from Oslo to Denmark is an inexpensive weekend popular with many elderly Norweigan retirees.

Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze arrived back in Moscow today from his three days of pre-summit negotiations in Washington. A round of ministerial talks is planned for mid-May before the next summit between President Bush and Soviet leader Gorbachev May 30th through June 3rd. Shevardnadze held out hope an accord reducing nuclear arms can be reached in time for the summit.

NASA's countdown clock begins ticking this afternoon toward the shuttle Discovery's Tuesday launch date. At Cape Canaveral, space agency technicians are preparing for the start of the countdown. The goal of the 35th shuttle mission is deployment of the Hubble Space Telescope... valued at one and one-half BILLION dollars, it's the most expensive satellite ever built.

NEW YORK (APRIL 7) UPI - Most Americans believe good relations with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev are more important than immediate U.S. recognition of an independent Lithuania, a poll released Saturday indicated.

The survey of 601 people, conducted by the Gallup organization for the April 16 issue of Newsweek magazine, found that 59 percent favored trying to maintain good relations with Gorbachev, while 27 percent favored recognizing Lithuania as an independent nation. Fourteen percent were undecided.

The poll, based on telephone interviews conducted April 5-6, had a sampling error of plus or minus 5 percent.

The poll found that 66 percent of respondents approved of President Bush's performance in handling the situation in Eastern Europe, while only 18 percent disapproved and 16 percent were undecided.

These rating were similar to those Bush garnered in a December 1989 poll, when he received a 68 percent approval and 13 percent disapproval rating, Newsweek said.

Those surveyed were almost evenly divided on whether Eastern European countries deserve more American money than those of Latin America.

Twenty-eight percent favored more aid for Eastern Europe, while 27 percent favored more for Latin America. Another 26 percent preferred that U.S. foreign aid policy remain unchanged.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (APRIL 7) UPI - Investigators Saturday found a fourth body in the charred ruin left by a hotel fire in the historic art deco district that injured 21 people, forced the evacuation of scores of elderly and left at least 14 people missing.

Police Lt. Jim Hyde said investigators found the body shortly after 3 p.m. while combing the gutted Fontana Hotel for victims and evidence of arson. It was not known whether the latest victim was male or female or whether the person was one of the 14 identified as missing.

Authorities have said there could be many more victims.

About 70 federal, state and local investigators were at the site of the 39-year-old hotel, which was destroyed early Friday morning in a rapidlyspreading fire that shot flames 40 feet in the air.

Rescue workers used a small bulldozer to sift through rubble at the 102-room hotel, which did not have a sprinkler system when the fire erupted.

Bob Creighton, special agent in charge of the Florida office of the U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, said arson was a possibile cause of the blaze, the deadliest in at least 17 years in Miami Beach.

''We don't know at this point whether the fire was set intentionally, but there is enough of an indication to believe there should be a full investigation,'' said Creighton, who refused to provide further details.

The blaze apparently started near the elevator shaft in front of the hotel residents said. Two of the three people killed were found near the elevator Friday, Hyde said. A third body was recovered from a stairwell.

Authorities said the speed at which the fire spread indicated arson may have been the cause. The blaze moved so quickly that residents at the hotel, most of whom were elderly, barely had time to flee with only their bed clothes. Some were forced to jump from broken windows.

Residents of the adjacent St. Michael hotel also were evacuated.

U.S. Attorney Dexter Lehtinen, who surveyed the fire site Saturday, said a national response team of ATF agents and state and local authorities would set up an office to investigate the blaze.

''This is a great loss of life,'' Lehtinen said. ''This is a tragedy for the Miami Beach community. What the community needs to know now is that we take every incident of this magnitude seriously.''

A man who identified himself only as ''Rich'' said his 92-year-old grandfather lived at the hotel and was missing.

''I'm sure he was in there,'' the man said Saturday. ''There is no doubt. The toughest part at this time is remembering what he was. He was 92 years old. He lived a good life.''

Investigators said it was difficult to determine the number of people missing because the owners of the hotel failed to keep a complete tenant list.

''This is not an easy task,'' said Miami Beach Fire Chief Braniard Dorris as he reviewed conflicting lists of tenants late Friday. ''We can't even say for sure how many people were in the hotel when it burned.''

The hotel, which sold for $1.6 million in May 1989, did not have a sprinkler system. Under state law, hotels of three stories or more were required to install them by October 1991.

Miami Beach fire officials said 21 people were injured, including three firemen. Eighteen of the injured were treated at area hospitals for smoke inhalation.

About 125 Fontana residents sought shelter with the Red Cross, which helped them find temporary lodging in other hotels or with friends or relatives. Residents of the St. Michael Hotel returned to their rooms 12 hours after the fire.

Murray Gold, executive director of the Miami Beach Resort Hotel Association, said many of the elderly residents lived at the Fontana year round or stayed there during the winter months to escape the freezing temperatures in the North.

Rooms at the hotel, operated by Mihai Hotel Corp. under an owner-operator agreement with Newcastle Hotel Inc., were rented from $375 a month and up.

AUGUSTA, Ga. (APRIL 7) UPI - John Huston, battling the building pressure as well as some of the most famous names in golf, shot a 2-under 34 on the front nine at the Augusta National Golf Club Saturday and built a two-shot lead midway through the third round of the Masters.

With such reknowned players as Raymond Floyd, Curtis Strange, Nick Faldo, Tom Watson, Seve Ballesteros, Tom Kite and Jack Nicklaus all owning a chance to capture the first major title of the decade, Huston put together a steady performance on the front nine to lead them all.

Huston, a one-time winner making his first Masters appearance, stood at 7-under with eight holes to play.

Two shots back at 5-under came Floyd, the second-round leader who played the front nine in 1-over, and defending champion Faldo, who was 4-under for the day.

Scott Hoch, whose missed two-foot par putt in sudden death cost him the tournament last year, was alone at 4-under. At 3-under were Nicklaus, Bill Britton and Scott Simpson while the group at 2-under contained Kite, who shot a 66 Saturday for the early clubhouse lead, and Strange, who had been much closer to the lead until a double bogey at the par-3 12th set him back.

Among the early finishers, Watson, Player, Ballesteros and Ireland's Ronan Rafferty were at 1-under. Watson shot a 5-under 67; Player, 54, shot a 68.

''Gary's round was one of the finest I've ever seen played,'' said Player's partner for the day, Larry Nelson. Player's round included four birdies on the front nine with his only bogey of the day coming when he three-putted from the edge of the 14th green.

''Length off the tee is a great asset,'' Player said, ''but it isn't what wins tournaments. It's putting. Putting has killed more people that disease. A good mind still is the most important thing in golf, then putting.''

The horde of famous players near the top of the leader board came as no surprise to Kite, whose 66 was the lowest round he has shot in 69 competitive efforts at the Augusta National.

''Those names are ones you have seen on the leader board on Sunday here for years and years,'' Kite said. ''They are all fine players and you shouldn't be surprised to find good players on the leader board.''

Until Huston took the lead with three straight birdies beginning at the eighth hole, there was a huge battle for the lead.

At one time four players were tied for the top spot at 5-under - Huston, Hoch, Floyd and Faldo.

Elsewhere, first-round leader Mike Donald shot a 77 Saturday to stand at 7-over for the tournament. Donald, who equaled the opening day course record with an 8-under 64, collapsed with an 82 Friday.

Lee Trevino shot an even-par 72 and was at 3-over 219, still in contention to finish among the top 24 and thus earn an invitation to the 1991 tournament.

Amateur Chris Patton, the 300-pounder who has become a cult hero to the Masters galleries this week, was 2-over for the day and the tournament after suffering a double bogey at the par-4 14th.

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (APRIL 7) UPI - At least 74 people died early Saturday in a fire of suspicious origin that swept through a ferry carrying vacationers from Norway to Denmark, rescue services said. Many passengers were unaccounted for and officials feared the death toll could increase considerably.

The ferry captain told rescue workers he believed the fire was deliberately set. He said it broke out shortly after his crew extinguished another blaze on another deck.

The ferry, the 10,000-ton Danish-operated Scandinavian Star, arrived in port late Saturday after having been towed from where it burst into flames 30 nautical miles south of the mouth to Oslo Fjord.

''The fire is still burning and we do not expect to have fully put it out until sometime later tonight,'' said Conny Englund, spokesman for Lysekil Rescue Center.

Englund said the bodies of those who perished would not be removed from the vessel before Sunday.

Lysekil police spokesman Aimo Laaksonen said it was difficult to get an exact death toll, but that the number could eventually go well above the confirmed number of 74. He said 275 people had been rescued. Earlier reports had put the number of rescued at 330.

''There are dead people in corridors all over the ship. It is possible we may even find some 200 dead in all,'' Laaksonen said.

''We can confirm that 74 have been killed, but there seem many more still on board. We will only know the final toll after the fire is out,'' said British Police Inspector Stephen Richas, who was assisting Swedish police at Lysekil.

Richas was in Sweden on other business and offered his help to Swedish police authorities.

Earlier, Englund told Swedish Television that doctors had counted between 110 and 130 dead.

''Most of those found dead appear to have been in the upper decks,'' said Anders Johansson of Gothenburg, Sweden, whose 21 firefighters were flown to the blazing vessel.

''We can reasonably assume the rest of those on board have perished,'' Laaksonen said, adding the exact number of passengers and crew was still unknown.

''We were woken, heard the fire alarm and rushed to the rear of the ship where 40 people were waiting. There was no panic, but the smoke was terrible,'' said Christian Nybo, 20, one of the rescued passengers.

''When we arrived, the ship was full of thick, black smoke. It was very, very hot and there was buckled metal everywhere,'' said Sven Johan Svensen one of the firefighters.

Fires aboard the Scandinavian Star began at 2:30 a.m. Saturday while the passenger and car ferry was on its way with Easter vacationers from Oslo, Norway's capital, to Denmark's northern port of Frederikshavn.

Sailors' organizations in Denmark and Sweden criticized safety and crew conditions on board the Scandinavian Star, which was put on the Oslo-Frederikshavn route less than a week ago.

''The (Filipino and Portugese) crew could not understand each other and, from the reports we have received, did not seem trained for such an emergency,'' said Henrik Berlau, spokesman for Denmark's Sailors' Union.

He added the union had heard reports that safety devices on board the vessel did not appear to work.

''There must be a complete investigation into this tragedy,'' Berlau said.

The vessel's captain, Hugo Larsen, told rescue officers there were two fires. The first broke out on the Caribbean deck of the vessel, but was quickly extinguished by the crew. The second started on a deck above after the first fire was out.

''In the captain's view, we are looking at a deliberate act of arson,'' Sven Voxtorp of Denmark's Naval Rescue Service said.

There were conflicting reports as to how many passengers and crew had been on board the vessel.

''At present, we are not sure of the total numbers. Therefore it is difficult for us to give a full picture of how many are missing,'' said Norwegian Rescue Center spokeswoman Eldbjoerg Vaage.

Earlier Saturday, more than 50 rescued passengers suffering from smoke inhalation and shock were taken to Norwegian and Swedish hospitals.

Johansson said the identities and nationalities of those killed were not immediately available, but that most passengers on board were Danish nationals or Norwegian vacationers going to Denmark for Easter holidays.

The Scandinavian Star plies a route between Norway and Denmark that is highly popular among Norwegian old-age pensioners for inexpensive weekend trips.

The Scandinavian Star is run by the Danish Vognmandsruten company under charter to the Danish DA-NO line.

NTB said the ferry sailed under a Bahamian flag and was manned by Norwegian officers and Portugese and Filipino crew.

The prime ministers of Norway and Denmark, Jan Syse and Poul Schluter, and Denmark's monarch, Queen Margrethe, issued statements of condolence

Saturday to the families of those killed, describing the event as ''a terrible tragedy.''

Denmark and Norway's governments announced that all flags were to fly at half-staff on public buildings Sunday.

RACINE, WI (APRIL 8) UPI - S.C. Johnson & Son Inc. has announced a voluntarily recall of an insect repellent, Deep Woods OFF!, from retail shelves.

The recall, announced late Friday, affects only those insect repellent products with an ingredient used to repel biting flies known as ''R-11,'' which is marked on the front of the label ''2,3,4,5-bis (2 butylene) tetrahydro-2-furaldehyde.''

Research by McLaughlin Gormley King, the manufacturer of the ingredient, has found adverse effects in animals fed high levels of R-11, Johnson said.

Non-malignant tumors were found in mice that were fed R-11 during tests, Johnson said. However, there was no proof that R-11 has had adverse effects on humans who used Deep Woods OFF!, the company said.

The company will restock stores with a new Deep Woods OFF! that contains a repellent known as DEET, Johnson said.

CINCINNATI (APRIL 8) UPI - The exhibitors of a sexually erotic display of photographs taken by the late Robert Mapplethorpe were indicted on four obscenity counts Saturday but declared they would not remove the explicit pictures.

A Hamilton County grand jury returned the indictments against the Cincinnati Contemporary Arts Center and its director, Dennis Barrie. Both were charged with pandering obscenity and illegal use of a minor in nudity oriented material.

Despite the indictments, the show remained open and no photographs were seized by authorities. Under terms of a search warrant issued in the case, police officials videotaped the exhibit Saturday afternoon to use as evidence.

Hamilton County Prosecutor Art Ney ''challenged'' art gallery officials to voluntarily take down seven of the exhibit's 175 photographs until a trial jury decides if they are obscene or not. No trial date was immediately set.

Ney said he was prepared to wait ''a reasonable amount of time, say next Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday or Thursday,'' to see if the seven photos were voluntarily removed. He refused to say what action authorities might take if the photos are not removed from the rest of the show.

Art gallery officials flatly said they would not remove the photos.

''There is nothing wrong with this exhibition and we will present this exhibition,'' declared Barrie, who said he intended to plead not guilty to the charges against him. ''This is a very dark day, but we are going to be open.''

Added gallery attorney Lou Sirkin, ''It is our commitment that there will be no prior restraint (against the photos).''

About 3,000 people attended the show Saturday, but several hundred people had to leave the gallery for one hour while police videotaped the exhibit. While waiting to get back in the gallery, a group of people chanted at the police, ''Shame, shame'' and ''Give art a chance.''

Among those attending the exhibit Saturday was Cincinnati City Council member Guy Guckenberger, who called the indictments ''outrageous.''

''I've seen the entire exhibit and it's a wonderful show,'' said Guckenberger. ''I can't believe a jury in Cincinnati, even as conservative as it is, will find these photos obscene. I think Barrie and the arts center will be exonerated.''

The photo exhibit, scheduled to continue through late May, opened to the public Saturday after a private viewing for Contemporary Arts Center members Friday night attracted an arts center record crowd of 4,000 people.

The Mapplethorpe photos were the focus of a controversy last summer when Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., objected to them. In the past few weeks, publicity about the local showing stirred a classic art vs. obscenity controversy in Cincinnati, a city with a reputation for strict anti-pornography enforcement.

The nine members of the grand jury viewed the show Saturday morning along with the general public, returned to the county court house to discuss what they had seen and then returned the indictments.

Barrie, if convicted of the two charges against him, could be sentenced to jail for six months and fined $1,000 on each count. Each of the two charges against the art gallery carries a maximum penalty of a $5,000 fine.

''In the last two weeks, I have received more than 600 letters from citizens asking that action be taken (against the show),'' said Ney. ''I received only 33 letters opposed to taking action.''

Hamilton County Sheriff Simon Leis, a former county prosecutor who waged an intense court battle against Hustler magazine publisher Larry Flynt more than a decade ago, echoed Ney's ''challenge'' to art gallery officials that they voluntarily remove the seven photos that were the subject of the indictment.

''I think the Contemporary Arts Center has an obligation to remove those pictures,'' said Leis. ''The grand jury indictment means there is probable cause they are obscene. I suggest that the Arts Center remove those pictures until a jury decides the issue.''

Ney, asked what would happen if the photos were not voluntarily removed from the exhibit, said, ''I can't tell you what our options are. There are a lot of things we can do, but we'll wait and see what the arts center does.''

MIAMI BEACH, FL (APRIL 8) UPI - Investigators found a fourth body Saturday in the charred ruin left by a hotel fire in the historic art deco district that injured 21 people, forced the evacuation of scores of elderly and left at least 10 people missing.

Police Lt. Jim Hyde said investigators found the body shortly after 3 p.m. while combing the gutted Fontana Hotel for victims and evidence of arson. It was not known whether the latest victim was male or female.

Authorities have said there could be many more victims.

About 70 federal, state and local investigators wearing hard hats and protective clothing were at the site of the 39-year-old hotel, which was destroyed early Friday morning in a rapidly spreading fire that shot flames 40 feet in the air. Authorities said the old hotel was built like a ''barbecue pit.''

Rescue workers used a small bulldozer to sift through rubble at the 102-room hotel, which did not have a sprinkler system. The search ended for the day at about 6:30 p.m. and was to resume Sunday.

Bob Creighton, special agent in charge of the Florida office of the U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, said arson was a possibile cause of the blaze, the deadliest in at least 17 years in Miami Beach.

''We don't know at this point whether the fire was set intentionally, but there is enough of an indication to believe there should be a full investigation,'' said Creighton, who refused to provide further details.

Will Rollins, a building design specialist, said the old hotel was built in a way that would make it burn quickly.

''You have a lot of wood construction there - wood floor joists, wood wall framing. It's an ideal situation for a fire. It's designed like a barbecue pit.''

The blaze apparently started near the elevator shaft in the front lobby of the hotel, residents said. Two of the three people killed were found near the elevator Friday, Hyde said. A third body was recovered from a stairwell.

Authorities said the speed at which the fire spread indicated arson may have been the cause. The blaze moved so quickly that residents at the hotel, most of whom were elderly, barely had time to flee with only their bed clothes. Some were forced to jump from broken windows.

Residents of the adjacent St. Michael hotel also were evacuated.

U.S. Attorney Dexter Lehtinen, who surveyed the fire site Saturday, said a national response team of ATF agents and state and local authorities would set up an office to investigate the blaze.

''This is a great loss of life,'' Lehtinen said. ''This is a tragedy for the Miami Beach community. What the community needs to know now is that we take every incident of this magnitude seriously.''

A man who identified himself only as ''Rich'' said his 92-year-old grandfather lived at the hotel and was missing.

''I'm sure he was in there,'' the man said Saturday. ''There is no doubt. The toughest part at this time is remembering what he was. He was 92 years old. He lived a good life.''

Investigators said it was difficult to determine the number of people missing because the hotel's records were destroyed in the fire.

''We have interviewed the occupants of the hotel and have tried to find out what rooms they were in and if they knew people in other rooms,'' police detective Rocco Deleo said.

The hotel, which sold for $1.6 million in May 1989, did not have a sprinkler system. Under state law, hotels of three stories or more were required to install them by October 1991.

Miami Beach fire officials said 21 people were injured, including three firemen. Eighteen of the injured were treated at area hospitals for smoke inhalation.

About 125 Fontana residents sought shelter with the Red Cross, which helped them find temporary lodging in other hotels or with friends or relatives. Residents of the St. Michael Hotel returned to their rooms 12 hours after the fire.

Michael Carroll of the Greater Miami Red Cross said the charity ''may spend $100,000 on the assistance of these individuals, and we've really got to raise money to be able to do it.''

BOSTON (APRIL 8) UPI - Ray Bourque, Garry Galley and Bobby Carpenter scored power-play goals Saturday night, leading the Boston Bruins to a 3-1 victory over the Hartford Whalers and evening their first-round playoff at 1-1.

Game 3 of the best-of-seven Adams Division semifinal will be played Monday night at the Hartford Civic Center. The series is the first post-season pairing of New England's NHL teams.

Galley helped Hartford tie the game 1-1 at 7:42 of the second period when he lost the puck near the Bruins net and Todd Krygier one-timed it from 10 feet.

During a line change at 13:29 of the second period, Hartford was whistled for too many men on the ice. Galley scored 37 seconds later, taking Bourque's cross-ice pass and firing a slap shot from the top of the right circle.

Carpenter's second score of the playoffs came at 6:57 of the third period when the rebound of Cam Neely's shot got behind goalie Peter Sidorkiewicz. Carpenter cut through the crease and poked the puck in.

Hartford was 0 for 9 on its power-play opportunities. Against the Bruins this season, the Whalers have scored on only 2 of 41 man-advantage situations. In the regular season, Boston ranked second in penalty-killing.

Boston goalie Andy Moog, in his first start of the playoffs, made 25 saves including spectacular stops on a pair of Pat Verbeek shots midway through the second period.

As in Game 1, Boston kept the action in Hartford's zone, but both teams played a far more physical style than in the opener.

Boston took a 1-0 lead at 10:58 of the first period on Bourque's slap shot from the point. Whalers center Ron Francis, trying to block the defenseman's shot, instead tipped it slightly and Sidorkiewicz was beaten low on the glove side.

Boston gained the power-play opportunity when Hartford's Grant Jennings was called for roughing, having twice punched the volatile Neely in the chest. Neely, who had 117 penalty minutes this year, refused to retaliate and the sellout crowd of 14,448 at Boston Garden gave him a standing ovation.

MILLVILLE, NJ (APRIL 8) UPI - A Ku Klux Klan rally ended well ahead of schedule Saturday as a jeering, mud-flinging crowd drove about two dozen Klansmen back to their cars.

Six people were arrested by police as a crowd drowned out the Klan's speechmakers at a soggy ballfield behind Millville's city hall on the banks of the Maurice River.

The rally had been opposed by local authorities for months before a lawsuit by the American Civil Liberties Union cleared the way last week for the rally, the first Ku Klux Klan rally in New Jersey since 1981.

For the first hour of the rally, the Klan had just one representative, who found himself outnumbered by 100 police and about 50 members of the media.

Eddie Reynolds, 34, a Millville factory worker wearing an Invisible Knights of the Ku Klux Klan patch on his jacket, told reporters, ''Between crime, AIDS, and everything else, I just believe in a white Christian America.''

He waited 45 minutes before a line of 15 to 20 cars and pickup trucks pulled up to the ballfield.

A crowd of about one hundred people, virtually all white, chanted ''KKK-Go away'' and waved signs reading, ''You're Pathetic,'' as the white-robed Klansmen handed out literature and membership forms to a handful of followers in the ballfield bleachers.

The fence that usually served to protect fans from foul balls was used instead to separate the Klan from the crowd, who mostly ignored the Klan speakers when not chanting to drown them out.

Jennifer Benson, of nearby Woodbine, said, ''I'm just here to stand up against this sort of thing. I'm ashamed to be white when I see white people running around doing this sort of thing.''

A few people in the crowd began to throw mudballs at the Klansmen as police kept the two groups apart. When a Klansman was hit in the face and several others splattered with mud, they began to file towards their cars, and the gathering ended.

At a press conference after the rally, Millville mayor James Parent quoted slain civil rights leader Dr. Martin Luther King, and said, ''We shall overcome,'' then added, ''The city of Millville shall overcome today.''

There were six arrests during the generally peaceful rally, police said

(APRIL 7) UPI - John Poindexter is convicted on Iran-Contra charges... A ferry fire off Norway kills 75 and leaves 70 missing... A search is under way in Miami Beach for victims of a hotel fire... And the countdown has started for Discovery's blastoff... U-P-I has these top stories and more, next.

Former national security adviser John Poindexter refused to talk to reporters today as he left the federal courthouse in Washington, D-C. That was about one hour after a jury found Poindexter guilty of all five charges against him from the Iran-Contra scandal.

U-S District Judge Harold Greene set sentencing for June 11th for Poindexter, who faces a maximum of 25 years in prison and one-Million 250-thousand dollars in fines.

Chief Prosecutor Dan Webb declined to say whether he would seek a jail term for Poindexter, who opted for the risky route of NOT taking the stand in his own defense. The defense contended that Poindexter's testimony was NOT needed because the prosecution failed to prove its case.

The lead defense attorney, Richard Beckler, told reporters he would appeal the case and said- quoting now- ''Well, we're naturally disappointed.''

Poindexter showed NO emotion as he heard 25-year-old jury foreman Wayne Mitchell say ''Guilty'' to each of the five counts against him, including conspiracy to obstruct a congressional investigation.

Poindexter is the highest-ranking official of the Reagan administration to be convicted by a jury in the Iran-Contra affair.

The former president was called to testify for the trial, giving his testimony via videotape in an empty courtroom in Los Angeles.

Reagan was Poindexter's star witness, but appeared befuddled and said more than 120 times that he could NOT remember details of the worst scandal of his presidency.

Poindexter's wife Linda, an Episcopal priest, tightly twisted her hands in her lap and appeared upset as the verdict was pronounced.

(APRIL 7) UPI - Danish naval authorities say an apparent arson fire aboard a ferry running from Norway to Denmark today killed at least 75 people and left about 70 others missing.

About 330 people were rescued from lifeboats and the cold sea.

A spokesman for Denmark's Naval Rescue Service said there were two fires on board. The first was put out but the second took hold 15 minutes later on another deck and was more serious.

The spokesman said the captain called the fires a deliberate act of arson.

Police in Denmark, Sweden, and Norway are questioning passengers and crew as they come ashore.

The 10-thousand-ton ''Scandinavian Star'' was loaded with Easter vacationers, mostly elderly pensioners. It was en route from Oslo, Norway, to Denmark's northern port of Frederikshavn.

20 passengers were treated for smoke poisoning and shock.

The fire is under control but still burning as the ferry is towed to Sweden.

Workers in Miami Beach, Florida, are using a small bulldozer today to search debris for those missing after a fire that gutted a hotel and killed at least three people.

14 people are still unaccounted for after yesterday's fire at the 102-room Fontana Hotel in a historic art deco district in south Miami Beach. Workers will remove concrete blocks and use dogs in search of the missing.

Investigators say there could be many more victims.

Miami Beach firefighters have conflicting lists of tenants and can't say for sure how many people were in the hotel when it burned.

21 people were injured in the fire. Scores of others, mostly elderly residents, jumped through broken windows or fled through a back door to escape.

Residents said the blaze appeared to start near the elevator shaft in front of the hotel. Federal, state and local investigators are searching for the cause of the fire. Authorities have said that the speed at which the fire spread indicates arson.

Officials noted that the 39-year-old hotel did NOT have a sprinkler system.

(APRIL 7) UPI - British authorities today used a tactic of U-S soldiers in trying to force hold-out prisoners in Manchester, England, to end their nearly week-old rebellion.

Authorities blared constant heavy metal music toward the convicts, who have controlled a portion of Strangeways Prison since Sunday.

The strategy is reminiscent of that used by U-S troops attempting to drive former Panamanian dictator Manuel Noriega out of the Papal Embassy in Panama after the U-S invasion in December.

A police helicopter swooped low over the prison and directed its siren and searchlights at about 25 inmates holed up inside the century-old facility.

Officers in riot gear thumped truncheons on shields and taunted prisoners with cries of ''beasts...'' jail talk for sex offenders.

But convicts on the roof feigned dance moves to the music. Paul Taylor... their self-declared ringleader... strummed a guitar and used a megaphone to yell back at the guards.

The uprising against overcrowded conditions was the most destructive in Britain's penal history. It left one prisoner dead and at least 60 people wounded. A guard on duty during the riot died of a heart attack.

Most of the prisoners have surrendered.

(APRIL 7) UPI - China today entered the international space delivery market with its first commercial rocket launch.

The gleaming white ''Long March-3'' rocket roared from the pad at the Xichang space center in remote southwest Sichuan Province.

Officials said the Chinese rocket carried into orbit Asiasat-1. The U-S-made payload is the first satellite to be returned to space after being taken from orbit and repaired.

The satellite is owned by a group of British, Hong Kong and Chinese companies that plans to sell television and telecommunications relay services in Asia.

U-S officials were at the launch site to ensure against Chinese snooping into the satellite's sophisticated technology.

The export license for the satellite was held up last spring following China's violent crackdown on the pro-democracy movement. But President Bush approved the license in December, citing U-S commercial concerns.

The five enthusiastic crew members of the shuttle Discovery are at Cape Canaveral, and the countdown is under way for the 8:47 a-m, E-D-T, Tuesday launch of the 35th shuttle flight.

The Discovery crew is charged with launching the one-BILLION 500-Million-dollar Hubble Space Telescope... the most expensive satellite ever built. The telescope could give astronomers a glimpse of the birth of the Universe 15-BILLION years ago.

The five veteran crew members arrived at the Cape about an hour before the formal start of the countdown.

(APRIL 7) UPI - Lawyers for John Poindexter say they will appeal his conviction today on all five felony charges arising from the Iran-Contra scandal. The former national security adviser sat motionless today when the jury foreman read the guilty verdicts. Poindexter could get up to 25 years in prison and be fined more than one-Million dollars when he is sentenced on June 11th.

Authorities say the death toll may rise ''considerably'' in this morning's ferry disaster off Norway. At least 75 people are confirmed dead... at least 70 others are reported missing. Authorities say they won't know the final death toll until the fire aboard the ''Scandinavian Star'' has been put out. The ferry was headed to Denmark from Norway when disaster struck.

The president's office at Wesleyan University in Middletown, Connecticut, was firebombed early today. Officials said two men ran from the building at about 4 a-m after beer bottles filled with flammable liquid were hurled inside the office. The prestigious private school is offering a 10-thousand-dollar reward for help in getting a conviction in the arson.

Teen-age AIDS victim Ryan White remains in critical but stable condition today at an Indianapolis hospital. Thousands of people are calling a toll-free hot-line to check his condition. White gained media attention after going to court to win his right to go to school. People attending the nearby Farm Aid concert prayed for White.

Finance ministers and top bankers from the world's seven richest countries today indicated that they will fight what they call the ''undesirable consequences'' of the Japanese yen's recent decline. The Group of Seven concluded their meeting in Paris. They suggested that central banks could intervene in foreign exchange markets to shore up the yen.

(APRIL 7) UPI - Radical members of the Latvian Communist Party walked out of a party congress today in the capital of Riga. The move forced suspension of the session, and dimmed any Soviet hopes that Latvia might withstand the drive for independence that has swept its Baltic neighbors. In Lithuania, up to 300-thousand people from across the Soviet Union rallied in support of the Lithuanian declaration of independence.

Singer Willie Nelson opened the fourth annual Farmaid concert at the Hoosier Dome in Indianapolis today. About 45-thousand fans packed the Hoosier Dome for the 13-hour concert that features 72 acts and is being broadcast nationally. Most of the acts played five-minute sets, interjecting messages about the plight of the family farmer. Organizers hope the benefit concert will raise at least one-point-three-Million dollars for the nation's family farmers and for federal agricultural programs.

(APRIL 7) UPI - Former national security adviser John Poindexter showed NO emotion today as a jury in Washington, D-C, found him guilty on all five felony charges stemming from his role in the Iran-Contra affair. After deliberating for six days, the jury found Poindexter guilty of trying to obstruct the congresssional probe of the scandal. He was also found guilty of destroying government documents. Poindexter's lawyer says he'll appeal the verdict.

Rescue workers found a fourth body today amid the rubble of yesterday's deadly fire at a Miami Beach hotel. A special agent in charge of the Florida office of the U-S Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms says arson may be the cause of the fire at the Fontana Hotel. Authorities say many of the hotel's residents barely had time to flee with only their bed clothes.

A ferry sailing from Norway to Denmark caught fire today, killing at least 74 people. Many people still are missing, and officials say the death toll may rise dramatically. The ferry captain told rescue workers the fire was deliberately set. Denmark's Sailors' Union said it has reports indicating failed communication between Filipino and Portugese crew members impeded attempts to put out the fire.

Israel today saw its largest demonstration since 1982. Tens of thousands of Israelis filled a Tel Aviv square in favor of direct election of the prime minister and Parliament. The protesters carried Israeli flags and signs reading- ''We are fed up.'' They are upset about the breakup of the government coalition in a dispute over the Palestinian peace process. 20 Israelis seeking electoral reform agreed to end a hunger strike outside Parliament.

(APRIL 7) UPI - John Poindexter is found guilty on all counts... at least 74 people die in a fire aboard a ferry in the North Sea near Denmark... and the countdown begins for the shuttle Discovery's blastoff next Tuesday. Those and other stories, next, from U-P-I.

John Poindexter showed NO reaction today as a jury in Washngton, D-C, found him guilty of all five felony charges against him in the Iran-Contra scandal.

The jury deliberated for six days before reaching their verdict. They found the former White House aide guilty of destroying government documents and conspiracy to obstruct the congressional probe of the scandal.

Poindexter's legal team took the risky strategy of NOT having Poindexter testify. The retired Navy rear admiral refused to talk to reporters following the verdict.

Defense lawyer Richard Beckler promised to appeal.

Poindexter faces a possible maximum sentence of 25 years in prison and fines of more than one-Million dollars when he is sentenced June 11th.

Chief prosecutor Dan Webb said Poindexter committed his crimes to- quote- ''protect the political viability of Ronald Reagan.''

(APRIL 7) UPI - The captain of a ferry boat that caught fire today en route from Norway to Denmark says he thinks someone set the fire that killed at least 74 people.

Captain Hugo Larsen told rescue officers the deadly fire sprang up just after the crew had put out another fire on a lower deck.

Many passengers are unaccounted for, and officials fear the death toll could rise to some 200. A Swedish police spokesman said ''there are dead people all over the ship.''

The Danish-operated Scandinavian Star has been towed back to port but is still burning. Police say 275 people have been rescued, but anyone still on board is presumed dead.

A spokesman for Denmark's Sailors' Union said he has reports the Filipino and Portugese crew members could NOT understand each other and did NOT seem trained for such an emergency.

The spokesman added that he has heard that safety devices on board did NOT appear to work.

The charred ruins of the Fontana Hotel in Miami Beach, Florida, yielded another victim today. Investigators say a fourth body was found in the rubble, which they say may contain many more victims.

At last count there were 21 injured and 14 missing.

The 39-year-old hotel was destroyed yesterday in a quick-spreading fire that left many of its elderly residents able to flee with only the clothes on their backs. The building did NOT have a sprinkler system.

Authorities say the speed with which the fire spread indicates arson may have been the cause.

But building design specialist Will Rollins says the hotel was built in a way that would make it burn quickly. He said the wood construction made for- quoting now- ''an ideal situation for a fire.'' He added- ''It's designed like a barbecue pit.''

U-S Attorney Dexter Lehtinen says federal and local authorities will investigate.

On board Discovery is the revolutionary one-point-five-BILLION-dollar Hubble Space Telescope.

It's the most expensive satellite ever built, and is expected to revolutionize modern astronomy from its vantage point high above Earth's atmosphere.

The space telescope will see objects with 10 times greater clarity than ground-based instruments. Astronomers expect to search for planets around other stars and to look for signs of galactic evolution shortly after the birth of the universe some 15-BILLION years ago.

Discovery's intricate countdown began on time today and... if all goes well... it will blast off Tuesday morning. It's NASA'S 35th shuttle flight and the third of nine planned for 1990.

China today launched a rocket carrying a U-S-made satellite, and with it the nation's hopes of becoming competitive in commercial space missions.

China's first commercial rocket roared off the pad from a remote southwest province. It carried Asiasat-1, which separated and made it to its initial orbit.

Its owners- from Britain, Hong Kong and China- plan to sell television and telecommunications relay services in Asia.

The launch was broadcast across China on government television.

The satellite was originally put into space by a U-S shuttle in 1984. It later malfunctioned and was plucked from orbit by a later shuttle mission for repairs.

The commercial launch market has so far been dominated by the United States and the European Ariane program.

The seven nations issued an unusually short and vague statement at the end of the one-day session. Analysts think that means there are serious disagreements among the members on the yen and other issues.

U-S Treasury Secretary Brady minimized the importance of the yen's fall, noting it's at about the same level it was in 1989 and 1987.

INDIANAPOLIS (APRIL 9) BUSINESS WIRE - Hudson Institute and Eli Lilly and Co. announced Sunday that Mitchell E. Daniels Jr., will resign as president and chief executive officer at Hudson to become vice president, corporate affairs, at Lilly.

The move is scheduled for early autumn. Daniels will also resign his position at the Indianapolis law firm of Baker and Daniels where he is ''of counsel.''

Commenting on the announcement, Lilly Board Chairman Richard D. Wood said, ''Mitch Daniels' impressive credentials, his intellectual stature, and his breadth of experience as a policy maker make him an ideal choice for our management team. As our nation enters an era in which health care issues are likely to dominate the public agenda, Mitch can play a vital role in a company dedicated to the life sciences.''

The chairman of the Hudson's board of trustees, Walter P. Stern, was laudatory of Daniels' tenure as Hudson's CEO. ''Mitch's leadership at Hudson is truly a bright spot in the Institute's 30-year life. Herman Kahn (Hudson's founder and leader until his death in 1983) would be proud of how he moved Hudson to the cutting edge of key national issues.

Daniels termed his move to Lilly as unexpected and said that his tenure at Hudson has been rewarding. ''It has been a great privilege to serve at the helm of one of the nation's major think tanks and to have helped focus the national spotlight on Indianapolis,'' said Daniels. ''The Institute's future couldn't be brighter, and I look forward to remaining involved in its activities.'' Hudson achievements since 1987 include:

-- publication of two landmark policy books, Winning the Brain Race and Workforce 2000;

-- initiating ''Project Hungary,'' designed to create a plan for Hungary's transition to a free-market economy;

-- completion of a major project on the AIDS epidemic;

-- starting Hudson's Global Food Center;

-- and the recruitment of new research staff, including former presidential science advisor George A. Keyworth, former National Security Agency head William Odom, author George Gilder, Ambassador Bruce Chapman, and noted economist Alan Reynolds.

BEIRUT (APRIL 8) - Rival Christian factions observed a truce for Palm Sunday in their two-month-old battle for power after an appeal from the Maronite Christian patriarch.

It was the second day in a row that the Lebanese Forces (LF) militia and army troops loyal to General Michel Aoun laid down their arms, after an appeal from Patriarch Nasrallah Sfeir for calm during the coming Easter week.

But on the political front, Gen. Aoun stepped up a verbal campaign against the LF and dismissed a warning of excommunication from the religious leader of the largest Christian community in Lebanon.

"No coexistence is possible between the army and a militia," the army's radio quoted the commander of 15,000 mainly Christian troops as saying.

At least 920 people have been killed and 2,534 wounded in a battle that erupted January 31 in Christian areas to the east and north of Beirut after a call from Gen. Aoun for the militia to disband.

On warnings from Monsignor Sfeir that he would ex-communicate fighters unless they stopped the bloodshed, Gen. Aoun said "the patriarch has no authority over me...because I don't hold my power and authority from the Church."

Gen. Aoun also dismissed a call last Wednesday by LF leader Samir Geagea for President Elias Hrawi to take over army barracks in Christian areas controlled by the militia.

"This would be a serious mistake and an alliance that must be avoided," the general said, despite earlier reports from a source close to Gen. Aoun that he would not object to such a deployment.

The president said Thursday he would intervene in a bid to end the Christian battle by appointing new commanders to oversee the reorganization of barracks in Christian areas.

But the move was unlikely to lead to an intervention on the ground by army brigades loyal to the president, according to political sources here.

Gen. Aoun commands five separate brigades and insists that he heads an interim administration. He refuses to recognize the authority of President Hrawi, who was elected last November under an Arab peace plan for Lebanon.

BANGKOK (APRIL 8) - Laos has denied U.S. allegations of involvement by senior Vientiane communist officials in drug trafficking and said that the accusation hampered efforts to improve bilateral relations.

Official Radio Vientiane said in a broadcast monitored here Sunday that the United States "suspects that Lao high-level cadres and military officers are involved in the export of narcotics."

"This groundless suspicion on the part of the United States is an obstacle to the improvement of relations between the two countries," it said.

Laos, the only country in Vietnam-led Indochina to have relations with Washington since the 1975 overthrow by communist troops of U.S.-backed regimes in South Vietnam and Cambodia, passed an anti-drug cooperation agreement with the United States earlier this year.

The Radio Vientiane broadcast was an apparent reference to a statement last month that by Melvyn Levitsky, U.S. assistant secretary of state for international narcotics matters, who expressed concern that opium production had been increasing in Laos.

Mr. Levitsky said Washington was continuing "to receive reports that Lao military and civilian officials are involved in the drug trade."

"It is difficult to balance corruption and ongoing tafficking activities on the one hand, with beginnings of cooperation on the other," he said.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 8) - The U.S. Congress has withheld part of its 1989

dues to the United Nations, saying the funds must be spent instead on emergency hurricane and earthquake costs.

The House of Representatives voted last week to pay 486 million dollars for 1989 U.N. dues, although President George Bush had requested 715 million.

Members of Congress indicated they couldn't meet the cost of emergency relief for the California earthquake and Hurricane Hugo and pay the U.N. dues too without breaking the budget.

The New York Times said senior aides to U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar were urging him to telephone Bush and ask him to pressure Congress into reversing the decision.

Bush had asked Congress for a record 1.4 billion dollars, which would have covered U.S. arrears over the past five years and the full 1989 and 1990 assessment.

U.N. officials said the organisation can continue functioning because countries like Canada and the Scandinavian states had paid their 1990 assessments early. But they predicted a cash crisis by June unless Washington paid its 1989 dues in full.

WARSAW (APRIL 8) - Poland has requested compensation from Moscow for forced labour done by Poles deported to the Soviet Union during World War

II, the Polish news agency PAP reported Sunday.

Quoting Justice Minister Alexander Bentkowski, it said the Polish government is asking for a sum of the order of 4.5 billion roubles (six billion dollars) for forced labour done by nearly two million Poles deported to Siberia and the Central Asian republic of Kazakhstan.

The deportations occurred in 1940-41 after the Red Army invaded Poland under the Molotov-Ribbentrop pact and in the period 1944-48 when Soviet troops occupied Polish territory evacuated by the German army.

A large number of the deportees died of hunger, cold or exhaustion in Stalin's work camps.

Some of them went over to the army of General Wladyslaw Anders in 1942 to fight alongside the Allies. Only a handful returned to Poland, where they have recently set up an association of former deportees.

PAP said Mr. Bentkowski made the announcement of the compensation demand Saturday at a mass celebrated at Rzeszow in the southeast of the country to mark the 50th anniversary of the deportation of 350,000 people from the region in one go.

The minister, who did not say when the demand was lodged, said that the Soviet Union "has not rejected it, nor has it yet replied".

Millions of other Poles have been demanding similar compensation -- so far in vain -- from West Germany for forced labour done for the Nazis.

LONDON (APRIL 8) - Argentine Foreign Minister Domingo Cavallo arrived here Sunday on the first visit to Britain by an Argentine minister since diplomatic relations were restored in February eight years after the Falklands War.

Mr. Cavallo will have talks on Monday with Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd, a Foreign Office spokesman said, and is also due to attend the inaugural session Monday of a U.N. sponsored world conference on drugs.

Mr. Cavallo will have lunch at the Queen Elizabether Centre, where the conference is being held, in the company of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, Argentine sources said.

In the afternoon, he will fly to Dublin in the Irish Republic for a meeting of European Economic Community and Latin American foreign ministers.

On his arrival at Heathrow, Mr. Cavallo said that in his talks with Mr. Hurd, he would be discussing only bilateral issues such as visas, investments and fishing. The thorny issue of sovereignty over the Falklands Islands "is not on the agenda right now", he said.

BOGOTA (APRIL 8) - Soldiers Sunday took control of two towns that guerrillas had stormed in a blaze of gunfire, robbing stores, taking hostages and sparking gunbattles with police that left 17 people dead, 13 of them rebels, officials said.

A 200-strong joint force from two of Colombia's main leftist rebel groups -- the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia and the National Liberation Army -- attacked San Francisco and Sibundoy Saturday, the Defense Ministry said.

The guerrillas stole clothing, medicine and an undisclosed amount of money from two banks before fighting a seven-hour gunbattle with police, said officials in southern Narino province where the towns are located.

Police said their headquarters in both villages were severely damaged by rockets and fragmentation grenades in the rebel attack.

Three policemen and a police captain were also reported killed in the fighting.

Fleeing rebels abducted four policemen, a doctor and a member of the civil guard, officials said. Four other policemen were reported missing.

The guerrillas destroyed two electricity pylons and cut telephone lines.

Officials in both towns imposed a curfew and banned liquor sales Sunday.

Sibundoy has a population of about 7,000 people; San Francisco, 4,000.

ISLAMABAD (APRIL 8) - Leader of the ethnic Mohajir Qaumi Movement (Mqm), Altaf Hussein, Sunday evening went on a hunger strike after the deadline he set Saturday for the arrest of the murderers of his party workers passed.

Hussein had also demanded release of Mqm workers in connection with a recent wave of violence that began February 7 leaving more than 60 people dead.

In a late night press conference Saturday, the charismatic Mqm leader warned that his followers would hold Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto's government responsible in case he died.

According to political observers, the new move by the leader of the ethnic group which controls almost half of Karachi and the neighbouring city of Hyderabad could turn out to be real test for the 15-month-old Bhutto government.

Karachi in the meanwhile was reported calm but tense following two days of sporadic shooting and factional fighting between the student wing of the ruling Ppp and the Mqm which claimed at least 12 lives.

MOSCOW (APRIL 8) - Moscow loyalists within the Latvian communist party, whose congress ended in disarray late Saturday after a clash between pro- and anti-independence factions, have elected a new leadership, Soviet television reported Sunday.

Latvian party leader Janis Vagris, who had tried to follow a middle line between those wanting a party independent of Moscow and those favouring the continuation of ties with the Soviet communist party, was replaced by Alfred Rubiks, a former Riga mayor and conservative hardliner.

His election, along with that of a new central committee, took place late Saturday behind closed doors after 287 of the 792 delegates had staged a walk out.

The minority, which favours following Latvia's two sister-republics, Lithuania and Estonia, down the path leading to independence from the Soviet Union, will hold its own separate congress on April 14.

PARIS (APRIL 8) - A French anti-apartheid group on Sunday condemned South African President Frederik de Klerk's planned visit here and called on French citizens to protest massively to President Francois Mitterrand.

The visit, scheduled to include a meeting with Mr. Mitterrand on May 10, supports "attempts to save interests of the white minority" in South Africa, said a statement by the organization Rencontre Nationale Contre l'Apartheid.

Rencontre urged "all democrats" to sign a petition "massively" demanding the French government impose "full and compulsory sanctions" against Pretoria. It appealed to the public to "demonstrate their indignation" on the day of Mr. De Klerk's arrival.

Rencontre charged that Mr. De Klerk had done nothing to "permanently dismantle apartheid", despite the release of African nationalist leader Nelson Mandela and the legalisation of his anti-apartheid African National Congress.

MOSCOW (APRIL 8) - About 10,000 people rallied in Leningrad Sunday to commemorate the brutal crushing of a protest in Georgia a year ago and to demand that troops be kept out of civilian conflicts, a witness said.

The rally came as Georgians prepared a massive peaceful demonstration in the republic's capital, Tbilisi. Twenty people, 16 of them women, were killed when troops broke up a nationalist rally there on the night of April 8-9 last year.

The Leningrad protesters passed their resolution "so that Tbilisi is not repeated in Lithuania", said Boris Rovda, a Soviet journalist at the rally.

Moscow has been waging a war of nerves with Lithuania since the Baltic republic declared independence on March 11. Soviet troops there have made their presence felt, but there have been no clashes with local people.

Leningrad demonstrators waved banners which read "yes to Lithuanian independence, no to the diktats of the president emperor" and "Thieves in the Kremlin, tanks in Lithuania". The rally was reported on Soviet television.

The protest, organised by several pro-democracy groups, had been authorised by city officials, after an appeal from local elected representatives -- most of whom are strong supporters of reform.

The resolution also contained an appeal to the Nobel Committee not to consider Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev for the Nobel Peace Prize.

A highlight of the rally was an address by an examining magistrate and MP, Nikolai Ivanov, who accused what he called "the Kremlin mafia" of doing nothing expcept defend their own personal interests.

Without mentioning Mr. Gorbachev by name, Mr. Ivanov warned that the Soviet leadership "should not forget what happened in Romania", when the hardline communist leadership was toppled last December by a popular uprising.

Mr. Ivanov, a member of the Congress of People's Deputies, the country's extended parliament, called for "meetings and strikes, which is the only way to accelerate the democratic process, while keeping pressure on parliament.

"We are millions and they are only a handful" he said to rousing applause.

SEBOKENG, South Africa (APRIL 8) - Some 50,000 people marched Sunday to the cemetery in this township near Johannesburg to bury victims of police violence which effectively derailed talks between Pretoria and the African National Congresslast month.

Between nine and 15 people died when police opened fire on some 50,000 people trying to march from Sebokeng to the nearby town of Vereeniging on March 26. They were protesting against high rents and poor schooling.

Police said five were killed, while community sources and the Sowetan newspaper put the toll at 15.

Relatives of four of the victims buried Sunday sobbed as coffins draped with ANC flags were lowered into the ground, while the crowd broke into song.

Marshalls had to restrain restless mourners, who waited at the graveside in pouring rain for over an hour before the hearses arrived, as they pushed and shoved forward, trying to get a glimpse of the coffins.

An AFP reporter saw several people being treated by medics after being crushed in the fracas.

SIDON (APRIL 8) - Three people were reported killed in southern Lebanon Sunday in clashes between anti-Israeli fighters and the Israeli-backed South Lebanon Army (SLA), police and SLA sources said.

One of the dead was a Lebanese civilian, who died when the SLA shelled the village of Zaoutar ach-Sharquiye, located just outside the Israeli-imposed "security zone" in southern Lebanon, police said.

They said six civilians were wounded in the shelliing, which followed an attack by anti-Israeli militants against an SLA patrol inside the zone.

The automatic weapons and rocket attack was later claimed by the pro-Syrian movement Amal in a communique released in Beirut.

In another incident Sunday, according to SLA sources in Israel, an SLA militiaman and an anti-Israel combatant were killed in an exchange of fire near the village of Al-Man in the central sector of the security zone.

MEXICO CITY (APRIL 8) EFE - One prisoner was killed and five people, three of them police officers, were seriously injured during a riot at a jail in northwestern Mexico, the Notimex news agency reported.

Citing local police, Notimex said the riot broke out Saturday at +La Mesa+ jail in Baja California when federal agents raided the penitentiary searching for drugs and weapons.

Inmates responded by lobbing bottles and other objects at the police agents, sparking the mutiny among fellow prisoners.

Some 300 officers were rushed to the jail to put down the riot. Notimex said one prisoner was killed, two were seriously injured and three police officers hurt in the ensuing battle.

La Mesa has a capacity to house around 400 inmates but is currently packed with 1,200, the news agency reported.

SANTIAGO (APRIL 8) EFE - Two unidentified gunmen have attacked the home of a former foreign minister of ex Chilean military dictator Augusto Pinochet, causing damage but no injuries, police said Sunday.

The attack occurred Saturday when two gunmen opened fire on the residence of Pinochet's last foreign minister, Hernan Felipe Errazuriz, located in a residential neighborhood east of Santiago.

A police officer guarding Errazuriz's home returned fire and in the ensuing shootout several of the house's windows and a car belonging to the ex-minister were damaged.

The gunmen fled from the area with a third accomplice, according to press reports.

No group has claimed responsibility for the attack.

Chile's main rebel group, the leftist Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front, recently pledged to continue its armed struggle despite the country's return to democracy.

In 1986, the group carried out a failed assassination attempt against Pinochet, killing five of his bodyguards, and have said they still consider the dictator a target.

Pinochet handed over power last month to democractically-elected President Patricio Aylwin, ending 16 years of tough military rule.

NEW YORK (APRIL 8) UPI - John Ogrodnick scored a pair of goals and rookie goaltender Mike Richter had another spectacular game to lead the New York Rangers to a 5-2 victory over the New York Islanders and take a 2-0 lead in their Stanley Cup preliminary series.

Ogrodnick's second of the game, at 13:01 of the second period, gave the Rangers a 4-2 lead. Kelly Kisio won a faceoff in the Islanders end and passed to Ogrodnick in front, where he beat Islanders goaltender Mark Fitzpatrick from point blank range.

Fitzpatrick drew a five-minute major penalty and a game misconduct for butt-ending Troy Mallette 34 seconds later and was ejected from the game. Brian Trottier was assessed a minor penalty at the same time, giving the Rangers a two-man advantage.

Glenn Healy came in to play goal for the Islanders and stopped the Rangers on the two-man advantage, but Bernie Nicholls scored from five feet out at 17:33 to push the lead to 5-2.

Richter was at his best early in the game when the Islanders attacked the Rangers net with fury, looking to avenge the loss of star center Pat LaFontaine in Game 1. The Islanders outshot the Rangers 14-8 in the first period, but Richter kept them off the board.

The Rangers took a 1-0 lead on a power-play goal by Ogrodnick at 11:28 of the first period.

James Patrick sent a cross-ice pass to Darren Turcotte at the right point. Turcotte one-timed a shot that Ogrodnick, standing directly in front of Fitzpatrick, managed to deflect in.

It was the first playoff power-play goal by the Rangers in nine attempts.

David Volek tied the score 1-1 at 6:49 of the second period. Brent Sutter took a slap shot from the right point, and Richter kicked the rebound out to the left faceoff circle, where Jeff Finley unloaded another shot. Richter got a piece of it but the rebound fell behind him, and Volek poked it into the net.

The Rangers went ahead 2-1 at 9:24 when Miloslav Horava sent a cross-ice pass to Randy Moller at the right point and Mark Janssens redirected the puck past Fitzpatrick while being checked in front.

Tom Fitzgerald tied the score 2-2 at 10:32. Brad Lauer took a slap shot from outside the blue line. The puck deflected off Rangers defenseman James Patrick's leg and took a crazy bounce that nearly fooled Richter, who made the stop but couldn't control the rebound. Fitzgerald beat Patrick to the puck and put it past Richter.

James Patrick gave the Rangers a 3-2 lead with a power-play goal at 11:35 of the second. Patrick took a low, rising shot through a screen while skating backward across the blue line and put the puck in the low right corner.

Richter rose to the occassion in the third period to protect the 5-2 lead, stopping the Islanders on a major power play early in the period, making a pad save on a Randy Wood breakaway and finally stopping the Islanders on a six on three advantage in the closing minutes.

KALAPANA, Hawaii (APRIL 8) UPI - Kilauea Volcano ended a three-day break and roared back to life Saturday, just one day after beleaguered residents of the Kalapana Gardens subdivision on the island of Hawaii were allowed back into their homes, officials said.

Kilauea was once again pumping out 500,000 cubic yards of lava a day, officials at the Hawaiian Volcano Observatory said.

A Civil Defense helicopter check of the volcano side above the remote housing area, which lost two homes to searing lava last week, showed eight fingers of molten rock, Civil Defense spokesman Lannie Nakano said.

''The outbreaks start at the 1,800-foot elevation and extends down to the 400-foot elevation. The lowest flow has reached the 200-foot level and is about one mile from Highway 130,'' said Nakano.

About three dozen residents of the 83-home housing area on the southeast coast of the island of Hawaii, 200 miles from Honolulu, were allowed back into their homes Friday after the volcano had showed no sign of activity for 24 hours.

They had been ordered out earlier in the week and on Wednesday the molten rock sent two homes up in flames within a five-hour period. Those were the 76th and 77th homes consumed since the eruption began in 1983.

The lowest flow is following the same path taken by the flow that wandered through Kalapana Gardens, Nakano said. One other lower-elevation flows is burning a new path through scrub and brush, he said.

There was no threat to any inhabited structures Saturday afternoon but Civil Defense officials warned area residents that a threat could develop, depending on the action of the volcano, and urged them to be ready should it become necessary to issue an alert.

Such an alert would mean that lava could pose a threat to occupied property within 72 hours.

EAST RUTHERFORD, NJ (APRIL 8) UPI - The whole hockey world knew why the New Jersey Devils got Peter Stastny: for power-play help, postseason experience and playmaking.

In evening their Stanley Cup playoff series at one game apiece with a 6-5 triumph over the Washington Capitals Saturday night, they showed why they have Eric Weinrich and Jon Morris.

Weinrich broke a third-period tie with his first NHL playoff goal - before Stastny added the winner - on one of two set-ups by fellow minor-league call-up Morris.

Weinrich broke a 4-4 tie at 13:12 of the third period and Stastny followed 3:43 later, with his second goal of the series.

''It was the biggest goal of my life,'' said Weinrich, a defenseman, who came up from the Utica farm team Feb. 17. ''I realized I had to come back down to earth because there was a lot of time left but I have never been that excited.''

John MacLean scored two power-play goals before the Devils blew a three-goal lead and rookie goaltender Chris Terreri survived his first career playoff start with 21 saves for the victory.

Games 3 and 4 of the best-of-seven Patrick Division semifinal will be Monday and Wednesday at Landover, Md.

Terreri made his first NHL playoff start after Sean Burke's unimpressive opener. He responded with 10 saves and his teammates with three goals in his first period.

''I didn't really feel pressured early but later I got nervous when they kept coming back and they kept coming,'' Terreri said. ''Dino Ciccarelli is very, very dangerous. He can really put the puck on the net.''

Ciccarelli scored his second goal of the game and fifth of the playoffs with 66 seconds remaining and goaltender Don Beaupre pulled for a sixth attacker to make it 6-5. The goal was Washington's third in the period.

That turned Stastny's wraparound stuff at 16:55 into the winning goal. He also had set up one of MacLean's goals.

''Peter Stastny is a dangerous hockey player,'' Washington sparkplug Dale Hunter said. ''He really helps them.''

Stastny's goal almost wasn't enough. The game ended during a wild scramble in front of Terreri but the Capitals never got off a shot.

''At the end, I almost had a heart attack ... and I'm still young,'' Stastny said. ''I knew it was near the end of the game but I had no time to look at the clock.''

The Capitals, who trailed 3-0 after one period, outscored the Devils 2-1 in the second period and 3-2 in the third. They scored the first two goals of the third period to tie the score 4-4 midway through the session.

Weinrich then ripped a 40-foot slap shot after Morris sent him a passout from the corner to the point.

Bob Joyce had tied the score 4-4 at 9:15 of the third period, with his first goal of the playoffs. He was credited with an unassisted goal after Devils defenseman Randy Velischek made a bad centering pass from the boards, right to Joyce.

Kelly Miller's first series goal had drawn the Capitals within 4-3 when, for the second straight period, Washington scored at the 66-second point.

Beaupre, who replaced Mike Liut after one period, made 29 saves. The Capitals were outshot 17-6 in the decisive third period.

Liut had given up the three first-period goal on 13 shots.

Morris, who came up March 2, collected his first postseason point by setting up Brendan Shanahan's opening goal.

MacLean scored his second and third postseason goals at 14:58 and 18:26.

His first of the game was set up by Stastny, whose arrival at the trading deadline immediately turned the Devils' power play into a dangerous threat.

MacLean scored again 3:28 later, a deflection off Washington defenseman Scott Stevens' skate.

The Capitals substituted Beaupre in goal for the second period and immediately cut the deficit to 3-1. Ciccarelli, who had a hat trick in the opener, scored through Terreri's legs at 1:06.

The Devils came back with an unlikely goal 2:31 later. Defenseman Ken Daneyko - who set a career high with six goals all season - batted down the puck out of air in his zone and turning on little-used jets for a breakaway, put the puck between Beaupre's legs for an unassisted goal at 3:37.

Washington too responded quickly with a goal from low-scoring defenseman Bob Rouse during a power play at 6:20.

Terreri had gone 0-2 against the Capitals this season. Beaupre had won all his three starts against New Jersey.

Although the game was not violent, the teams managed 108 penalty minutes, after combining for 133 in the opener. The same teams set two NHL penalty records in their 1988 second-round series.

NEW HAVEN, CT (APRIL 8) UPI - Motley Crue drummer Tommy Lee was injured Saturday night when he fell onto the stage from his overhead drum platform authorities said.

The heavy metal band was performing at New Haven Coliseum when Lee fell at about 10:45 p.m. Lee, 26, plays a portion of the show using a caged drum kit that is elevated above the stage.

''He is alert, awake and in stable condition. He will stay overnight for observation but looks like he is doing fine,'' said Tom Urtz, spokesman for Yale-New Haven Hospital.

Lee, the husband of actress Heather Locklear, hit the stage feet-first when he fell, Urtz said.

It was not known how the accident would affect the band's schedule. Motley Crue road manager Rich Fisher said the band's next concert was scheduled Tuesday in Binghamton, N.Y.

NEW YORK (APRIL 8) UPI - The Soviet Union has rejected a secret U.S. proposal to ban land-based missiles with multiple warheads, saying any such ban should include missiles based at sea, a published report said Sunday.

The New York Times quoting unnamed administration officials said Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev responded to the proposal in a letter delivered to President Bush on Friday by Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze.

A White House spokesman refused to comment on the exchange, which in contrast to other elements of the arms talks, was only known by a small number of administration officials, the newspaper said.

''We do not comment on confidential negotiations,'' said Roman Popadikuk, a White House spokesman.

The informal American proposal was presented as a two step plan, the first part of which would ban mobile land-based missiles with more than one warhead.

That part could be included in the arms treaty being negotiated for signing this year and would prevent the United States from deploying 10-warhead MX missiles on rail cars. It would force the Soviets to shift their 10-warhead SS-24 missiles from railroad launchers to stationary silos.

The second step would eventually eliminate all multiple warhead missiles based on land.

Gorbachev was more interested in the second step than the first, administration officials said, but objected that the proposal did not also cover sea-based missiles.

The Soviet Union has long based most of its missiles on land while the United States put its missiles out to sea and the Soviets have expressed concern about an American plan to deploy new highly accurate multiple warhead missiles on submarines.

The Unites States has rejected Soviet proposals to cut its submarine missiles.

Secretary of State James Baker on Friday refused to discuss the proposal and administration officials said Soviets appeared to leave an opening for further discussion of the issue.

''There are some things we just don't comment on, and particularly if there's some chance that they are under consideration as a part of our negotiations,'' Baker said.

The Soviet Union's rejection of the proposal could help Pentagon officials who are trying to get Congress to approve funds to put 50 MX missiles on rail cars.

Administration officials also said the Soviet's tougher position could be tied to a reassertion of power by the military while Gorbachev is preoccupied by Lithuania's independence movement.

(APRIL 8) UPI - China sent its first commercial satellite into orbit Saturday following what appeared to be a flawless night-time rocket launch. The launch and deployment of AsiaSat-1 puts China in the profitable commercial space-trucking business. The refurbished U-S-made satellite is owned by a group of British, Hong Kong and Chinese companies.

Washington, D-C, held its traditional Cherry Blossom Parade Saturday despite chilly weather... and even though there were NO pink-and-white cherry blossoms. U-S Park Police say about 30-thousand people took part in the celebration which featured a colorful array of floats and the reigning cherry blossom princesses. The blossoms bloomed earlier this year.

KATMANDU, Nepal (APRIL 8) UPI - Hundreds of soldiers and police enforced a strict curfew in strife-torn Katmandu Sunday and the leader of the pro-democracy movement rejected government calls for a dialogue.

Ganesh Man Singh, an ailing 80-year-old confined to a hospital bed, called the government's offer to discuss reforms hypocritical in light of the dozens of people killed in the six weeks since the movement started.

''No Nepali should be misled by a hypocritical offer of a dialogue in view of what has resulted out of the killings and injuries to hundreds of Nepalese,'' Singh, head of the banned Nepali Congress party, said in a statement.

The curfew was imposed on Katmandu and the nearby town of Patan early Saturday following clashes on Friday between police and demonstrators demanding that King Birendra replace the present party-less panchayat system of government with multi-party democracy. At least 17 people were killed in the violence Friday and more than 100 wounded, hospital sources said.

Three more people in Patan were shot by police Saturday when they were caught violating the curfew.

Authorities also slapped curfews on the towns of Butwal and Bhaktapur Sunday following demonstrations on Saturday.

Two former government ministers called on King Birendra in separate statements Sunday to concede immediately to opposition demands and lift a 29-year ban on political parties.

Ravindra Nath Sharma and Prakash Chandra Lohini said the new government, appointed by Birendra Friday, was not able to stop the movement toward political reform.

''The government of Prime Minister Lokendra Bahadur Chand cannot defuse the present crisis,'' Lohini said. ''The king's move by appointing him is a meaningless manuever.''

In announcing his new government Friday, Birendra promised reforms, including the release of political prisoners, but did not say he would allow a multi-party system.

Authorities relaxed the curfew in Katmandu for two hours at 6 a.m. to allow residents to buy essential goods and many took advantage of the situation to rush to neighborhood markets, where prices for some items had tripled, residents said.

At 9 a.m. the curfew was again relaxed so civil servants, who were issued special passes, could get to work. Sunday is a normal working day in the Hindu kingdom.

Residents were told to remain home but stranded foreigners were allowed in the streets, where evidence of Friday's violence was everywhere.

Stones and broken bricks littered the streets, picture windows were shattered and burned out pushcarts were abandoned along narrow lanes still blackened from bonfires.

Trucks filled with heavily armed soldiers patrolled the downtown and manned checkpoints at major intersections. Police had errected a red and white barbed wire barricades on the streets leading to Birendra's palace in the heart of the capital.

Residents peered warily from windows and rooftops. A few tried to dash across streets but they were stopped by soldiers who ordered them home. The capital were mostly quiet and Hindu and Buddhist temples, usually buzzing with morning worshippers, were closed tight.

Widespread demonstrations and subsequent violence have rocked the kingdom since Feb. 18, when the banned Nepalese Congress and seven factionalized communist parties joined forces to demand that the king, who has been absolute ruler of Nepal since 1972, restore multi-party democracy. At least 46 peole have been killed since then in clashes between protesters and police, official and hospital sources said.

BEIJING (APRIL 8) UPI - China has sent troops into a remote northwest border region near the Soviet Union to quell ethnic unrest among Moslem Uygurs and has closed the nearest major city to foreigners, Chinese sources said Sunday.

There were no accounts of casualties and few details from the border in Xinjiang Province, China's westernmost territory, but the area is adjacent to Soviet Asian republics torn by ethnic violence earlier this year.

''Several hundred Uygurs rioted Friday and troops were sent in to stop the unrest,'' said a source in a government office in Urumqi, the Xinjiang province capital, contacted by telephone from Beijing.

''The riots have not been completely stopped,'' the source said. ''We still don't know the details.''

Another source said the protests occured ''around the border region of Kashgar,'' a fabled city on the old Silk Road route in western Xinjiang near the Soviet border.

It was unclear whether the troops sent in were regulars of the People's Liberation Army or from China's paramilitary force, the People's Armed Police.

Officials of the provincial and Urumqi public security bureaus, contacted by telephone in Urumqi, more than 650 miles east of Kashgar, refused to either confirm or deny the reports. One official said only they ''had no news of unrest.''

But an official at the Urumqi airport told United Press International that Kashgar was closed to all foreign travelers as of Friday.

The riots are believed to be the first large-scale unrest reported since China's crackdown last year on the pro-democracy movement in Beijing. They came after reports by Xinjiang officials of increased ethnic unrest in the region.

During a recent session of China's nominal parliament, Xinjiang Chairman Tomur Dawawat said regional authorities had arrested underground activists and confiscated ''many'' anti-government leaflets. He said some leaflets had been slipped into copies of the Koran, the sacred text of Islam.

Larger than Germany and France combined, Xinjiang is one of China's most worrisome ethnic regions, bordering the restive Soviet central Asian republics.

About 6 million of Xinjiang's 15 million inhabitants are Moslem Uygurs of Turkish descent. The region is also home to Kazakh, Tajik and Uzbek minorities. Its central desert has served as China's nuclear testing ground since the early 1960s.

Since the communist takeover in 1949, native Uygurs have been gradually outnumbered by dominant Han Chinese. But increasing calls for stepped-up alerts along the border indicate China fears that radical separatist sentiment will spill over into the region from the neighboring Soviet republics.

China has blamed ethnic unrest by Moslem Uygurs and Buddhist Tibetans on ''plots with imperialist support'' and called for increased vigilance. Lhasa, the Tibetan capital, has been under martial law for more than a year since Chinese troops fired on pro-independence Tibetans last March.

In his recent statement, Xinjiang chairman Tawawat acknowledged Xinjiang has been influenced by the political changes sweeping eastern Europe and the Soviet Union, but vowed to crack down on separatists, whom he classified as ''counter-revolutionaries.''

''Splitting the motherland is counter-revolution. We will act according to the law and arrest people involved in such crimes, pass sentences on them, but refrain from capital punishment,'' he said.

BUDAPEST, Hungary (APRIL 8) UPI - Hungarians cast ballots Sunday in runoff parliamentary elections expected to lead to the first non-communist government in four decades.

Election officials predicted voter turnout would to be moderate to light, due in part to the drizzly early April weather and a perceived lack of enthusiasm for the second round of the two-stage elections.

The polls opened at 6 a.m. and were expected to close at 6 p.m. in most districts and as late as 8 p.m. in some others. But election officials said final results may not be known until Monday.

Sunday's election is the runoff to the initial round of balloting March 25 the first democratic elections in Hungary since 1945.

Of 386 parliament seats, 157 were filled in the first round, with the remainding 229 to be chosen Sunday.

After the poor first-round performance of the Hungarian Socialist Party, the successor to the communist party, the runoff is shaping up as a contest between the two leading anti-communist parties, the Alliance of Free Democrats and the Hungarian Democratic Forum.

The Forum took a narrow lead in the first round March 25 with 24.71 percent of the vote to 21.38 percent for the Free Democrats. Four other parties, including the Socialists, also received more than the minimum 4 percent showing needed to qualify for seats in the parliament.

The Forum, which describes itself as center-right, and the liberal, urban-based Free Democrats, have continued to campaign heavily against each other despite indications they may be compelled to enter into a coalition to form Hungary's first democratically elected government in four decades.

On the last day of the campaign, the presidents of the two leading parties made their most conciliatory statements yet about a possible coalition between the Democratic Forum and the Free Democrats.

But Forum president Jozef Antall said such a coalition would be ''viable only if it is short term, to address a crisis situation.''

MANILA, Philippines (APRIL 8) UPI - A clandestine group of mutinous military officers claimed responsibility Sunday for the daring rescue of a leader of December's coup attempt, who was sprung from a city jail before dawn while guards drank beer at a party.

President Corazon Aquino ordered a swift investigation into the escape of National Police Lt. Col. Billy Bibit, who was freed by 20 gunmen at about 2:45 a.m. during a birthday party for a deputy warden of the Manila lockup.

''The president is angry,'' said Aquino's spokeswoman, Lourdes Siytangco. ''There is no reason for a drinking session inside the jail.''

Bibit had been one of the leaders of the Dec. 1-9 coup attempt that almost toppled Aquino's government.

In a statement released to news agencies, the underground Young Officer's Union said the bloodless 20-minute escape operation signaled a ''new phase'' of a right-wing rebellion and rebuffed government claims that the mutineers had lost the capability to mount another uprising.

''Indeed, nothing can stop the inevitable. No amount of propaganda can derail the advances of our epic struggle for national liberation,'' said the union, a group of junior officers who joined the December insurrection.

Police said about 20 gunmen, traveling in commandeered taxis, jeeps and a dump truck, swooped down on the city jail adjacent to a police station in downtown Manila at 2:45 a.m. Sunday and freed Bibit and four convicts sharing his cell.

Wearing masks and uniforms, the gunmen fired their weapons in the air and disarmed the 21 jail guards and five officers at the police station, telling them, ''It's better for you not to stand in the way so you would not get hurt,'' jail warden Maj. Cipriano Herrera said.

Police investigator Sgt. Florentino Bagallon said the gunmen struck as workers from a nearby restaurant were delivering cases of beer to a birthday party at the jail for deputy warden Capt. Manuel Roxas. Bagallon said the party began Saturday evening and continued into the early morning hours.

A police source who requested anonymity said the investigators were looking into reports Bibit contributed money for the party.

Officials later announced that Herrera had been fired and that Roxas and four other guards had been arrested.

The escape came hours after the country's 159,000-member military was placed on red alert - the maximum state of preparedness - Saturday against terrorist strikes.

Armed forces chief Gen. Renato de Villa said Saturday that cashiered army Col. Gregorio Honasan, leader of the December uprising in which 119 people were killed and more than 500 wounded, had vowed to rescue some 2,000 detained mutineers.

But de Villa played down the rebels' capability to stage another uprising similar to the December rebellion, the sixth and worst challenge in Aquino's four years as president.

Also on Sunday, police announced Capt. Christopher Mecias, a pilot for Honasan during a coup attempt in August 1987 was captured at 2 a.m. in a suburban subdivision.

As a police commander in the southern city of Cotabato, Bibit, 39, hijacked a Philippine Airlines BAC-112 jet during the 1986 revolution and flew with his men to Manila to help in the rebellion that ousted former dictator Ferdinand Marcos.

Authorities said that in the December coup attempt, Bibit, who by then had retired from the police force and was a customs official, raided the customs warehouse and stole guns, ammunition and food supplies for the mutineers.

In February, Bibit was indicted in a criminal court on charges of participating in the December rebellion.

LYSEKIL, Sweden (APRIL 8) UPI - A ferry that erupted in flame during a holiday voyage continued to burn Sunday, preventing rescue teams from entering gutted decks and passageways to determine how many died in Scandanavia's worst ferry disaster.

A total of 75 people were confirmed dead, but authorities said the confirmed total might eventually reach 148. A precise count of those who perished may never be possible because of undependable records of the number of people aboard the Scandanavian Star when a suspected arson fire broke out early Saturday, authorities said.

Identification of many of those who died may also be impossible, Swedish police said.

''The captain has told us there were 493 people on board. We know that 345 were saved. We can only say the rest must be dead,'' Police Commissioner Roar Onso said.

Onso said 75 passengers were confirmed dead after a body count by firemen in one part of the vessel. The rest of the missing passengers and crew were thought to be in other parts of the vessel which had not yet been searched.

''But all the figures, apart from the body count, are uncertain since there was no precise passenger list,'' Onso said.

The 10,000-ton ferry, which burst into flames early Saturday during a voyage from Norway to Denmark, continued to burn fiercely Sunday as the vessel lay at quay in the picturesque Swedish town of Lysekil, 60 miles north of the west coast port of Gothenburg.

A thick pall of black smoke, visible in the clear weather from a distance of 15 miles, continued to belch from the stricken vessel as a small army of firefighters tried to contain the blaze.

Several fireboats poured water into the superstructure of the blackened vessel as hundreds of Norwegians flocked to Lysekil to hear news of their relatives.

Flags flew at half-staff throughout Scandinavia Sunday as a mark of respect for those killed in what governments and monarchs in the region called ''a terrible tragedy.''

''I don't think the fire will be out for quite some hours yet,'' said exhausted fire brigade spokesman Olle Wennstrom.

Wennstrom said the fire had taken hold again and was raging towards the front of the vessel. The Caribbean deck, upon which the first fire started Saturday, was burnt out and flames continued to gush through the deck above.

''The bridge is likely to to be burnt out, much of the superstructure of the ship is likely to end as a shell,'' Vennstrom said.

He said firefighters had attempted to enter the vessel's C Deck early Sunday, but had been forced by intense heat to retreat after moving only 50 feet into the passageways.

Onso said he did not expect the vessel to stop burning until sometime Sunday night, after which police and firefighters would begin removing those who perished.

''But the process of identification is going to be very difficult. Such a fire that has raced through the passageways of the vessel will make our job highly complicated. In many cases, it may be impossible,'' Onso said.

He added all remains were to be taken to the Norwegian capital, Oslo, where Norwegian and Swedish police and forensic scientists would try to identify those on board.

As firefighters battled the flames, heavy criticism was leveled at the Danish operators of the vessel for alleged lapses in safety regulations.

Fires aboard the Scandinavian Star began at 2:30 a.m. Saturday while the passenger and car ferry was on its way with Easter holidaymakers from Oslo to Denmark's northern port of Frederikshavn.

Sailors' organizations in Denmark and Sweden criticized safety and crew conditions on board the Scandinavian Star, which was only put in service on the Oslo-Frederikshavn route less than a week before the fire.

''The (Filipino and Portugese) crew could not understand each other and, from the reports we have received, did not seem trained for such an emergency,'' said Henrik Berlau, spokesman for Denmark's Sailor's Union.

He added the union had been horrified to hear reports that safety devices on board the vessel did not appear to work.

EAST BERLIN (APRIL 8) UPI - East Germany's main political parties have agreed, after intense bargaining, to form a coalition government that will give the country its first non-communist administration and will ease the way for German reunification, officials said Sunday.

Although more bargaining is needed to agree on precise membership of the Cabinet, officials of the conservative Christian-Democratic Union said party leader and prime minister-designate Lothar de Maiziere will be able to present a list of 24 prospective ministers to Parliament Thursday. The CDU has 163 seats and is the largest party in Parliament.

Seven conservative, social-democratic and liberal parties have been involved for more than one week in a flurry of coalition talks.

Their negotiators were due to meet again later Sunday to finalize arrangements to establish a broad-based government, the first democratic administration in the 40-year history of the formerly Communist state.

CDU General Secretary Martin Kirchner said the new Cabinet would have 23 members, in addition to the prime minister.

The CDU - which won the most votes in March 18 elections - will have 11 of the ministerial posts. The Social Democratic Party, which has 88 parliamentary seats, will get six portfolios in the new Cabinet. The Alliance of Free Liberals and the conservative German Social Union, or DSU will each have three ministers. The conservative Democratic Awakening will have one ministerial portfolio.

''We are now fully confident that a government can be formed Thursday. It is the honorable will of all participants that this should happen,'' Kirchner said after negotiations that went on late into the night.

Reinhard Hoeppner of the SPD said that the negotiating teams had reached agreement on the distribution of the ministerial posts, but that further discussion was still needed before the list of names was completed.

One prominent East German virtually certain to get a cabinet post - as disarmament minister - was pastor-turned-politician Rainer Eppelman, who heads the Democratic Awakening, one of the three parties in the conservative Alliance for Germany, which also includes the CDU and the DSU.

On Saturday, the CDU indicated to the Social Democrats that they should speed up the pace of the talks or leave the negotiating table.

At one point, de Maiziere snapped that ''come Thursday, we will form a government, with or without the SPD.''

Acting SPD chairman Markus Meckel countered that ''there should be a government formed by April 12, this must be our goal, for the country needs an administration capable of negotiating immediately.''

The establishment of a broad-based government is expected to ease the way for the reunification of the two German states, divided since Germany lost World War II.

The administration needs a two-third parliamentary majority to push through vital constitutional changes required before economic, social and political union can be introduced.

All parties in the new coalition agree on the principle of reunification, but the SPD has warned against the rushed pace it says West Germany's conservative Chancellor Helmut Kohl is seeking.

Kohl has said that, by summer, the two Germanys could form a currency union that entails the introduction of the West German currency in East Germany.

The union is seen as a key step toward political unification. But East Germans have been distressed in recent days by the West German central bank's proposal that East Germans turn in most of their currency at a rate of two East marks for one West mark.

BEIRUT, Lebanon (APRIL 8) UPI - The Palestinian Abu Nidal group said Sunday it would release French hostage Jacqueline Valente, her Belgian friend Fernand Houtekins and their baby girl, Sophie.

''I assure everyone that measures are underway as planned to release (the three) and that the exact place and date will be announced in due time,'' said Walid Khalid, spokesman for the Fatah Revolutionary Council, headed bu terrorist Abu Nidal.

Khalid announced recently that the group agreed to an appeal by Libyan leader Col. Moammar Gadhafi to free Valente and her family. Gadhafi also appealed for the release of all hostages held by Moslems around the Middle East.

The group said it was not seeking release of four other Belgian relatives of Houtekins kidnapped from the yacht ''Silco'' on Nov. 8, 1987, off the Gaza coast, and a second child to whom Valente gave birth in captivity.

In his statement Sunday, Khalid lashed out against the Belgian Justice Minister, accusing him of saying one thing and doing its contrary. He threatened to publish minutes of the meetings between his group and representatives of the Belgian government concerning the fate of the Belgian captives.

Khalid did not elaborate on what the Belgian justice minister said. But the FRC in a previous statement criticized the Belgian authorities for not making serious efforts to win release its citizens.

No demands were listed for the release of the four Belgians, but sources said the group demands the freedom of one of its members, Nasser Saeed, jailed in Belgium since 1983 for an attack against a synagogue in Brussels.

The four Belgians are Houtekins' brother Emmanuel, his wife, Godelieve Kets,and their two children, Laurent and Valerie.

INDIANAPOLIS (APRIL 8) UPI - Ryan White, who simultaneously fought AIDS, public misconceptions about its victims and efforts to keep him out of public school, died Sunday of a respiratory illness related to the disease.

White, 18, entered Riley Hospital for Children March 29 and was placed on a life-support ventilating machine soon afterward. Dr. Martin Kleiman, who had treated White since he contracted acquired immune deficiency syndrome in December 1984, said White was under heavy sedation and felt no pain.

White had been in and out of Riley Hospital for the past few months because of a chronic infection, Kleiman said.

A hemophiliac, White contracted AIDS when he received a tainted blood-clotting agent during a transfusion. White, then 13, was one of the first American youngsters diagnosed as having AIDS at a time when the disease and its methods of transmission were widely unknown and misunderstood.

Parents and administrators fought efforts by White to return to class at Western Middle School in Russiaville, Ind., after his AIDS diagnosis. White's year-long court fight to attend school received national attention.

White returned to school in early 1986, but had to suffer indignities that included a community ''yard sale'' held to raise money for the legal fight to keep him out and the absence of nearly half the school on his first day back.

Hostile feelings subsided in Russiaville, but the Whites moved south to Cicero, Ind., about 25 miles north of Indianapolis, in 1987. Students at Hamilton Heights High School, who had been educated about AIDS before White's arrival, welcomed him with open arms.

During this time, White and his mother, Jeanne, became international spokespersons about AIDS awareness. As recently as March, White appeared with former President Reagan in Los Angeles to announce the formation of a Ryan White National Program for AIDS Education by Athletes and Entertainers for Kids.

White's struggle was documented in the 1989 ABC-TV movie, ''The Ryan White

Story,'' in which he appeared as Chad, another AIDS-stricken boy who White met at a hospital.

White, who was given only 18 months to live by doctors once he was diagnosed with AIDS, outlived that deadline with an optimism and determination that impressed supporters worldwide.

Singer Elton John kept a constant vigil with White's family by his hospital bed last week, posting some of the thousands of cards and letters that poured in after news of White's deteriorating condition. Football player Howie Long, who appeared with White at AIDS benefits, also visited White at Riley Hospital.

Singer Michael Jackson, who gave White a car for his 16th birthday, called along with singers John Mellencamp, Johnny Cash, the Statler Brothers and football player Joe Montana. Singer Lionel Richie sent a fax offering his support.

President Bush, who was in Indianapolis last Tuesday, dedicated a tree to White at a planting ceremony.

''Ryan helped us all understand the truth about AIDS,'' Bush said. ''He's shown all of us the strength of the human heart.''

LIMA, Peru (APRIL 8) UPI - Peruvians voted for president and Congress Sunday in a tense election held under the threat of possible attacks by communist guerrillas and the suffocating blanket of inflation and a severe depression.

Polls opened at 8 a.m. to elect a successor for highly unpopular President Alan Garcia, along with 60 senators and 180 deputies. The 52,155 voting places were to close at 3 p.m. Exit polling vote projections were expected to be released early in the afternoon, with unofficial results to follow the closing of the polls.

Some 10 million Peruvians out of 22.2 million residents were required by law to vote. Thousands of policemen and soldiers were guarding polling places, public buildings and streets, while officers in civilian clothes rode public buses.

The bloody Shining Path guerrilla movement which had called for a boycott of the vote killed six congressional candidates in March along with various officials and citizens in an attempt to disrupt the election.

Garcia said after voting early Sunday that participation in the election

''will bury terrorism.''

''Terrorism proposed a social revolution, a generalized resurrection in the entire country,'' he said.'' In this it failed because the people through the elections of 1980, 1985 and 1990 have brought to an end the proposal of the social insurrection and know that a revolution can only be made through an elected government.''

Mario Vargas Llosa, the novelist turned politician, led polls going into the election. Vargas Llosa, 54, heading a center-right coalition, promised voters a program of economic ''shock'' - trimming bureaucracy and government spending and promoting a free market - to contain inflation running at more than 2,000 percent, the worst in the nation's history.

He was expected to be challenged by another political newcomer, Alberto Fujimori, whose campaign has skyrocketed in the past two months. Some pollsters predicted a close race between the two.

Fujimori, 51, the son of Japanese immigrants, surged into second place in the polls over Luis Alva Castro, 48, standard-bearer of Garcia's American Popular Revolutionary Alliance Party.

Other major candidates include Alfonso Barrantes Lingan, 62, of the Socialist Left and Henry Pease, 45, of the communist United Left, who devided leftist votes. There were four other minor candidates.

Vargas Llosa is the author of such novels as ''The Green House,'' ''The City and the Dogs,'' and ''The War at the End of the World.'' In his campaign, he lashed out at the left and spoke passionately of the ''culture of liberty'' he promised to bring to Peru.

An ''armed stoppage'' was called through Monday by the Shining Path in Ayacucho, a city of 100,000 people 200 miles southeast of Lima. It also vowed to enforce a stoppage in the central Andean department of Junin.

In the 10 years since the Shining Path first surfaced, more than 18,000 people have died in political violence.

The city of Lima, along with eight departments and four provinces have been declared in a state of emergency and were under police and army control because of actions by the guerrillas.

In the capital, pedestrian and vehicle traffic was prohibited around the presidential palace, Congress, other government offices and voting places. Police in armored vehicles patrolled the central part of the city.

The government imposed a curfew in the departments of Huancavelica, Junin and Pasco. The sale of alcohol was prohibited since Friday in the entire country.

Garcia was elected in 1985 and his policies of increasing salaries and of subsidies for basic products made him popular for his first two years in office. But when the nation's foreign reserves were spent and Peru was cut off from international credit because of Garcia's moratorium on foreign debt payments, inflation began to spiral.

Inflation reached 2,775 percent in 1989, the highest in Peruvian history. The government says only 18.6 percent of Peruvians are adequately employed and 7 million, a third of the population, lives in extreme poverty.

ELIZABETH, NJ (APRIL 8) UPI - Prosecutors in the trial of John Emil List, charged with killing his wife, mother and children, are expected to use their own psychiatric expert to convince the jury that List is guilty of murder.

When the trial begins its second week Monday morning in Union County Superior Court, List's lawyer, Elijah J. Miller, will present his final witnesses, including a psychologist. The case is expected to go to the jury Tuesday or Wednesday.

List, 64, faces multiple life sentences if he is convicted of five counts of murder. But Miller argues that List was driven to despair by financial problems and his wife's struggle with syphilis and thought he was saving his family from damnation.

A psychiatrist from the University of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey who examined List for the prosecution, is likely to be a rebuttal witness.

A defense psychiatrist testified Friday that List was unable to cope with adversity. Learning his wife suffered from a venereal disease, something she concealed from her husband through most of their marriage, helped push List to the breaking point, Dr. Sheldon Miller said.

Helen List, who was treated for syphilis in the late 1940s, was apparently infected by her first husband, a soldier who died in Korea.

List's boyhood as the son of an authoritarian father in a strict German Lutheran community in Bay City, Mich., made both disease and the prospect of being unable to support his family especially horrible to him, Miller added.

At the time of the killings, List had gone into the insurance business after losing a middle management post with the Xerox Corp. in Rochester, N.Y. His wife was almost bedridden and had become addicted to alcohol and tranquilizers.

List's parents were ''anti-welfare - one should take care of oneself,'' the psychiatrist said. ''Sexual matters simply were not discussed. The way to deal with emotions was to keep it all within.''

The psychiatrist said that Helen List would ''embarrass her husband by flirting or carrying on with others in her husband's presence.''

Miller's testimony echoed that of the Rev. Edward Saresky, the List's pastor in Pennfield, a Rochester, N.Y., suburb, during the early 1960s. During pastoral visits, Helen List taunted her husband by telling him he was not ''half the man'' her first husband was, Saresky said Thursday.

While Saresky said List showed no reaction to his wife, Miller described him as a man who hid his emotions.

''The moment he sensed anger, he tried to put it away, but as time went on it added to the strain and moved him toward the breaking point,'' Miller said.

CAPE CANAVERAL, FL (APRIL 8) UPI - The Hubble Space Telescope is the flagship in a fleet of new space observatories, one that will revolutionize humanity's concept of the universe and the big bang thought to have created it, scientists said Sunday.

''This is a voyage very much like perhaps the voyages of Columbus or Magellan, except it's a voyage of man's intellect into the universe,'' said NASA astrophysicist Charles Pellerin. ''The Hubble telescope is ... the biggest single advance in the history of astronomy since Galileo.''

The voyage begins Tuesday when the shuttle Discovery's five-member crew is to blast off with the $1.5 billion Hubble Space Telescope, the first of four ''great observatories'' scheduled for launch in the 1990s to study the universe in the infrared, visible light, X-ray and gamma ray regions of the electromagnetic spectrum.

But the space telescope is the clear showpiece of the quartet and John Bahcall, president of the American Astronomical Society, said Hubble's launch will mark the ''astronomical happening of the 20th century.''

''What August '69 in Woodstock was to the American rock community, April 1990 at Cape (Canaveral) will be to the scientific and astronomical community,'' he said. ''We're all here and we're going to have a good time.''

Operating at an altitude of 380 miles, high above Earth's obscuring atmosphere, the space telescope will be able to study astronomical targets with 10 times greater clarity than ever before, allowing scientists to detect light emitted from stars and galaxies shortly after the birth of the universe.

It also will look for planets around other stars and explore the enigma of high-energy ''quasi-stellar radio sources,'' or ''quasars,'' which may be powered by massive black holes, among other topics.

''Will we learn great things with the Hubble Space Telescope?'' asked Bahcall. ''If the the telescope and the instruments function as specified ... then the Hubble Space Telescope should provide at least partial answers to the fundamental questions (in astronomy).

''As marvelous an achievement as this will be, I personally will be very disappointed if all we do is answer these questions. I believe that the most important discoveries with the Hubble Space Telescope will provide answers to questions that we do not yet know how to ask.''

The telescope is named after American astronomer Edwin P. Hubble, who, in the 1920s, proved the existence of galaxies and discovered that the universe is expanding, critical evidence of the big bang explosion thought to have created the cosmos some 15 billion years ago.

The rate of that expansion is directly proportional to the distance of a galaxy, that is, the farther a galaxy is from the observer, the faster it is rushing away. The space telescope will help refine the value of this recession velocity, allowing astronomers to calculate backwards to determine the age of the universe.

Astronomers currently believe the cosmos exploded into being between 10 billion and 20 billion years ago.

The age is uncertain by a factor of two - astronomers typically take the average and say the universe is 15 billion years old - and the space telescope should reduce that uncertainty to just 10 percent or so.

Given the potential impact of data from the telescope, Pellerin said modern astronomy will be revolutionized.

''I think the importance of this is very profound,'' he said. ''The project will touch people in other deeper and more important ways. I believe it's likely we will change the way we think about the universe and our role in it.

''I think Hubble will give us enormous new insights and affect the way we think. In fact, I believe perhaps our deepest conceptions of self, place and history are rooted in historical astronomical terms and ideas.''

But the space telescope is only one of a fleet of new space observatories designed to study the universe across the spectrum of electromagnetic radiation.

''The Hubble is actually the flagship in a fleet of space observatories, a fleet that's moving out now measuring the universe,'' Pellerin said. ''Scientists from almost every nation are involved with this.''

Hubble primarily will study the visible portion of the spectrum while the Gamma Ray Observatory, scheduled for launch Nov. 1, will study high-energy radition as will the Advanced X-ray Astrophysics Facility, scheduled for launch in 1993. Finally, NASA hopes to launch a high-tech infrared telescope in the late 1990s.

(APRIL 8) UPI - Around the world... around the clock... the latest news from U-P-I.

Former national security adviser John Poindexter will be sentenced June 11th on five felony charges arising from the Iran-Contra scandal. A federal jury returned its guilty verdict Saturday. The retired Navy rear admiral faces a maximum sentence of 25 years in prison and more than one-Million dollars in fines.

At least 74 people are dead following a fire aboard a ferry carrying passengers from Norway to Denmark. The ship has been towed to port in Sweden and authorities say the death toll may rise as many passengers remain UNaccounted for. The ferry captain, Hugo Larsen, told rescuers he thinks the fire was deliberately set.

In the Philippines, hooded gunmen stormed the Manila city prison and freed a leader of the December coup attempt. The raid occurred Sunday while guards were holding a beer-drinking birthday party for the deputy warden. The country's top military chief had warned rebels were capable of such commando operations.

Organizers of Farm-Aid-4 expressed optimism Saturday night that donations for family farms would exceed the goal of one-point-three-Million dollars. About 45-thousand people gathered at the Hoosierdome in Indianapolis. They were treated to performances by such music greats as Willie Nelson, Elton John, and Arlo Guthrie.

The crew of the shuttle Discovery flew to Cape Canaveral Saturday for the start of the ship's countdown. If all goes well, Discovery will lift off Tuesday morning with the Hubble Space Telescope in its payload bay. It will be the 35th shuttle flight.

Some exhibitors of a sexually explicit collection of photographs taken by the late Robert Mapplethorpe were indicted Saturday on four obscenity counts. But the director of the Cincinnati Contemporary Arts Center refused to close the show and authorities did NOT seize any pictures.

JERUSALEM (APRIL 8) UPI - The chances for Labor leader Shimon Peres to form a narrow coalition government appeared to improve Sunday as the rival right-wing Likud Party failed to secure the allegiance of breakaway party members.

The Israeli Parliament, or Knesset, scheduled a special session Wednesday during its Passover recess for a vote of confidence in Peres's newly formed coalition.

With the support of the left-wing and Arab parties as well as one religious party and a Likud ''defector,'' Labor held a slim majority of 61 in the 120-member legislature.

Throughout the day Sunday, Labor held talks with its supporters to solidify its position while Likud attempted to put together enough votes to block the Labor-led coalition.

Likud representatives worked to gain the backing of four breakaway party members, who at one time belonged to the Liberal Party that merged with the Herut faction to form Likud.

The four, led by former Economics Minister Yitzak Moda'i, refused to pledge their support to Likud unless every party member in the Knesset signed an agreement giving them two ministerial portfolios in the next government.

Several Likud leaders would not sign the agreement unless a fifth member of the Liberal faction, Avraham Sharir, joined the pact. Sharir shifted his allegiance to Labor, giving the center-left party its slim margin of victory.

After the meeting with Likud, Moda'i said nothing had changed. Liberal faction member Pinchas Goldstein said there had been a ''crisis of trust.''

''We gave (them) all the chances to straighten it out, to overcome .... and to end it, but in our opinions we did not receive any assistance,'' Goldstein said. ''For today we are each going our own way.... I am going home. Let me rest to consider, to discuss, to consult, to think.''

Despite the setback, Likud members did not rule out further talks and the possibility of thwarting Labor's efforts.

''Three days are quite a long time in Israeli politics,'' said Ehud Olmert Likud minister without portfolio. ''Therefore I suggest that we will be patiently waiting before the last minute.''

Labor's chances of forming a government also brightened with reports Sunday that members of the ultra-Orthodox Shas Party may not participate in the vote of confidence. The abstention by five of the six Shas Parliament members during a no-confidence vote on March 15 brought down the government led by Likud's Yitzhak Shamir.

Shas's spiritual advisory board, the Council of Torah Sages, was scheduled to meet Tuesday night to discuss how its members would vote Wednesday. Traditionally, Israel's religious parties have joined the ruling coalition instead of remaining in the opposition.

KATMANDU, Nepal (APRIL 8) UPI - Nepal's King Birendra, yielding to demands for democracy from thousands of his subjects, Sunday night legalized political parties, which had been banned for 29 years.

The announcement was made by the press office of the royal palace over Radio Nepal at 11:10 p.m.

A wave of political unrest across Nepal launched Feb. 18 has left about 50 dead and thousands jailed. The demonstrators had demanded an end to the mountainous kingdom's partyless Panchayat system and the legalization of political parties.

''The present ban on political parties has been lifted,'' the royal palace announcement over the government-run radio and television stations said.

''In view of today's international situation and taking into consideration Nepal's unity and the present desire of the Nepalese people, the word 'partyless' has been deleted from the constitution.''

The announcement touched off immediate demonstrations of delight throughout the city. People whistled and shouted from rooftops.

The announcement came after a day of meetings between opposition leaders and Achyut Raj Regmi, the chief palace negotiator.

During its broadcast of the announcement, the television station showed videotape of the king meeting with four main opposition leaders and four members of the government, including Prime Minister Lokendra Bahadur Chand.

Regmi is minister of education and agriculture in the four-member Cabinet formed by King Birendra Friday.

Announcement of the king's capitulation to the protesters' demands came during a weekend in which authorities imposed a strick curfew on five cities in an attempt to control the uprising, the most serious political crisis in King Birendra's 18-year rule.

Several members of Parliament had joined opposition leaders in urging the king to allow multi-party democracy.

''There is no alternative for the king but to declare a multi-party system to strengthen the nationality, democracy and the monarchy,'' said Birendra Kumar Pokhrel and Birendra Keshari Pokhrel in a joint statement.

Earlier, Parliament members Rabindra Nath Sharma and Dr. Prakash Chandra Lohini issued similar statements.

Also Sunday, democracy movement leader Ganesh Man Singh, head of the banned Nepali Congress party, rejected a government proposal for a dialogue.

''No Nepali should be misled by a hypocritical offer of a dialogue in view of what has resulted out of the killings and injuries to hundreds of Nepalese,'' the ailing Singh, 75, said.

In a statement released from hospital Singh said ''the brutal atrocity committed (Friday) in the capital city and elsewhere in Nepal by the absolute panchayat leader (King Birendra) amounted to a virtual waging of war against the people.''

At least 200,000 demonstrators, the largest such gathering ever in Katmandu, filled the streets near the royal palace Friday. Police police opened fire as the crowd marched toward the palace, killing at least eight people and injuring 117 others, witnesses and hospital sources said.

One witness, however, said he saw police and soldiers dozens of bodies into four or five trucks after the shooting Friday.

''They were just throwing the bodies into the backs of trucks like they were loading garbage,'' said Hans Nabbe, 25, a tourist from Tilburg, Holland.

Nabbe said the protests began peacefully even though the crowd repeatedly forced police to fall back as they surged in the direction of the palace.

Police eventually fired tear gas into the crowd but protesters snatched up the canisters and threw them into a nearby pond, he said.

Shooting began after soldiers arrived to reinforce the police, he said, adding that he ran for cover, eventually making his way to the roof of a house.

On Sunday, security forces opened fire on pro-democracy demonstrators in the town of Butwal, 75 miles southwest of Katmandu, killing at least two people, said residents contacted by telephone from Katmandu.

Security forces also opened fire in Pokhara and Chitawan, but there were no reports of casualties.

HAVANA, Cuba (APRIL 8) UPI - A senior Cuban official said that operation of Cuba's first nuclear reactor, being built by Soviets at a site about 230 miles south of Miami, has been delayed by two to three years.

''Our nuclear porgram is 100 percent for peaceful energy uses. We do not have nuclear arms,'' Cuban Deputy Foreign Minister Ramon Sanchez Parodi said in an interview over the weekend. ''The operation of first reactor is delayed by several years. ... I think that first reactor will start functioning in two or three years.''

With the help of the Soviet Union, Cuba is building Juragua I and II, both 440-megawatt nuclear reactors, near the port of Cienfuegos in southern Cuba. The operation of first nuclear reactor, originally scheduled to go critical for testing by the end of the 1980s, was postponed until the end of 1990 and has been postponed again.

Cuban officials and diplomats say that, if everything goes well and the Soviet Union - beset by its own economic and nuclear problems - continues to cooperate, Cuba's first reactor may be ready for testing at the end of 1992 at the earliest.

''This (Cuban nuclear) technology is fundamentally developed with the Soviets,'' Parodi said.

Construction on the reactors began in 1982 and has caused serious concern in the United States, especially after the Soviet Union's 1985 Chernobyl accident, which sent radioactive fallout over Europe.

U.S. critics have argued that a Chernobyl-like accident in Cuba would severely affect the United States and other neighboring Caribbean and Latin American countries.

Foreign experts and officials of the Vienna-based International Atomic Energy Agency who have visited the Cuban nuclear facility, however, have approved safety measures adopted by Cuba, said a Western diplomat.

''Even U.S. experts have visited the plant to check security measures and have been quite pleased with it,'' the diplomat said.

Unlike the graphite-cooled reactor at Chernobyl, the Cuban nuclear power plant is of the pressurized water type.

Parodi said that, although the Cuban nuclear industry is fundamentally based on the Soviet technology, Cuba has maintained contact with U.S. nuclear industry on safety issues as well.

''We have very good relations with the nuclear industry of the United States, including contacts with the national Nuclear Regulatory Commission of the United States,'' Parodi said. ''We do not have commercial relations but have collaboration in (nuclear) safety areas.''

Washington broke diplomatic ties with Cuba in 1961 after President Fidel Castro confiscated U.S. investments in banks and industries and seized large U.S. landholdings. A year later, the United States imposed an economic embargo against Cuba. Castro's revolutionary forces ousted dictator Fulgencio Batista in 1959.

Although Cuba, the staunchest Soviet ally in the Western Hemisphere, has repeatedly said its nuclear program is non-military, it has refused to sign the Treaty of Tlatelolco, which declares Latin America and the Caribbean a nuclear-free zone.

The treaty, signed in 1967 in Mexico City by Latin American and Caribbean countries, creates a nuclear-free zone, covering all of the Caribbean, Central and South America.

Cuban officials say their nuclear program is aimed at reducing Cuba's dependence on oil, which is the communist island nation's principal import item.

The Soviet Union is chief oil supplier to Cuba, which needs over 215,000 barrels of petroleum per day. In recent years, however, Cuba has discovered several oil fields on its northern coast. But experts say that the high sulfur content of Cuban hydrocarbons makes the refining process very costly.

MOSCOW (APRIL 8) UPI - Thousands of workers affected by the 1986 Chernobyl accident formed an organization to press for better medical care and new help was ordered Sunday for children exposed to radiation as the fourth anniversary of the disaster approached.

A presidential order published in Pravda Sunday commanded various agencies to turn over space in clinics and vacation resorts for medical treatment and vacations for children affected by the nuclear accident.

The order also transfers the Ai-Danil clinic, apparently earlier reserved for high-level officials, to the Ministry of Health with orders to treat children from the Chernobyl region.

There have been frequent complaints about the quality of medical care received by victims of the April 26, 1986, near-meltdown of a reactor at the Chernobyl nuclear plant 80 miles north of the Ukrainian capital Kiev. The disaster killed 31 and exposed thousands to dangerous radioactivity.

Time magazine in its most recent issue published three pages of photographs taken near Chernobyl, including a child standing by a meter showing dangerous levels of radiation, a foal with eight legs and pigs without eyes.

On March 30 the official Soviet news agency Tass reported a hunger strike had been joined by more than 100 patients at the Institute of Radiology in the Ukrainian town of Kharkov and others being treated as outpatients because of a shortage of hospital beds.

Soviet authorities had previously promised better medical care and additional social benefits for radiation victims and their families, but Tass said the improvements have not been implemented.

The news agency reported Sunday that more than 4,000 workers who participated in relief and cleanup efforts after the accident formed a ''union of the irradiated'' to demand improved medical care and better benefits.

''The major goal ... is to protect social rights of the irradiated, evaluate the real irradiation doses, which appeared to be underestimated, and accumulate and systematize data on the health of the irradiated,'' Tass said.

The union also will ask that complete information about the accident be made public to help ''overcome radiation illiteracy'' and help prevent similar disasters, Tass said.

The group includes military reservists, helicopter pilots, nuclear plant workers and machine operators who helped in relief, cleanup and evacuation efforts after the nuclear accident.

The Ukrainian Parliament has decreed April 26 Chernobyl tragedy day and ordered that all flags be flown at half-staff on each anniversary of the disaster.

LYSEKIL, Sweden (APRIL 8) UPI - Workers began removing bodies from the smoldering decks of the Scandinavian Star ferry Sunday and officials feared the confirmed death toll of 75 in Scandinavia's worst post-war maritime disaster likely would double to 148.

Firefighters were close to extinguishing the suspected arson fire that erupted early Saturday aboard the 10,000-ton Scandinavian Star as it carried Easter holidaymakers from Norway's capital, Oslo, on a trip to Denmark's northern port of Frederikshavn.

Lysekil Police Commissioner Roar Onso said 75 passengers were confirmed dead after a count of bodies in one section, but said he feared the toll would reach 148 as officials searched other decks for 73 missing passengers.

''All the figures, apart from the body count, are uncertain since there was no precise passenger list,'' Onso told reporters from a site overlooking the ferry, which still belched smoke at its Lysekil harbor anchorage.

''The captain has told us there were 493 people on board,'' Onso said. ''We know that 345 were saved. We can only say the rest must be dead.''

He said officials would wait until Monday to conduct a full search of the ferry, which was cited for safety and fire violations after a 1988 blaze.

''The process is going to be a very slow one and we do not know when it will be finished,'' Onso said. ''Until we have had a chance to look through the entire vessel, we will not know exactly how many have been killed.''

The bodies of several children were among the dead, Onso said.

Onso and other officials said they were unable to comment on the theory of the vessel's captain, Hugo Larsen, that the fire was set deliberately.

Larsen told rescue officers he suspected arson, saying that only a short time after the crew extinguished a fire on the Caribbean deck a second blaze broke out on a deck directly above.

''The captain has told us that there were two fires on board,'' said Sven Voxtorp of Denmark's Naval Rescue Service. ''The first was put out, but the second took hold 15 minutes later and was more serious.

''In the captain's view, we are looking at a deliberate act of arson,'' Voxtorp said.

Officials also declined to comment on speculation that an arsonist might have been motivated by resentment over the composition of the crew, which comprised mostly Portuguese and Filipinos.

Sailors' organizations in Denmark and Sweden criticized safety and crew conditions on board the Scandinavian Star, which had been serving the Oslo-Frederikshavn route for only six days.

''The (Filipino and Portugese) crew could not understand each other and, from the reports we have received, did not seem trained for such an emergency,'' said Henrik Berlau of Denmark's Sailors' Union.

He said the union was horrified by reports that safety devices on board the vessel did not appear to work.

''There must be a complete investigation into this tragedy,'' Berlau said.

Several passengers told Swedish media Sunday that fire alarms had not worked and the Filipino and Portugese crew were unable to communicate with each other or with passengers.

When the ferry was under different ownership in 1988, an engine-room fire left the Scandinavian Star adrift in the Gulf of Mexico, although no one was serously hurt.

A U.S. National Transportation Safety Board study found that the ship's smoke detectors apparently had failed, an automatic fire-extinguishing system did not work and emergency generators did not work for an hour after the fire.

For most of Sunday, a thick pall of black smoke, visible in the clear weather from a distance of 15 miles, belched from the stricken vessel as a small army of firefighters battled to contain the fire.

Several fireboats poured water into blackened hull as hundreds of Norwegians flocked to Lysekil to hear news of their relatives.

Flags flew at half-staff across Scandinavia Sunday out of respect for those killed in what regional governments and monarchs called ''a terrible tragedy.''

LOS ANGELES (APRIL 8) UPI - Former television commentator Bill Press won the California Democratic Party's endorsement Sunday to be state insurance commissioner, the party's first endorsement in nearly 80 years.

Press was favored by 64 percent of delegates who voted Saturday night to endorse a candidate in the first election for state's top insurance regulator. The post had been appointive until changed by the Proposition 103 insurance reform initiative in 1988.

A candidate needed at least 60 percent of the votes to win the party's endorsement, and party officials, including state chairman and former Gov. Jerry Brown, had not expected any of the seven Democratic candidates in the insurance commissioner's race to win an endorsement.

Delegates were to cast their ballots for endorsements in the gubernatorial and other state races later Sunday afternoon.

State Sen. John Garamendi, who trailed Press with 17 percent of the vote, discounted the value of an endorsement, saying, ''This (group of delegates) is an extremely liberal faction of the party and does not in any way reflect the mainstream of the Democratic Party.

''My strength comes from the middle, from both Democrats and Republicans.''

Press was expected to do best among the insurance commissioner candidates because he had been lobbying party workers and officials for months.

His endorsement could be significant because most of the candidates in the insurance commissioner's race are not well known. A recent Los Angeles Times poll showed Press with a slight lead over Garamendi, but 72 percent of the Democratic voters polled were undecided.

Press, 50, was a commentator for KABC-TV in Los Angeles until he resigned to run for insurance commissioner after supporting Proposition 103, the insurance reform initiative passed by voters in 1988.

He had directed the state Office of Planning and Research under Jerry Brown and was active in grass-roots environmental causes.

The weekend California Democratic Party convention is the first to consider endorsements in nearly eight decades. Last year, the Supreme Court struck down a 1913 California law that prohibited political parties from endorsing candidates in contested primaries.

The statute had been championed as a way to curb the power of the Southern Pacific Railroad and other business interests that at the time controlled California's political parties.

BRIDGETON, MO (APRIL 8) UPI - An F-4 Phantom jet veered off a runway during takeoff from Lambert-St. Louis International Airport, crashed and burst into flames Sunday, but the two crewmen escaped, officials said.

The crew members, whose names were not immediately released, were hospitalized, but their conditions were not known, said Capt. Darrell Shoults, spokesman for the 131st Tactical Fighter Wing of the Missouri Air National Guard.

''They were on takeoff,'' Shoults said. ''During the takeoff roll, the aircraft veered off the runway and there was a fire.''

The fire was extinguished quickly after the crash at 11:16 a.m. and the plane never left the ground, Shoults said.

Shoults said the pilot crawled out of the plane while the weapons systems officer in the rear of the craft ejected. He said the plane was on a training mission.

One runway at Lambert-St. Louis International remained out of service later Sunday because of the crash. The airport is about 15 miles northwest of St. Louis.

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (APRIL 8) UPI - Exxon and its high-powered lawyers were to appear in federal court Monday afternoon for arraignment on criminal charges that Exxon sought to avoid following last year's disastrous Exxon Valdez oil spill.

''We plan to defend ourselves vigorously,'' Exxon Shipping Co. attorney James Neal said from his Nashville law office before flying to Anchorage for the U.S. District Court arraignment.

Exxon Corp. and Exxon Shipping Co. were expected to plead innocent to five charges against each firm in a Feb. 27 federal grand jury indictment.

Convictions could bring fines of more than $700 million, based on damage estimates of the 11 million-gallon spill of March 24, 1989, according to the Department of Justice. In addition, Exxon could be ordered to pay restitution.

Exxon had sought to avoid criminal charges in secret negotiations with the Justice Department. But the talks fell apart when Alaska officials blew the whistle on the negotiations and refused to be part of the deal, publicly decrying the process and criticizing the Bush Administration's handling of the case.

As a result, the two Exxon companies were indicted for five environmental crimes - violating the Clean Water Act, the Refuse Act, the Likratory Bird Act, the Ports and Waterways Safety Act and the Dangerous Cargo Act.

In the indictment, the Justice Departmeot,said Exxon was responsible for its skipper's actions - for taking the tanker out of shipping lanes and then leaving the bridge to an ''unqualified'' mate and an ''incompetent'' helmsman.

The tanker broke open on Bligh Reef, spewing oil into pristine waters of Prince William Sound and the Gulf of Alaska, devastating wildlife, ruining fishing and coating 1,200 miles of shoreline with crude oil, including seven national parks and wildlife refuges. The spill was the worst in U.S. history.

Exxon has spent $2 billion on the cleanup, which resumes in May. The state estimates that millions of gallons of oil remain in the environment.

The proposed plea bargain would have settled Exxon's federal criminal and civil liabilities and established a $550 million environmental restoration fund under the control of an administrator appointed by President Bush.

If Exxon agreed to the criminal plea bargain, Justice Department lawyers were willing to promise not to file civil suits for at least four years.

Exxon Corp. President Lee Raymond, during a visit to Alaska last month to announce a resumption in the cleanup, declined to answer questions about the criminal case and whether Exxon was still trying to negotiate a deal.

''We entered into discussions with the federal government some time ago on the condition of confidentiality,'' Raymond said, acknowledging the plea bargaining but declining further comment.

One of the biggest law firms in the United States, O'Melveny and Myers in Los Angeles, has been hired to defend the Exxon Corp. The firm was hired earlier to help defend Exxon in 150 civil suits arising out of the spill, attorney Charles Bender said.

Neal, 60, was a U.S. attorney in Tennessee in the 1960s and prosecuted

Teamster leader Jimmy Hoffa. A decade later he served as chief trial counsel for the Watergate special prosecutor's office.

As a private defense lawyer, Neal won acquittals for Elvis Presley's doctor on drug-related charges; the Ford Motor Co. in the Pinto crash case; Louisiana Gov. Edwin Edwards on corruption charges; and John Landis on charges arising out of the Twilight Zone movie crash deaths.

Shortly after the spill, the Justice Department opened an environmental crimes office in Anchorage, staffed by lawyers from Washington who brought the charges.

On March 22, following a two-month state court trial, the captain of the Exxon Valdez, Joseph Hazelwood, 43, was convicted of negligent discharge of oil by a jury that found him innocent of three more serious charges.

Jurors interviewed after the verdict said Hazelwood was wrong to leave the bridge of the ship on a detour around icebergs near Bligh Reef, but they said other crewmen, the Coast Guard, Exxon and Alyeska Pipeline Service Co. shared responsibility for the grounding and spill.

MOSCOW (APRIL 8) UPI - Politburo hard-liner Yegor Ligachev mocked Mikhail Gorbachev's idea of a common European home Sunday and said a united Germany would be destabilizing for Europe.

Ligachev, once the No. 2 man to Gorbachev in the Politburo, told the agricultural newspaper Selskaya Zhizn that socialism was being abandoned in Eastern Europe. Ligachev was in charge of ideology in the Politburo until he was demoted in 1988 and placed in charge of agriculture.

''I am for the development of peaceful coexistence and increasing cooperation between various states (with different systems), but not at the cost of curtailment of socialism and the strengthening of capitalism '' he said.

''If things continue the way they are, then perhaps only the Soviet Union will enter the 'common European home' as a socialist state,'' Ligachev said, taking a swipe at Gorbachev's vision for a Europe of good neighbors.

Ligachev cited World War II, in which the Soviet Union lost at least 20 million people, to explain his fears about reuniting Germany, divided since the end of the war into two states, one the mainstay of NATO and the other of the Warsaw Pact.

''The creation of a united Germany by means of swallowing the German Democratic Republic ... will lead to a dangerous infringement of European stability, and a complete negation of the results of the Second World War '' he said.

When he was in charge nf,ideology, Ligachev, 69, could have commanded any newspaper in the country to present his line, but on Sunday he had to resort to the farm newpaper Selskaya Zhizn in view of his post as the chief of agriculture.

Essentially, Ligachev repeated criticism of Gorbachev's policies that he made last month at a meeting of the Central Committee of the Communist Party. But Ligachev said the deterioration had deepened.

Ligachev, a firm believer in a monolithic Communist Party, said that the Soviet party, which voted to give up its monopoly of power in February, should now be ''cleansed'' of disprutive elements.

''Certain Communists not only participate in, but also lead nationalist and separatist organizations,'' he said.

Ligachev, who was one of the most effective regional party chiefs of the Leonid Brezhnev era as the head of the Tomsk region for 18 years, said if dissident factions were not rooted out, the Communist Party would split apart.

''This has already happened in both Estonia and Lithuania,'' he said. The communist parties of those Baltic republics have declared themselves independent of Moscow.

Ligachev reiterated his standard formula for improving agriculture: greater investments in collectvie farms, a solution Gorbachev has rejected as throwing good money after bad.

Gorbachev last month pushed through a land reform that would let peasants leave the collectives and set up private homesteads as a way of trying to cut down on imports of 40 million tons of grain.

ATHENS, Greece (APRIL 8) UPI - Greeks trekked to the polls Sunday to elect a 300-member parliament, hoping the third general election in just 10 months would break a political stalemate between the conservatives and leftists.

In a closely contested election, the conservative New Democracy was challenged by the Pan-Hellenic Socialist Movement, known by the Greek acronym PASOK, and the Communist-led Alliance of the Left, with 37 smaller parties and groups also in the fray.

Voting ended shortly before 8 p.m. and inconclusive early returns showed New Democracy leading in 15 of the 300 constituencies.

With Greece's economy seen to be in ruins after 8 years of PASOK rule, the conservatives were making their third bid in 10 months to capture power at the ballot box, after narrowly missing their goal last June and November.

But support for New Democracy was balanced almost evenly by the combined left wing and interest in the elections to the single-chamber legislature was high because the results were expected to be close.

Balloting began at 7 a.m. and officials called the turnout high, although final figures were not available. Eight million people were eligible to vote. No incidents were reported from any constituency.

''The elections are being carried out in very calm conditions,'' caretaker Prime Minister Xenophon Zolotas told reporters as he voted in Athens.

The elections became necessary because elections last June and November were inconclusive, with New Democracy winning a plurality of seats in parliament but falling just three seats shy of an overall majority in the later contest.

New Democracy leaders said a long-term coalition with either of the two main left-wing parties would be unworkable and maneuvered to take the country through its third general elections in 10 months in a bid to take power with a clear majority in the single-chamber parliament, called the Vouli.

New Democracy chief Constantine Mitsotakis warned voters in a hard-hitting speech Friday that if PASOK came to power again, either by itself or in coalition with the communists, it would bring economic ruin to the country.

Eight years of PASOK rule between 1981 and 1989 resulted in an economic crisis because the Socialists emptied the treasury and last year the government was unable to pay salaries and pensions. It had to take a syndicated loan from foreign banks to do so.

''A lot of time and sacrifices will be needed for the country to get out of the crisis,'' elder statesman Constantine Caramanlis said after casting his vote Sunday.

Andreas Papandreou, who heads PASOK and was ousted as prime minister in June amid allegations of corruption, predicted a victory for his party.

''On Monday, a progressive government will be formed, with PASOK as its main body,'' Papandreou told reporters at an Athens polling station.

Papandreou campaigned vigorously over the past month to restore a political image shattered by financial and sex scandals.

He reportedly may be indicted in a special court for alleged involvement in a scandal in which a prominent banker was charged with embezzling more than $200 million and funneling some of the money into PASOK's campaign funds.

But he told Greeks in his campaign speeches over the past month that he could provide them with a strong, stable and effective government, which the conservatives were unable to do in the past 10 months.

Police said about 1 million people from Athens, out of a city population of about 4.5 million, left during the weekend to cast their ballots in other parts of the country where they were registered to vote.

Mitsotakis, registered in Greece's second-largest city Thessaloniki, cast his vote there early Sunday.

LOS ANGELES (APRIL 8) UPI - Gasoline prices rose an average of more than 2 cents a gallon in the past two weeks in a dramatic turnaround signalling the opening of the warm weather driving season, an industry analyst said Sunday.

The Lundberg Survey of 13,000 gasoline stations nationwide found the average price of a gallon of gasoline was 113.31 cents on April 6, up 2 1/3 cents from the March 23 price, Trilby Lundberg said.

The increase, which followed a period of wintertime price drops, reflected a rise in wholesale prices, Lundberg said.

''During the period from March 23 to April 6, wholesale prices increased almost 3 1/2 cents, meaning retailers lost margin,'' she said. ''They will be attempting to get it back.''

Lundberg said the upward price pressure also signals the beginning of the traditionally high-consumption driving season.

''It's typical for the season, as refineries begin preparing to crank up their supplies for spring and summer driving season,'' she said.

The Lundberg Survey found the biggest price increases at self-serve stations,where the average price was 101.53 cents for regular unleaded, 118.77 cents for premium unleaded and 100.58 cents for regular leaded.

At full-service stations, prices for a gallon of gas were 129.47 cents for regular unleaded, 142.93 cents for premium unleaded and 128.42 cents for regular leaded.

BEIRUT, LEBANON (APRIL 9) UPI - Christians braved sniper fire to attend Palm Sunday worship services in shell-pocked churches, but inter-Christian firefights stopped relief workers from pulling rotting corpses from a Beirut battlefield.

In Beirut's sprawling southern suburbs, rival Shiite Moslems from the pro-Syrian Amal militia and the Iranian-backed Hezbollah movement fought a street battle that left three people dead and three wounded, security officials said.

The rival Shiites fired machine guns and rocket-propelled grenades in the three-hour skirmish in the residential areas of Shiyah and Ghobeiri, the officials said.

It was not known what caused the inter-Shiite violence to flare. Hezbollah and Amal have battled for more than three years for leadership of Lebanon's 1.5 million Shiites.

In southern Lebanon, artillery shells fired from the Israeli-proclaimed security zone hit six Shiite villages around the the market town of Nabatiyeh, 33 miles southeast of Beirut, police said. One person was killed and six wounded in the bombardment, police said.

In Chistian east Beirut, children in white garments and waving candles and olive branches led flocks of Christian faithful past front lines, where troops from rival Christian forces brandished machine guns and anti-armor rockets.

Many youngsters were shouldered by smartly dressed men as thousands of families emerged from their sand-bagged shelters and damaged homes in the 310-square-mile Christian enclave.

The television station run by Samir Geagea's Christian Lebanese Forces militia broadcast videotape showing thousands of people attending festivities inside chuches with shell-damaged ceilings and shrapnel-cut furniture.

Although Christian clerics urged Geagea's followers and their foes from the army of Christian military of Gen. Michel Aoun to maintain calm, the annual festival was marred with violence.

Military sources loyal to Aoun said workers of the Lebanese Red Cross were cought in crossfire at the devastated town of Qlaiaat in the mountainuous district of Kesrouwane, 12 miles northeast of Beirut, as the rescuers tried to recover seven decaying bodies from the battleground.

''While the Red Cross tried to pull the militia corpses, gunmen advanced and attempted to boost their positions,'' a spokesman for Aoun's army said.

The army troops opened fire to halt the militias' movements and the armed men retaliated, trapping the rescuers in the middle of the gunfire exchanges, the spokesman said.

''The Red Cross team managed to flee the battlefield after failing to accomplish the humanitarian mission,'' the spokesman said. One militiaman disguised in civilian clothes was taken prisoner as he approached army positions, the spokesman said.

A militia spokesman denied the report, saying Aoun's troops opened fire on the rescuers without provocation.

The Rev. Boulos Naaman, a member of a local mediation committee, planned to accompany the Red Cross to the embattled region Monday to try to retrieve the bodies, the Lebanese Forces spokesman said.

A recent battle between Aoun's army and Geagea's gunmen in and around Qlaiaat was one of their fiercest since the bloody war for control of the Christian region broke out Jan. 31.

The Kesrouwane district, once a famous tourist attraction, became a maze of damaged or burned houses as a result of artillery and rocket bombardment.

At least 912 people have died and 2,843 have been wounded since the violence broke out, engulfing east Beirut and a cluster of nearby towns and villages.

A week ago, local mediators arranged a new cease-fire, but the truce has been marred with recurring violence.

Aoun, with a well-trained 15,000-strong army, accused Geagea and his well-organized 10,000-member militia or seeking to control the country's ''legitimate authority.''

The militia leader accused Aoun of trying to crush his militia and maintains Aoun should relinquish powers to pro-Syrian President Elias Hrawi.

Hrawi was elected president as a result of a Western-supported peace treaty forged last October by the Lebanese parliament in Taif, Saudi Arabia.

KARACHI, PAKISTAN (APRIL 9) UPI - The head of an opposition party representing migrants from India said Sunday he has begun a hunger strike to press authorities to take action against activists who killed several of his supporters.

Meanwhile, a sniper killed a police officer riding a motorcycle, bringing to 15 the number of deaths in three days of political violence in the southern port of Karachi, police and hospital sources said. At least 35 people have been wounded.

The violence erupted Friday night when activists from the Mohajir Qaumi Movement, a major opposition party representing Mohajir migrants from India, and militants belonging to the youth wing of Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto's Pakistan People Party clashed and fired indiscriminately in several areas of the city.

MQM leader Altaf Hussein told about 200 of his supporters outside his home Sunday evening he would fast until the government arrests those responsible for the deaths of the Mohajirs.

''I have gone on a hunger strike,'' he said. ''My life is in the hands of Almighty God, and if I have to die like this you cannot stop it. I have taken this extreme action to save other lives which are in danger.''

He said he would continue the fast until there were ''positive and sincere indications from the president and the prime minister that they will take action against the killers of the Mohajirs.''

The crowd responded with shouts of ''Bhutto is a murderer!'' and ''Long live the Mohajirs!''

Hussein urged the crowd to use ''discipline and restraint ... because the government wants to eliminate you.''

The MQM, which has 14 members in the National Assembly, initially supported Bhutto's government when she took office in December 1988. In September the movement withdrew that support and joined the opposition.

It accused the Bhutto adminstration of not promoting the interests of the Mohajirs, whose families came to Pakistan from India after the partition of the subcontinent in 1947.

The latest unrest was the worst in the city since Feb. 7, when at least 33 people were killed and more than 100 wounded in riots during an anti-government strike called by the MQM.

Karachi, Pakistan's largest city, and surrounding Sind Province have been wracked by ethnic violence for the past several years that has left hundreds dead.

MOSCOW (APRIL 9) UPI - Thousands of protesters in the city of Ufa demanded Sunday that all chemical plants in the area be closed following a toxic spill that contaminated the water supply for 600,000 people, Soviet television reported.

Most of the population of Ufa, the capital of the Bashkir autonomous republic about 370 miles southeast of Moscow, has been without normal water supplies since the Ufimka River was contaminated with a herbicide nine days ago.

Some water is now being trucked into the area and bottled water was provided for kindergarten children, the elderly and hospital patients.

The Soviet television news program ''Vremya'' said many thousands participated in a demonstration Sunday in Ufa to protest the contamination and demand the closure of chemical plants in the region.

''Ufa is a second Chernobyl,'' said one banner displayed at the rally.

''I demand first of all clean water for our children,'' a woman at the rally told a television reporter.

The Tass news agency said in a report at the time of the contamination that herbicides from the Himprom chemical plant had accumulated in a small lake and then escaped into the river through ''carelessness.'' The exact cause of the spill was under investigation.

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, SC (APRIL 8) UPI - Top seed Martina Navratilova won her 150th tournament title Sunday, defeating teenager Jennifer Capriati 6-2, 6-4 to capture the $500,000 Family Circle Magazine Cup.

The victory gave Navratilova her fourth FCC title and moved her within striking distance of Chris Evert's record 157 career tournament championships.

Navratilova, 33, overpowered the 14-year-old Capriati with her savvy net play and volley-and-serve style, winning all 12 of her serves and breaking the teenager's serve three times.

Capriati, playing in only her third professional tournament, missed four opportunities to break Navratilova's serve after battling the veteran to deuce.

Navratilova began playing on the pro circuit three years before Capriati was born. She said she felt ''a lot of pressure'' in playing the strong-hitting teenager.

''There's been a lot more hype about Jennifer (than other tournament players) and I hadn't seen her play that much,'' Navratilova said. ''It was nervewracking. I had everything to lose and I had nothing to lose. There was a lot of pressure but I rose to the challenge.''

Capriati, of Wesley Chapel, Fla., had blown out four of her five previous tournament opponents in straight sets in less than an hour. Only eighth-seeded Helen Kelesi took her to three sets in a third-round match that lasted one hour and 51 minutes. Sunday's straight sets loss to Navratilova took one hour and 13 minutes.

Navratilova also had breezed into the final, defeating her four previous opponents in straight sets.

Capriati had difficulty getting anything past Navratilova at the net, and Navratilova's volley-and-serve play neutralized the teenager's powerful backhand, which had kept other opponents on the defensive at the baseline.

''(Capriati) hits it hard from just about anywhere on the court. She doesn't let you relax,'' Navratilova said. ''I served well when I had to. I just played really well on the big points. The serve and volley game paid off.''

Capriati entered the tournament on a wild card, unseeded and unranked by the Women's International Tennis Association. In her two previous tournaments, Capriati reached the final of the Virginia Slims of Florida and the fourth round of the Lipton Players International Championship. With her appearance in the Family Circle Cup, she is expected to be ranked this week among the world's top 35 players.

Capriati said she was not intimidated by the world's No. 2 tennis player but she acknowledged some early jitters.

''I was playing against one of the greats, Martina. It did make it different (than her previous matches),'' she said. ''I didn't think I was that on. When I got the big points, I missed the opportunity to break (Navratilova's serve).''

Navratilova picked up $100,000 for her victory, while Capriati received $40,000 as runner-up. As the winner, Navratilova also received a new sports car.

''It's just as well that I won because if Jennifer won she couldn't drive it (the prize car) anyway,'' Navratilova said.

(APRIL 8) UPI - Ryan White's battle against AIDS and misconceptions about the disease ended with his death today in an Indianapolis hospital. The 18-year-old hemophiliac died of a respiratory illness brought on by AIDS. In 1984, White was one of the first American youngsters diagnosed as having AIDS, and was temporarily barred from school. President Bush issued a statement saying White's death re-affirms that the country ''must pledge to continue the fight'' against AIDS.

A published report says the Soviet Union has rejected a secret U-S proposal to ban land-based missiles with multiple warheads. Soviet President Gorbachev reportedly responded to the proposal in a letter delivered to President Bush on Friday. The Soviet Union has long based most of its missiles on land, while the United States has increased the number of its submarines at sea.

Balloting is reported to be proceeding normally today in Greece, where citizens are trying for the third time in 10 months to seat a government. NO party could win a majority in parliament in the last two elections. Officials say turnout today is high, with half of the country's eight-Million registered voters casting ballots by midday. The campaign for parliament was hard fought between conservatives and left-wing parties.

Detroit police say three suspects in a shooting rampage that killed six people at a reputed crack house have been arrested. Police said one woman and two men were taken into custody without incident yesterday and today. The three will be arraigned tomorrow. AUGUSTA, GA (APRIL 8) UPI - Nick Faldo knew the script by heart, so there should have been no surprise that when the curtain was raised on the Masters' annual drama, his performance was flawless.

Faldo became the second player in history to win the Masters two consecutive years and he did so Sunday in almost exactly the same way he won it the first time.

''It came down to the same deal as last year, didn't it?'' Faldo said. So much so that the 1989 and 1990 tournaments will go down in history as the Twin Masters.

Twelve months ago, in the rain and gloom of a miserable Sunday afternoon, Faldo came from five shots behind on the back nine to tie Scott Hoch, survived the first hole of sudden death when Hoch missed a 2-foot par putt that would have won it, then captured the Masters on the next hole with a 25-foot birdie putt.

Faldo found himself four shots behind with eight holes to go Sunday and came back on a gorgeous afternoon to catch the faltering Raymond Floyd, again surviving potential elimination on the first extra hole, and winning the title when Floyd sent his approach shot on the second hole of sudden death into the pond that fronts the 11th green.

A routine par won it for Faldo, bringing him his third major championship and extending the stretch of non-American winners at the Masters to three straight years. Faldo became the first player since Jack Nicklaus 24 years ago to win the year's first major golf tournament two times in a row.

For Floyd, who at 47 was trying to become the oldest winner in Masters history, the outcome was a shock - just as it was to Hoch a year earlier. Floyd, after all, put himself four shots in front when he birdied the par-3 12th hole and with his reputation as one of the best front runners in golf history it seemed there would be a runaway winner.

''I didn't think I could lose after I got four shots in front,'' Floyd said. ''I don't think I've had anything affect me like this. At this stage of the game how many chances are you going to get.''

The dramatic playoff, extending a streak of Masters in which the tournament has not been decided until the final stroke was hit, marked the first time in the event's 54-year history that the title has been decided in extra holes two straight years.

Faldo had to fight back from a double bogey at the opening hole and played the last eight holes in 3-under to shoot a 69 and finish at 10-under 278. Floyd, meanwhile, was coasting along with a comfortable lead before Faldo began making birdies on the back nine. On the final hole of regulation, it was Floyd who had to save par from a greenside bunker just to get into the playoff with a final round of even-par 72.

Faldo, however, seemed to be a beaten player on the first extra hole - the 485-yard, par-4 10th. He hit a poor drive and put his second shot into a greenside bunker. Floyd, meanwhile, hit an excellent second shot to within 15 feet of the pin.

But Faldo blasted to within four feet and made that putt for par after Floyd had missed his birdie attempt.

Then, after a good drive at the 11th, Floyd's second shot came up short and plopped into the pond which guards the front of the green. Faldo made no mistakes. He hit his second shot to within 20 feet and easily two-putted for the victory.

''This is a very emotional one for me,'' Faldo said. ''To have to go walking back to 10 (for the playoff) like we did last year was strange. I played it the same way I did last year. I was in the same bunker. I said after what happened to Scott, that hole might get back at me this time.

''And even after Raymond hit his ball in the water I still have to hit my shot. I still have to make it. I didn't want to completely bail out (and play safe).''

(APRIL 8) UPI - Ryan White, the Indiana teen-ager who was at the forefront of the fight to educate the nation about AIDS, died today at the age of 18. White had been hospitalized since late last month on a life-support ventiliting machine. White was 13 when he learned he'd contracted AIDS during a blood transfusion. His struggle to attend public schools was documented in a television movie.

President and Mrs. Bush sent Ryan's family their condolences today, saying they are ''deeply saddened'' by his death. In a statement issued from Camp David, Bush said- ''Ryan's death re-affirms that we as a people must pledge to continue the fight, his fight, against this dreaded disease.

Ryan White's five-year battle against AIDS has ended. The 18-year-old died today in an Indianapolis hospital of a ''complication of AIDS.''

Dr. Martin Kleiman of Riley Hospital for Children said White was ''the boy next door who first showed to a stunned nation that NO one is safe from the risk of AIDS.''

White contracted AIDS during treatment for hemophilia in 1984 at the age of 13. He gained national media attention when he won a court order allowing him to attend classes at the Western Middle School near Kokomo, Indiana. His story was made into a 1989 television movie- ''The Ryan White

White died 10 days after entering the hospital. He was sedated and put on life support.

President Bush issued a brief statement today saying Ryan's death- ''re-affirms that we as a people must pledge to continue the fight, his fight, against this dreaded disease.''

Indiana Governor Evan Bayh ordered flags in the state flown at half-staff Wednesday... the day of the funeral.

Today is election day in Peru and three other countries- Yugoslavia, Hungary and Greece.

In Peru, voters are choosing a new president to replace the highly UNpopular President Alan Garcia. They're also voting for 60 senators and 180 deputies in Congress.

Officials said the voting in the South American country was proceeding relatively calmly, despite threats of violence from the communist guerrilla group Shining Path. Authorities in Lima say there were NO serious incidents.

The front-running presidential candidate is novelist-turned-politician Mario Vargas Llosa YOH'-sah of the center-right Democratic Front.

In Yugoslavia, voters in the northwestern state of Slovenia cast ballots for president and parliamentary deputies. It's Communist-ruled Yugoslavia's first multi-party election in 45 years.

Hungarians voted in runoff elections being held essentially to determine which anti-communist party will have a majority in parliament. The first round of voting was March 25th.

Voting was reported calm in parliamentary elections in Greece, in the third attempt in 10 months to seat a government.

(APRIL 8) UPI - Firefighters in Lysekil, Sweden, have nearly extinguished a fire that erupted aboard a ferry boat yesterday in the North Sea. Now, crews are beginning the grim task of removing bodies from the Scandinavian Star ferry.

The confirmed death toll is 75, but police say the number could nearly double as workers search for 73 people still missing.

One rescue worker said ''it is NOT a pleasant sight,'' and added there were bodies everywhere- in cabins, in passageways and in cars.

The blaze erupted yesterday as the ship carried Easter vacationers from Oslo, Norway, to Denmark. The captain has said he thinks the fire was deliberately set.

The ship was earlier cited for safety and fire violations after a blaze in 1988.

Passengers who survived yesterday's tragedy say fire alarms on board the ship did NOT work. They also say Filipino and Portuguese crew members were NOT able to communicate with each other or with passengers.

Searchers today found another body in the charred rubble of the Fontana Hotel in Miami Beach... raising the death toll from Friday's fire to at least five.

About 75 firefighters, state fire marshals and federal arson investigators are using search dogs, cranes and blowtorches to search for what may be as many as nine additional bodies.

Police Detective Jim Hyde describes the search as excrutiatingly slow because of the amount of debris dangling from the upper floors.

Hyde says it may be three or four weeks before the cause of the fire is known.

Authorities say the 51-year-old hotel was built of concrete blocks with wood joists and wall framing. One official compared it to a barbecue pit.

New smoke alarms were installed in September, but there were NO sprinklers.

Authorities say the speed at which the fire spread indicates arson may have been the cause.

21 people were injured in the blaze. The Red Cross has found temporary homes for most of the 150 residents.

(APRIL 8) UPI - Protesters demanding democracy in Nepal won a victory today when the king legalized political parties, ending a 29-year ban.

The announcement over Radio Nepal touched off demonstrations of delight throughout the Himalayan kingdom's capital of Katmandu, with people whistling and shouting from rooftops.

It appeared that the king had little choice but to give in. Protesters demanding democratic reforms began a wave of political unrest in February that has left about 50 people dead and thousands jailed. In the end, some members of parliament joined opposition leaders in urging the king to allow multi-party democracy.

Two members issued a statement saying ''there is NO alternative for the king but to declare a multi-party system.''

On Friday, at least 200-thousand demonstrators filled the streets near the royal palace in the largest such gathering ever in Katmandu. Witnesses say police opened fire as the crowd marched toward the palace, killing at least eight people.

What makes the telescope unique is that it will operate 380 miles above the Earth... outside of the obscuring atmosphere. The space telescope will be able to study astronomical targets with 10 times greater clarity than ever before.

SUNNYVALE, CA (APRIL 9) BUSINESS WIRE - Xerox Corp. has introduced a powerful upgrade to its high-performance ViewPoint-based family of information management workstations.

The new multitasking workstation, called the Xerox 6085 Model 2, doubles the speed performance of ViewPoint, the sophisticated graphical user interface pioneered by Xerox.

In addition to its use of icons, windows and WYSIWYG (''what you see is what you get'') display, which were developed at the Xerox Palo Alto Research Center (PARC), ViewPoint improves workgroup productivity. It does this by providing an electronic desktop and connecting users into a network architecture designed specifically to enhance the collaborative efforts of users throughout an organization. The electronic desktops can be customized.

As on the earlier 6085 series, ViewPoint on the Model 2 provides a multitasking environment which, combined with Xerox Network Services (XNS) provides a full array of over 40 ViewPoint applications. These include document creation and management, drawing and illustration, spreadsheets, communications, storage and retrieval, printing and hypertext.

The applications are fully integrated to support collaborative support systems, intelligent information access, image management, integrated electronic publishing and multinational language document processing.

The 6085 Model 2 continues to have the capability to run MS-DOS applications simultaneously within ViewPoint as did the first model 6085 Professional Computing System. This gives users the best of both worlds: the versatility, sophistication and ease-of-use of ViewPoint's integrated applications and the specialized applications of the personal computer world.

As a move toward open and integrated systems, the Model 2 marks another step in the evolution of the ViewPoint user environment, according to Joseph McGrath, vice president of strategy marketing for the Xerox Integrated Systems Operations.

The 6085 Model 2 is being offered at a promotional discount until April 30 1990, through the company's Integrated Systems Operation (ISO), which has its marketing headquarters in Sunnyvale. Order-taking and shipment begins immediately in the United States and Canada.

CEDAR RAPIDS, IA (APRIL 9) BUSINESS WIRE - Rockwell International Corporation's (NYSE: ROK) Collins Defense Communications has entered into an agreement with IBM's Systems Integration Division in Manassas, Va. to produce an advanced digital signal processing device containing VHSIC (Very High Speed Integrated Circuit) technology.

The 18-month program, valued at approximately $900,000, is part of IBM's VHSIC Phase 2 research effort sponsored by the Department of Defense. VHSIC development began in the late 1970s with the goal to develop an advanced microelectronics technology base to meet the unique and demanding needs of military systems.

The development effort, conducted over a series of phases, has sought to reduce the size, weight, and power consumption of electronic circuits while increasing their capability, speed, and other factors such as radiation hardness.

IBM, which has been active in VHSIC development since its inception, announced last year the successful production of the first fully functional and fully tested half-micron VHSIC chips at its VHSIC foundry in Manassas, Va.

A micron is one-millionth of a meter or about 1/100th the thickness of a a sheet of typing paper. The half-micron chips are particularly well-suited for use in digital signal processing equipment for military applications.

Under terms of the agreement, Collins Defense Communications will provide IBM with the VHSIC designs of its Polyphase Digital Filterbank Processor. The device will be designed, simulated and prepared for electronic media transfer to IBM using the latest version of the VHSIC High Level Description Language. IBM will fabricate the chips in their Advanced Semiconductor Facility in Manassas.

The Polyphase Filterbank Processor is a digital signal processing technique presently used in the CDC Advanced Digital (Airborne) Antisubmarine Warfare Receiver program. Because of its flexibility and real-time reprogrammability, the Polyphase Filterbank has many applications in other highly channelized communication systems.

Stan Levanduski is Rockwell's program manager for the Antisubmarine Warfare Receiver and VHSIC programs. "The significance of this award," he said, "is that it proves that existing electronic devices such as our Polyphase Filterbank can be implemented in VHSIC technology, which greatly enhance their performance.

SAN FRANCISCO (APRIL 9) BUSINESS WIRE - David L. Sprague (42) and Sam Young (31) have been named vice presidents according to Al Young, agency president.

Sprague holds the post of vice president of business development and Young vice president of operations.

Sprague has been director of public relations and new business manager for the agency since 1988. Previously, he was editor in chief of Microwave Systems News, West Coast editor for Microwave Journal and a 20 year veteran of the electronic design and marketing community. Sprague holds a BSEE from the University of Nevada, Reno and an MBA from the University of Chicago. He lives in Martinez, Calif.

Since 1985, Young's previous positions with Bonfield include media director and account executive. He served as the agency computer programmer from 1980 to 1985. Young holds a BA from the University of California, Berkeley and a JD degree from Hastings College of the Law. He lives in El Cerrito, Calif.

''We are gaining clients and producing effective technology product promotion thanks largely to the synergistic blend between these men's aptitude for business, science and communications skills with technology-oriented business people,'' said Al Young.

Bonfield Associates is a full service agency offering advertising, PR, marketing research and collateral services. FULLERTON, CA (APRIL 9) BUSINESS WIRE - Hughes Aircraft Company's Ground Systems Group will trade up to 1,000 aging personal computers for new Macintosh and IBM systems while saving over 50 percent off normal list prices in a unique buy-back program with Businessland, it was announced Monday.

The trend to upgrade first-generation systems is prevalent in industries that are going through major changes, such as the defense industry which is hard pressed to cut costs and improve productivity, yet not let computer equipment become obsolete. Upgrade programs offer a viable alternative to purchasing new equipment.

''We were looking for ways to trim long-term operational costs while still providing the best productivity tools for our employees,'' said Mary Howlett, manager of Management Information Technologies, Hughes Ground Sytstems Group.

''This buy-back program offers us a cost-efficient way to replace 30 percent of our current systems, which are over four year old, with new systems at a potential savings of close to a half-million dollars,'' she said.

According to Howlett, Macintosh represents a third of the current installed base, with the remaining two-thirds divided between several DOS-based machines. Hughes Aircraft Co. is one of the country's largest Macintosh users, and the Ground Systems Group has approximately 2,500 Macintosh computers currently in use.

''Our goal is to secure 75 to 80 percent of the overall business from this buy-back program,'' said Jim Law, national account executive, Apple Computer Inc.

The credit values offered for existing hardware vary depending on the models being traded. In total, credits will be offered on 21 different computers and peripherals. The credit values, in addition to Hughes' volume discount, will amount to an effective savings of more than 50 percent off retail list prices.

To further reduce support costs associated with this program, the Businessland site in Orange, Calif., will provide installation, data transfer and software loading, and all approval will be done in advance through a pricing agreement with Businessland.

Hughes Aircraft Co. has engaged in the design, production and support of high techonology electronic systems for military, commercial and scientific use for the past four decades, with current worldwide sales of more that $7 billion annually.

SAN MATEO, CA (APRIL 9) BUSINESS WIRE - Recently, a news release describing an expansion of CBR's Tilbury Cement Plant in Delta B.C. was erroneously released.

The release contained inaccurate information as to the size and type of project being undertaken. A copy of the correct and final version of the Tilbury news release follows. Please use it as an accurate source of information, and disregard any previous copies you may have received.

Tilbury Cement will increase the production capacity of its Delta B.C. plant, already the largest cement plant in the Pacific Northwest, by 25 percent, through a major expansion and modernization program. The project will bring plant capacity to 1.2 million tonnes annually by the end of next year.

With construction activity in the region expected to continue at a strong pace in the coming years, the expansion will allow Tilbury to better serve its cement customers in British Columbia, Washington, Oregon and Alaska.

Tilbury is one of the CBR group of companies in North America operating in Western Canada and the Western United States. CBR companies include cement, ready-mix and aggregates operations.

SAN FRANCISCO (APRIL 9) BUSINESS WIRE - Del Monte Foods, the San Francisco based marketer and manufacturer of food products under the Del Monte brand name, announced Monday plans to consolidate their Wells, Minn., processing and packaging plant with existing, similar vegetable facilities in Minnesota and Illinois.

This will result in the closure of the Wells facility in early 1991.

Consolidating vegetable production will allow for better utilization of existing, underutilized manufacturing capacity. When completed in early 1991, the closure will affect approximately 23 full-time employees.

Del Monte Foods plans to sell the facility which is located on Highway 22 on the northern edge of the city limits of Wells.

SANTA CLARA, CA (APRIL 9) BUSINESS WIRE - 3Com Corp. Monday announced it is shipping two new communications servers that support industry-standard networking protocols, including Transmission Control Protocol/Internetwork Protocol (TCP/IP), Xerox Network Systems (XNS) and Open Systems Interconnect (OSI).

The company also announced it is one of the first communications server suppliers to license the Local Area Transport (LAT) protocol directly from Digital Equipment Corp. Its new communications servers will support concurrent LAT and TCP/IP during the first quarter of 1991.

''Customers need multiple protocol capabilities to co-exist in multivendor networks,'' said Bobbi Murphy, marketing director of 3Com's Enterprise Systems Division. ''By licensing Digital's LAT protocol, we ensure interoperability and compatibility with Digital systems.''

Ideal for local departmental installations, the new CS/2000 and CS/2100 products are high-performance communications servers that connect groups of up to 10 terminals, personal computers, modems or printers to a local area network. The new communications servers also have one megabyte of memory, which provides the necessary memory capacity for the addition of optional new features.

The CS/2000 and CS/2100 are part of 3Com's communications server family, which also includes the CS/1 communications server. The CS/1 provides connectivity for up to 64 devices and also will support concurrent LAT and TCP/IP.

The CS/2000 and CS/2100 share common components of the company's NETBuilder interworking products: the power supply, chassis and disk drive. This commonality of components reduces service time and expense for the customer and stocking expenses for the reseller.

3Com's communications servers offer two unmatched features: access control and conditional macros. With access control, a network manager can control access to network resources by user identification, location or time of day. Conditional macros allows the creation of customized menu interfaces and single-keystroke function operation, which simplify user access to multiple resources and automate many complex repetitive keyboard functions.

The CS/2000 and CS/2100 replace the company's current CS/200 and CS/210 communications server models. The CS/2000 is a diskless unit and is booted over the network with 3Com's Network Control Server (NCS) station. The CS/2100 incorporates a 3.5-inch disk drive and can be booted locally through this unit or centrally through the NCS.

The CS/2000 and CS/2100 communications servers are available now and sell for $2,800 and $3,300 respectively. Software pricing is available separately for each protocol.

3Com Corp. is a computer networking systems company providing multivendor connectivity and information sharing for workgroups, departments and corporate environments worldwide.

MUNCIE, IN (APRIL 9) BUSINESS WIRE - Ball Corp. (NYSE:BLL) is playing a major scientific role in NASA's Hubble Space Telescope (HST).

The largest astronomical observatory ever to be placed in orbit, the HST is scheduled to be launched aboard the Space Shuttle Discovery on April 10 from the Kennedy Space Center in Florida.

Ball built the Goddard High Resolution Spectrograph (GHRS), one of the five major scientific instruments aboard the HST, under a $47 million contract with NASA's Goddard Space Flight Center. The GHRS will study ultraviolet light emitted by stars, planets and galaxies.

The GHRS is expected to reveal information about the age, chemical composition, temperature, magnetic characteristics, motion and distance of objects in space.

Ball also is building two second-generation HST instruments, the Near-Infrared Camera and Multiple-Objective Spectrometer (NICMOS) and the Space Telescope Imaging Spectrograph (STIS). These instruments will be used to upgrade the HST during servicing by the Space Shuttle. Using data provided by the two second-generation instruments, scientists expect to answer basic questions about astronomy ranging from the formation of planets and stars to the origin of galaxies and the universe.

Also aboard the HST are Ball-built fixed head star trackers used for initial pointing of the telescope toward observation targets.

Ball Corp. manufactures and markets packaging, industrial and consumer products, and provides aerospace systems and professional services to the federal sector.

The company participates in the domestic glass container industry and Canadian packaging market through two joint venture companies, Ball-Incon Glass Packaging Corp. and Ball Packaging Products Canada, Inc. The company reported 1989 sales of $1.2 billion.

BOSTON (APRIL 9) BUSINESS WIRE - Corporate developers will soon be able to use MOZART to build cooperative processing applications that can be directly transported between DOS and OS/2 EE without modification.

Version 2.0 of the MOZART application development system will be available for OS/2 EE Presentation Manager, DOS graphics-based and DOS character-based development environments in the second quarter of 1990.

Other MOZART enhancements include additional SAA/CUA standards compliance and a relational DBMS interface via embedded SQL.

Mozart Systems Corp. will preview new MOZART tools and outline its strategic directions for IBM's System Application Architecture at the SAA World Conference & Exposition, April 9 through April 11, Hynes Auditorium in Boston (booth 214).

MOZART for OS/2 supports native Presentation Manager applications using PM-supplied CUA objects, takes advantage of OS/2 EE interprocess communications facilities and runs as a full multi-threaded OS/2 application.

The DOS graphics version of MOZART provides presentation-level graphic icons and inclusion of graphic images without requiring additional operating system software such as Windows or Presentation Manager. A new MOZART DOS Extended Memory version allows developers to go beyond the traditional DOS 640K memory barrier and load multiple applications simultaneously under DOS.

MOZART is used by corporations looking to modernize host applications for cooperative processing while adhering to IBM's guidelines for SAA and Common User Access (CUA-1989 Graphical Model for workstations). MOZART pre-defines CUA objects directly within the development environment's Screen Painter.

Thus MOZART supports interactive creation of objects rather than complex programming of those objects in a separate code generator, which is required by programs such as Easel.

MOZART applications interact with various input devices including keyboard mouse, touch screen and bar code readers or a combination thereof. CUA display objects include action bars, entry fields, push buttons and radio buttons, check boxes, spin buttons, list boxes and other interface display elements that help make applications more intuitive and easy to use.

MOZART interfaces can include pop-up boxes and menus, icons and image fields, modal or modeless dialog boxes and context-sensitive multilevel help.

Mozart Systems Corp. (formerly Aspen Research) was founded in 1985 to develop software products for cooperative processing environments. The MOZART application development system provides a common, integrated development environment for both DOS and OS/2 Extended Edition platforms. MOZART has also been incorporated into CASE development solutions and custom vertical applications.

LONGMONT, CO (APRIL 9) BUSINESS WIRE - PrairieTek Corp., manufacturer of the first 2.5-inch hard disk drives, announces the appointment of Leon Malmed as senior vice president of sales and marketing.

Prior to joining PrairieTek, Malmed was senior vice president of disk-drive products at Maxtor Corp., where he was responsible for R&D, engineering, product marketing, product planning, strategy planning and the P&L for the 5.25- and 3.5-inch disk-drive lines.

During his seven-year employment with Maxtor, Malmed also served in the positions of vice president disk drive products and vice president of sales where he built a worldwide OEM sales organization which increased sales from zero to $125 million per quarter in a highly competitive industry, negotiated numerous highly successful joint ventures and managed several hundred employees.

Malmed was with Quantum Corp. before joining Maxtor where as manager of international sales he built an international sales organization of worldwide distributors. Previous to that he was director of sales for eight years at Qantex Division of North Atlantic Industries, a manufacturer of tape drives and printers, where sales increased from $2 million to $20 million per year under his leadership.

Malmed brings over 15 years experience of building and managing computer organizations both nationally and internationally to PrairieTek. As senior vice president of sales and marketing, Malmed will be responsible for all domestic and international marketing and sales activities.

CHICAGO (APRIL 9) BUSINESS WIRE - Making its first product entry into the image processing market, NCR Corp. Monday unveiled its Document Management System (DMS) - an open solution for enterprise - wide document imaging.

It is designed to improve the productivity of paper-intensive procedures found in organizations, such as financial, insurance and government.

Addressing the need to eliminate the paper shuffle, NCR's Document Management System is an integrated computer hardware and software solution that captures the images of paper documents and converts them to digital form for more efficient access, processing, distribution and management of information within an organization.

Announced here today at the AIIM Show (Associations for Information and Image Management) and scheduled for release later this year, NCR's new Document Management System uses automatic recognition technology to reduce labor for indexing and data entry. The new system is designed for rapid implementation and maximum productivity - increasing the user's return on investment.

According to Martin Bradley, NCR's assistant vice president of Document Processing Systems, image recognition is fundamental to an image processing system and is a major component for increasing productivity, while reducing operating costs. And, NCR is an industry leader in character recognition and document processing.

Unlike other systems that only recognize machine-print characters, NCR's DMS Document Recognition Sybsystem will also recognize handwritten numeric characters which greatly increases productivity.

NCR's Document Management System is based on industry standard architecture allowing users to integrate DMS with existing information systems, leveraging their investment in current equipment and software and maximizing the ability to utilize and exchange images through-out the organization.

NCR Corp., based in Dayton, Ohio, develops, manufactures, markets and supports business information processing systems for worldwide markets.

REDWOOD CITY, CA (APRIL 9) BUSINESS WIRE - Network Equipment Technologies Inc. (NYSE:NWK) Monday reported that it expects revenues for the fourth quarter ended March 31 to approximate $44 million.

The company expects that revenues in the current quarter ended ending June 30 will grow by about 10 percent compared to the March quarter, and that fiscal 1991 revenues will grow about 30 percent.

Analysis conducted by the company this past weekend revealed terms of sale that did not conform to N.E.T. policy. As a consequence of this analysis, the company now believes that gross margins in the fourth quarter will be lower than expected, and that primary earnings per share will be in the range of 10 cents.

N.E.T. also disclosed that it is investigating shipments made against an order that the company recently learned was not valid. Since becoming aware of the situation, N.E.T. and the affected customer have worked together to conduct a thorough investigation and N.E.T. has taken appropriate administrative steps. This situation also contributed to lower revenues and earnings.

N.E.T. does not expect that the conditions that led to these results will recur in this or subsequent quarters.

These announcements follow last week's disclosure by N.E.T. that it expected disappointing results for the fourth quarter ended March 31. The company expects to report its final results April 25.

N.E.T. also said that Craig S. Tysdal, formerly N.E.T.'s vice president of product marketing, has been appointed vice president, national marketing. Tysdal replaces Roger T. Hobbs, who has resigned from N.E.T.

Tysdal joined N.E.T. in 1986 as director of national sales and was named vice president, national sales the following year. He was elected an officer of the company and named vice president of product marketing in May 1989. Tysdal also chairs the corporate operations committee.

Replacing Tysdal is Karyn Mashima, who joins N.E.T. as vice president, corporate marketing after six years in a variety of marketing management positions in the Information Networking Division of Hewlett-Packard Company. Prior to H-P, Mashima held marketing positions at Xerox and Shugart Corp.

Mashima is the second new vice persident named at N.E.T. in the past several weeks. Robert Bressler joined the company from 3Com Corp. last month as vice president of corporate architecture, a new position. He is responsible for coordinating product development that helps ensure consistency between product lines.

N.E.T. announced further that it has installed the IDNX/90, its new T3 product, at a customer site for field trials. The company expects to take orders for the new product later next month, and will begin shipment during the summer. Volume shipments should commence before the end of the calendar year.

N.E.T. develops, manufactures, markets and supports advanced communications products and services that enable large, information-intensive organizations to build and manage wide-area networks.

These networks interconnect computer and communications devices among geographically dispersed locations, enabling organizations to utilize their information systems to competitive and economic advantage.

PORTLAND, OR (APRIL 9) BUSINESS WIRE - Now Software Monday introduced Now Utilities, a collection of 12 system enhancement utilities for the Macintosh.

The $149 collection is the first to concentrate on programs that let users customize the Macintosh making it even more powerful, accessible and fun. Previous utilities have focused on hard disk repair and maintenance, not on enhancements to system performance -- hence the term ''system enhancement utility.''

Now Utilities will begin shipping in volume today and will be demonstrated in Now Software's booth at MacWorld Expo, April 10-13.

Seymour Merrin, a noted authority on distribution issues and editor of the ''ChannelMarker'' newsletter, said: ''The utility market is booming, but most of the established categories are already saturated. I think what they're doing with Now Utilities is significant. They're opening up system enhancement software to a much broader base of users -- and with a pricing structure that assures they'll get some mind-share from the channel. Individual $25 utilities just don't stand on their own anymore.''

The 12 components of Now Utilities are: AlarmsClock, Customizer, DeskPicture, InstantAccess, MemorySetter, NowMenus, Persistence, Print Previewer, Profiler, RearWindow, Startup Manager, and WYSIWYG Menus.

Because of the collection's breadth, everyone has a different reason for wanting it. Colleen Proctor, an account supervisor at Chiat/Day/Mojo, likes WYSIWYG Menus because it lets her, ''...just pull down the Font menu and see what each typeface actually looks like in the size I select.'' She likes Print Previewer for similar reasons: ''It lets me see on-screen what something will look like when I print it out, so I don't need to make a million trips to the printer before I get my presentations the way I want them.''

For Excel power user Georgette Morgan, NowMenus is the most useful utility in the collection: ''Doing spreadsheets on a big screen is great, except my wrist can actually get tired from having to constantly mouse up to the menu bar. With NowMenus I can pop-up the menu bar wherever I want, which is a real productivity booster.''

Now Utilities requires a minimum of a Macintosh Plus running system 6.0.2 to run.

Now Software, formerly SmethersBarnes, also sells two other products: Screen Locker, the most convenient password protection system for the Macintosh; and Prototyper, the only combination user-interface builder, simulator and code generator for the Macintosh.

PORTLAND, OR (APRIL 9) BUSINESS WIRE - Now Software Monday announced Screen Locker, a new security product for the Macintosh.

The $79 product is being hailed by initial users as a significant breakthrough because it provides a convenient, intuitive and completely unobtrusive password protection for the Macintosh.

Screen Locker begins shipping in volume today, and will be demonstrated in Now Software's booth at MacWorld Expo, April 10-13.

Adrian Falla, Apple federal support coordinator at the Veterans Affairs Medical Center in Portland, said Screen Locker provides, ''the best level of protection I've seen in terms of screen and disk locking, without burdening users with a lot of redundant bells and whistles. Obviously, nothing short of a $30,000 Tempest machine can deter the rare professional computer criminal, but Screen Locker provides admirable protection against casual or amateur snooping. Now that Screen Locker is shipping, the only obstacle to getting a site license for all of our Macs is our lengthy purchasing process.''

Like other password protection systems, Screen Locker secures a Macintosh's screen and hard disk by denying access to anyone who doesn't have the correct password. The key differences between Screen Locker and its competition stem from the different way Now Software defined the problem they wanted their product to solve.

Focusing on the real-world concerns of business professionals has resulted in another key difference between Screen Locker and its competitors -- the product's suggested list price. At $79, Screen Locker is up to $300 less expensive than other security products.

Screen Locker requires a minimum of a Macintosh Plus running System 6.0.2 to run.

Now Software, formerly SmethersBarnes, also sells two other products: Now Utilities, a powerful collecton of system enhancement utilities that help you get more from your Macintosh; and Prototyper, the only combination user-interface builder, simulator and code generator for the Macintosh.

ROCHESTER, NY (APRIL 9) BUSINESS WIRE - Eastman Kodak Company announced Monday that it will discontinue manufacturing its Ultralife 9-volt lithium battery by June 30.

The company will continue to market all of its other battery products around the world, including its other lithium batteries. Many of Kodak's alkaline batteries are produced by MUTEC, its joint venture factory in Columbus, Ga., co-owned with Matsushita Electric, Inc.

''In line with company-wide efforts to focus on products that meet or exceed earnings expectations, we have decided to discontinue our 9-volt lithium cell,'' said Peter M. Palermo, vice-president and general manager, Consumer Imaging Division.

''Despite its success as a technical innovation, the 9-volt lithium battery represented less than one percent of our battery unit sales,'' Palermo added. ''The time and investment that would have been necessary to achieve acceptable economic performance for this product is not consistent with our financial objectives.''

The company manufactures its Ultralife 9-volt battery at its Ultra Technologies plant in Newark, N.Y. The discontinuance will have no impact on employment at the facility.

OMAHA, NE (APRIL 9) BUSINESS WIRE - ValCom Inc., one of the industry's leading personal computer resellers, announced Monday that the company anticipates a favorable first quarter revenue and earnings report.

''We expect to announce strong first quarter growth in revenue and earnings over the same period last year,'' states Bill L. Fairfield, president and chief executive officer of ValCom Inc.

''ValCom is experiencing return from our investment in ensuring the health of its dealer channel and is taking advantage of the better than expected marketplace demand from both large accounts and businesses outside the Fortune 2000,'' Fairfield adds.

ValCom Inc. is one of the largest computer chains in the country, with more than 180 business centers in 46 states. The company provides computer systems, support services and training to business customers through franchised and company-owned stores.

Major computer lines include IBM, Compaq, NEC and Epson along with related computer products from Hewlett-Packard, Novell, Micro D and others.

ValCom shares are traded over-the-counter under the NASDAQ trading symbol VLCM.

SUNNYVALE, CA (APRIL 9) BUSINESS WIRE - Advanced Micro Devices Monday announced that despite a late surge in orders, the company expects to report first-quarter revenues below expectations and flat compared with both the run-rate of its immediate-prior quarter (a 14-week quarter) and the comparable quarter of last year.

For the first quarter of 1989, AMD reported revenues of $269,620,000.

Prices on industry-standard products, notably erasable programmable read-only memories (EPROMs), were lower than anticipated, resulting in lower than expected revenues and lower operating margins on increased unit volumes.

AMD expects to report higher earnings per share for the quarter compared to both the immediate-prior quarter and last year's comparable quarter as a result of an extraordinary gain realized from the completion of the previously announced Sony sale, leaseback and technology transfer transaction.

''Quarterly bookings exceeded billings by the widest margin in two years '' said W.J. Sanders III, chairman and chief executive officer. ''New order momentum surged toward the end of the quarter. The percentage increase in bookings, both year-to-year and March over December, was in double digits.

''Order strength was concentrated in international markets, especially in Asia reflecting strengthening demand in the personal computer sector. The improving order climate should enable AMD to increase revenues in the current quarter and, coupled with the initial benefits of cost-reduction measures already implemented, enable us to improve operating margins,'' Sanders concluded.

HAUPPAUGE, NY (APRIL 9) BUSINESS WIRE - Audiovox Corp. (AMEX:VOX) Monday announced sales for the first quarter ended Feb. 28 of $68.2 million, compared with $63 million, for the same quarter of 1989, an increase of 8.4 percent.

Net earnings for the three-month period were $85,000, as compared with a net loss of approximately $1.4 million in the first quarter of 1989.

Net earnings per share for the first quarter of 1990 were 1 cent, compared with a net loss of 16 cents per share in 1989.

The first quarter's gross margin increased to 21.2 percent in 1990 from 19.3 percent in 1989. All product divisions contributed to the increase of gross margins. Key elements to this increase were improved pricing, more stable market conditions and the completion of the cellular inventory liquidation program.

Audiovox President John J. Shalam indicated that ''the company's management plan outlined in earlier releases which addressed streamlining of our operations, has shown results.'' Shalam further states that ''management anticipates that the implementation of this plan will continue during fiscal 1990.''

CAMBRIDGE, MA (APRIL 9) BUSINESS WIRE - MacShack Enterprises has begun shipping MyTimeManager version 2.5 for the Macintosh.

With MyTimeManager, you have instant access to calendars spanning hours, days, weeks, months, and years. With version 2.5, reminders are provided whether or not MyTimeManager is running. In addition, powerful cyclical entries make it easy to schedule recurring events on a daily, weekly, monthly, bimonthly, quarterly, biannual, or annual basis.

MyTimeManager's conflict-checking feature has been enhanced to optionally schedule the first available timeslot when a conflict does arise.

In the process of adding new features, ease-of-use has been maintained. The major enhancements introduced with version 2.5 strengthen MyTimeManager's position as a leading personal productivity tool offering features not found in any other Macintosh application. MyTimeManager 2.5 Features

-- A ''To Do'' list displays ''All Items,'' ''Open Items,'' or ''Done Items'' which can be sorted by due date, priority, category, modification date accroding to the user's preferences.

-- Daily, weekly, and monthly calendars can be printed.

-- Calendar data can be exported in text format for word processors and spreadsheets.

-- International date and time formats are supported.

-- Multi-user AppleShare and TOPS calendars are quick to set up and easy to use.

-- A highlighting feature indicates how ''full'' each day is, based on the number of hours and appointments scheduled for that day.

MyTimeManager 1.0 was introduced in 1987. Version 2.0 was released in 1989, and version 2.2 in February 1990. Version 2.5 was introduced at the Boston Computer Society Macintosh MegaMeeting on March 31, 1990.

DALLAS (APRIL 9) BUSINESS WIRE - AMRE, Inc. (NYSE: AMM) has been informed that a proposed bid by a management group for the company's outstanding common shares not already owned by the group will not be made.

On April 4, the company had announced that a special committee of directors had met with the management group, which owns approximately 56 percent of the outstanding shares, to discuss an anticipated bid for the remaining shares.

The management group consists of Steven D. Bedowitz, president; Robert Levin, executive vice president, and Ronald I. Wagner, senior vice president.

AMRE Inc. has approximately 14.1 million shares outstanding.

Steven Bedowitz, AMRE president, said: ''The decision of the three majority shareholders not to bid for the remaining shares is unanimous. This change of position on our part is not influenced by questions concerning the availability of financing connected with carrying out the proposal. It stems instead from the fact that, at this moment in the company's evolution, it is in the long-term best interests of the minority shareholders, of the company itself, and of the management group that the company remain publicly held.''

SUNNYVALE, CA (APRIL 9) BUSINESS WIRE - Bruce R. Bourbon, who has played a leading role in the rapid growth of Cadence Design Systems over the past several years, Monday was named president, chief executive officer and a director of Integrated CMOS Systems (ICS), effective on April 16.

Lin C. Wu, previously ICS president and CEO, has been elevated to the post of chairman of the board of directors. He will be responsible for developing new ICS strategic partnerships, similar to the partnership with Toshiba Corp. announced in late 1989.

Bourbon comes to ICS after serving as executive vice president of corporate marketing at Cadence, one of the premier Electronic Design Automation (EDA) software vendors in the world. He was instrumental in Cadence's rapid emergence as the fastest-growing and number two player in the EDA market.

Prior to his tenure at Cadence, Bourbon spent more than 10 years in various positions at Gould AMI, the semiconductor division of Gould Electronics, serving last as vice president of marketing. Prior to that assignment he managed all business activities of Gould AMI's gate array and silicon foundry businesses, as group vice president of semicustom products.

''Bruce Bourbon brings to ICS a level of expertise that is well matched to the products and services we provide to our customers,'' said Wu.

''ICS has reached the stage in its growth where the management team must be strengthened to drive ICS' growth in the 1990s. Bruce Bourbon is the key addition to the ICS senior management team. His dedication and abilities are well known in the industry, and we are very pleased to announce this appointment today.''

ICS, Integrated CMOS Systems Inc., a privately held company, provides high-performance ASIC chip-sets for complex, high-performance systems for the data processing, communications and industrial markets using cost-effective, leading edge CMOS gate array technology.

ICS integrates complete testability at both the chip and system level, and provides unique system design expertise to achieve optimum design performance and very high product quality.

NEW YORK (APRIL 9) BUSINESS WIRE - Lazare Kaplan International Inc. announced Monday that gross sales for the nine months ended Feb. 28, totaled $75,410,000 an increase of 44 percent when compared to the $52,533,000 in sales during this period last year.

For the third quarter ended Feb. 28, the company reported gross sales of $27,897,000, an increase of 75 percent or $12 million when compared to the previous year.

Polished diamond sales increased 47 percent for the nine months and 54 percent in the third quarter of 1990. Rough diamond sales increased 39 percent during the three quarters ended Feb. 28 and more than doubled in the quarter.

The higher gross sales of polished stones were due primarily to continued success of the company's marketing of the branded ideal cut Lazare Diamond its growing customer base and continued expansion throughout the Pacific Basin.

Additionally, during the quarter the company made its first sale of Lazare Diamonds in the Republic of Korea to Hotel Lotte, one of the largest trading companies in that country.

Net income was $2,916,000 or 93 cents per share for the nine months ended Feb. 28. This compares to net income of $491,000 or 16 cents per share during this same period last year. For the third quarter ended Feb. 28, the company reported net income of $1,005,000 or 32 cents per share compared to $151,000 of 5 cents per share a year ago. The increase in income is due primarily to an increase in overall sales volume.

In March 1990, Lazare Kaplan was notified by the Government of Botswana, through its Ministry of Mineral Resources and Water Affairs, that it will be issued a Botswana Government License for the establishment of a diamond cutting and polishing factory in Botswana, subject to the negotiation and conclusion of mutually agreeable terms.

The license was announced by the Honorable A.M. Mogwe, Minister of Mineral Resources & Water Affairs, in his address to the Botswana Parliament on March 14.

Lazare Kaplan International Inc. (AMEX:LKI) sells its diamonds and jewlery products through a worldwide distribution network. The company is noted for its ideal cut diamonds which it markets internationally under the brand name, Lazare Diamonds.

CHICAGO (APRIL 9) BUSINESS WIRE - AM International Inc. announced Monday that it has formed a new division called AM Multigraphics, comprising the former AM Multigraphics and International Divisions, and appointed George H. Gilmore Jr., formerly president of the International Division, president of the new entity.

The company also announced the resignation of Gerald J. McConnell, vice president and president of the former AM Multigraphics Division.

Gilmore was appointed president, International Division in August, 1989. Prior to joining AM International, he was president of Mitel Inc.

His background also includes key international strategic planning assignments with McKinsey and Co. Inc. with whom he was headquartered in Toronto and Dusseldorf. He holds an M.B.A. from Stanford University, an M.A. in International Relations from the University of Southern California and a B.S. in Engineering from the United States Military Academy at West Point.

''As first described in our 1989 annual report, the consolidation of the former AM Multigraphics and International Divisions evolved from our strategic planning process and is a key step in repositioning our global operations for greater growth in the 1990's,'' said Merle H. Banta, AM chairman, president and chief executive officer. ''This realignment of our operations is designed to better focus our global product development and to better utilize our worldwide marketing strengths.''

AM International, with world headquarters in Chicago, sells and services a wide range of design, display, reproduction and finishing products and supplies to the worldwide graphics industry.

The company conducts its business through three divisions, 17 subsidiaries and a dealer organization located in over 100 countries.

AM International's annual revenues are over $900 million. AM International's common and preferred shares are traded on the New York, Pacific and Midwest Stock Exchanges under the ticker symbol ''AM.''

WILMINGTON, DE (APRIL 9) BUSINESS WIRE - HIMONT Inc. Monday announced the appointment of Gregory K. Tawes to the position of vice president -- Himont Advanced Materials/North America, succeeding Denis C. Smith, who was promoted in 1989 to vice president -- Himont Advanced Materials/Worldwide.

In commenting on his new assignment, Tawes said, ''I look forward to the opportunity of guiding the expansion of Himont's North American business and products in the area of engineered polymers. The synergy of Himont's advanced materials business and its polymer synthesis capabilities provides a tremendous competitive edge in the marketplace.''

Tawes, reporting to Denis Smith, assumes responsibility for all phases of the Himont Advanced Materials business in North America, including marketing sales, production and distribution.

He will be based at the Advanced Materials headquarters in Lansing, Mich.

''My first priority will be to ensure that all our customers receive the highest quality product available in the market and that it is delivered in a timely fashion. This is a personal commitment that my staff and I intend to make the cornerstone of our business strategy.''

Tawes, a 1969 graduate of Johns Hopkins University with a degree in Chemical Engineering, joined Hercules Inc. in 1969 and became affiliated with Himont when it was established in 1983. His previous experience includes positions as plant manager, marketing and project director worldwide and other assingments. He is native of Crisfield, Md.

Himont Advanced Materials produces and markets specialty composites and alloys that include filled, reinforced, elastomoreric, flame retardant and engineering materials for the automotive, appliance, consumer, electrical and electronics markets.

Himont, a Montedison company, is the world's leading producer and marketer of polypropylene resins and a major producer of a broad range of polymer-based specialty composites and alloys.

WHITE PLAINS, NY (APRIL 9) BUSINESS WIRE - IBM announced Monday that it has expanded its financial support to the Open Software Foundation.

In addition, IBM said it intends to ship future AIX offerings based on the OSF/1 operating system.

As indicated in OSF's recent press release, discussions on merging the industry's open software development efforts have now ended, as OSF, UNIX International and AT&T's UNIX Software Operation could not reach agreement on the OSF proposal for an independent, vendor-neutral organization to serve the needs of the industry.

''IBM became a founding sponsor of the Open Software Foundation because we share its commitment to provide the best technology our industry can offer through an open, vendor-neutral selection process,'' said Jack Kuehler, President of IBM. ''That process has already proven successful with OSF/Motif.

''We are now shipping OSF/Motif as part of our AIX PS/2 offering and have announced it for May availability on our new RISC System/6000 family,'' Kuehler continued. ''In addition, we look forward to OSF's announcement of its distributed computing offering in May as a further demonstration of the value of its open process to our industry.''

IBM has licensed the early release of OSF/1 and initial porting efforts are underway. The company intends to provide its first implementation of the OSF/1 operating system on its PS/2 platform in 1991. The company will confirm its plans in the third quarter of 1990.

''IBM's extended financial support will help ensure OSF's emerging role as the industry's principal supplier of leading edge, vendor-neutral, open standard software," said Kuehler. ''OSF/1 will be the open operating system for the 90's, and OSF will continue to drive technology forward while protecting the interests of end users and the industry.''

PADERBORN, West Germany (APRIL 9) BUSINESS WIRE - Nixdorf Computer AG, a founding sponsor of the Open Software Foundation, Monday emphasized its continued support of OSF.

Nixdorf is currently porting OSF/1 (TM), the OSF's operating system offering, to its Targon (TM) family of UNIX (R) based products. Because of Nixdorf's long- standing commitment to open standards, such as X/Open's CAE, and OSF/1's adherence to those standards, Nixdorf's Targon family of systems will be OSF/1 application compatible by 1991.

Nixdorf believes that the MACH (TM) based OSF/1 will become the most competitive UNIX-based operating system in the market of the 1990s. The advanced kernel architecture, as well as features like threads and network transparent interprocess-communication, will allow a new generation of applications to emerge within the next decade.

Capabilities included in OSF/1, such as symmetric multiprocessing, extensive internationalization, and improved security, will soon be industry requirements for UNIX-based products. This technology will offer upward compatibility for applications that now exist on Nixdorf's Targon product line. The advanced kernel architecture and future migration to a micro-kernel implementation differentiate OSF/1 as a breakthrough product.

With this latest offering, OSF has once again proven its leadership and ability to provide the industry with cutting edge technology. Its innovative charter provides for equitable and reasonable licensing terms which will further the widespread use of OSF/1 to distinguish it as an immediate de-facto standard.

This is the second OSF contribution to the Nixdorf Targon product line. Early in 1989, Nixdorf enthusiastically adopted OSF/Motif (TM) as the standard graphical users interface for its UNIX-based products.

Nixdorf is also looking forward to the DCE (Distributed Computing Environment) development and the resulting product which we expect OSF to release by the end of this year. With the past successful results of the open selection process, Nixdorf is confident that DCE will be a winning product and Nixdorf will integrate it into our Targon family.

MAYNARD, MA (APRIL 9) BUSINESS WIRE - Digital Equipment Corp. Monday announced that the next major release of its ULTRIX software -- Digital's implementation of the UNIX operating system -- will be based on the Open Software Foundation's OSF/1 operating system.

Digital just announced ULTRIX Version 4.0 on 3 April 1990; the next version is targeted for 1991.

Digital has already adopted OSF's Motif graphical interface as a strategic component of Digital's workstation family. Motif and the early releases of OSF/1 have clearly demonstrated to Digital the strength of OSF's technology and their ability to deliver products on schedule. As further evidence of its continuing commitment to the Open Software Foundation, Digital also announced that it is providing additional funding for OSF.

According to Jack Smith, senior vice president of operations, ''Announcement of Digital's strong, continuing commitment to OSF should be no surprise. Digital has moved aggressively to support and implment OSF's breakthrough technology on Digital platforms, and we will move the ULTRIX environment to an OSF/1 base.

''Our users can be assured of a smooth, seamless path between ULTRIX and OSF/1, which provides the best technology for delivering open system capabilities. These capabilities include the important industry standards such as POSIX, X/Open, and Motif; as well as Xenix, Berkeley Software Distribution (BSD), and System V interfaces. Additionally, Digital plans to incorporate its OSF/1-based products into its Network Application Services architecture.''

Referring to the recently terminated merger discussions between OSF, AT&T and UNIX International, Smith commented, ''We are very disappointed in the failure of this industry unity initiative, but it is our firm conviction that future implementations of UNIX operating sytems must be developed using a truly open process.''

Digital Equipment Corp., headquartered in Maynard, Mass., is the leading worldwide supplier of networked computer systems and services. Digital offers a full range of computing solutions and systems integration for the entire enterprise -- from the desktop to the data center.

PALO ALTO, CA (APRIL 9) BUSINESS WIRE - Hewlett-Packard Co. Monday said it will be one of the first companies to ship the OSF/1 operating system, to be released later this year by the Open Software Foundation (OSF).

HP also joined other founding sponsors of OSF in announcing plans to provide additional funding to OSF to accelerate delivery of innovative new technologies. ''HP is prepared to ship OSF/1 products in 1991,'' said Dean O. Morton, HP executive vice president and chief operating officer. ''Our plan is to move our business, based on a UNIX operating system, to the OSF base in a staged manner.''

He added that OSF's direction for providing distributed computing capabilities in the OSF operating environment will mean additional competitive strength for software developers and computer systems vendors.

HP's announcement was made shortly after an announcement earlier today that merger discussions between OSF, AT&T's Unix Software Operation and Unix International have ended.

Morton said HP believes OSF's approach to open systems computing is the best solution for Hewlett-Packard, its customers and independent software developers. He said OSF products let HP customers take full advantage of the revolution underway in distributed networked computing.

He said OSF's operating system strategy for the kernel -- a key piece of software that is the core of the OSF/1 operating system -- will allow OSF to provide a more powerful and more flexible open computing environment than AT&T's properietary kernel.

HP already has begun working closely with key application developers who are building and transferring software applications to the OSF operating system. HP also plans to have HP-UX and the Apollo Domain/OS operating systems comply with the specifications of OSF/1 -- including program interfaces and the OSF/Motif user interface. HP-UX and Domain/OS are based on, and fully comply with, AT&T's UNIX System.

Hewlett-Packard Company is an international manufacturer of measurement and computation products and systems recognized for excellence in quality and support. The company's products and services are used in industry, business, engineering, science, medicine and education in approximately 100 countries. HP has 94,000 employees and had revenue of $11.9 billion in its 1989 fiscal year.

TOKYO, JAPAN (APRIL 9) BUSINESS WIRE - Hitachi has been a sponsor of the Open Software Foundation (OSF) from September 1988.

The OSF mission and objectives which aim to develop and distribute a truly open software environment through its vendor-neutral RFT (Request For Technology) process and X/Open standard specification compliance are a demonstration of OSF's leadership in this important movement.

To date, OSF has delivered two products crucial to the realization of open systems, OSF/1 and OSF/Motif. OSF/1, released as a ''Snapshot'' in January and scheduled for commercial release in November, has incorporated technologies not yet available in the leading product offered by the others. OSF/1, a generation ahead, gives users the benefits they want, when they want them -- today.

OSF/Motif has already established itself as the GUI (Graphical User Interface) of choice and has become a de facto window standard in the marketplace.

Hitachi, eager to remain ahead of the times, incorporates OSF's offerings into its product development process and introduces OSF/1 and OSF/Motif as the mainstream of its open systems products, ranging from workstations to supercomputers. The porting process is already underway, and programs designed to support ISVs (Independent Software Vendors) and end users are in place. In addition, Hitachi is anticipating the completion of the DCE (Distributed Computing Environment) development process so that it too can be applied to Hitachi's open systems products.

Hitachi will continue giving our full support to OSF through sponsorship. OSF has made significant progress, and Hitachi believes that the Open Software Foundation will soon become the standard for others to follow.

WALTHAM, MA (APRIL 9) BUSINESS WIRE - IPL Systems Inc. (NASDAQ:IPLSA) Monday introduced a rack-mountable, half-inch cartridge tape drive, the 6890, which, under a single controller, can be combined with other types of media within IPL's 6800 series of tape products.

The 6800 series includes IPL's 6820 half-inch, reel-to-reel tape drive, a 6860 8MM cartridge drive that uses helical scan technology, and the new 6890 half-inch cartridge drive.

IPL's 6890 follows the IBM 3480 standard for tape drives and is comparable to IBM's new 3490 cartridge drive. The 6890 attaches to the AS/400 computer via IBM's 2604 feature, which accommodates up to four tape drives. The 6890 tape drive is also compatible with the System/38, 9370 and 43XX systems and can attach to any 370-compatible channel. IPL's newest drive records data on 18 tracks at a nominal data rate of 3 MB/sec. The data density is 38 KB/inch.

An optional cartridge stack loader that holds up to five or ten cartridges and provides up to two gigabytes of data storage is available as part of the tape subsystem. With data compression, which is standard on the 2604 feature, up to four gigabytes of data can be stored during a single, unattended operation.

''Our charter is to offer customers solutions that are more convenient and economical than our competitors,'' said Product Manager James Geronaitis. ''Because we can combine different types of tape drive in one controller, system managers save floor space and money. They no longer need to invest in extra features to support more drives.

''The controller also offers flexibility. For instance, the 6890 can be combined with an IPL 6820 reel-to-reel or IPL 6860 8MM cartridge drive to cater to different data center needs.''

''Our ongoing strategy is to ensure continued product leadership by investing heavily in research and development, allowing us to provide high-quality, cost-effective, compatible storage subsystems and memory products for users of midrange IBM systems, particularly the AS/400, said President Robert W. Norton. ''This corporate strategy has enabled us to once again produce another quality product for our existing 6800 series customer, as well as other IBM customers with storage needs.''

IPL's 6890 tape drive is currently operating at beta test sites and will be available during the second quarter of 1990. The drive can be installed in an IPL 6809 1.0-meter rack or an IBM 9309 1.6-meter rack.

Pricing varies depending on configuration: the 6890 A01 with an external controller and one half-inch cartridge drive costs $45,900; the 6890 A02 consists of an external controller and two half-inch cartridge drives for $69,900; the 6890 B01 includes an add-on, half-inch cartridge drives for $35,900; and the 6890 B02 with add-on, half-inch drives sells for $59,900.

The company supports all of its products, including the 6890, with an international network of distributors and IPL-trained service engineers who are backed by IPL technical support personnel, 24 hours a day, seven days a week. Service and spare parts are provided in over 100 U.S. locations and in each of IPL's European markets. With a 6800 series installed base of over 2,500 units, IPL has the foundation and experience to continue providing the kind of support that is necessary to assure a high level of customer satisfaction.

European customers may contact IPL Systems' international office located at Keiberg Park, Pavillion 406, Imperiastraat 10, Zaventem, Belgium.

IPL Systems, Inc. designs, manufactures and markets IBM compatible tape drive subsystems and memory products for IBM Systems/3X, 43XX, 30XX and AS/400 computers. The company was founded in 1973 and is located at 360 Second Avenue, Waltham, MA 02154, (617) 890-6620. IPL Systems, Inc. stock is quoted on the NASDAQ national market system and traded in the OTC market under the symbol IPLSA.

MEMPHIS, TN (APRIL 9) BUSINESS WIRE - Schering-Plough HealthCare Products has established the Avron Spiro Jr. Advertising Scholarship at the University of Tennessee, Knoxville, with initial funding of $5,000.

The scholarship is being set up in honor of Spiro, a resident of Memphis, who is retiring as president of Schering-Plough subsidiaries Plough Advertising Corp. and Lake-Spiro-Shurman after 41 years of service.

The scholarship will be open to undergraduate or graduate students at the UT College of Communications in Knoxville who are majoring in advertising. The College of Communications Scholarship Committee will select one recipient per year on the basis of an excellent academic record and professional potential. Financial need may be considered.

Spiro holds a bachelor of business administration degree from the University of Tennessee, Knoxville, and is an avid UT football fan.

He joined Plough Inc., Sept. 1, 1949, as an advertising clerk. He became a Plough vice president in 1975 in charge of advertising placements for such Plough brands as Coppertone, Di-Gel and St. Joseph.
He was promoted to executive vice president of Lake-Spiro-Shurman, the in-house advertising placement agency, in 1979. He became president of Lake-Spiro-Shurman and Plough Advertising Corp. in June 1984.

Spiro, who turns 65 this year, plans to make April 12 his last official day in his office at 3030 Jackson Ave. in Memphis, the operational headquarters of Schering-Plough Healthcare Products.

NEW DELHI, India (APRIL 9) BUSINESS WIRE - General Electric Co. and India's government owned Bharat Heavy Electricals Limited (BHEL) have finalized a licensing agreement that extends BHEL's manufacturing range of GE-designed heavy duty gas turbines, which already includes the manufacture of GE-designed units up to 36 megawatts of electric power.

The agreement was signed by Lawrence A. Bossidy, vice chairman of the board and executive officer for GE and, P.S. Gupta, chairman of BHEL.

The new agreement will enable BHEL's Hyderabad unit to build GE-designed 120-megawatt-class MS9000 gas turbines, and includes provisions for the eventual manufacture of GE's advanced, heavy-duty 200-megawatt-class designs.

The agreement also includes a transfer of GE's sophisticated electronic gas turbine control technology to BHEL's Bangalore unit.

''This agreement reflects an already mature relationship between GE and BHEL in the supply of power generation equipment to India,'' said Jack Merry, manager of GE International Power Systems.

''With the addition of GE Frame 9 machines, BHEL will be able to supply India with large blocks of power more quickly and efficiently.''

Gas turbines are expected to play an increasingly important role in meeting India's future energy needs as the result of the discovery of new oil and natural gas reserves in the country along with India's rapidly expanding industry and infrastructure.

BHEL and GE began their association in 1986. Since then, BHEL has accounted for the order or installation of more than 26 GE-designed gas turbines.

WINSTON-SALEM, NC (APRIL 9) BUSINESS WIRE - Representatives of The Jepson Burns Corp. (NYSE: JEP) of Winston-Salem and Design Bureau ''Automatika'' of the Soviet Union Monday signed an agreement to establish a joint venture company, Russo Burns Aero Products, in Moscow to manufacture aircraft seats and seat components.

The agreement is subject to approvals from regulatory agencies in the United States and the USSR. Officials of the joint venture said that manufacturing will begin as soon as possible after regulatory approvals are received.

G.B. (Bud) Jewell, president and chief executive officer of Jepson Burns, and Peter Dementiev, chief designer for ''Automatika'' represented their two organizations in signing the agreement Monday in Winston-Salem.

Jepson Burns and Design Bureau ''Automatika'' each will own 50 percent of the joint venture. Jepson Burns will provide engineering technology, manufacturing processes, management expertise and marketing support. Design Bureau ''Automatika'' will supply labor, raw materials, manufacturing facilities and sales support in the Soviet Union.

Jewell said that initially the joint venture will use modified versions of existing Jepson Burns seat designs. Proprietary designs eventually will be created to make the joint venture's seats more competitive in Eastern markets which have different regulatory and passenger requirements, he said.

The agreement marks the most recent milestone in Jepson Burns' international expansion. Aggressive sales and marketing efforts in the last two years have increased the company's sales in Latin America, Europe Africa, the Mid-East and the Far-East.

Jepson Burns is a subsidiary of Great American Management and Investment Inc. (GAMI), which is located in Chicago. Other subsidiaries are involved in manufacturing, distribution, production of agricultural chemicals and fertilizers and financial services.

Jepson Burns' corporate offices and manufacturing facilities are in Winston-Salem, and its Trans-Aero Industries division is located in Inglewood, Calif.

FRAMINGHAM, MA (APRIL 9) BUSINESS WIRE - The Commonwealth of Massachusetts, the Kraft General Foods (KGF) Framingham facility and Boston Edison have joined forces in a multi-million dollar energy partnership that will help keep 250 industrial jobs in Massachusetts and could lead to future expansion of the international food company's Framingham production plant.

Acting on the recommendations of a comprehensive energy analysis conducted by the state Division of Energy Resources, KGF Framingham and Boston Edison have signed a contract for a variety of state-of-the-art energy efficiency improvements that will continue to keep KGF's Framingham plant cost-effective and competitive.

The contract calls for KGF Framingham to invest $3 million in energy improvements that will save more than 6 million kilowatthours of electricity a year, which equals the amount of energy it takes to power about 1,000 homes in the Greater Boston area. Boston Edison will rebate

KGF Framingham $2.6 million over the next two years for installing the energy enhancements, which will cut the food company's annual energy costs by 33 percent, or about $430,000 a year.

The Energy Advisor Service within the Division of Energy Resources has helped more than 350 companies over the last five years identify nearly $50 million in energy conservation savings, Gromer said.

KGF, the multi-national food business of Philip Morris Companies Inc., is the second largest packaged food company in the world. KGF operates six ice cream and frozen dessert plants around the country, including Framingham, which produces more than 100 varieties and sizes of ice cream and frozen dessert at its 120,000 square foot facility for distribution around the U.S.

NEW YORK (APRIL 9) BUSINESS WIRE - AT&T Monday announced that Proskauer Rose Goetz & Mendelsohn has singed a contract for a DEFINITY Communications System with Integrated Services Digital Network (ISDN) capabilities.

Proskauer, one of the nation's largest law firms, said it has purchased a DEFINITY Generic 2 Communications System with 1,400 stations to serve the firm's new location in Manhattan.

The DEFINITY Generic 2 Communications System is a fully digital PBX (private branch exchange) that handles voice and data traffic between phones and personal computers at a customer site.

This system will enable Proskauer to use AT&T's most advanced technology, including features of ISDN, which allows voice, data and video signals to be transmitted simultaneously over the same telephone line.

Also included in the package are an automated Message Center, an AUDIX voice mail system, and SYSTIMAX Premises Distribution System, AT&T's inside wiring plan. A separate five-year contract provides for a dedicated technician at the firm's location.

In the future, Proskauer plans to link the new DEFINITY system in New York with existing AT&T System 75 communications systems in the firm's offices in Los Angeles and Washington D.C.

Beinstein explaned that the AT&T solution addresses several business needs.

HOUSTON (APRIL 9) BUSINESS WIRE - Enron Gas Marketing Inc. (EGM), a subsidiary of Enron Corp., Monday announced details of a new service designed to provide the marketplace with improved pricing and delivery flexibility.

"The new gas futures market with prices at Henry Hub in Louisiana is the right idea, but it doesn't take into account regional pricing differences inherent in the U.S. gas market nor does it address the receipt and delivery needs of the industry,'' said John J. Esslinger, president of EGM.

Under the Hub Pricing Program, EGM has basically unbundled delivery service from pricing.

EGM has designated four pricing points, or hubs, from which customers can buy or sell gas on a firm basis at a specified period in the future. The hubs are located at Wharton, Texas, for the Texas and southern region; Waha, Texas, for the California market; Henry Hub in Louisiana for eastern markets; and Kiowa County, Kan., for the midcontinent region.

Once a price has been accepted, there are variations to the Hub Pricing Program that enable EGM to provide a tailor-made package for each customer. The customer may simply deliver or receive the gas at the designated hub for the quoted price. Or, the customer may elect to deliver or receive the gas at a different location, with the quoted hub price being adjusted to accommodate the change in delivery point.

Alternatively, EGM also offers a flexibly priced sales contract in which terms such as quantity, load factor and receipt or delivery points are negotiated, but the gas price will still be determined by the quote made at the respective hub locations.

For customers who do not want to take physical delivery of the gas, EGM's Hub Pricing Program offers a ''swap'' agreement. Under this arrangement a customer commits to the quoted hub price, but at the designated time period for which the quote was made EGM and the customer will exchange payments based on the difference in value between the quoted price and a specified market-responsive price.

Enron Corp., America's leading natural gas company with approximately $9 billion in assets, operates the nation's largest natural gas transmission system; markets natural gas, gas liquids, crude oil and refined products nationally and worldwide; owns 84 percent of Enron Oil & Gas Co., one of the country's largest independent (non-integrated) natural gas production companies; and also is one of the largest independent producers of electricity in the United States with extensive experience in combined heat and power installations.

VALDOSTA, GA (APRIL 9) BUSINESS WIRE - SAFT America Inc., a leading manufacturer of high technology energy systems, has landed a $119.7 million contract, the largest ever awarded by the U.S. Army, for lithium sulphur dioxide batteries (LiSO2) for use in military communications systems.

The contract covers a five-year period with an initial award of $15.7 million for 1990.

The contract calls for four different batteries: BA-5590, BA-5112, BA-5567 and BA-5600 to be produced by both SAFT Advanced Battery Systems Divisions (ABSD) locations in Valdese, N.C., and Cockeysville, Md. An order for 2,482,800 units of the BA-5590 battery comprises the most significant portion of the contract.

ABSD is currently fulfilling similar military contracts. Previously, the division received a $28 million contract from the army in 1988 with a $14 million option in 1989. At that time, these awards represented the largest-ever military battery contracts.

With headquarters in Valdosta, Ga., SAFT America Inc. operates 10 facilities throughout the United States, Canada and Mexico. SAFT products include: Nicad batteries for consumer and industrial markets; thermal batteries for munitions and missile systems; nickel-cadmium and lead-acid batteries for standby power; mass-transit industrial batteries; and aviation batteries for military, business and commercial aircraft.

A subsidary of France-based Compagnie Generale D'Electricite, SAFT is one of the world's leaders in the field of autonomous energy products for industry and high technology. SAFT operates 16 subsidiaries in Europe, North America, Southeast Asia, Japan, Australia and employs more than 6,500 people.

AMMAN (APRIL 9) - King Hussein Monday named 60 prominent people representing a broad spectrum of political forces to draft a national charter that will legalise political parties in Jordan for the first time in more than 30 years.

The royal commission is headed by former prime minister Ahmad Obeidat and includes 17 members of the lower house of parliament and 11 members of the senate.

The rest are political activists, heads of professional associations and unions, former government officials, economists, businessmen, writers, journalists, lawyers and university professors.

The charter was proposed by King Hussein last year to set a legal framework in line with the Jordanian constitution for a return to multi-party politics.

A jordanian official said the monarch was expected to meet with the commission soon after it is named ''to review the idea of the charter, the democratic transition and the principle of pluralism''.

In addition to independents from parliament and elsewhere, the commision includes representatives of the following parties: the Islamic Brotherhood, the Arab Nationalists, the Baathists, the Jordan Communist Party, the Jordanian wing of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, the Jordan Democratic Front, the Unionist Democratic Party and the Jordan People's Democratic Party.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 9) - The United States is to sign a trade agreement accord with Czechoslovakia which would give the Eastern European country most favored nation (MFN) status, the White House said Monday.

The agreement, to be signed Thursday, is the first commercial accord between the United States and an Eastern European country "since the revolutions of 1989" in the region, said White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater.

"The speed with which this agreement was reached is testimony to the dramatic changes occuring in Czechoslovakia's economic policies and to our shared determination to move quickly to reestablish close ties," Mr. Fitzwater said.

After Czechoslovak President Vaclav Havel visited the United States last February, U.S. President George Bush had said that one of his priorities was to normalize economic ties with Czechoslovakia.

The United States conditioned granting MFN status to Czechoslovakia on Prague lifting its restrictive emigration policy.

Hungary and Poland have been the only Eastern European countries with MFN status -- which gives greater access to U.S. markets -- and are exempt from paying prohibitive customs on their exports to the United States.

"The president welcomes this step as an important milestone not only in U.S.-Czechoslovak relations but also in Czechoslovakia's reintegration into the global economy and the community of free nations," said Mr. Fitzwater said.

HARARE (APRIL 9) - Zimbabwe President Robert Mugabe named a new government late Monday, boosting the number of white ministers from one to three.

Despite the filip to Zimbabwe's small but influential community, few key posts changed from the previous administration, formed January 2, 1988.

The re-shuffle comes eight days after elections which gave an easy victory to the ruling Zimbabwe African National Union, albeit with a reduced turnout.

Simon Muzenda remains vice-president, but Mr. Mugabe told a news conference that the constitution would soon be amended to create a second vice-president post "of equal rank" -- for the war of independence veteran Joshua Nkomo.

Mr. Nkomo was the chief architect of the merger last December of his Zimbabwe African People's Union (ZAPU) with ZANU.

Chris Andersen, formerly minister of state for the public service, and the only white in the previous government, becomes minister of mines.

The two new whites are Dennis Norman, who becomes minister of transport and national supplies, and Dr. Timothy Stamps as health minister.

Mr. Norman was one of two whites in the government formed immediately after independence in 1980, while Dr. Smith is a newcomer to politics.

The cabinet still has three ministers of state, with Mr. Nkomo remaining senior minister without portfolio and Bernard Chidzero as senior minister of finances, economic planning and development.

Didyamus Mutasa, formerly parliamentary speaker, becomes senior minister of political affairs, replacing the late Maurice Nyagumbo, who committed suicide a year ago.

Nathan Shamuyarira remains minister of foreign affairs and Moven Mahachi remains minister of home affairs.

The post of defence minister, vacant since Enos Nkala resigned in March 1989, was taken by Richard Hove.

Mr. Nkala, like Mr. Nyagumbo, had been implicated in a corruption scandal.

Two surprise changes were the scrapping of the sports portfolio -- pending a report on the state of sport in Zimbabwe -- leaving David Kwidini as a minister without portfolio, and the appointment of a ZAPU hardliner.

Dumiso Dabengwa, who becomes deputy-minister of home affairs, was the head of ZAPU's intelligence services during the independence war and more recently had opposed the merger with ZANU.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 9) - The United States Monday said it was cancelling an aerospace trade mission to Iraq following a series of incidents that have darkened U.S.-Iraqi relations.

The decision to call off the mission came as U.S. legislators, angered by a recent threat from Iraqi President Saddam Hussein to use chemical weapons against Israel and new indications Baghdad is developing nuclear arms, prepared a package of sanctions against Iraq.

Iraq Monday ordered a U.S. diplomat to leave the country in retaliation for the U.S. expulsion last week of an Iraqi diplomat accused of trying to arrange the murder of anti-Baghdad militants in this country.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater denounced the expulsion as inappropriate and unjustified, but added that "the whole (U.S.-Iraq) relationship is not under review" as a result of the incident.

However the Commerce Department then announced it was taking Baghdad off the itinerary of the trade mission, and State Department spokeswoman Magaret Tutwiler said Washington would "continue to make our concerns known to Iraq."

Commerce Department spokeswoman Elizabeth Duggan said the decision to cancel the trip was taken "in light of the events of the last couple of weeks."

"We thought it was inapproriate to take a group of U.S. companies to Iraq at this time," she said.

Nine U.S. firms had been set to visit Baghdad to discuss various civil aviation projects as part of a tour that included Egypt and Saudi Arabia.

Cancelation of the visit came as Baghdad announced it was ordering an unnamed U.S. diplomat to leave the country by Wednesday in retaliation for the April 5 expulsion of a diplomat at Iraq's U.N. mission in New York.

DAR ES SALAAM (APRIL 9) - At least 39 people have been killed and 7,000 others made homeless by floods in two southern Tanzanian regions following four days of torrential rains that flooded low-lying villages after rivers burst their banks.

Thousands of residents in two regions of Lindi and Mtwara were also reported threatened by a possible epidemic outbreak in view of transport difficulty after the floods washed and swept away roads and bridges.

Confirming the death toll, Lindi regional police commander George Timbuka, contacted by telephone, said the number of deaths could mount further.

Prime minister Joseph Warioba, currently attending a week-long parliamentary session in Dodoma, has directed Lindi and Mtwara regional commissioners back to their posts from the current parliamentary session in the inland capital to assess damage.

An official from the prime minister's office responsible for coordinating disaster relief aid, was also despatched to the areas on Sunday to assess material and monetary requirements for the flood victims.

The heavy rains, which have been pouring continuously since last week have already destroyed thousands of hectares of crop plantations, seriously threatening the perennially famine-prone regions where cassava is the staple food.

TOKYO (APRIL 10) - Mazda Motor Corp., a leading Japanese automaker, said Tuesday that it would establish a car rental-lease joint venture in Japan with the U.S. Hertz Corp., the world's largest automobile rental company.

The joint venture, to be named Hertz Japan Ltd., will be capitalized at 500 million yen (3.2 million dollars), 90 per cent invested by Mazda and the rest by Hertz.

Hertz Japan Ltd. will begin operations in August and set up 250 outlets with 10,000 vehicles by the end of 1993, Mazda officials said.

Mazda hoped the joint venture would enable it to expand its market for the imported cars it handled.

The Hague (APRIL 9) - European rail traffic through Holland was crippled Monday by a 24-hour strike by Dutch railworkers seeking a pay hike.

At major stations in Amsterdam, Rotterdam and the Hague, 80 percent of all trains were not running. Foreign trains were stopped at the Dutch border, and trains with foreign destinations were not permitted to leave their departure stations.

Rail commuters who opted to drive to and from work were faced with long tailbacks on Dutch motorways.

KUALA LUMPUR (APRIL 9) - Malaysia is moving to tighten its bankruptcy laws to stop so-called insolvent businessmen from living in mansions and riding limousines, officials said Monday.

The move comes amid concern among top officials that the Bankruptcy Act 1967 is spawning a new class of rich "bankrupts" who shelter behind lax laws to avoid paying their debts.

Jaffar Hussein, governor of Malaysia's central bank, said recently that he had asked the government to look into the possibility of setting up "special courts" to ensure bankrupts do not camouflage their assets.

Bankrupts should "pay up or have their property confiscated, " he said, adding that bankrupts were winning social acceptability and a new status in Malaysian society.

Officials complain that debtors when taken to court often end up paying creditors nominal sums that allow them to live off their wealth safely transferred to relatives and friends.

"In almost every bankruptcy case, the creditors never recover the full amounts due to them," the English language daily, the Business Times, said.

Smith said efforts led by private corporations may make things go more smoothly than between governments, expressing doubts over the effects of the ongoing U.S.-Japan structural impediments initiative talks.

At a news conference here, chairman of the world's no. one carmaker, also indicated Gm would expand business ties with its Japanese partner Isuzu Motors in Europe as well as in the United States.

Presently, Gm has an equity stake of 38 percent in Isuzu and operates production units jointly with the Japanese carmaker in Britain and West Germany.

BEIJING (APRIL 9) - Reviving Japanese lending to China will be a key topic at Sino-Japanese foreign ministry talks opening here this week, diplomatic sources said Monday.

Deputy Vice Foreign Minister Owada Hisashi will lead the Japanese delegation at the annual talks Wednesday, the 10th in a series. Heading China's delegation will be Vice Foreign Minister Qi Huaiyuan.

No specific agenda had been set, but reviving Japanese loans to China will "inevitably" be discussed at the two-day meeting, along with other bilateral and international issues, one source said.

Japanese bankers have shied away from lending money to China following stagnation in the Chinese economy and the June 4 military crackdown on dissent in Beijing.

For most of the 1980s, Japan had been China's leading source of foreign loan capital, accounting for more than half of its estimated 40 billion dollar foreign debt.

Bonn (APRIL 9) - West Germany's five leading economic institutes predicted here Monday a real 3.75 percent growth rate for the country this year and again in 1991.

The five institutes, in their annual Spring report to the Bonn government, said West Germany could expect a surge in demand of 35 to 40 billion marks (20.5-23.5 billion dollars) from East Germany.

This in turn would provide for additional growth of 1.5 percent to the West German economy, the institutes, based in West Berlin, Hamburg, Munich, Essen, and Kiel, said.

The report said that by the end of 1990, inflation would reach an annual rate of 3.5 percent, but that for the year the average would be lower, at three percent.

Amid the economic expansion, employment will rise and joblessness decline, the report said. Payrolls will increase by 450,000 during 1990, while unemployment will drop to below two million on average for the year, lowering the rate from 7.6 percent to 7.2 percent.

Private households' disposable income will rise by a real 4.5 percent this year.

Investment activity is also expected to remain dynamic in 1990, the report predicted. Investments for capital goods will rise eight percent, only slightly below last year's rate, while construction investments will rise by five percent, equal to the 1989 rate.

The institutes said Bonn would not need to raise taxes in order to finance the upcoming economic and monetary union with East Germany. Tax revenues now were expected to be 8.5 billion marks greater than the institutes had predicted in their previous report last November.

The economists also warned Bonn against a 1:1 conversion of East German Ostmarks into deutsche marks. The ''apparent present'' of such a conversion would ''in reality result in the loss of many jobs'' in East Germany, the report warned.

PARIS (APRIL 9) - Shareholders of Kuwaiti French Bank have approved a plan for rescuing the beleaguered bank, the financial daily Agefi reported here on Monday.

It said the shareholders would bring the bank into compliance with French requirements on covering country risks. The bank is 80-percent held by Kuwaiti interests and 20 percent by CIC-Paris bank.

Agefi said the Banking Commissions considered it necessary to inject 180 million francs (about 32 million dollars) into the bank.

The rescue plan calls for converting 75 million francs' worth of convertible bonds, putting 60 million from the 1989 result into reserves, and selling off some securities and property assets during the year, Agefi said.

The publication added that CIC-Paris had suffered an operating loss on the order of 79 million francs during its most recent financial year, against one of 187 million the previous year. However, taking exceptional capital gains into account, the bank had a net profit of 45 million francs in 1989 against 91 million in 1988, the daily said.

TAIPEI (APRIL 9) - Taiwan and Singapore signed two agreements here Monday following their first ministerial meeting to step up bilateral economic and trade relations, an Taiwan official said.

The meeting to boost mutual business, industry and technology was jointly chaired by Lee Hsien Loong, Singapore's Minister of Trade and Industry, who arrived here Sunday for a five-day visit, and Taiwan's Economic Minister Chen Li-an, the official said.

A "Temporary Admission of Goods" agreement, which would simplify customs procedures of both countries, was signed by Taiwan's Board of Foreign Trade Director Hsu Ko-sheng and chief executive officer of Singapore's Trade Development Board Yeo Seng Teck, he said.

An "Investment Guarantee" pact was signed by Taipei's Industrial Development and Investment Center Director General John Ni and Singapore's Economic Development Board Managing Director Tan Chin Nam, he added.

Under the investment guarantee agreement, the two governments are to grant "national treatment" to investors from both countries, he said.

During his stay here Mr. Lee is expected to meet Foreign Minister Lien Chan and other ranking officials and may call on President Lee Teng-hui and Premier Lee Huan, the official said.

Taiwan is negotiating with several other Southeast Asian nations for similar investment guarantee pacts to protect its investors who are encouraged to invest abroad to expand their overseas outlets, the official said.

Two-way trade between the two nations amounted to 2.86 billion U.S. dollars last year, a 18.3-percent rise over the previous year, leaving an imbalance of 1.08 billion dollars in favor of Taiwan.

LAGOS (APRIL 9) - Two leading human rights activists in Nigeria were briefly abducted on Sunday, in what one said appeared to be attempts at intimidation.

Dr. Beko Ransome-Kuti, head of a committee for the defence of human rights, said Monday that people had come to his house and asked him to come out to their car to see to a sick person. He was then forced into the car and driven round the suburbs for several hours.

Dr. Ransome-Kuti, whose elder brother Olikoye is federal health minister under the military regime, said he was roughed up a bit and some of his clothing was removed.

Similar treatment was meted out to barrister Femi Falana, head of a national association of democratic lawyers. Dr. Ransome-Kuti attributed the brief abductions to attempts at intimidation.

Press reports of the incidents said the kidnappers were understood to have said they were state security agents.

KAMPALA (APRIL 9) - Moses Ali, Uganda's youth, sports and culture minister, has been arrested for treason, inspector general of police David Psomgen announced.

Mr. Psomgen said in a statement, broadcast Sunday night by Radio Uganda, that Brigadier Ali had been arrested for treason and held to facilitate investigations.

Brigadier Ali's arrest followed a joint police and army operation in his office, residence and business premises during which more than 20 people were arrested.

According to his relatives, Brigadier Ali was arrested at the Entebbe State House where he had been summoned by President Yoweri Museveni. He is believed to be under detention at the Lubiri Military Barracks near Kampala.

Some employees of the "Guide" newspaper, which is owned and run by the minister, were also arrested during the operation and cassettes, tape recorders and video camera impounded. The minister's official residence in Kampala was still guarded by troops on Monday morning.

Brigadier Ali, a former finance minister and close aide to dictator Idi Amin, is the only surviving leader of rebel guerrilla groups that joined Mr. Museveni's National Resistance Army (NRA) after the fall of the regime of General Tito Okello in January 1986.

LONDON, April 9 (AFP) - British wholesale prices rose by 0.7 percent in March from February, making a year-on-year increase of 5.6 percent, according to provisional figures uncorrected for seasonal variations announced Monday by the Central Statistics Office.

The 12-month figure is the highest since the 5.6 percent recorded in February 1985, the office noted.

Wholesale prices rose by 0.4 percent in February from January, giving a 12-month figure of 5.3 percent.

The prices of raw materials and energy used in industry, this time corrected for seasonal variations, were up by 1.4 percent in March from February, with a year-on-year increase of 2.2 percent. They had dropped by one percent in February from the January level.

The March figure of 0.7 percent monthly rise in wholesale prices is well above analysts expectations' of about 0.4 percent, with 0.9 percent for raw materials and energy used in industry. Analysts said it confirms the continuation of inflationary pressures, which will affect retail prices in coming months.

The annual British inflation rate was 7.5 percent in February, but should soon go above nine percent, according to many analysts.

The Central Statistics Office said the jump in prices of raw materials and energy in March was particularly due to higher prices for metals and manufacturing in the food industry, which more than offset a dip in electricity rates paid by industrial users.

LONDON (APRIL 9) - The recent slide in freight rates continued last week, due largely to disappointing lack of demand from Soviet and Japanese charterers, traders said.

The Baltic International Freight Futures Exchange (BIFFEX)'s Baltic Freight Index (BFI) lost 63 points on the week to end at 1,466, continuing a run of falls on 20 consecutive trading days.

Last year at the same time, the index stood 150 points higher.

Traders expressed surprise at the weak performance at a stage in the year when rates are usually strong as the last grain shipments of the season are booked. This year Soviet and Japanese grain charterers have been less active than usual, while demand has also been poor in the coal and ore sectors.

Some traders said that a recovery in the near future is unlikely, since the Easter holiday break this coming weekend will keep activity slow. It will be a further three weeks before any signs of improvement, they predicted.

Nevertheless others in the market pointed out that the Soviet Union's end-of-week purchase of 750,000 tons of U.S. corn should lend support.

LONDON (APRIL 9) - Britain offered Colombia an additional 7.2 million dollars to fight drug smugglers when Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher opened an international three-day conference here on Monday aimed at finding ways to reduce world demand for narcotics and cocaine in particular.

Colombia is South America's biggest cocaine producer.

Its president Virgilio Barco is among the 500 delegates from 112 countries attending the world ministerial drugs conference.

"Reducing demand may be less dramatic and newsworthy than arresting traffickers," Mrs. Thatcher said. "But without customers, the drug traffickers would soon be out of business."

Urging participants to ready themselves for "years of patient effort", she said Britain was also making a further 1.6 million dollars available for Britain's Caribbean dependent territories to fight drugs.

Britain had already committed 33.6 million dollars for the coming three years to help 22 countries in the anti-narcotics war, she added.

It was also setting up a "task force of people who have become expert in how to reduce demand for drugs" to help developing nations.

Anti-drug publicity campaigns and education were the best means for cutting demand, Mrs. Thatcher said.

She insisted there should be no legalisation of drugs, soft or hard, since all they did was "destroy young lives, ruin families and undermine society itself".

SACOC is a group of companies that makes corrugated sheets and boxes. It has an annual turnover of about 46 million U.S. dollars.

Teheran (APRIL 9) - Iran began exporting natural gas to the Soviet Union again Monday following a ten-year recess under an accord hailed by Teheran as providing a new cornerstone for economic cooperation with the Soviets.

The Islamic Republic News Agency Irna, reporting from the border town of Astara, where the pipeline crosses over to the Soviet Union, said Economics Minister Mohsen Nourbakhsh and deputy Oil Minister Mohammad Esmail Karachian were on hand for the ceremonies.

Under a 15-year accord which Irna reported on Sunday, Iran is to supply the Soviets at least three billion cubic meters of natural gas per year. The deliveries could go as high as 10 billion cubic meters.

Nourbakhsh said the resumption of gas exports to the Soviets will help Teheran procure funding necessary for nine major projects.

''A total of six billion dollars will be injected into these projects which are to be implemenet with Soviet collaboration,'' he said. Altogether, Teheran was planning investments of 23 billion dollars for various industrial projects in Iran's first five-year development plan.

PARIS (APRIL 9) - Future shareholders in a 12-billion-dollar bank to support Eastern European economic reforms agreed here on Monday on payment terms for the 42 future shareholders, several delegates said.

Payment of their contributions to the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development (EBRD) will be made in ECU (European Currency Units), dollars or yen on the basis of a fixed parity between the ECU and the other two currencies, they said.

The parity will be set based on the average dollar and yen exchange rates with the ECU for six months ending next September, the participants in the meeting here said.

They interpreted this decision as above all a concession to the United States, which had insisted on a fixed dollar-ECU parity for the U.S. contribution so as to avoid difficulties in Congress, which has to approve the contribution in dollar terms.

Some 30 percent of the bank capital of 10 billion ECU (12 billion dollars at present exchange rates) will actually be paid in in equal annual installments over the institution's first five years. The United States is the biggest shareholder with a 10 percent stake.

The inclusion of the yen in the compromise formula surprised several delegates. This solution was said to have been reached here on Saturday by G7 finance ministers.

In addition, conference sources said on Monday that chairman Jacques Attali, an advisor to French President Francois Mitterrand, told delegations Monday that the decisions on a bank headquarters and the first president concern only the European Economic Community (EEC) and will be made by it at ministerial level.

Delegates said the non-EEC delegations did not express any reservations about this announcement.

In the early afternoon, delegates were attacking the main pending political issue: Soviet access to EBRD loans.

NICOSIA (APRIL 9) - OPEC's crude oil production for March increased to 24.09 million barrels per day (bd), the highest monthly total since 1981, the Middle East Economic Survey (MEES) reported Monday.

The International Energy Agency also said last week that the total output figure was well above OPEC's current ceiling of 22 million bd. But it said the total for March stood at 23.7 million bd.

The largest rise in the 13-member Organisation of Petroleum Exporting Countries came from Iran, where output jumped to 3.15 million bd compared to 2.8 million bd in February and 2.5 million bd in January, MEES said.

The Nicosia-based weekly said this was the first time since August that Iran had been able to produce up to its OPEC quota of 3.14 million bd.

But on a monthly basis, the average OPEC crude production for the first quarter of 1990 was 23.66 million bd, with little change from the 23.7 million bd in the fourth quarter of 1989.

On the price side, the average spot price of the OPEC basket of seven crudes fell to 17.75 dollars per barrel in March, down from 19.10 dollars per barrel in February and 19.99 dollars per barrel in January, MEES said.

The influential newsletter noted that demand for OPEC crude fell to 15.4 million bd in 1985 before bottoming out and recovering to present levels.

TUNIS (APRIL 9) - The PLO is ready to open a dialogue with any Israeli government, Abu Iyad, the organization's second-in-command said here Monday.

"We are waiting for a communique from Shimon Peres ... after the parliamentary vote of confidence," he told Agence France-Presse in an interview.

Mr. Peres of the Labor Party, who is to present a new Israeli government to parliament on Wednesday, has vowed to move quickly to open a dialogue with Palestinian leaders in Cairo according to a U.S. plan.

Abu Iyad, also known as Salah Khalaf, said the Palestine Liberation Organization was prepared to "take part in a dialogue if an Israeli government, no matter which one, expresses an interest."

Recent statements by Mr. Peres "suggest that many obstacles to the opening of an Israeli-Palestinian dialogue have been removed," Abu Iyad noted, but he warned that it was still not certain that a Peres government "would be able to move toward peace and participate in such a dialogue."

Mr. Peres, according to Israeli predictions, will command the support of only 6l of parliament's 120 MPs.

The Labour leader has been bargaining with smaller leftist and religious parties since mid-March when he was asked to form a new government by President Chaim Herzog.

Labor's 15-month-old coalition with the right-wing Likud bloc of Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir collapsed in March in disageement over plans for the Israeli-Palestinian dialogue, which Labor supported and Likud refused to endorse.

Mr. Shamir was defeated in a parliamentary no-confidence motion March 15.

Moscow (APRIL 9) - A top Kremlin politician, signalling the Soviet leadership's concern about economic deterioration, said Monday that the Supreme Soviet (parliament) would soon be presented a proposal for introducing a ''regulated market economy''.

Deputy Premier Leonid Abalkin cited ''real processes in society'', including the decline in industrial production, labour conflicts and in some places, catastrophic economic developments for the new reform plans.

''Without this step, the country has no future,'' Abalkin said.

At the same time, he said the government needed more powers in order to carry out the ''quick transition to a regulated market economy on a broad front'' as called for by President Mikhail Gorbachev.

''It cannot be demanded of the government that it must justify every reform step to the Supreme Soviet,'' Abalkin said. He predicted there would be major resistance in the parliament to the new economic policy.

''It's going to be very uncomfortable,'' he added.

Abalkin said the greatest danger for the market were not the central authorities and ministries, but rather the rising self-interest of the republics and other regions which were increasingly going their own way.

Kazakhstan and the Ukraine, for example, had imposed limits on how much their enterprises should deliver elsewhere in order to satisfy their own markets, Abalkin said.

''Our problem is not the distribution of resources, but rather increasing labour productivity,'' he added.

Economic policy analysts here see Abalkin's announcement as a move by the Kremlin to speed up the economic reform process. Just last December, the government had drafted a reform programme which set a three-year transition phase for the centrally-planned economic system, with reforms to start being carried out in 1993.

DAR ES SALAAM (APRIL 9) - Tanzanian President Ali Hassan Mwinyi sacked the country's anti-corruption chief Zakaria Maftaha on Monday and named Major-General A.R. Kamaliza to take over immediately.

A statement issued by State House said the new anti-corruption squad director came from the Tanzanian People's Defense Forces (TPDF) but gave no further details.

The scandal-ridden squad, operating under the president's office, was established in the 1970's by the former President Julius Nyerere to stop corruption creeping into the Tanzanian public service.

But a recent auditor-general's report uncovered massive corruption and embezzlement of funds and cited evidence of some officials in the squad stealing property which had been seized from members of the public.

The report, which is due to be tabled before a parliamentary budget session in June, also unearthed personal enrichment by some squad officials.

The removal of Mr Maftaha, a former police superintendent, is the continuation of the crusade by President Mwinyi against corruption in public offices and to make leaders accountable for wrongdoings by their juniors.

Several judiciary officials, including judges and senior magistrates, have been removed or suspended in the last two weeks on bribery charges and maladministration of justice.

Last month, President Mwinyi dropped seven ministers from his new cabinet to make them accept "political responsibility" of rampant corrupt practices in their former ministries.

DUBLIN (APRIL 9) - Ministers from 13 Central and South American countries met their counterparts from the 12 nations of the European Community in Dublin Monday to discuss the political situation in Central America and the level of development aid provided to the region by the E.C.

The meeting, which continues Tuesday, is the sixth in a series which began in San Jose in Costa Rica in 1984.

The chairman of the E.C. foreign ministers, Gerry Collins of Ireland, told the opening session that discussions about ways of continuing the peace process in Central America would be one of the most important topics during the two day talks.

''The past year has seen important progress towards peace and stability and we in the European Communitiy will try and help that progress along the road'', said Collins.

He assured the other ministers that while events in Eastern Europe were taking up a lot of attention, the E.C. would continue to develop its links with other regional groups like the Central and South American countries.

JERUSALEM (APRIL 9) - Labor Party chief Shimon Peres held last-minute negotiations Monday with a key political faction and signed formal coalition accords with three other groups as part of plans to forge a new government.

Mr. Peres, who says he has enough support to replace caretaker Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir of the right-wing Likud bloc, will seek a parliamentary vote of confidence Wednesday.

The head of the centrist Labor Party secured an agreement from a former ally of Mr. Shamir that he would not block the confidence vote.

Yitzhak Modai of the Movement for Zionist Renewal said he and four other liberal MPs who broke away from Likud last month would not vote as a bloc at Wednesday's parliamentary session.

Mr. Peres has offered to give Mr. Modai the finance portfolio in a Labor-led government, and two deputy ministers posts to other deputies in his group.

Three left-wing opposition groups -- the civil rights movement Ratz (five MPs), Mapam (three) and Shinui (two) -- Monday signed formal coalition agreements with Labor.

The three have set conditions to their formal backing of Labor, including a clause in the coalition agreement on "the respect of human rights in the (Israeli) occupied territories."

On Sunday, Mr. Peres gained the backing of Abraham Sharir, a member of the Zionist Renewal group, with whom he was expected to have the support of 61 of parliament's 120 deputies.

Mr. Peres has been bargaining with Israel's opposition and religious parties since President Chaim Herzog last month asked him to form a new government.

The procedure involved several political deals which upset a large number of Israelis and led to a demonstration Saturday in Tel Aviv of some 150,000 people demanding electoral reforms.

Police announced Monday that they would deploy reinforcements to prevent any protesters from trying to disrupt Wednesday's parliamentary session.

Ultra-nationalist militants have issued death threats against several MPs, including Mr. Sharir.

President Herzog asked Mr. Peres to form a new government after a 15-month-old Likud-Labor coalition collapsed over U.S. proposals for an unprecedented Israeli-Palestinian dialogue.

The talks, which would pave the way for Palestinians elections in the occupied territories, are firmly rejected by Likud but supported by Labor.

Mr. Shamir's government fell on March 15 when it lost a vote of confidence in parliament.

MOSCOW (APRIL 9) - Nearly 2,000 armed "Armenian militants" have massed at the Armenian border near the Azerbaijan republic, according to the Soviet military commander of the disputed Nagorny-Karabakh region who wants a state of emergency imposed on the region.

General Vladislav Safonov, quoted by the Radio Moscow publication Interfax, said the militants were "well armed and well organized" near the border towns of Goris and Kafan.

He said their action follows one week after the Soviet army dismantled an Armenian militants' headquarters near Goris, which lies in eastern Armenia some 40 kilometers (25 miles) from Nagorny-Karabakh.

Interfax said Gen. Safonov has asked for a state of emergency in the region, like that imposed last January on the Azeri side of the border after violent clashes between the two ethnic groups.

The state of emergency is still in effect in the Azeri capital of Baku and in Nagorny Karabakh, whose Armenian majority has opposed the extension of Azeri rule over the autonomous province.

Unrest between the two communities, along with clashes with security forces sent in to restore order, have cost more than a hundred lives so far this year.

ISLAMABAD (APRIL 9) - Afghan leader Najibullah was the target of a shootout staged by Afghan guerrillas at a supposed surrender ceremony in Herat province April 6, mujahedin leaders said Monday.

They said Najibullah had accepted an invitation to attend the ceremony at Pshtoon Zarghoon town but did not turn up and sent his deputy minister for security, Jalal Razminda, instead.

Members of a resistance group linked to Jamiate Islami Afghanistan (Jia) told a press conference here that the ceremony was arranged after mujahedin commanders in Herat announced they would surrender to the Kabul regime with their 3,000 men.

When Razminda and Herat governor Fazle Haq Khalqyar were about to welcome the mujahedin leaders, five guerrillas opened fire, killing the minister and injuring several dignitaries,'' resistance commanders Abdul Wahid Mukhlis and Abdul Karim said.

The two commanders claimed the surrender had been staged with the covert assistance of an independent mujahedin leader from Herat, who apparently had joined hands with Najibullah last year.

The guerrillas said they wanted to eliminate Najib and expose ''his policy of national reconciliation as a farce''.

The Afghan commanders said in the ensuing shootout with Afghan troops at least 80 persons were killed and 100 injured, including the Herat governor. Radio Kabul spoke of seven dead.

CAIRO (APRIL 9) - A Cairo court sentenced to death Monday 12 drug smugglers, two of them in their absence, for moving marijuana and opium by ship from Sudan to Egypt through the Red Sea.

The jury finding is to be submitted to the Cairo Mufti, the country's most senior Islamic legal scholar, according to the Egyptian news agency Mena.

Thirty persons in all were accused of helping to move a huge cargo of drugs down the coast and then truck it inland in Egypt. Police were able to seize ten tons of marijuana and several kilograms of opium.

Mena reported the smugglers included a peasant who could neither read nor write, but could calculate huge amounts. Another was Bedouin who knew the terrain like the back of his hand and was in charge of hiding the drugs.

Six of the ten who face execution are Sudanese citizens. Of the two at large, one is Turkish and one Egyptian. Findings against the rest of the accused are to be handed down May 10.

COLOMBO (APRIL 9) - As leaders of the radical Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (Ltte) planned to meet with Sri Lanka's President Ranasinghe Premadasa, rival Tamils of the Eelam Peoples Revolutionary Liberation Front (Eprlf) Monday sought talks with the government to revive the defunct North East Provincial Council.

A senior minister of the Council Aboo Yoosuf and member of parliament from the Eprlf, Sam Tambimuttu, said the council was still legal although its Chief Minister Varatharajah Perumal and several other ministers have gone into exile just before Indian troops pulled out of Sri Lanka.

Yoosuf said Perumal would return as soon as his security was assured, as would other members of the council.

They left Sri Lanka in fear of the Ltte which opposes the Eprlf, regarded as a pro-Indian party. India also gave asylum to more than 1,000 Eprlf men in Orissa before the troops pulled out.

Perumal said shortly before his departure that he was turning the Council to a Consituent assembly as prelude to declaring an independent Tamil state of Eelam.

Eprlf spokesmen today told a press conference Monday that the council still existed and that their party was committed to the ''unitary status of Sri Lanka''.

They urged government to begin talks on reviving the provincial administration. They also described the situation in the North-East as ''the calm before a storm''.

Monday's surprise announcement by the Eprlf added a new dimension to the uncertainities in the area after the Indian troop pull-out last month. Political observers also said its timing was significant as it coincided with crucial talks between the Ltte and the government.

TEL AVIV (APRIL 9) - A wave of emigration from the Soviet Union via eastern Europe has brought 8,000 Jews to Israel in the month of March alone, according to a figure made public Monday by Israeli premier-designate Shimon Peres.

Publication of the numbers of incoming Soviet Jews is forbidden by Israeli censorship, but it has been disclosed here that 1,000 Soviet Jews arrived at Ben Gurion International Airport in Tel Aviv just on Saturday and Sunday.

With hours to go before the start of Judaism's feast of the Passover, charter planes were still landing with the migrants.

On Sunday the government began registering the migrants by computer directly on arrival so they could be more quickly settled.

Israeli Radio said Monday a total of 41,500 Jews migrated to Israel from all other countries of the world in the 12 months to April 1. The government expected at least 100,000 immigrants from the Soviet Union alone in calendar 1990.

The newspaper Jerusalem Post reported Monday Moscow had offered to resume diplomatic relations with Israel and allow direct flights of the immigrants from Moscow to Tel Aviv provided the Israelis promised not to settle the migrants in the occupied territories.

The radio said only 175 of new migrant families had settled on the West Bank in the 12 months to April 1. Government spokesman Avi Pasner said Sunday migrants had the right to settle where they liked.

BERLIN (APRIL 9) - East Germany's prime minister designate, Lothar de Maiziere, announced Monday that agreement had been reached on a coalition government of 21 ministers grouping conservatives, centrists and social democrats.

The new cabinet, comprising 11 ministers from his Christian Democratic Union (CDU) party, seven social democrats and three liberals, would be presented to parliament for approval on Thursday.

Conservative allies of the CDU grouped in the Alliance for Germany, the Christian Social Union, and Democratic Renewal, obtained two and one portfolios respectively.

ANKARA (APRIL 9) - Twenty-one separatists were killed and 15 wounded and captured in south-eastern Turkey, officials announced Monday at the end of a two-day running battle between security forces and the Kurdish Workers' Party (Pkk) guerrillas.

The official announcement said the clashes started when patrols chanced upon a strong guerilla unit near Oymakaya village in the Hakkari province bordering Iraq and Iran.

Two machineguns, 26 Kalashnikov rifles, two rocket-launchers and over a hundred grenades had been seized according to the announcement from the office of Governor Hayri Kozakcioglu who is in charge of fight against rebels in 11 provinces.

The news of the clash came against a background of heightened public concern in Turkey about a widening popular support for the rebels in the south-eastern provinces, as demonstrated recently by their ability to instigate riots in several towns.

The government and the opposition failed to unite on a common policy against the rebels last week. While the government hinted stronger measures against rebel sympathisers, the opposition urged early general elections to produce a stronger government.

The Marxist guerillas, trained in Lebanon's Bekaa valley, have been fighting for six years to set up an independent state for the country's estimated nine million Kurds, who form a sixth of the population but are not recognised as an ethnic minority.

JAMMU, INDIA (APRIL 9) - Indian paramilitary troops and police killed one person and wounded seven when they opened fire Monday in Kashmir to disperse curfew violators protesting a crackdown on Moslem separatists, officials said.

The troops fired into crowds of Moslems who defied a strict valley-wide curfew to pour out onto the streets at two places in Srinagar, Kashmir's summer capital, the officials said.

The crowds were demonstrating against a crackdown on Moslem separatists that has resulted in the arrest of more than 200 people and the death Sunday of six top militants in gunbattles with security forces.

They were also protesting alleged atrocities by security forces during house-to-house searches in the Kashmir valley for three hostages being held by Moslem separatists.

One person was killed and seven were injured in Monday's incident, which came as Moslem separatists lynched a Moslem resident in the northern Kashmir town of Uri, said the officials in Jammu, Kashmir's winter capital.

The man, identified as Abdullah Khan, was suspected by his killers of being a police informant.

Indian security forces have launched a massive hunt in Kashmir for three hostages held since Friday by the youth wing of of the secessionist Jammu and Kashmir Liberation Front (JKLF).

The JKLF had threatened to kill the hostages by 3:00 p.m. (0930 GMT) Monday unless three jailed members were freed.

The government rejected the demand and the deadline passed with no word on the fate of the hostages.

On Sunday, security forces shot dead two leading separatists and arrested three more in Srinagar.

Four militants were killed in the mountain resort of Pahalgam, 60 kilometers (35 miles) from Srinagar in southern Kashmir.

CAIRO (APRIL 9) - Top Egyptian officials met a Palestinian delegation here Monday and later stressed the whole Arab world was keen for a peace settlement with Israel.

Presidential adviser Osama al-Baz, who was with Foreign Minister Esmat Abdel-Meguid at the talks, said the Egyptians regarded a Palestinian-Israeli dialogue as just a prelude to a settlement with all the Arab countries.

Once a new government had been formed in Israel, dialogue could begin, al-Baz said.

A member of the Palestine Liberation Organization (Plo) executive, Mahmud Abbas, said he assessed Israeli leaders as currently supportive of a meeting of the U.S., Israeli and Egyptian foreign ministers followed by a prompt start to the dialogue.

In a magazine interview, Egyptian President Hosny Mubarak meanwhile said the Palestinians had to be involved in the negotiations if they were to make progress.

He told U.S. News and World Report he could not rule out terror attacks during such negotiations.

''I don't ever think that even when negotiations start all these (Palestinian) factions will be parties to them. Look, there is no single leader in the Plo who's able to control the whole thing,'' he said.

Asked if Egypt was willing to resume diplomatic relations with Iran, he said: ''I don't trust the Iranian stand. They've asked to renew diplomatic relations several times but I refused.''

The U.S. magazine asked him if his government was under threat from Islamic fundamentalists and he replied: ''It's exaggerated in the media. We know where they are, we know them by name and we have full control.''

BONN (APRIL 9) - The 35 countries of the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe adopted a final declaration here on Monday linking "political pluralism and the market economy", only a few months after the collapse of Communist regimes in Eastern Europe.

The delegates, who had met here for three weeks to discuss European economic cooperation for the first time, came out squarely for the market economy -- one in which government intervention is minimized and markets are allowed to perform their work of guiding production, pricing and allocation decisions.

In the document's introduction, the conference members, including the Soviet Union, pledge to make efforts on behalf of a multi-party political system, free and regular elections, and the existence of a "law-based state".

The conference groups all European countries except Albania, plus Canada and the United States.

This is the first time a specialized conference of the CSCE, of which there have already been 11, is ending with a success. The latest such meeting, held in Sofia last fall to discuss the environment, failed because of opposition by Romania, then still led by the late dictator Nicolae Ceausescu.

Since the conference works on a consensus principle, the opposition of a single member is enough to prevent decisions. The final document adopted here on Monday was approved on an "ad referendum" basis, i.e., subject to final examination by the capitals involved.

U.S. delegation chief Alan Homer said the document constitutes a signal to Western companies to invest in countries in the former Soviet bloc. He said the statement "makes only winners, since it should contribute to economic growth".

The 35 participating countries agreed on eight broad principles, including allowing prices to be set by the free interaction of supply and demand, the possibility for businesses to repatriate, in foreign currencies, profits made by their foreign subsidiaries, and recognition of all types of property rights, including to intellectual property.

BONN (APRIL 9) - West German central bank chief Karl-Otto Poehl has rejected Berlin's call for salaries to be exchanged at a one-for-one rate after unification and defended Bundesbank policy that the Deutschemark should equal two East German marks.

In an interview with the conservative daily Die Welt due to appear Tuesday, Mr. Poehl conceded parity was "in the fundamental interests" of East Germans.

However, he rejected East Germany's proposal that wages and cash should benefit from a one-to-one rate following monetary union, while its debt, which he estimated at 400 billion Ost marks, should be exchanged at two-to-one.

Supporting an earlier Bundesbank proposal, Mr. Poehl said East German salaries should be calculated at two-to-one.

The Bundesbank has already called for that rate to apply across the board, except for personal savings accounts of up to 2,000 Ost marks, which could benefit from parity.

Mr. Poehl said the Bundesbank would continue to defend the Deutsche mark because "the European economic system is tied to the DM's function as an anchor, and we must not do anything that might weaken our currency".

He also said that after unification the Bundesbank would be the sole authority with competence over East German monetary policy.

DAMASCUS (APRIL 9) - Syrian President Hafez al-Assad met five U.S. senators here Monday to his "active engagement" to help end the hostage crisis and a range of other issues, U.S. Republican minority leader Robert Dole said.

"We had frank and constructive discussions with President Assad," Mr. Dole said after talks also attended by Democrat Howard Metzenbaum of Ohio and Republicans James McClure of Idaho, Frank Murkowski of Alaska and Alan Simpson of Wyoming.

"We were told that he was actively engaged in efforts to free the hostages " Mr. Dole added, referring to 17 Westerners, including eight Americans, who are believed to be held in Lebanon, some by pro-Iranian groups.

Mr. Dole told a press conference the three-hour talks also covered terrorism and Middle East peace efforts.

Mr. Metzenbaum said the group conveyed to the Syrian president that "no single individual could have more impact on bringing about peace in the Middle East than Mr. Assad."

"Some of us indicated that we felt he could be an effective spokesman if he indicated his willingness to go to the peace table without preconditions.

I am not exactly certain that President Assad indicated willingness to do just that," he added.

The official Syrian Arab News Agency (SANA) meanwhile quoted Mr. Assad as saying "separate" peace efforts would fail to bring peace to the region.

The statement was an apparent reference to a U.S. proposal for an Israeli-Palestinian dialogue to pave the way for elections among Palestinians in the Israeli-occupied territories.

"The holding of an international peace conference on the Middle East can achieve a global and just peace," Mr. Assad said, adding that Israel rejected such a parley.

The U.S. senators left later for Cairo where they were scheduled to meet Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak on Tuesday. They will also visit Jordan and Israel as part of a nine-day tour.

The White House has said the senators, who discussed their trip last week with President George Bush, are not acting as messengers for Mr. Bush but carrying a "general message" that Washington wants to pursue peace efforts.

MEXICO CITY (APRIL 8) EFE - An average five people are dying each day as the result of a six-month measles epidemic in the mountains of the southern Mexican state of Chiapas, officials said Sunday.

In the last six months, more than 200 people, mostly indians, have died from measles in Chiapas, which borders Guatemala.

The epidemic spread south through Mexico from the United States, officials said, complaining of the lack of medicines and facilities needed to combat the outbreak.

Dozens more fatal cases of measles been reported in northern Mexico and along the eastern seaboard.

Health authorities in Chiapa, one of Mexico's poorest states, compared the epidemic to an outbreak of the bubonic plague there in 1908 and a cyclone which decimated the area in 1933.

A police spokesman said the suspected head of the smuggling ring, which is believed to have contacts in Colombia and Portugal, was detained and the cocaine seized during a weekend raid near the city of Pontevedra, 550 km northwest of the capital.

The suspect was not identified.

Police said they were looking for two other suspects in connection with the haul, the biggest ever in the region of Galicia which is a main entry point for cocaine smuggled into Western Europe.

Police said the raid resulted from a tip-off by U.S. narcotics agents who had arrested the crew of a Galician-owned fishing boat suspected of drug trafficking off the coast of Puerto Rico.

BUENOS AIRES (APRIL 9) EFE - Argentine President Carlos Menem, beset by economic problems and detractors on all sides, said in an interview published Monday that his principal opponent was his glamorous wife Zulema.

Menem also told the weekly Noticias that his wife was "very friendly" with Col. Mohamed Seineldin, the leader of an unsuccessful Army coup in 1988 who has recently tried to usurp Menem's Peronist party mantle, and Saul Ubaldini, who is heading trade union opposition to the president's economic austerity plans.

Zulema, he said "is my main opponent".

"But what can I do?" he continued. "She has the right to have these friends and her own political opinions. Marriage is not a prison."

The blonde and beautiful Zulema briefly moved out of the presidential residence in February, claiming the place had been bugged. But it was widely rumored that she had tired of her husband's womanizing.

In the interview, Menem acknowleged he chases women, "but it is exaggerated, because I am not the seducer I am made out to be."

"I am not such a hypocrite to be offended by what people say, or to beat myself to prove my purity," Menem argued.

Responding to his catastrophic decline in popularity in the opinion polls since taking office last July, Menem said, "It does not hurt me because I am not a film star."

The president's approval rating has plunged because of severe austerity measures he has decreed to fight rampant inflation, among other economic problems.

"It is necessary to see how much support I have after one year, because now we are convincing many people that the economic adjustment plans are the only way out for the country."

LONDON (APRIL 9) EFE - Human rights violations increased in Guatemala over the past 12 months as the government failed to prosecute Army and police officers allegedly involved in abuses, Amnesty International reported Monday.

The London-based human rights group said increasing evidence had appeared implicating security forces in torture, disappearances, and death squad-style murders.

"In order for these abuses to end, the government must make very clear that all those involved in these attacks and murders will be brought to justice," the organization said.

Guatemalan President Vinicio Cerezo has said right-wing death squads linked to the Army were responsible for many of the more than 2,000 political murders in 1989.

In addition, rights groups say the Army has carried out mass killings of peasants in the countryside as part of a campaign to eliminate support for leftist guerrillas.

Amnesty International cited an incident last month when 25 armed men attacked a group of peasants accompanied by human rights investigators in the village of Parraxtut, 75 km northwest of the capital.

The attackers beat a representative of the governmental human rights prosecutor's office, while two soldiers and two police officers stood by and watched, according to the rights group.

One of the assailants said he was following orders from the Army.

Tens of thousands of peasants have been killed by troops during Army counterinsurgency sweeps since the guerrillas took up arms in 1960, human rights groups say.

MEXICO CITY (APRIL 9) EFE - The Mexican capital, already the most crowded and contaminated city in the world, will have 27 million inhabitants -- equal to the entire population of Canada -- by the end of this century, a report released Monday said.

The "City for the Future" study carried out by Mexican architects and engineers estimates that the capital's population will increase by 600,000 every year from the current 21 million.

As the city grows, it will eat up 5,000 hectares every year of the surrounding valley, mostly in slums for immigrant peasants.

The report proposes creating a grand metropolitan area to stem the overcrowding and reduce economic and social problems by bringing the surrounding cities of Puebla, Cuernavaca and Pachuca within easy reach of Mexico City with an efficient road and rail network system.

One out of every four Mexicans live in Mexico City, with an average of some 1,700 peasants streaming into the capital's shanty towns every day in search of work, straining the city's already inadequate infrastructure which has yet to recover from damage by the 1985 earthquake.

The capital also suffers from a severe smog problem, reckoned by the United Nations to be the world's second most serious ecological concern after the burning of the Amazon rain forest.

MANAGUA (APRIL 9) EFE - Nicaragua's ruling Sandinista party, defeated in February elections, Monday rejected President-elect Violeta Chamorro's plan to dismiss the Sandinista defense minister when she takes office this month.

The leftist Sandinistas issued a statement saying the plan to remove Defense Minister Humberto Ortega, brother of President Daniel Ortega, would "place Nicaragua's peace and stability at grave risk".

On Friday, Chamorro said Humberto Ortega, one of the nine-member Sandinista Directorate that came to power in a 1979 revolution, would be sacked from the government and retired from the Army after she takes office April 25.

The ruling party charged that the planned dismissal was a concession to U.S.-backed rightist Contra rebels which have been fighting to topple the Sandinistas since 1981.

The Sandinistas described the plan as "unacceptable", charging that it allowed the Contras to set conditions for their demobilization and that it flouted "the integrity and permanence of the military hierarchy".

The Sandinistas said the dismissal would violate a transition accord signed by Humberto Ortega and Chamorro aide Antonio Lacayo on March 27.

The agreement stipulated that the Armed Forces would be a professional service subordinate to the president and that military personnel would not belong to political parties.

"By trying to ignore this accord, signed in patriotic spirit by both sides some people are attacking the dreams of peace and stability," the ruling party said.

The statement was issued by the 105-member Sandinista Assembly.

The National Opposition Union, coalition which backed Chamorro in the February 25 elections, has called for the defense minister's retirement.

An opposition labor federation, the Workers' Permanent Congress, has called a demonstration for April 22 to demand Ortega's removal from the Army.

Last week a Contra leader in Honduras said the rebels would disarm only if the government retired Sandinista officers from top Army positions.

SAN SALVADOR (APRIL 9) EFE - Salvadoran troops have killed 10 leftist guerrillas and wounded six others in a series of clashes less than a week after the government and the rebels agreed to renew direct peace talks, officials said Monday.

The Armed Forces' Press Committee said a leading Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front (FMLN) rebel commander known as +Ernesto+ and another rebel were Monday shot dead by government troops in the town of Jucuapa, 100 km east of the capital.

Four guerrillas were killed Sunday in a shoot-out with troops in the department of Libertad, 19 km east of the capital.

Three FMLN insurgents were killed and six were wounded Sunday in the department of Cabanas, some 50 km further east, while Army troops killed another FMLN rebel during a rebel ambush in the southeast of the capital.

Two soldiers were wounded in a separate rebel attack Sunday in the central department of San Miguel.

Battles have continued despite the signing last Wednesday of a United Nations-brokered agreement to open negotiations next month on an end to the country's decade-old civil war.

Under the seven-point agreement, the FMLN and the government of President Alfredo Cristiani pledged to call an immediate cease-fire, respect human rights, and work to establish guarantees for the guerrillas' eventual return to civilian life.

The FMLN called off peace talks last November and launched a major offensive in which some 2,000 people died following the bombing of a trade union headquarters by suspected Army-backed rightist death squads. Ten people were killed in the blast.

Human rights groups have blamed the death squads for murdering more than half the 75,000 people killed since the FMLN took up arms in 1980.

PARIS (APRIL 9) EFE - Five of the nine French Basque militants arrested last week as suspected members of Spain's armed Basque separatist group ETA have admitted their involvement in the guerrilla organization, a magistrate in Paris said Monday.

But the magistrate, Gilles Boulouque, refused to identify the five ETA guerrillas who acknowledged their membership during a closed hearing in a court in the French capital.

Among those detained last Wednesday and Thursday in raids in France's southwestern Basque region were Jacques Esnal and Frederic Haramboure who allegedly belonged to a crack ETA unit accused of between 30 and 40 murders since 1978.

The third suspected member of the unit, Henri Parot, was arrested last Monday in Spain.

It was the first time an entire ETA unit was found to be made up of French citizens, and none of three were known to police prior to Parot's arrest following a shoot-out in the city of Seville, 520 km southwest of Madrid.

Parot was arrested as he drove a car loaded with 300 kg of explosives, which he later confessed were to be used to blow up the city's police headquarters.

Boulouque said the suspects have been charged with illegal possession of firearms, ammunition, explosives, and false documents.

Under French law, they may also be tried for crimes committed in Spain if Spanish authorities present a case against them, Boulouque said.

Among the bloodiest of the French unit's attacks was the 1987 bombing of a Civil Guard barracks in Zaragoza, 330 km northeast of Madrid, in which 11 people, including five children, were killed.

The unit was allegedly under the command of ETA's number one, Francisco Mugica, better known as "Artapalo", who is believed to have ordered the Seville attack.

ETA has claimed more than 600 lives in its 22-year-old armed campaign for the right to independence of northern Spain's Basque region.

The group's members have regularly sought refuge and support in the French Basque region, although French police have in recent years cracked down on suspected ETA activists.

ISLAMABAD (APRIL 9) XINHUA - PAKISTAN HAS SET THE RICE EXPORT TARGET TO EARN 400 MILLION U.S. DOLLARS IN 1990, ACCORDING TO A REPORT OF THE EXPORT AUTHORITIES.

THE LATEST REPORT OF THE RICE EXPORT CORPORATION OF PAKISTAN SAID THAT 302 MILLION DOLLARS WAS EARNED FROM RICE EXPORT LAST YEAR.

IT SAID THIS YEAR'S TARGET IS BEING MET THROUGH AGGRESSIVE MARKETING, INTRODUCTION OF NEW VARIETIES AND APPOINTMENT OF SOLE AGENTS IN MAJOR WORLD MARKETS.

THE BREAK-UP OF THIS YEAR'S TARGET IS EXPORTING 400,000 TONS OF BASMATI RICE WORTH 240 MILLION DOLLARS AND 725,000 TONS OF OTHER VARIETIES WORTH 160 MILLION DOLLARS.

THE DEMAND FOR BASMATI RICE IN THE GULF COUNTRIES IS ABOUT 400,000 TO 500,000 TONS ANNUALLY. PAKISTAN USED TO HAVE NEARLY THREE-FOURTHS OF THE MARKET SHARE WHICH HAS DECLINED OVER THE PAST THREE TO FOUR YEARS BY 50 PERCENT DUE TO HIGH PRICES OF PAKISTANI BASMATI COUPLED WITH AGGRESSIVE MARKETING BY INDIA, PAKISTAN'S MAIN RIVAL.

TEHRAN (APRIL 9) XINHUA - IRAN TODAY RESUMED ITS GAS EXPORTS TO THE SOVIET UNION AFTER AN 11-YEAR RECESS, ACCORDING TO IRAN'S OFFICIAL NEWS AGENCY IRNA.

A CEREMONY WAS HELD IN THE SOVIET BORDER TOWN OF ASTARA THIS MORNING FOR OPENING THE CROSS-BORDER GAS PIPELINE TO CARRY THREE BILLION CUBIC METERS OF IRAN'S NATURAL GAS TO THE SOVIET UNION YEARLY.

SPEAKING AT THE CEREMONY, IRAN'S DEPUTY OIL MINISTER MOHAMMAD ESMAIL KARACHIAN DESCRIBED THE RESUMPTION AS "A BASIS FOR THE EXPANSION OF TECHNICAL AND ECONOMIC COOPERATION BETWEEN THE TWO COUNTRIES." IRAN RESTARTED ITS GAS SALES TO ITS NORTHERN NEIGHBOR AFTER THE TWO SIDES FINALIZED A 15-YEAR PROTOCOL HERE ON SUNDAY.

IRAN STOPPED ITS GAS SALES TO THE SOVIET UNION A FEW MONTHS AFTER THE 1979 ISLAMIC REVOLUTION.

AFTER ROUNDS OF NEGOTIATIONS, THE TWO SIDES AGREED TO RESUME THEIR GAS DEAL AND BASE IT ON THE INTERNATIONAL PRICE AND MONTHLY CALCULATION.

IRAN'S ECONOMICS AND FINANCE MINISTER MOHSEN NOURBAKHSH, WHO ALSO ATTENDED THE CEREMONY, SAID THAT THE GAS EXPORTS TO THE SOVIET UNION FORMED A "CORNERSTONE" IN ECONOMIC COOPERATION BETWEEN THE TWO NEIGHBORS.

THE MINISTER, ALSO CO-CHAIRMAN OF THE TWO COUNTRIES' JOINT ECONOMIC COMMISSION, PREDICTED THAT THE DEAL WOULD HELP IRAN PROCURE THE NECESSARY FUND FOR IMPLEMENTING NINE MAJOR PROJECTS.

"A TOTAL OF 6 BILLION DOLLARS WILL BE INJECTED INTO THESE PROJECTS WHICH ARE TO BE IMPLEMENTED IN COOPERATION WITH THE SOVIET UNION," NOURBAKHSH ADDED.

IRAN EXPECTS TO EARN 300 MILLION U.S. DOLLARS FROM THE GAS EXPORTS TO THE SOVIET UNION AND TO INCREASE THE EXPORT VOLUME TO 10 BILLION CUBIC METERS ANNUALLY LATER.

THE SOVIET UNION HAS ALSO AGREED TO ALLOW IRAN TO USE ITS TERRITORY AS A TRANSIT POINT TO EXPORT NATURAL GAS TO EUROPE.

DURING THE FIRST FIVE-YEAR DEVELOPMENT PLAN (1989 TO 1993), IRAN PLANS TO GET AN ESTIMATED GAS REVENUE OF 2 BILLION DOLLARS IN HARD CURRENCY.

ACCORDING TO A 6-BILLION DOLAR AGREEMENT SIGNED IN MOSCOW LAST JUNE, THE TWO COUNTRIES WOULD WORK TOGETHER IN THE FIELDS OF STEEL, RAILWAYS, FISHERIES, TELECOMMUNICATIONS, ATOMIC ENERGY, MILITARY INDUSTRY AND TRANSPORTATION.

NOURBAKHSH SAID THAT 23 BILLION DOLLARS IN HARD CURRENCY HAVE BEEN ARMARKED FOR ENERGY, INDUSTRY, AGRICULTURE AND TELECOMMUNI- CATIONS PROJECTS.

"WITH FURTHER INVESTMENT IN THE FUTURE, THE COUNTRY WOULD BECOME SELF-SUFFICIENT IN VARIOUS STEEL PRODUCTS AND MATERIALS REQUIRED FOR INDUSTRIAL AND PETROCHEMICAL UNITS AND FOR MANUFACTURING HOUSE- HOLD APPLIANCES," HE ADDED.

WINDHOEK (APRIL 9) XINHUA - THE UNITED NATIONS COUNCIL FOR NAMIBIA OPENED ITS SPECIAL PLENARY SESSION HERE THIS AFTERNOON.

THIS IS THE FIRST TIME FOR THE COUNCIL TO MEET IN NAMIBIA SINCE ITS ESTABLISHMENT IN 1967 AND ALSO THE LAST TIME AS ITS MANDATE ENTRUSTED UPON BY THE U.N. GENERAL ASSEMBLY HAS BEEN TERMINATED WITH THE INDEPENDENCE OF NAMIBIA.

ADDRESSING THE OPENING, PRESIDENT SAM NUJOMA OF THE NEWLY INDEPENDENT NAMIBIA PAID HIGH TRIBUTE TO THE CONTRIBUTIONS BY THE COUNCIL TO THE INDEPENDENCE OF NAMIBIA.

"THE COUNCIL HAS BEEN CLOSELY IDENTIFIED ITSELF WITH THE NAMIBIAN PEOPLE IN THEIR STRUGGLE FOR SELF-DETERMINATION AND NATIONAL INDEPENDENCE," THE PRESIDENT SAID. "THE COUNCIL IS A TRUE PARTNER IN THE DECOLONIZATION PROCESS OF OUR COUNTRY."

MR. PETER ZUZE OF ZAMBIA, PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL WHO OPENED THE MEETING, PLEDGED THAT "ALTHOUGH OUR MANDATE HAS BEEN TER- MINATED, OUR SUPPORT FOR THIS NEW NATION WILL CONTINUE."

THE MEETING, SCHEDULED TO LAST FOR THREE DAYS, IS EXPECTED TO REVIEW ITS ACTIVITIES IN CARRYING OUT ITS MANDATE AND ADOPT A DECLARATION ON TERMINATING ITS TASKS.

THE SESSION RECEIVED MESSAGES FROM CHAIRMAN OF THE ORGANIZATION OF AFRICAN UNITY AND EGYPTIAN PRESIDENT HOSNI MUBARAK AND CHAIRMAN OF THE NON-ALIGNED MOVEMENT AND YUGOSLAV PRESIDENT JANES DRNOVSEK, WHO PRAISED THE COUNCIL FOR ITS CON- TRIBUTIONS TO NAMIBIA'S INDEPENDENCE PROCESS.

CAMBRIDGE, MA (APRIL 9) PR NEWSWIRE - Biogen, Inc. (NASDAQ: BGEN) announced today that Merck & Co., Inc. (NYSE: MRK) has signed a sublicense agreement with SmithKline Biologicals for rights to the Biogen hepatitis B patents covering the manufacture and sale of recombinant hepatitis B vaccines worldwide (except Japan).

Under the terms of the sublicense, Biogen will receive royalties from Merck based on sales of its recombinant hepatitis B vaccine. In April 1988, Biogen licensed to SmithKline exclusive patent rights for recombinant hepatitis B vaccines worldwide (except Japan). Specific terms of the agreement were not disclosed.

Biogen's broad licensing program for hepatitis B vaccines and diagnostic kits has been an important contributor to the company's revenue growth since 1988. During 1990, the hepatitis B licensing program will yield well over $20 million in revenue to Biogen. Because every major United States and European manufacturer of recombinant hepatitis B antigens is part of Biogen's licensing program and strong market growth is anticipated for hepatitis B vaccines and diagnostic products, this revenue stream will continue to expand in the 1990's.

Biogen is a leading biotechnology company principally engaged in developing genetically engineered pharmaceuticals. As a result of its early research, Biogen now derives revenues from five products being sold by its licensees in various countries. Biogen currently directs its research and development into areas where the company has particular strength -- AIDS, inflammation and selected cancers.

BEAVERTON, OR (APRIL 9) PR NEWSWIRE - Epitope Inc. (AMEX: EPT) announced today that it has been granted a U.S. patent for a method of using monoclonal antibodies for directly detecting the presence of AIDS infection.

"This technology will allow healthcare professionals to detect AIDS infection very early after infection. Conventional FDA-licensed screening tests cannot detect HIV infection until sufficient antibodies are produced commonly two to three months after virus infection," noted Michael Hubbard, Epitope president.

Hubbard added, "Detection in the first months of infection is important because infected individuals test negative during the early period, and as a result, can unknowingly spread the virus."

The company also said that it will make available "for research use only" an AIDS screening test which incorporates the newly patented technology. Epitope's clinical laboratory division, Immunologic Associates, and other selected study sites will begin using the test in 1991. Full commercialization will require FDA approval.

The new technology will also allow clinicians to monitor the progression of infection and the effectiveness of therapeutic intervention. Currently available tests cannot. Both of these capabilities are critical as an increasing number of AIDS drug therapies undergo clinical evaluation.

Development of Epitope's direct diagnostic tests started in the early 1980s and has been supported by the National Institutes of Health, Small Business Innovative Research Grant Program and by SYVA, the diagnostic division of Syntex Corp. In January 1989, Epitope reacquired from Syntex the rights for commercialization of the resulting diagnostic products.

MIAMI LAKES, FL (APRIL 9) PR NEWSWIRE - Windmere Corporation (NYSE: WND) today reported that on April 6, 1990, a jury in the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of Florida found North American Philips Corp. and N.V. Philips (collectively referred to as "Philips") liable under Section Two of the Sherman Act for monopolizing the rotary shaver market and for conspiracy to monopolize such market. The jury awarded Windmere damages of $29,881,419 plus reasonable attorneys' fees, interest and costs. The court trebled the jury's damage award by entering a judgment against Philips in the amount of $89,664,257.

The jury also returned a verdict in favor of Windmere with respect to the allegations made by North American Philips Corp. and U.S. Philips Corporation that Windmere had engaged in unfair competition regarding its rotary electric shaver. The jury found that Windmere has not engaged in such conduct.

It is not unusual for a jury verdict of this magnitude to be appealed. North American Philips Corp., N.V. Philips and U.S. Philips have indicated that they will file post-trial motions. However, Windmere believes the verdict will be upheld.

With respect to the jury's decision in the more than five-year-old case, David Friedson, CEO and president, said, "We have always believed that we would prevail in our claims against Philips. Our perseverance in this case has provided Windmere and its shareholders with a substantial victory."

NEW YORK (APRIL 9) PR NEWSWIRE - Tiffany & Co. (NYSE: TIF), the renowned American jeweler, opened its largest branch in the United States on April 7 with the debut of its new location at Fairfax Square in Tysons Corner, Va. This new store location is the latest development in the firm's ongoing domestic expansion program which began several years ago.

The 14,500-foot Tiffany store is located in Tysons Corner, one of the most prestigious retail centers in the area. Tiffany is the first retailer to establish a presence in the new Fairfax Square complex, a shopping and corporate environment dedicated to luxury products and services.

The exterior of the store has been designed in pink granite mirroring the Art Deco style of the New York flagship. Inside, stately wooden columns lead the way from the rotunda into three salons which house Tiffany's exclusive collections of jewelry, tableware and luxury accessories. Most spectacular of these is the jewelry salon furnished in cherrywood, with streamlined vitrines that are elegantly appointed. Two private showing rooms will be available for customers who wish to make selections discreetly, with the help of Tiffany's expert staff.

To celebrate its local debut, Tiffany has mounted a special exhibition entitled "Tiffany: A Heritage of American Design." The display features approximately thirty objects spanning two centuries of achievement as a jeweler, silversmith and stationer. The exhibition, open to the public from April 7 through May 8, includes presidential commissions and rare gemstone jewelry. Also on view is a luncheon table setting that pays tribute to President and Mrs. Lyndon Baines Johnson, using White House china from the administration designed by Tiffany.

The Fairfax Square opening will be followed by Tiffany debuts in Philadelphia (fall 1990) and San Diego (1991).

Tiffany offers exclusive jewelry designs, including collections by Elsa Peretti, Paloma Picasso, and Jean Schlumberger, as well as china, crystal, silver, stationery, timepieces, fragrance, scarves and leather. Special services are provided by the corporate division, bridal registry, and personal shopping departments.

In addition to its Fifth Avenue store, Tiffany operates other stores in Atlanta, Beverly Hills, Boston, Chicago, Costa Mesa, Dallas, Houston and San Francisco in the United States and internationally in London, Munich, Hong Kong and Zurich. Established in 1837, Tiffany & Co. is a public company with its common shares traded on the New York Stock Exchange.

DETROIT (APRIL 9) PR NEWSWIRE - Michigan Bell today announced plans to build fiber optic "rings" around downtown Detroit and Grand Rapids, Mich.,

this year to provide businesses with high-speed, high-capacity communications services.

"The rings will expand customer access to the latest system technology and offer increased capacity and transmission reliability," said Michigan Bell President Kenneth E. Millard.

Once in place, the rings will offer customers numerous other benefits, including shorter installation time for new services, greater ability to monitor service quality and increased transmission capacity.

Construction of the two fiber optic rings will begin in May, with service beginning in late 1990. Each ring will connect customers in downtown buildings with two separate Michigan Bell call-processing offices, creating additional paths on which information can travel.

Information carried on the rings will be extremely secure, Millard said. In the event that a ring is damaged, information will flow through the ring in the opposite direction to reach its destination.

The system provides a dual safeguard against the possibility of damage to the fiber optic link or a malfunction in one of the call- processing offices.

As an additional safeguard, system plans call for the provision of two separate cable routes into each building to guard against loss of service.

The Detroit ring will span approximately six miles, linking Michigan Bell's call-processing offices at 1365 Cass and 1014 E. Jefferson.

The Detroit and Grand Rapids rings are the first phase of a multi- year $50 million program to provide business customers with the "self-correcting" transmission routes. The company plans to build fiber rings in all its major markets.

Fiber optic communication is the fastest, clearest, most error-free conduit for voice, data and video messages. Its capacity to carry information is enormous, Millard said.

This year, Michigan Bell will invest about $255 million statewide in fiber optic and digital switching technology. The company expects to add 51 digital call-processors to the 247 now located around the state. By year-end 1990, Michigan Bell will have in place well over 100,000 miles of fiber optic cable.

Millard said the company will spend more than $500 million this year to improve and maintain the state's telecommunications infrastructure.

An estimated $250 million has been earmarked for the Detroit area in 1990, including approximately $15 million for land and buildings, $125 million for transmission and call-processing equipment and $110 million for outside facilities.

PARSIPPANY, NJ (APRIL 9) PR NEWSWIRE - UNIX International (UI), the Open Software Foundation (OSF), and AT&T's UNIX Software Operation said today that formal discussions which began last November to expand technical collaboration and discuss possible modifications to organizational structures have been concluded.

These discussions resolved a number of issues, providing the opportunity for increased collaboration for the benefit of computer customers worldwide.

The organizations said in a joint statement: "These discussions have advanced the cause of open systems in many tangible ways and we are confident that computer users throughout the world will benefit."

UI and OSF further determined that a full organizational merger involving the UNIX Software Operation could not be practically achieved at this time. The groups also said that they will continue informal discussions intended to find areas for increased cooperation to build on the progress achieved.

Significant areas in which technical progress has been made include: -- Agreement to a number of standards such as POSIX 1003.1, XPG3, ANSI X3J11 C, and X11;

-- Agreement to support the X/Open process for identifying future open-systems requirements;

-- Agreement to collaborate on common verification technologies aimed at ensuring compatibility; and

-- Agreement to discuss emerging technologies such as multiprocessing and internationalization, as appropriate, in order to seek common ground. PRINCETON, NJ (APRIL 9) PR NEWSWIRE - Allstate Insurance Co. today filed a lawsuit in federal district court in New Jersey to challenge the constitutionality of the Fair Automobile Insurance Reform Act of 1990.

"The law is an unfair and unconstitutional effort to avoid facing up to the real problems of auto insurance in New Jersey by punishing Allstate and other insurers," said the company's attorney Floyd Abrams. "Filing this suit is in the best interests of Allstate's customers, shareholders and New Jersey employees."

Named as defendants in the suit are Governor James Florio, Attorney General Robert J. Del Tufo and Acting Insurance Commissioner Jasper Jackson.

The suit alleges that, in forcing insurers to pay the state's JUA losses, the law deprives Allstate of its right to make a fair and reasonable return on its business. "Therefore, the law is unconstitutional," said Abrams.

The suit also charges Gov. Florio with attempting to punish and intimidate Allstate by various threats and actions.

MAHWAH, NJ (APRIL 9) PR NEWSWIRE - Racal Electronics Plc today announced it has signed an agreement to acquire Silc Technologies Inc. for $3.2 million to be paid in cash at closing.

Silc will be a wholly owned subsidiary of Racal-Redac, a leading electronic design automation firm with North American headquarters in Mahwah, N.J.

Silc Technologies, based in Burlington, Mass., provides software for the design of integrated circuits. Its SilcSyn technology will add to the broad capabilities of Racal-Redac's Visula design system.

Racal-Redac, through its subsidiary, HHB Systems, Inc., signed an agreement with Silc last year for the development of an interface between Racal-Redac's integrated-circuit simulation system and the SilcSyn design technology. That accord also called for the international distribution of SilcSyn by Racal-Redac.

According to Lutz Henckels, president of Racal-Redac's North American operations, "The acquisition of Silc Technologies is an important step in establishing Racal as the world's leading electronic design automation firm. The company's technological base is enhanced, and our customers have access to a broader range of design tools for their demanding applications. Racal-Redac's unique market position is that it provides design optimization of integrated circuits and systems, while ensuring the manufacturability of those designs. The Silc acquisition supports that strategic position."

Closing of the acquisition is expected in two weeks. At that time, Silc's 30 employees will join the Racal-Redac marketing and product development organization.

Racal is a leading international electronics and security company, with worldwide revenues approaching $3 billion. Racal Electronics Plc, the parent company, is headquartered in the United Kingdom.

Racal- Redac, with revenues exceeding $85 million, has over 7,000 design systems installed in 2,000 sites around the world. The Racal Corporation, headquartered in Florida, provides management and financial services for Racal's North American operations.

BEDFORD, MA (APRIL 9) PR NEWSWIRE - Millipore Corporation (NYSE: MIL) announced today that sales of its ongoing business grew 10 percent in the first quarter of 1990.

Reported sales for the quarter grew 2 percent over total sales for the first quarter fo 1989, which included the results of Millipore's process water business, sold later in that year. Full first quarter results are scheduled for release in the third week of the month.

John Gilmartin, Millipore Corporation's chief executive officer, stated, "Orders growth for the first quarter was greater than that of sales, and we continue to be particularly pleased with growth in sales and orders experienced worldwide by our membrane business in the first quarter. Conversely, our instrument business continues to be adversely affected by the decline in capital spending and the continued restraints on government funding for research."

PITTSBURGH (APRIL 9) PR NEWSWIRE - Equimark Corp. (NYSE: EQK) today announced that it expects to report a net loss for the first quarter of 1990 projected to be in the range of $13.5 million to $15.5 million, equal to a net loss per common share of between $1.21 and $1.38.

It is presently anticipated that the first quarter financial results will be released in mid-April, 1990.

The projected net loss in the 1990 first quarter is primarily due to a significant increase in the corporation's provision for possible loan losses and to losses taken due to the sale or writedown of certain nonperforming real estate.

Alan S. Fellheimer, chairman and chief executive officer of Equimark, stated that "the significant loss represents a temporary setback in the corporation's five-year progression of financial improvement. Continued uncertainties surrounding the economic climate in our marketplace have resulted in additional pressures that may affect the ability of certain borrowers to meet their obligations, together with an indicated reduction in the value of loan collateral including commericial real estate."

In this regard and in connection with the anticipated sale of its credit card business, the corporation has taken measures to accelerate, at discounted values, the settlement of certain nonaccrual loans with borrowers and the disposition of certain parcels of nonperforming real estate. First quarter projected results include a substantial increase in the consolidated provision for possible loan losses. This increase serves to raise the level of the quarter-end reserve for possible loan losses and to replenish the reserve for loan chargeoffs taken during the period related, in part, to accelerated settlements of nonaccrual loans at discounted values. Similarly, the portfolio of nonperforming real estate has been written down to lower estimated net realizeable values based upon current negotiations to dispose of certain properties.

Fellheimer stated that "despite the projected first quarter loss due in part to this 'blowout' of nonperforming assets, the corporation's projected financial position at March 31, 1990, remains strong." Total nonperforming assets are expected to be approximately 3 percent-5 percent lower at March 31, 1990, than the $66,828,000 total at year-end 1989, which was 2.33 percent of total loans plus nonperforming real estate. The reserve for possible loan losses at March 31, 1990, is projected to be approximately $6,000,000 higher than the year-end 1989 balance of $41,955,000 which was 1.48 percent of outstanding loans. The reserve is expected to be in the range of 1.65 percent-1.70 percent of loans outstanding at quarter-end. The loan loss reserve is also projected to cover approximately 75 percent of total nonearning assets at quarter-end compared to 63 percent at year-end 1989.

CHERRYVILLE, NC (APRIL 9) PR NEWSWIRE - The following is a letter to shareholders from Kenneth E. Mayhew, Jr., President and Chief Executive Officer of Carolina Freight Corporation (NYSE: CAO):

Letter to Shareholders:

Revenue for the twelve weeks ended March 24, 1990 increased 7.8 percent to $161,147,406 compared with revenue of $149,485,448 in the first quarter of 1989. Net earnings were $977,195 or $.15 per share compared with $1,520,132 or $.23 per share in the first quarter of 1989. Our fiscal year consists of three 12 week quarters and a final 16-week quarter.

First quarter 1990 net earnings were negatively affected by the fact that our freight prices did not keep pace with higher pay rates, employee benefit costs and fuel prices. Freight prices were virtually flat compared with the first quarter of 1989. Diesel fuel costs (including fuel taxes) increased $1,377,764 or 17.7 percent compared with the first quarter of 1989 largely due to the substantial increase in fuel prices in late December and early January. In addition, start-up costs approximating $600,000 in connection with the restructuring of our linehaul and consolidation terminal operations were incurred in the first quarter.

On April 1, 1990, an increase of approximately three percent in wages and benefits became effective under the terms of the labor agreement between Carolina Freight Carriers and the Teamsters Union. The various rate bureaus have proposed general rate increases of about four percent to be effective on June 4, 1990.

Construction of major new consolidation terminals at Carolina Freight Carriers is progressing on schedule. The Linden, New Jersey consolidation terminal operations were transferred to Carlisle, Pennsylvania in January. The new Cincinnati and the expanded Toledo terminals began functioning as hub terminals for the satellite terminals in their regions in February.

BOULDER, CO (APRIL 9) PR NEWSWIRE - NBI Inc. (NYSE: NBI) announced that it has begun providing maintenance and support capabilities for Novell LANs (local area networks). The new service is available for Novell customers in New York, New Jersey, Washington, Baltimore, Minneapolis and Denver. The service program will be expanded nationally by year end.

NBI is offering three Novell customer support packages, NETPlus Basic (TM) NETPlus Comprehensive (TM), and NETPlus Elite (TM). All three NETPlus programs were developed to provide Novell users with maximum network up-time and performance.

Claudio Pela, vice president and general manager of NBI's System and Support Division, stated, "Support of Novell LANs is a natural step for NBI based on our eight-year history of network systems experience. Coupled with our outstanding reputation as a superior provider of service and support, and our existing extensive customer support locations throughout the United States, we can ensure Novell customers that their networks will operate at peak performance levels."

All NETPlus offerings provide customers with a toll free number to call whenever network problems develop. This provides customers with immediate access to network experts who are Novell Certified NetWare engineers, trained to troubleshoot customers' problems. Problems requiring on-site assistance will be dispatched to customer support engineers trained on Novell.

The NETPlus offerings cover a wide range of hardware and software applications and include access to NBI's on-line bulletin board which provides up-to-date technical and product information for Novell networks.

NBI Inc. has been a leader in the word processing industry for more than a decade and provides customer service and support to a wide base of system users in domestic and international locations. NBI also designs and markets advanced word processing software packages.

OAKBROOK TERRACE, IL (APRIL 9) PR NEWSWIRE - Williams Telecommunications

Group, Inc. ("WilTel"), the prominent Tulsa-based telecommunications carrier for long distance companies, and Telesphere Communications Inc. (AMEX: TSP), the Chicago-based national long distance company and leader in information 900 services, today announced an equity agreement related to the acquisition by Telesphere of National Telephone Services, Inc. (NTS).

Under the terms of the two-year agreement, WilTel will provide $15 million of fiber optic network usage in exchange for $15 million of preferred stock. The preferred stock is convertible to common stock at $7.00 per share. The outstanding preferred stock will earn a dividend of 10 percent; such dividends to be accrued by Telesphere.

The exchange of preferred stock for fiber usage will be at the rate of 80 percent of the incremental increase over Telesphere's current stand alone requirements. Telesphere management estimates utilization of the $15 million usage provision within 12-16 months.

WilTel also participated in the underlying purchase transaction in a bridge financing role when Telesphere acquired National Telephone Services adding $200 million in annual gross revenues.

Roy Wilkens, president of WilTel, and Harry Thompson, chairman of Telesphere, in a joint statement, said, "We are pleased with this mutually satisfying equity agreement and look forward to an even more robust relationship as Telesphere moves ahead."

LOWELL, MA (APRIL 9) PR NEWSWIRE - Proceeding with its strategy to be a major publisher of innovative software programs for industry-standard PCs, Wang Laboratories Inc. (AMEX: WAN) today announced that Softsel/Microamerica (NASDAQ: SOFS) will distribute Wang's Image Wizard software package.

Image Wizard, an image editing application for Microsoft(R) (MS) Windows environment, is part of a series of Wang-developed, industry-standard PC applications to be distributed by Softsel in North America under an agreement announced earlier this year. Softsel/Microamerica, a leading worldwide distributor of microcomputer software and hardware, currently distributes Wang ClearView, an icon-based application manager for Windows.

Image Wizard, priced at $295, is an image-manipulation and screen-capture package for use on the IBM PC/AT and compatibles. It enables users to edit and enhance scanned or imported black-and-white images and freehand designs within MS Windows. Image Wizard can be used alone or as a means to enhance popular PC desktop publishing packages, such as Aldus PageMaker(R). It can also be used with Wang image processing products -- OPEN/Image-Windows and Wang Integrated Image Systems (WIIS) -- for PC and mid-range applications.

Sophisticated editing features make Image Wizard particularly appealing for desktop publishing users who need to edit or enhance scanned images, such as photographs or drawings, for use in desktop publishing documents. A screen-capture utility also simplifies production of documents such as technical manuals. Instead of having to cut and paste, users can capture screen images from any MS Window application and incorporate them electronically into the documents. In addition, Image Wizard provides image editing capabilities to users of Wang Image processing products.

Softsel/Microamerica, which evolved from the recent merger of Softsel Computer Products, Inc. and Microamerica, Inc., is one of the world's leading computer products distributors serving resellers through sales offices in the U.S., Canada, Europe, Latin America, South America, the Caribbean and Australia. The company supplies thousands of hardware and software products from leading manufacturers and publishers for microcomputer platforms including Apple Macintosh, IBM and compatibles, and a variety of UNIX systems, in addition to offering a wide range of services to help resellers support these products.

PITTSBURGH (APRIL 9) PR NEWSWIRE - Equimark Corp. (NYSE: EQK) and BANC ONE CORP. (NYSE: ONE) today announced that their respective subsidiaries, Equibank (Delaware), N.A. ("EDNA") and BANK ONE LAFAYETTE, N.A. ("BANK ONE"), have entered into a definitive agreement for the sale to BANK ONE of approximately $350 million of EDNA's credit card receivables and the associated customer accounts.

The sale price was not disclosed. Closing is anticipated to occur during the second quarter.

The sale includes substantially all of the credit card business of EDNA. Under the agreement, Equibank will enter into an agent bank agreement with BANK ONE and the Equibank name will remain on its customers' credit cards. The sale does not include approximately $113 million of non-credit card revolving credit receivables, which will be retained by EDNA.

Alan S. Fellheimer, Equimark's chairman, stated: "We believe this is a sound business and strategic move for our corporation at this time. Larger institutions have been aggressively expanding their charge card business, which can be very profitable for them because of economies of scale that are difficult to achieve for small organizations. This transaction is an important step in our continuing goal of maximizing shareholder value."

Stanley J. Calderon, president and CEO of BANK ONE, LAFAYETTE, N.A., stated, "We are excited about this new opportunity to increase our market share. As an aggressive credit card company, we are most anxious to geographically expand our quality service nationwide."

Equimark Corp. is a diversified financial services institution with $3.7 billion in assets.

BANK ONE, LAFAYETTE, N.A. is an affiliate of BANC ONE CORP. headquartered in Columbus, Ohio. BANC ONE CORP. reported assets of $26.6 billion and common equity of $2.25 billion at year-end 1989. PLYMOUTH MEETING, PA (APRIL 9) PR NEWSWIRE - Charter Power Systems Inc. (AMEX: CHP) today announced its best performance ever for the fourth quarter and the fiscal year ended Jan. 31, 1990, including recorded sales and earnings for both periods.

Sales for the quarter ended Jan. 31, 1990, rose to $39,516,000 from $39,395,000 in the 1988 quarter and were a record for any fourth quarter.

The 1989 quarterly earnings were $1,327,000, an increase of $4,113,000 from the 1988 quarter loss of $2,786,000 and were the highest absolute dollar earnings of any quarter in the history of the company. Earnings per share increased to 23 cents from the loss of 50 cents for the prior year quarter, equaling the prior record in the first quarter of 1986 on nearly twice as many weighted average shares outstanding.

Annual sales increased 5 percent to a record of $158,418,000 from $150,523,000 for the prior 12-month period.

Net income for the 12 months ended Jan. 31, 1990, rose to $3,752,000 or 66 cents per share, from a loss of $3,528,000 or 64 cents per share for the previous year. The 1989 per-share amounts were based on 5,682,000 weighted average common shares outstanding, an increase from 5,494,000 weighted average shares outstanding for the prior year. The 1988 results reflected the adoption of SFAS No. 96, Accounting for Income Taxes, which negatively impacted earnings for that year by $2.7 million or 49 cents per share.

Net cash flows provided by operating activities for the fiscal year increased 169 percent to a record $14,254,000 and unrestricted cash and cash equivalents at year end increased by 259 percent to $1,397,000.

The significant cash flows of the company enabled it to reduce total long-term debt by $6,147,000 to its lowest level in history, while also implementing the highest fixed capital improvement expenditures in its history.

Robert Alvine, chairman, said, "We are pleased with the progress the company has made to date. Despite a slow down in market demand, particularly in motive power, new records in sales, earnings and cash flows provided by operating activities have been established, and the trend for the last four quarters has been up. The reduced debt level and improved financial terms under the company's new credit agreement should have a positive effect on cash flows in 1990."

KEY WEST, FL (APRIL 9) PR NEWSWIRE - CRI, Inc., the real estate finance, management and development firm, acted as the advisor to a Japanese hotel operator in its purchase of the 158-room Hampton Inn Key West, Fla.

The Hampton Inn, a limited-service resort hotel opened in 1985, stands on 5.1 acres of land on the northern tip of Key West, directly on the Gulf of Mexico.

Said CRI's SVP for hotel acquisitions, Jerry H. Herman: "While many of our international clients have sought to invest in downtown signature office buildings or high-end resorts, limited service hotels like the Hampton Inn with proven track records in strong markets are high-performance investments.

"Properties like these are attracting more and more investors overseas because of their strong, fundamental economics."

Herman said that during the past two years, the Hampton Inn's rates and occupancy levels have exceeded averages for hotels both nationally and in this booming Florida resort.

In the transaction, CRI acted as advisor to the buyer, identifying the investment property, securing a first mortgage loan, and negotiating the purchase for the buyer.

The Miami-based Continental Companies, which has managed the property since it was opened, will remain in that role under the new owner.

CRI will provide ongoing asset management services for the new owner. Since its founding in 1974, CRI, Inc. has acquired a $4.6 billion real estate portfolio. This includes the nation's third largest portfolio of multifamily housing, 1.7 million square feet of commercial office space, 23 hotels in 11 states, as well as the site of the PGA West Golf and Tennis Resort, which CRI is developing in LaQuinta, Calif.

A CRI affiliate, Capitol Hotel Group, manages five hotels and provides asset management and advisory services to domestic and overseas owners of hotel and resort properties in the Unites States.

As the advisor to numerous buyers of U.S. real estate, CRI has recently placed apartment and hotel investments with overseas investors totaling nearly $125 million.

CHICAGO (APRIL 9) PR NEWSWIRE - MASI, Ltd., a leading private investment banking firm, today announced it will begin in early May to provide investment bank advisory services to middle market companies interested in doing business with Pacific Rim countries through its joint venture with Yasuda Trust & Banking Company, Ltd. (YTB), one of the world's largest banks.

"The joint venture is the first between any Japanese trust bank and a U.S. merger, acquisitions and corporate financing firm specializing in the middle market -- companies with annual revenues ranging from $10 to $150 million," Thomas J. Smith, MASI principal, said in making the announcement.

Smith said, "What makes this joint venture a very good fit are the similar operating philosophies and growth strategies that MASI shares with Yasuda. For example, we both have a strong relationship and service orientation with our clients, and our respective game plans call for increasing business between the United States and Japan.

"Our clients are most eager to establish a presence in the Pacific Rim either through acquisition, license or joint ventures. We now have a direct link in the region to keep them apprised of opportunities," Smith said. He also noted that the Yasuda relationship extends MASI's existing capabilities in North America and Europe, giving the firm a truly global reach.

Operationally, MASI will work closely with members of Yasuda's Global Strategy Services Group in Tokyo, the unit responsible for providing Pacific Rim investment banking advisory services.

Tsutomu Aizawa, director and general manager of YTB's International Business Development Group, said, "We will soon select a bank representative to be based at MASI headquarters to serve as direct liaison for the joint venture."

Aizawa continued, "The relationship with MASI enables YTB to give our corporate customers focused assistance and advice on U.S. joint ventures, mergers and acquisition candidates. The affiliation is yet another example of our commitment to service customers on a global basis. YTB's foundation was built on trust banking services and we have a proud tradition of broad advisory services.

"Our stated growth strategy is to increase these services to Asian middle-market companies, to international firms doing business in Japan, and to international markets where we alredy do business. That has led YTB to develop strong direct and indirect strategic alliances throughout the world," Aizawa said.

With $161 billion U.S. dollars in total assets, Yasuda Trust and Banking Company, Ltd., of Tokyo, has 25 branches or representative offices around the world, including Chicago, New York, Atlanta and Los Angeles, in addition to those in Europe, Asia, Oceania and South America.

MASI, Ltd., based in the Chicago suburb of Deerfield, is a rapidly growing private investment banking firm staffed with merger and acquisition professionals with business and technical skills in the divestiture, acquisition, joint ventures, valuation, financing and private placement areas.

BUFFALO, NY (APRIL 9) PR NEWSWIRE - Cellular Products, Inc. (NASDAQ: CELP) announces today that the investment banking firm of Janney Montgomery Scott (JMS), New York, New York, has been retained to assist the company in locating a marketing and/or merger partner. With the assistance of JMS, discussions are currently underway with several potentially interested parties, however, no assurances can be given that any transaction will be completed.

The company also announces that it has taken several measures to permit it to operate more efficiently. These include efforts, presently underway, to consolidated all of the company's activities into one of its two facilities. The lease on the facility being vacated, which has been occupied by the company since its inception in 1982, expires in December 1990. The facility to which all activities are being transferred is owned by the company and represents a modern, well- equipped manufacturing plant capable of meeting all of the company's currently-projected manufacturing, research, and administrative functions. Because of the consolidation, expected to be completed within the next six weeks, staff reductions were also recently implemented to eliminate duplicative positions.

According to Dr. Richard A. Montagna, president, "Many people are unaware that our company has developed and/or distributes twenty-five biotechnology products. Cellular Products is FDA-licensed to manufacture AIDS and HTLV-I (Leukemia) blood screening tests, and Cellular is one of only three companies in the United States licensed by the FDA for the sale of the HTLV-I test. The company intends to continue meeting its present product delivery obligations with its foreign distributors for the sale of FDA-licensed products and will earnestly work with the distributors to expand the sale of these products wherever possible. However, without the assistance of marketing and/or merger partner, the company does not plan to enter new geographic markets for the distribution and sale of these FDA-approved products."

Montagna further added, "the company is continuing to refocus considerable attention on the sale of its products targeted to the biomedical research market. These products can be manufactured with less expense and sold into less competitive marketplaces throughout the world. The physical plant consolidation and down-sizing of the operation are intended to allow the company to continue providing high- quality biotechnology products to the biomedical research field. In addition, these measures should help to provide stability and self- sufficiency to the company's operations whether or not a marketing and/or merger relationship is concluded."

For the third quarter ended Dec. 31, 1989 the company posted a loss of $252,592 or $0.03 per share on revenues of $412,366. This compares to a loss of $597,065 or $0.08 per share on revenues of $472,120 for the corresponding quarter ended Dec. 31, 1988. For the nine months ended Dec. 31, 1989 the company posted a loss of $563,953 or $0.07 per share on revenues of $1,891,574 as compared to a loss of $971,774 or $0.13 per share on revenues of $2,055,953 for the corresponding nine months ended Dec. 31, 1988. Average common share outstanding increased to 7,981,718 from 7,336,942 over the corresponding twelve month period.

Montagna further commented, "the improvement noted during the third quarter was partly due to the cost-cutting measures outlined above. We plan to continue this cost consciousness and hope to see the improvements continue."

EDMONTON, ALBERTA (APRIL 9) PR NEWSWIRE - The Alberta Research Council and Eniricerche, Milan and Rome, have signed a cooperative agreement as a step toward collaborating in research and development at laboratory and pilot plant scales.

Development of new materials such as ceramics, coatings and membranes; management of industrial wastes; removal of organic sulphur from fossil fuels; methane utilization; development and application of sensors for resource industries, and medical and environmental applications, are among the areas of mutual interest. The two organizations have established a committee to set research objectives and priorities, and assess R&D requirements.

''With the rapid globalization of industry, the Alberta Research Council has recognized the importance of its role as a leader in developing associations which will benefit Alberta industry,'' says Dr. Clem Bowman, president. ''We hope our collaboration with Eniricerche will yield the contacts leading to joint proposals in various Europe92 industrial endeavors.''

Technology, Research and Telecommunications Minister Fred Stewart added, ''everywhere one looks, companies and organizations are forming strategic alliances to achieve mutual goals. I am very pleased with the progress the Alberta Research Council is making on the world stage for the benefit of Alberta.''

According to Dr. Luigi Croce, president of Eniricerche, ''both parties will certainly benefit from this cooperation in a climate of increasing R&D internationalization.''

Eniricerche is the corporate research arm of ENI Group, the Italian state owned agency for hydrocarbons. ENI Group of Companies operates in the fields of energy, chemistry, engineering, mechanical manufacturing, mining and metallurgy, and has about 120,000 people employed worldwide.

The Alberta Research Council is an Alberta crown corporation, offering a diversified range of scientific, engineering and technological research and testing capabilities in advanced computing and engineering, biotechnology, energy, manufacturing technologies and natural resources.

LOS ANGELES (APRIL 9) PR NEWSWIRE - Frederick's of Hollywood Inc. (AMEX: FHO) today reported a 35 percent increase in net earnings and a 23 percent sales advance for the second fiscal quarter, compared with the corresponding prior year period.

For the three months ended March 3, 1990, net earnings rose to $2,038,000, equal to $.54 per share, from $1,509,000 or $.41 per share, for the second quarter a year ago. Sales for the three-month period advanced to $28,629,000 from $23,297,000 last year.

For the first half of the current fiscal year, net earnings rose 47 percent to $2,445,000, equal to $.65 per share, from $1,659,000, or $.45 per share, a year ago. Sales increased to $50,276,000 from $40,714,000 for the first six months of the prior fiscal year.

Earnings per share amounts for the prior year periods were adjusted to reflect two 3-for-2 stock splits effective March 17, 1989 and Aug. 28, 1989.

George W. Townson, chairman and chief executive officer, attributed the strong second quarter performance primarily to excellent Christmas and Valentine's Day selling periods for the Frederick's of Hollywood retail stores. He noted that the company's refocused merchandise mix, concentrating on intimate apparel lines, along with a greater percentage of stores with the new design, also were factors contributing to the improved performance.

"Continued increases in sales and earnings are anticipated as we proceed into the second half of the fiscal year," said Townson. "However, the rate of growth will likely be moderated somewhat as compared with the first half of the year, due to planned investments in our mail order subsidiary and the general seasonality of our business."

At the close of the second quarter, the company operated 164 specialty apparel stores in 35 states and a mail-order division that serves customers in all 50 states.

ABBOTT PARK, IL (APRIL 9) PR NEWSWIRE - Abbott Laboratories achieved record sales and earnings for the first quarter ended March 31, 1990.

Worldwide sales for the first quarter increased 11.0 percent to $1.438 billion from $1.296 billion in 1989. Earnings per share rose to $1.02, up 15.9 percent from 88 cents a year ago. Net earnings increased 13.6 percent to $225 million from $198 million in the first quarter of 1989.

Abbott chairman and chief executive officer Duane L. Burnham said the company's record performance is a direct result of the commitment of Abbott's employees and their ability to generate a continuous stream of new products and to achieve consistent gains in productivity.

In March, the Abbott board of directors approved a two-for-one stock split and increased the company's quarterly common dividend 20 percent to 42 cents per share on the pre-split shares. Shareholders of record at the close of business May 1, 1990 will be issued an additional share of Abbott common stock on May 31, 1990 for each share owned on the record date.

During the first quarter Abbott: -- Announced it won a competitive bid to supply the U.S. Department of Defense with equipment to test all active duty military personnel and reserves for drug abuse. The agreement will consist of three successive one-year contracts to supply instrumentation, data management capabilities and test kits required to perform more than 15 million tests per year;

-- Announced the filing of a new drug application with the U.S. Food and Drug Administration for Survanta, a lung surfactant developed by Abbott's Ross division for use in the prevention and treatment of respiratory distress syndrome in newborn premature infants;

-- Announced that the purchase of Damon Biotech, Inc. has been consummated. Damon Biotech develops, manufactures and markets biomedical products including monoclonal antibodies and genetically engineered proteins;

-- Introduced a 15-minute version of its physician's office diagnostic test, called Testpack Chlamydia, which is used to detect Chlamydia infection in women. The development of this faster diagnostic test will enable patients to get test results with only one visit to a physician's office and begin any necessary treatment immediately; and

-- Introduced Depakote Sprinkle, a new, easy-to-use formulation of the company's anti-epileptic drug for children and elderly epileptic patients.

During the first quarter, research and development expenses at Abbott increased by 14 percent over last year to $134 million. The majority of R&D funds are devoted to the development of diagnostic and pharmaceutical products.

Sales of pharmaceutical and nutritional products were $760 million in the first quarter, an 11.8 percent increase from the $680 million in the first quarter of 1989.

Hospital and laboratory product sales totaled $678 million in the first quarter, a 10.2 percent increase from the $616 million a year ago.

Sales in domestic markets were $930 million, up 10.4 percent from $843 million in the first quarter of 1989.

International sales, including direct exports from the U.S., were $508 million, a 12.2 percent increase from the $453 million recorded a year ago.

Abbott Laboratories is a worldwide manufacturer of health care products employing 41,000 people. In 1989, the company's sales and net earnings were $5.4 billion and $860 million, respectively, with earnings per share of $3.85.

READING, PA (APRIL 9) PR NEWSWIRE - Metropolitan Edison Co. this week reached a safety record of more than one full year without a lost workday accident -- possibly a unique record in the nation.

On April 7, 1989, company employees began the accumulation of a safety record for individual consecutive safe work hours without a lost workday accident. Met-Ed has reached one year of safe work, accumulating a total of more than 4.6 million safe work hours.

This one-year record is unique because efforts to find another company in the electric utility industry -- or any other -- that has a full year of work without a lost workday for any employee, have come up empty in inquiries to the National Safety Council, Edison Electric Institute and Pennsylvania Electric Association. No company has kept note of such records on a company and annual basis.

David S. High, vice president of customer operations, said, "The real meaning of the record is that no Met-Ed employee has lost a workday during the past year because of a work-related mishap, as defined by the federal Occupational Safety and Health Administration record-keeping guidelines. And that's more important than the record itself.

"This is even more impressive when the potential danger lurking in some of our jobs is considered. Many of these jobs require more attention to safety than jobs in other industries and our employees devote that attention to their work."

"The next step with this unique record is to Go For Two," High urged Met-Ed employees.

FALLS CHURCH, VA (APRIL 9) PR NEWSWIRE - First Virginia Banks, Inc.

(NYSE: FVB) today reported that net income for the first quarter of 1990 was $16,029,000 or 75 cents per share of common stock compared with $16,581,000 or 79 cents per share, reported for the first quarter last year.

Robert H. Zalokar, chairman and chief executive officer, stated that the principal reason for the 3 percent decline in earnings was a lower net interest margin in this year's first quarter which has resulted from lower interest rates on earning assets and the need to pursue a more aggressive pricing posture on deposit accounts in order to retain deposit balances and attract new deposit customers. He stated that a lack of loan growth also had a negative effect on earnings but that loan demand has improved significantly in recent weeks.

Net income for the quarter was equal to 1.26 percent of average total assets compared with a record 1.41 percent return on assets in the first quarter last year. Earnings were equivalent 13.81 percent of average stockholders' equity in the 1990 first quarter compared with a 15.89 percent return on a lower equity base during the same period in 1989.

Zalokar stated that the quality of the loan portfolios of First Virginia's member banks remains superior. Construction and land development loans, which are now receiving increased attention from investors and bank regulatory agencies, represent only around three percent of total loans, one of the smallest amounts of any major banking company. First Virginia has no exposure to foreign borrowers, leveraged buy-out loans or other loans for significant highly-leveraged transactions, and no investments in nonrated, high-yielding corporate bonds.

On March 31, nonperforming assets (nonaccruing and restructured loans and foreclosed real estate) were $17 million, only .51 percent of total loans, down from $18.3 million, or .56 percent of loans, one year earlier. Annualized net charge-offs for the quarter were only .30 percent of average loans. The allowance for loan losses is $41 million, or 1.22 percent of total loans, and is equal to 241 percent of nonperforming assets and 412 percent of first quarter's annualized charge-offs.

First Virginia Banks, Inc. is the oldest bank holding company in Virginia. There are 23 member banks within the First Virginia group, 18 in Virginia three in Maryland and two in Tennessee. Together, they operate 305 offices.

SAN FRANCISCO (APRIL 9) PR NEWSWIRE - Radius Inc., the leading manufacturer of high resolution graphics display systems and graphics engines for personal workstations, today announced a key addition to its management team. Dirk Eastman has joined Radius Inc. as vice president of sales. He was formerly senior vice president worldwide sales for Western Digital.

"The 1990's represent a tremendous challenge for the industry," said Mike Boich, Radius president. "New technology demands new sales and distribution strategies. Dirk's experience in all phases of the distribution channel and in multiple technology sectors will help us meet the challenge of the 90s head on."

As Radius' vice president of sales, Eastman will be responsible for all domestic and international sales functions. Radius has five regional domestic sales offices and two international offices, one in London and one in Paris. Radius corporate distribution agreements cover all the major chains including Businessland, Computerland, Computer Factory, Connecting Point, Heath Zenith, Inacomp, MicroAge and NYNEX Business Centers. Internationally, Radius products are distributed in 26 countries through strategic partnerships with various distributors.

Eastman joined Western Digital in 1987 to develop reseller distribution programs for Western Digital's established and newly acquired retail and OEM product lines, including the Paradise line of VGA and EGA chip sets. In 1988 he was given worldwide responsibility. Under Eastman's management Western Digital's revenues have more than doubled to $1 billion.

Prior to Western Digital, Eastman was a principal with PCMA, Apple's most successful sales rep firm. PCMA also established a successful VAR business by matching compatible Intel and Apple product lines. Eastman has held senior positions in both sales and marketing with National Computer Sales and ITT Courier. He spent 11 years with IBM in a variety of sales and sales management positions.

CHERRY HILL, NJ (APRIL 9) PR NEWSWIRE - SAI Group Inc. (NASDAQ: SAIG) announced today that it had received an offer from Fortuna Holding, the Swiss insurance company which owns approximately 25 percent of its outstanding common stock, to acquire the remaining shares for $.0425 per share.

Fortuna Holding's interest in making an offer was previously reported on March 8, 1990.

The company said that the board of directors had retained the Philadelphia-based investment banking firm of Howard, Lawson & Co. to assist it in evaluating the offer and had scheduled a board meeting for April 19, 1990, to consider it.

SAI Group said that the Fortuna Holding proposal contemplates the merger of the company into a wholly owned subsidiary of Fortuna Holding. It was made subject to completion by Fortuna Holding of its due diligence investigation, execution of a definite agreement and approval of the final terms by Fortuna Holding's board of directors.

SAN FRANCISCO (APRIL 9) PR NEWSWIRE - Procom Technology Inc., advanced storage systems leader, today announced that its 1.3GB SCSI D.A.T. (digital audio tape) drive is now shipping. Termed the HiPerformance DAT drive, it had originally been introduced at COMDEX '89 in Las Vegas last November.

The drives utilize DDS tape standards set by Hewlett-Packard and Sony and provide users with the ability to store 1.3GB of removable storage on a R120 cassette about the size of a standard business card. And when paired with an archiving software program that doubles the backup capacity of conventional backup methods users are given a full 2.6GB of storage.

Featuring transfer rates of up to 4.0MB/sec with an MTBF rating of 20,000 hours, list price for each drive is $3,995.

Like all of Procom Technology's SCSI drives, the HiPerformance DAT drive features active termination -- an on/off external termination switch -- an external SCSI address dial for simple SCSI ID selection and the flexibility to store the drives vertically or horizontally. Additionally, the zero-footprint design for Mac Plus, SE and SE/30 models, means the drives can be stacked with Procom Technology's other high capacity storage peripherals without loss of desk space.

The drives come packaged with all cabling, documentation and software for plug and play installation. The software features the flexibility to allow users to back up entire volumes of material or multiple user-selected files. The HiPerformance DAT drive can even operate in the background via Multi-finder(tm).

In addition to the DAT drive, Procom Technology offers a complete SCSI storage product line featuring low to high capacity internal and external hard disk drives, erasable optical drives, CD-ROM drives, and tape backup systems.

The company, headquartered in Southern California, is a rapidly growing, privately held manufacturer of advanced storage systems for personal computers. Products are sold through both a national dealer network and international distribution agreements.

SAN FRANCISCO (APRIL 9) PR NEWSWIRE - Procom Technology Inc., advanced storage systems leader, today announced that it has signed a joint marketing agreement with Dantz Development Corp. whereby Procom will bundle Retrospect(tm) archiving software with every one of its 650MB Erasable Optical Drives while Dantz will include Procom Technology in its promotional pieces and packaging.

Retrospect features include automatic file selection, a browsing function for instant file access, full Appletalk network support, unattended backup and virus protection. However, the software package is best known for its ability to double the backup capacity of storage peripherals. That capability combined with Procom Technology's 650MB Erasable Optical Drive means end users can get up to 1.2GB of optical storage from each optical cartridge.

MEOD 650 features include automatic bad block reallocation, full network and multi-media support, external SCSI address dial and termination switches for easy installation. Additionally, because the drives conform to ISO/ANSI standards, data interchangeability among a variety of cartridge vendors is assured.

In addition to the Erasable Optical drive, Procom Technology offers a complete SCSI storage product line featuring: low to high capacity internal and external hard disk drives. CD-ROM drives, DAT (digital audio tape) drives and tape backup systems.

The company, headquartered in Southern California, is a rapidly growing, privately held manufacturer of advanced storage systems for personal computers. Products are sold through both a national dealer network and international distribution agreements.

WAUKEGAN, IL (APRIL 9) PR NEWSWIRE - Outboard Marine Corporation (NYSE: OM) (OMC) today announced that, due to the industrywide reduction in demand for marine products in the U.S., the company expects to report both operating and net losses for its second quarter ended March 31, 1990.

The company expects the net loss for the quarter to be between $1 million and $5 million, or between five cents and 25 cents per share, as compared to net earnings of $9.2 million or 47 cents per share from continuing operations for the same quarter in 1989. The company said it expected sales for the quarter to be as much as 25 percent below the $403 million in sales from continuing operations for the same quarter last year.

OMC said that its expected operating loss of as much as $10 million for the second quarter would be partially offset by favorable adjustments to income tax reserves and other non-operating items.

BOSTON, MA (APRIL 9) PR NEWSWIRE - John M. Nelson, chairman and CEO of Norton Company (NYSE: NRT), today testified in support of the proposed Act To Provide Protection To Massachusetts Corporations (House Bill 5556) at a public hearing called by the Joint Committee on Commerce and Labor.

Nelson said the new legislation is necessary to keep corporate raiders from circumventing existing Massachusetts anti-takeover laws through a new takeover abuse -- simultaneously launching a last-minute tender offer and threatening a proxy fight during the period immediately prior to a previously scheduled annual shareholders meeting.

"As Norton Company has seen, a hostile raider using a proxy contest can time its bid to give the target company the shortest possible time to consider alternatives," Nelson said.

"A staggered board of directors will not stop a hostile raider. But it will prevent the election, all at once, of a slate of nominees who are pledged to sell the company to themselves, regardless of the impact on the company's constituencies. This bill will ensure that no board of directors is stampeded into acting too quickly in making critical decisions about the company's future," he said.

Nelson told the hearing that the proposed legislation is critical not only to Norton but also to many other Bay State corporations. "Who will be the next Massachusetts company to come under attack? Who will be the next victim of a raider who tries to circumvent our laws?"

Nelson noted that, under the proposed legislation, any company that does not want a staggered board is entirely free to opt out of the statute.

Staggered boards are already common among U.S. and British companies. More than 200 of the Fortune 500, including such Massachusetts-based companies as Gillette, Raytheon and Cabot, now have staggered boards.

PARK RIDGE, NJ (APRIL 9) PR NEWSWIRE - Mazda Motor Corporation and the Hertz Corporation, the world's largest car rental company, today announced the formation of a new car rental joint venture in Japan.

The new company will operate under the name Hertz Japan Ltd. and will be fully integrated with Hertz' worldwide reservation system.

"It is our great pleasure to develop a car rental and leasing business in Japan in collaboration with the world's market leader," said Norimasa Furuta, president of Mazda Motor Corporation. "The business philosophies of Mazda and Hertz are very similar in that we both seek to be the best for our customers."

"This is an exciting development for Hertz on the international front and further strengthens our global car rental leadership," said Frank A. Olson Hertz chairman and chief executive officer.

"The Japanese car rental market is growing at a substantial pace, and we see this as an excellent opportunity for both Hertz and Mazda," he added.

The new venture will be operated as a nationwide franchise system with all vehicles purchased and owned by Hertz Japan. The fleet will include not only Mazdas, but a wide range of vehicle makes and manufacturers.

Anticipated start-up date for the new joint venture is summer of 1990. Mazda cars and trucks are manufactured in Japan, the United States and in 16 other countries, and are sold in more than 120 markets around the world. Mazda Motor Corporation is headquartered in Hiroshima, Japan.

Hertz currently operates from more than 5,000 locations in more than 120 countries. The company's headquarters is in Park Ridge and its worldwide data and reservations centers are in Oklahoma City.

MIDLAND, MI (APRIL 9) PR NEWSWIRE - America's largest cogeneration facility and the world's first conversion of an idled nuclear plant to natural gas was dedicated today in ceremonies here featuring international federal and Michigan officials, including Gov. James Blanchard.

More than 400 people were expected to attend the ceremonies at the Midland Cogeneration Venture (MCV), a major event for the U.S. energy industry.

"Three years ago, conversion of an idled nuclear plant to natural gas was a dream -- something that had never been done. To now have this power plant in operation ahead of schedule and under budget is an historic event " said William T. McCormick Jr., chairman and chief executive officer of CMS Energy Corporation (NYSE: CMS), which holds a 49-percent ownership interest in the project.

"The celebration of Midland's success today underscores the impact of major changes that have swept through the U.S. utility industry. These include the re-emergence of natural gas for baseload use; the acceptance of joint ventures for use in building new generating capacity; and the growing contribution of cogeneration and independent power production," McCormick said.

Rodney E. Boulanger, president and chief executive officer of the MCV, told the dedication audience that "the MCV was constructed in less than three years and under budget. It has also demonstrated that economics, the environment and the needs of the customer can be addressed without compromise. I believe our achievements here will mark a path that others will follow."

The MCV, built on a 1,000-acre site, which includes an 880-acre cooling pond, can generate 1,370 megawatts of electricity, enough to serve a city of 1 million people. The facility can also cogenerate up to 1.35 million pounds per hour of process steam for industrial use.

Twelve U.S. and Canadian gas firms have long-term contracts to provide the 150 million cubic feet of natural gas per day needed to fuel the MCV, one of the world's largest gas-fired facilities. The gas is brought to mid-Michigan by five major pipelines, Great Lakes, Panhandle, Trunkline, Trans Canada and ANR.

The Midland project has, according to the American Gas Association, been both a lightning rod for the resurgence of natural gas as an energy source for power generation and an outstanding example of the high efficiencies that generating plants can achieve by using combined-cycle technology.

The electricity is generated at the MCV by 12 gas combustion turbine generators supplied by Asea Brown Boveri Energy Services. Each is rated at 85 megawatts. The unit one steam turbine from the former nuclear plant receives steam from heat recovery steam generators on the gas combustion turbines and generates an additional 350 megawatts. The MCV employs 125 people.

Consumers Power Company ended construction of the Midland nuclear plant in July 1984. In November 1985, new management at Michigan's largest utility began a study on what to do with the idled plant. In September 1986, The Dow Chemical Company and Consumers Power reached agreement in principle to form a partnership to convert Midland.

The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission approved the MCV as the nation's largest Qualifying Facility under the Public Utility Regulatory Policies Act (PURPA) in March 1987. In October of that year a groundbreaking ceremony was held at the facility. Field construction began in April 1988. The Power Sector of Fluor Daniel, a unit of the Fluor Corporation, performed the role of designer-constructor.

The facility went into commercial operation on March 16, 1990, with eight gas turbines and one steam turbine generating nearly 900 megawatts of electricity and process steam for industrial use.

The MCV also is the first transfer of abandoned utility power plant assets to a private partnership. The partners are: CMS Midland, Inc., a subsidiary of CMS Energy Corporation; Rofan Energy, Inc. (limited partner) a subsidiary of The Dow Chemical Company; Source Midland Limited Partnership, an affiliate of Panhandle Eastern Corporation; Coastal Midland, Inc., a subsidiary of The Coastal Corporation; MEI Limited Partnership, an affiliate of Asea Brown Boveri, Inc.; Micogen Limited Partnership, an affiliate of Fluor Corporation; and C-E Midland, Inc. Arrival of the new management team was announced today by Osteopathic's board Chairman and President Leonard H. Finkelstein, D.O., M.Sc., F.A.C.O.S. They are: Lewis H. Abel, CPA, vice president and chief financial officer, Osteopathic Medical Center; Timothy A. Churchill, executive director and chief executive officer, Osteopathic Hospital; and Arthur H. Piper Jr., vice president and controller, Osteopathic Medical Center.

Each of the three executives brings a particular area of expertise to Osteopathic, along with several years' experience in the management and operations of health care institutions. Abel most recently was executive vice president for the Sameric Corp. Prior to that he was senior vice president at Liberty Savings Bank and senior vice president- finance, at Albert Einstein Health Care Foundation and Medical Center. He also served as vice president-finance and treasurer at the Orleans Organization, a real estate development firm.

Churchill joins Osteopathic Hospital from St. Joseph's Hospital, where he was executive director. Previously, he was director of regional operations at MEDIQ Care-East and associate administrator at Warminster General Hospital. He also held administrative positions at the Hospital of the Medical College of Pennsylvania.

Piper has an extensive background in finance and management, particularly for health care clients. Prior to joining Osteopathic, Piper was partner in charge of health care financial consulting at Management Partners Inc. Before that, he was associate executive director, finance, at the Hospital of the University of Pennsylvania and was a manager at Peat, Marwick Mitchell and Co., an accounting and management consulting firm.

"The transition to a new era at Osteopathic Medical Center is complete," said Dr. Finkelstein, who was named board chairman and president of the medical center one month ago. "With the arrival of these three experienced professionals, we are ready to move forward to position Osteopathic as a major force in the Philadelphia health care market."

Osteopathic Medical Center of Philadelphia includes Philadelphia College of Osteopathic Medicine, the nation's ninth largest medical school, and Osteopathic Hospital, a 210-bed teaching hospital. Osteopathic also operates four health care centers located throughout Philadelphia and another in rural Pennsylvania.

CLARKSBURG, WV (APRIL 9) PR NEWSWIRE - Alamco Inc. (AMEX: AXO) today announced that the company prepaid a $1,200,000 interest bearing note to a trade vendor at a substantial discount by making a cash payment of $616,000.

The company's long-term debt (including capitalized contingent interest) was reduced $2,039,000 as a result of this transaction and the company expects to record, in the second quarter of 1990, an extraordinary after-tax gain of approximately $1,400,000, or $.56 per share. Since 1988 the company had been making principal payments under the trade vendor note of approximately $13,000 per month based on production proceeds from 27 of the company's wells.

John Schwager, Alamco's president and chief executive officer, stated that he considers this trade vendor debt prepayment to be another positive development for the company. The company's debt levels have been further reduced and its book value and 1990 earnings will increase, after giving effect to the transaction.

In late March, the company completed a refinancing with its primary bank lender, which significantly reduced the amount owed to the bank to $5,175,000, increased non-operating income by approximately $600,000, increased paid-in capital by $900,000 and increased the company's book value by $.60 per share, all of which will be reflected on the company's financial statements for the first quarter of 1990.

Alamco, headquartered in Clarksburg, W.Va., is an independent producer of gas and oil in the Appalachian Basin with a major operating concentration in West Virginia gas fields.

(APRIL 9) PR NEWSWIRE - The board and president of Southwest Airlines Co. (NYSE: LUV), announced today that the company flew 861.6 million revenue passenger miles (RPMs) in March 1990, a 6.0 percent increase over the 812.6 million RPMs flown in March of last year. Available seat miles (ASMs) increased 13.1 percent to 1,337.0 million from the March 1989 level of 1,182.4 million ASMs. The load factor for the month was 64.4 percent compared to 68.7 percent for the same period of a year ago.

For the first quarter 1990, Southwest flew 2,325.2 million RPMs, a 5.1 percent increase compared with the 2,212.3 million RPMs recorded for the same period of 1989. Available seat miles increased 13.8 percent to 3,851.9 million from the first quarter 1989 level of 3,386.1 million. The first quarter load factor was 60.4 percent compared to 65.3 percent for the same period last year. With the exception of last year, the 1990 first quarter load factor was the best since 1981.

Kelleher stated, "The strong traffic results were better than originally expected, with prospects for second quarter traffic also encouraging. Bookings are strong for April and improving for May.

"Some of the first quarter traffic was generated from various discount promotions, thereby diluting the passenger revenue yield per RPM as compared to fourth quarter 1989's yield of $.1106. However, first quarter 1990 yield will show a strong increase over the first quarter 1989 amount of $.0998."

MIDLAND, MI (APRIL 9) PR NEWSWIRE - The Midland Cogeneration Venture (MCV), one of the cleanest major electric generating facilities in the world, is fully expected to meet any new acid rain compliance requirements pending before the U.S. Congress.

The MCV's impact on global warming is also considerably less than a similarly sized coal- or oil-fired electric power plant.

Final acid rain control legislation has not been determined, but it is expected that significant emission restrictions will be placed on plants burning high-sulfur coal, primarily located in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and other lower Midwestern states.

The MCV uses clean-burning natural gas to produce electricity and steam. Because of the plant's high efficiency and fuel type, it emits essentially no sulfur dioxide and only about one-half the nitrogen oxides of other fossil fuels.

The MCV also produces far fewer carbon dioxide emissions than would a same-sized conventional coal-burning electric-generating plant.

Natural gas combustion emissions are known to contribute less to global warming than emissions from coal- or oil-burning facilities. When compared to other fossil fuels burned to generate electricity, natural gas emits the least carbon dioxide per unit of energy delivered. Burning oil emits 50 percent more carbon dioxide than does gas, while burning coal emits 90 percent more carbon dioxide than gas.

PASADENA, CA (APRIL 9) PR NEWSWIRE - Box & Ship Inc., a private company owned by the Michael E. Tennenbaum family, has acquired substantially all of the assets of Bekins Boxstore Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary of The Bekins Company. Terms were not disclosed.

The company, which provides packaging and shipping services, currently operates 14 stores throughout Southern California. Mark S. Tennenbaum, chairman of the Pasadena-based company, said plans are under way to expand this business to 150 locations in the Western United States.

"The Bekins Boxstore concept fills an important gap in the market, providing efficient and cost effective packaging and shipping services for residential and small business customers," Tennenbaum stated. "We specialize in providing high quality overnight, 'less-than- truckload' (LTL) and airfreight shipping services for residential and business customers."

Nancy Lund Wirth has been named president of Box & Ship, having been the acting director of operations for Bekins Boxstore since October 1989.

"Nancy's considerable experience in the business represents a substantial asset to Box & Ship," Tennenbaum added.

Tennenbaum comes to the company from Paribas Corporation in New York, where he served as a specialist in cross-border mergers and acquisitions. He previously spent four years with Hoare Govett Ltd. in London in corporate finance and with Security Pacific Corporation in Los Angeles in treasury operations.

He holds a master of business administration degree from the University of California at Los Angeles and a bachelor of arts degree from Pitzer College in Claremont, Calif.

NEWTON, MA (APRIL 9) PR NEWSWIRE - Health and Rehabilitation Properties Trust (NYSE: HRP) today announced that through a wholly owned subsidiary, it has purchased the Oak Hill Care Center, Inc., a subsidiary of Care Centers of Michigan, Inc. The facility was purchased at book value at a foreclosure auction sale in Oakland County, Mich., on Friday, April 6, 1990, for $2,760,484.

Care Centers of Michigan, Inc. defaulted under a lease of Greenbriar Care Center and under a mortgage on Oak Hill Care Center in January 1989. In February 1989, the company obtained possession of Greenbriar and re-leased the facility to New MediCo Healthcare Center of Michigan, Inc. Care Centers cured last winter's defaults under the mortgage on Oak Hill, but in November 1989 Care Centers and its subsidiaries filed for protection under Chapter 11 of the Federal Bankruptcy Code.

In announcing this purchase, Mark J. Finkelstein, president and CEO of HRP issued the following statement:

"The purchase of Oak Hill Care Center represents a major step in the resolution of the Care Centers situation. HRP is now in full control of Oak Hill and will continue to operate the facility while we explore long term lease arrangements or the eventual sale of the property. I am confident that we will substantially recover our investment in Oak Hill."

In the interim, HRP has contracted with Greenery Managers, Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary of Greenery Rehabilitation Group, Inc. (NASDAQ: GRGI) to manage the operations of the facility. Finkelstein stated that HRP will make certain capital improvements to the facility in order to improve patient care and the facility's marketability. Finkelstein stated that he did not expect the interim operations or capital improvements to have any material impact upon HRP's income or cash flow due to its relatively modest investment in the property compared to HRP's total portfolio.

Health and Rehabilitation Properties Trust, which is headquartered in Newton, Mass. is a real estate investment trust which invests in health care related real estate. HRP was founded in 1986 with approximately $63 million of investments in seven facilities located in four states. Today HRP has a total portfolio of approximately $226 million invested in 22 facilities located in 12 states.

HOUSTON (APRIL 9) PR NEWSWIRE - Enron Gas Marketing Inc. (EGM), a subsidiary of Enron Corp. (NYSE: ENE), today announced details of a new service designed to provide the marketplace with improved pricing and delivery flexibility.

"The new gas futures market with prices at Henry Hub in Louisiana is the right idea, but it doesn't take into account regional pricing differences inherent in the U.S. gas market nor does it address the receipt and delivery needs of the industry," said John J. Esslinger, president of EGM. "Using the national pipeline grid, and some innovative marketing techniques, EGM has developed a Hub Pricing Program which allows us to offer firm prices and delivery at a number of points and under a number of marketing scenarios."

Under the Hub Pricing Program, EGM has basically unbundled delivery service from pricing.

EGM has designated four pricing points, or hubs, from which customers can buy or sell gas on a firm basis at a specified period in the future. The hubs are located at Wharton, Texas, for the Texas and southern region; Waha, Texas, for the California market; Henry Hub in Louisiana for eastern markets; and Kiowa County, Kansas, for the midcontinent region. Customers with hub master agreements on file can call EGM at 713-853-5200 to request a price quote to buy or sell gas on a firm basis from one of these hubs at a specified period in the future. If the customer accepts the price, EGM and the customer then are committed to deliver or receive the gas.

Once a price has been accepted, there are variations to the Hub Pricing Program that enable EGM to provide a tailor-made package for each customer. The customer may simply deliver or receive the gas at the designated hub for the quoted price. Or, the customer may elect to deliver or receive the gas at a different location, with the quoted hub price being adjusted to accommodate the change in delivery point. Alternatively, EGM also offers a flexibly priced sales contract in which terms such as quantity, load factor and receipt or delivery points are negotiated, but the gas price will still be determined by the quote made at the respective hub locations.

For customers who do not want to take physical delivery of the gas, EGM's Hub Pricing Program offers a "swap" agreement. Under this arrangement a customer commits to the quoted hub price, but at the designated time period for which the quote was made EGM and the customer will exchange payments based on the difference in value between the quoted price and a specified market-responsive price.

HOUSTON (APRIL 9) PR NEWSWIRE - Transco Exploration and Production Company (TEPCO), a subsidiary of Transco Energy Co. (NYSE: E), has completed production tests on one well at Brazos Block 491 and on four wells at East Cameron Block 109.

During the production test on Brazos Block 491, the well flowed 6.9 million cubic feet of gas per day (MMcf/d) through a 20/64-inch choke at a flowing tubing pressure of 2,572 pounds per square inch (psi). The well was completed and tested through perforations at 6,958 to 7,000 feet in a Rob-L sand. The well has been shut in pending installation of the platform, facilities and pipeline and is expected to be brought onstream during the third quarter of 1990.

At East Cameron Block 109 four wells have been tested in Upper Miocene sands. Well No. 1, tested in November 1989, flowed 6.7 MMcf/d of gas and 297 barrels per day (bbl/d) of condensate through a 16/64-inch choke at a flowing tubing pressure of 5,083 psi. The well was tested through perforations at 11,112 to 11,135 feet.

Well No. 2 flowed 5.1 MMcf/d of gas and 68 bbl/d of condensate through a 16/64-inch choke at a flowing tubing pressure of 2,783 psi. The well was tested through performations at 7,930 to 7,950 feet and 7,966 to 7,970 feet.

Well No. 3 flowed 8.6 MMcf/d of gas and 330 bbl/d of condensate through a 16/64-inch choke at a flowing tubing pressure of 5,424 psi. The well was tested through perforations between 11,056 and 11,093 feet.

Platform installation on East Cameron Block 109 is scheduled for this summer, and the wells are expected to be onstream in the third quarter of 1990.

TEPCO is the operator of Brazos Block 491 and holds a 38 percent interest. Samedan Oil Corp., a wholly owned subsidiary of Noble Affiliates Inc., owns a 23 percent interest, New England Energy Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary of New England Electric System, owns 23 percent and Zilkha Energy Co. holds a 16 percent interest. TEPCO is also the operator of East Cameron Block 109 and holds a 76 percent interest. Zilkha Energy owns the remaining 24 percent.

NEW YORK (APRIL 9) PR NEWSWIRE - The Official Committee of Preferred Shareholders of Eastern Air Lines announced today that it has filed a plan of reorganization for Eastern Air Lines, Inc. and Ionosphere Clubs, Inc. with the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Southern District of New York. The plan proposes the reorganization of Eastern as an independent, stand-alone airline which would be owned by the unsecured creditors and preferred shareholders, and which would be operated by a new management team.

Under the plan, the unsecured creditors of Eastern will receive a new issue of preferred stock convertible into 50 percent of the new common stock, preferred stockholders will share 45 percent of the new common stock, and 5 percent of the common stock will be reserved for issuance to the new management of Eastern.

Unsecured creditors will also share proportionately in a new $200 million issue of collaterized Eastern bonds, and $50 million in cash, $70 million of notes to be repaid from the recoveries, if any, received by Eastern from litigation to be brought by Eastern against Texas Air Corporation and its affiliates in respect of the pre-bankruptcy transactions which the examiner recently investigated and reported on. All secured claims will be reinstated or paid in accordance with previous announcements by Eastern.

The plan is being proposed by the Preferred Committee as an alternative to the liquidation scenario for Eastern suggested in recent press report.

The Preferred Committee represents the interests of Eastern's five classes of preferred shareholders. Four of the issues are publicly held and the fifth is owned by certain pilots and trustees. The aggregate liquidation value of the preferred shares is approximately $680 million.

DALLAS (APRIL 9) PR NEWSWIRE - LTV Aircraft Products Group announced today it has teamed with Hawker Energy Products Ltd., part of the international Hawker Siddeley Group (TSE: HSC.), to market a sealed lead acid battery system that will provide multiple-year maintenance-free service for aircraft.

LTV will integrate the Hawker-manufactured batteries into a unique system designed to optimize the service life of batteries used in commercial and military aircraft.

Most systems will include a sealed lead acid battery or SLAB, battery charger, state of charge indicator and associated electrical components and wiring, custom-designed to individual types of aircraft.

According to George Costen, program manager at LTV, the LTV- Hawker battery system improves reliability and maintainability compared with existing battery systems.

Most aircraft in service today use "rechargeable" batteries that must be serviced in a battery shop every 30 to 90 days.

"The LTV-Hawker battery system will provide maintenance-free service for aircraft similar to that used in the automotive industry for many years," Costen said.

"The potential savings for a single military facility, for example, could be several thousand dollars a month in maintenance costs alone."

The first SLAB system installed by LTV in an A-7 performed maintenance-free for more than 6 years. With this optimized system, the company expects its battery units to attain comparable performance in similar aircraft applications.

LTV's experience with the installation of these maintenance-free batteries began in 1983 when the company developed and installed systems for two A-7D attack aircraft in a prototype program.

In 1987 the U.S. Air Force awarded LTV Aircraft Products a contract to design and fabricate 375 battery systems for the entire U.S. Air National Guard A-7 fleet.

Hawker Energy Products has been in the aircraft battery business for over 35 years. The company's first batteries were installed in the first jet airliner, the Comet.

Hawker batteries are currently used in more than twenty types of British military aircraft and several military and commercial aircraft in the United States.

In the rechargeable battery market, the Hawker Siddeley Group is one of Europe's leading manufacturers with factories in Britain and France marketing throughout the continent. The Group also manufactures rechargeable batteries in the United States.

LTV Aircraft Products Group manufactures aircraft subassemblies and components for military and commercial use and also modernizes and remanufactures aircraft. It is a principal operating group of The LTV Corporation, a Dallas-based diversified manufacturing company also involved in steel, energy products, missiles and electronics.

NEW YORK (APRIL 9) PR NEWSWIRE - 1990 is unusual in that taxpayers get an extra day before they have to file their income tax returns, says the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants (AICPA).

Since Apr. 15, the traditional tax filing deadline, falls on a Sunday this year, taxpayers have until midnight of Monday, Apr. 16, to mail their tax returns to the IRS. Residents of Maine and Massachusetts, the only two states in the Union to recognize Patriot's Day as a legal holiday, have until midnight Tuesday, Apr. 17 to file.

The AICPA reminds taxpayers that even if they request an automatic extension, which extends the deadline for filing a completed Form 1040 until August 15, a check for their expected tax liability must accompany the application. And that, too, must be postmarked by midnight Apr. 16.

The AICPA is the national professional organization of certified public accountants with more than 295,000, members.

HOUSTON (APRIL 9) PR NEWSWIRE - Continental Airlines today announced the final link in its Central American hub at Houston's Intercontinental Airport.

Direct access to each of the seven Central American countries will be established from Houston with the inauguration of nonstop service to Managua, Nicaragua on July 1, 1990.

With the addition of service to Nicaragua, Continental will offer air service to every nation in Central America.

"Houston's new international terminal to open in May provides the perfect focal point for our Central American service," said Continental President Mickey Foret. "The addition of the Nicaragua route brings all of Central America into our growing global air system."

Continental presently offers nonstop service to Guatemala City, Guatemala; San Salvador, El Salvador; and Belize City, Belize with continuing service to San Pedro Sula, Honduras. Continental plans on inaugurating nonstop service to Panama City, Panama with continuing service to San Jose, Costa Rica on May 15, 1990, the first day of operations at the new international terminal.

Continental is the largest U.S. carrier to Mexico, with service to eight cities. In May it will be the largest U.S. carrier to Central America.

"This is the right time for us to close the loop on our Central American service," said Mickey Foret. "In addition to the opening of the new terminal here in Houston, the change in Nicaragua's political climate bodes well for traffic between Managua and the United States. The timing is most propitious."

Continental will operate three weekly departures to Nicaragua. Continental carried nearly 70 percent of the international traffic at Houston's Intercontinental Airport in the month of February 1990.

In addition to the Central American and Mexico service, Continental offers daily nonstop service from Houston to London's Gatwick International Airport. This summer Continental expects to begin direct service to Tokyo via Honolulu, and has applied to operate nonstop service from Tokyo from Houston.

NEW YORK (APRIL 9) PR NEWSWIRE - Aileen, Inc. (NYSE: AEE), a manufacturer and retailer of women's apparel, today re-elected its incumbent five directors at its annual meeting of shareholders.

In addressing the shareholders, Abe Oberlin, chairman of the board and president, announced that the company had adopted an aggressive program of reducing overhead and other manufacturing costs, simplifying manufacturing operations and more efficiently managing inventories.

In addition, the company is adding to its staff an experienced merchandising manager, according to Oberlin. "Although the major effects of the cost-saving measures and changes in manufacturing and retailing focus will not be felt until the second half of the current fiscal year, the losses of the first fiscal quarter have been reversed and a 28 percent increase in retail sales for the first nine weeks of the second quarter leads management to anticipate a return to profitability in the second quarter," he said. Oberlin also noted that the positive cash flow generated by the increased sales and reduced expenses would enable the company to bring its past due payables current by the end of the week.

The shareholders were also advised that the company intended to continue its policy of opening new retail stores in manufacturing outlet centers while closing unprofitable and low volume stores, with 36 openings and closings anticipated within the next 14 months.

As a result of the internal restructuring and improved prospects for future growth and profitability, the company has terminated its search for prospective purchasers of all or part of its business, though the company may dispose of excess plants, machinery and equipment which are no longer required for its current operations.

BURBANK, CA (APRIL 9) PR NEWSWIRE - Warner Bros. Inc. and Pathe Communications Corp. (NYSE: PCC) have reached an agreement whereby Warner bros. will provide long-term support services to Pathe and MGM/UA Communications Co. for theatrical, television and home video distribution on a worldwide basis of existing titles, including the United Artists and Pathe Libraries and future theatrical motion pictures produced by Pathe and MGM/UA.

The agreement is subject to the completion of Pathe's announced acquisition of MGM/UA and certain other conditions.

Under the terms of the agreement, Warner Bros. and its parent, Time Warner Inc. (NYSE: TWX) will, concurrent with Pathe's acquisition of MGM/UA, arrange for (or provide on a bridge basis) a $650 million bank loan to MGM/UA, secured by the UA film library and guaranteed by Time Warner. MGM/UA will use the loan proceeds to purchase certain assets of Pathe Communications, which in turn will use the funds in connection with its acquisition of MGM/UA.

Giancarlo Parretti, the president of Pathe and Yoram Globus, Pathe's co-president, said: "We are delighted to be working with the first-rate people at Warner Bros. This agreement represents a major step for Pathe towards implementing its plans to create an international major entertainment company."

Stated warner Bros. Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Robert A. Daly and President and Chief Operating Officer Terry Semel: "We are gratified that Pathe has chosen the worldwide distribution and marketing team at Warner Bros. to support its product. We are pleased to be able to help viewers everywhere enjoy the treasures of films owned by Pathe and MGM/UA."

NEW YORK (APRIL 9) PR NEWSWIRE - Apparel America, Inc., a manufacturer of women's swimwear, specialty apparel and casual sportswear, today reported substantial increases in sales of 82.9 percent and 193.7 percent, respectively, for the fourth quarter and the year ended Jan. 31, 1990. The inclusion of Mayfair Industries, which was acquired during the year, accounted for the majority of the increases.

Sales in the fourth quarter increased to $19,493,000 from $10,658,000 in the comparable period in the prior year. Operating income was $622,000 compared to $1,698,000 in the prior year's quarter. In the fourth quarter, the loss before income taxes was $1,179,000 compared to income before taxes of $1,533,000.

The company had a net loss of $1,079,000 or $.25 per common share against net earnings of $638,000 or $1.3 per common share in the comparable period in the prior year. The net loss per common share in the current year's fourth quarter has been computed after the recognition of preferred stock dividend requirements of $514,500 and reflects 1,509,157 additional average common shares outstanding. The quarter includes additional interest expense of $1.5 million, which is primarily attributable to acquisition-related borrowings.

For the year ended Jan. 31, 1990, sales increased to $100,023,000 from $34,051,000 after giving effect to the inclusion of Mayfair Industries. Operating income increased to $5,848,000 from $4,215,000 in the prior year. Income before income taxes was $1,421,000 compared to $4,022,000 in the prior year. Net income was $736,000 with a net loss per common share of $.19 compared to the net income of $2,202,000 or $.46 per common share.

In the current year, the net loss per common share has been computed after the recognition of preferred stock dividend requirements of $1,914,000 and reflects 1,508,379 additional average common shares outstanding. For the year, interest expense increased by approximately $4.8 million, which is primarily attributable to acquisition-related borrowings.

Burton I. Koffman, chairman of the board, said the inclusion of Mayfair's results accounted for the majority of the increases in sales and operating income. Koffman said that the Robby Len and Mayfair divisions were unable to fully offset margin deterioration caused by selected production curtailments. In addition, Koffman noted that Apparel America's performance was adversely affected by the current turmoil and confusion within the retail community, and by the impact of various consolidations and potential takeovers which resulted in reduced deliveries and higher than anticipated promotions.

In view of the current business climate, Koffman and Apparel America's management team said they are cautiously optimistic about fiscal year 1991.

ARUBA, DUTCH CARIBBEAN (APRIL 9) PR NEWSWIRE - Divi Hotels N.V. (AMEX: DVH) today announced a loss for the third quarter due to a decrease in recognized sales of timeshare units caused by delays in construction, the effects of Hurricane Hugo on operations in St. Maarten and St. Croix, and general softening of the tourism market in the Caribbean. The company also took a write-down on its hotel property in Ithaca, N.Y., to reflect its estimated net realizable value. As announced previously, the company is in the process of attempting to sell certain hotel properties, including the Ithaca property.

For the quarter ended Jan. 31, 1990, Divi reported a loss of $10,392,000, equal to a loss of $1.81 per share. This includes the write-down on the Ithaca property of $4,447,000, or $.78 per share. A year ago Divi reported a third-quarter net loss of $1,950,000, equal to a loss of 36 cents per share.

Divi reported revenues for the quarter of $22,467,000. For the like period last year, the company reported revenues of $32,211,000. Hotel revenues decreased due to the sale of the company's two hotels in Aruba during September 1989, and the suspension of operations in St. Croix and St. Maarten because of Hurricane Hugo. Revenues from sales of timeshare units decreased due to delays in completion of projects and the effects of Hurricane Hugo.

For the nine months ended Jan. 31, 1990, Divi reported a loss of $22,601,000, or $4.04 per share, compared with a loss for the like period last year of $11,626,000, or $2.17 per share.

Revenues for the nine months ended Jan. 31, 1990, were $65,039,000 compared with $77,516,000 for the nine-month period ended Jan. 31, 1989.

"Our financial results for the third quarter of fiscal 1990 reflect a number of influences and circumstances including delays in construction of timeshare units and a softer high season than in recent years," said Walter J. Wiggins, chairman and president.

"Operations and timeshare sales were halted in St. Croix and reduced in St. Maarten through the end of December as a result of September's hurricane, and, while we have received payments covering a portion of the damage and a portion of revenues lost due to business interruption, only limited insurance proceeds are reflected in the third-quarter figures. Discussions with the insurance company centering on recovering losses of revenues are ongoing and we are continuing to make progress.

"We are, however, experiencing unanticipated cash shortfalls, and improvement in our cash position through borrowings is unavailable due to restrictions imposed by covenants governing our publicly held debt. The company has engaged the services of Kidder Peabody to explore various alternatives for restructuring our debt," he said.

Divi Hotels owns, operates and manages hotels, restaurants, casinos, entertainment facilities and marine sports operations.

VALLEY FORGE, PA (APRIL 9) PR NEWSWIRE - UGI Corp. (NYSE: UGI) has budgeted capital expenditures of $44.4 million for 1990 in addition to its planned investment of approximately $50 million for propane acquisitions, the company said in its annual report.

A Pennsylvania utility and national distributor of propane, UGI has allocated $34 million and $4.4 million, respectively, to its Gas Utility Division and Electric Utility Division, principally for new business growth.

The gas utility said it also plans to install a compressed natural gas filling station in Harrisburg, Pa., to serve vehicles of the Pennsylvania Department of Transportation and parts of its own fleet which will be converted to operate on natural gas.

Excluding acquisitions, capital outlays of $5.2 million are set for the company's wholly owned AmeriGas Propane subsidiary. Separately, AP Propane a joint venture of AmeriGas and The Prudential Insurance Company of America, plans expenditures of $5.7 million.

James A. Sutton, chairman and chief executive officer, reported that price appreciation of the company's stock, combined with dividends, produced a total return of 36.6 percent to shareholders for 1989. Since 1986, "UGI has achieved a 22.7 percent annualized rate of total return," Sutton said, exceeding the comparable returns of the S&P 500 and a peer group of gas distribution utilities.

Sutton also restated UGI's corporate direction. "Assuming continued favorable economic conditions, we expect to generally maintain our record level of utility capital investment in 1990 and beyond," he said. "Therefore, we anticipate further growth in our Gas Utility's market share within its service territory."

He said UGI has two strategies for propane. For the joint venture, it is "to continue to emphasize paydown of debt, thereby eventually permitting payment of dividends to Prudential and UGI." For wholly owned AmeriGas Propane, it is "to emphasize growth through acquisitions."

Looking ahead, Sutton said the extraordinarily warmer weather in January and February in gas utility and propane markets will have an adverse effect on 1990 earnings potential and that the gas utility's filing for recovery of pipeline take-or-pay costs remains unresolved.

Among the positive factors, he noted that the utilities are continuing to add substantial numbers of new customers and an improved cost relationship between oil and natural gas. In propane, he said UGI will have the full-year benefit of wholly owned acquisitions made in 1989 and expects the AP Propane joint venture "to convert interest expense to net income" through its paydown of debt.

"We continue to believe that the long-term outlook for UGI has never been brighter," Sutton said.

CINCINNATI (APRIL 9) PR NEWSWIRE - Chiquita Brands International, Inc. (NYSE: CQB) ("Chiquita") announced today that it has filed a registration statement with respect to a public offering of 6,183,468 shares of Chiquita's common stock. Chiquita is offering one million shares and Great American Communications Corporation (NASDAQ: GACC) ("GACC"), an affiliate of Chiquita, is offering all of the 5,183,468 shares it owns. Furthermore, Chiquita has provided for an over- allotment option of an additional 925,000 shares.

Of the 6,183,468 shares to be offered, it is anticipated that 3,710,081 will be offered in the United States and 2,473,387 outside the United States. As previously announced, on April 2, Chiquita purchased two million of its shares from GACC.

GACC presently owns approximately 14.1 percent of Chiquita's common stock outstanding. American Financial Corporation ("AFC") beneficially owns, either directly or through its subsidiaries (including GACC), approximately 81.3 percent of Chiquita's shares. If all shares from the offering are sold to the public (without giving effect to the over-allotment option), AFC would own, beneficially, approximately 65.5 percent of Chiquita's shares.

Shearson Lehman Hutton Inc., as lead manager, and Merrill Lynch Capital Markets, Prudential-Bache Capital Funding and S.G. Warbury Securities, as co-managers, will act as the representatives of the underwriters for the U.S. offering. S.G. Warbury Securities is the lead manager for the international offering.

Chiquita is a leading international marketer, processor and producer of quality fresh and prepared food products. In recent years, Chiquita has capitalized on its Chiquita(R) and other premium brand names by building on its worldwide leadership position in the marketing, distribution and sourcing of bananas; by expanding its quality fresh fruit and vegetable operations; and by further developing its business in value-added prepared foods.

A registration statement relating to these securities has been filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission but has not yet become effective. These securities may not be sold nor may offers to buy be accepted prior to the time the registration statement becomes effective. This communication shall not constitute an offer to sell or the solicitation of an offer to buy, nor shall there by any sale of these securities in any state in which such offer, solicitation or sale would be unlawful prior to registration or qualification under the securities laws of any such state.

PHILADELPHIA (APRIL 9) PR NEWSWIRE - The Budd Co. today acknowledged that it had reached an agreement with the U.S. Department of Labor's Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) which involves correction of alleged violations of safety and health standards at its Philadelphia Plant.

The company also agreed to a payment of $1.5 million -- some $1.8 million less than OSHA's proposed fine of $3.3 million. The agreement results from an OSHA safety and health compliance inspection at the Philadelphia Plant, which began in June 1989 and was completed in November 1989.

Key issues cited were the administrative procedures in injury recordkeeping and hearing conservation. Throughout the investigation Budd Co. management worked closely with OSHA to correct deficiencies as they were identified. The corrections included a complete procedural change in the company's recordkeeping program and contracting with an independent health services firm to assist the plant in administering regular employee hearing tests and test evaluations. To date, more than 90 percent of the hearing tests have been completed as required for 1990.

In addition to these changes, the company has initiated its program to identify and correct plant safety-related conditions. Company officials in Philadelphia reported, "Budd has spent thousands of man- hours addressing issues in order to assure that facilities and equipment are safe for our employees. We structured a safety team of some 21 employees whose time is devoted exclusively to working in the plant to meet OSHA standards. Our employees' safety is of the utmost importance to us, and we're willing to spend the necessary dollars to continue to improve the plant operations for the good of the employees and, in turn, their North Philadelphia community.

"We have a total commitment within this plant," said the Budd spokesperson. "At a time when the economic stability of the American auto industry is under increasing pressure, we continue to do our best to keep this 77-year-old plant up and running. Our philosophy has always been to emphasize the safety and welfare of our employees, and that responsibility will continue."

HOUSTON (APRIL 9) PR NEWSWIRE - Huffington Corp. (Huffco) and Chinese Petroleum Corp. (CPC), the national oil and gas company of Taiwan, announced jointly today that CPC, through an affiliate, will acquire Huffco. The parties signed a stock purchase agreement on Apr. 7, 1990. CPC's affiliate, Opicoil America Inc. is headquartered in Houston. Terms were not disclosed.

Huffco announced in November its intent to solicit a purchaser of its outstanding shares. Huffco controls a 20 percent voting interest in an Indonedian joint venture formed in 1968 to explore for oil and gas in East Kalimantan, Indonesia. The Indonesian Joint Venture (IJV) comprises Huffco and affiliates of Union Texas Petroleum Holdings Inc., Ultramar PLC and Universe Tankships Inc., and supplies natural gas to one of the world's largest liquefied natural gas (LNG) facilities. CPC recently began receiving LNG cargoes from this facility.

Huffco also owns the equivalent of 11 city blocks in downtown Houston and 419 acres of undeveloped land adjacent to Houston's Intercontinental Airport, among other real estate assets.

CPC, based in Taipei, Taiwan, and owned by the Republic of China, conducts oil and gas operations worldwide. It signed a 20 year LNG sales contract with Pertamina, the Indonesian state oil and gas enterprise, in 1987, under which CPC imports 1.5 million tons of LNG annually. C.Y. Huang, vice president, represented CPC in the acquisition. Huang stated on behalf of CPC's Chairman, Y.S. Chen, that "CPC is pleased with the purchase and is looking forward to a long and productive relationship with Pertamina and the IJV participants."

Roy M. Huffington, the founder of Huffco and its chairman and CEO, said today that "we are pleased to have reached this agreement with Chinese Petroleum. CPC is a substantial purchaser of LNG from Indonesia and this acquisition represents a very promising strategic opportunity for them and further strengthens their relationship with Pertamina."

CHICAGO (APRIL 9) PR NEWSWIRE - Calling today's introduction of robots by Illinois Bell "the next step in the company's plan to eliminate telephone operators entirely," the Communications Workers of America (CWA) kicked off a statewide campaign to "end the robot invasion."

Operators, senior citizens and consumer group representatives held a news conference today at Illinois Bell headquarters, where CWA outlined the campaign, and played a radio ad blasting robots. Operators also conducted informational picketing at Illinois Bell locations around the state.

Gayle Gray, president of CWA Local 4211 in Ottawa and a telephone operator with Illinois Bell, drew on her years of experience, stating: "People need to talk to another person when they dial 'O.' Sometimes they dial 'O' in an emergency, because they're young, or not well-educated, or sick, or in trouble, or don't speak English well. People depend on operators: they don't deserve to have to talk to a robot that only understands 'yes' or 'no' when they need help."

Gray also denounced the loss of high-tech, service sector jobs to the robots, warning that the robots "don't pay taxes, don't shop in our communities," and would have a negative impact on the Illinois economy.

According to CWA, Robert Creamer, executive director of the Illinois Public Action Council, stated that robot telephone service is "no different than the manufacturers selling you a shorter candy bar for the same price -- it's a bum deal for the consumer."

Jerry Prete, president of the Illinois State Council of Senior Citizens Organizations, pointed out that seniors rely heavily on operators and telephone service, and joined with CWA in opposing the change to robots.

CWA, the world's largest telecommunications union, represents 700,000 working women and men, including more than 2,000 telephone operators at Illinois Bell.

LOS ANGELES (APRIL 9) PR NEWSWIRE - James Cotter, general partner of Webcott Holdings, a California limited partnership which owns 9.8 percent of Del Webb Corp.'s (NYSE: WBB) common stock, announced today that Webcott had reached a settlement in part with Del Webb under which Del Webb agreed to amend its bylaws to remove various bylaw provisions which Webcott believed had unduly restricted the rights of shareholders to take various corporate actions. In addition, Del Webb agreed to expand its board of directors to 12 persons, to renominate James Cotter, general partner of Webcott to the Del Webb board, to nominate an additional director mutually agreeable to Webcott and Del Webb, and to nominate a third person designated by the company.

Cotter said that the settlement does not cover Webcott's proposal which will be considered at this year's annual meeting and which requests the board of directors to redeem the stockholder rights granted under the company's "poison pill." Cotter said that Webcott intends to actively solicit proxies in support of this proposal.

In announcing the settlement, Cotter said that: "I am delighted that Del Webb's board agreed to make the changes to its bylaws which we believe are of significant importance to all of the company's stockholders. These changes restore important rights to the stockholders which the prior bylaws had restricted. In addition, by expanding the board of directors I am hopeful that the board will increasingly become more sensitized to the needs and wishes of the company's stockholders. I am pleased that we were all able to avoid the expense and disruption which a full-blown proxy fight would have entailed. I very much look forward to working with the management and other directors of the company in seeking to maximize the value of the company and its assets on behalf of all Del Webb stockholders."

CHICAGO (APRIL 9) PR NEWSWIRE - Tribune Broadcasting Company (TBC) and Turner Broadcasting Systems, Inc. (AMEX: TBS) have entered into a 10-year cooperative production venture involving a broad range of programming. News, documentaries, specials and original long-form productions are among the areas in which the two companies will collaborate. The announcement was made jointly by TBS board Chairman and President R.E. "Ted" Turner and Tribune Broadcasting Company President and Chief Executive Officer James C. Dowdle.

One of the major elements of the agreement involves the Tribune television stations which, under the new arrangement, will become CNN television affiliates, subscribing to "live breaking coverage," Newsource, and Newsbeam on a non-exclusive basis. The Tribune stations involved in the agreement are WPIX, New York; KTLA, Los Angeles; WGN, Chicago; WGNX, Atlanta; KWGN, Denver; and WGNO, New Orleans.

In addition, TBS and TBC will produce a variety of quarterly news specials including environmental issues, drugs and crime. The resources and expertise of CNN, TBS Productions, Tribune Entertainment and the TBC stations will be brought to bear on these projects. TBS and TBC also will work together in the production of original long-form programming. The level of production activity is still to be determined, but plans are to produce two mini-series per year for exhibition on the Tribune stations and TBS SuperStation, as well as in general domestic syndication.

The new entertainment programming will be distributed worldwide by Turner Program Services (TPS), while Tribune Entertainment Company (TEC) will handle all advertising sales.

In announcing this agreement, Turner said, "We have worked with Tribune Broadcasting Company over the years with very positive results. We are convinced that the extension of this relationship will result in a significant programming venture."

Dowdle added that Tribune's long-established local news presence in major markets would enhance the CNN coverage. He went on to say, "We're delighted to bring Turner Broadcasting's worldwide news gathering capabilities to the Tribune newscasts and are very optimistic about future entertainment program undertakings."

Tribune Broadcasting Company also owns and operates four radio stations. It is a subsidiary of Tribune Company (NYSE: TRB), a diversified media company engaged in newspaper publishing and newsprint manufacturing as well as broadcasting and entertainment.

TBS is the Atlanta-based conglomerate that owns and operates four networks including TNT, TBS SuperStation, CNN and Headline News in addition to the MGM, RKO and pre-1950s Warner Bros. libraries.

BEVERLY HILLS, CA (APRIL 9) PR NEWSWIRE - Great Western Bank, one of the nation's leading residential mortgage lenders, announced today that it will offer a new jumbo adjustable rate mortgage with an initial interest rate that will remain fixed for five years.

"This loan is designed for the move-up buyer who wants a fixed rate now, but later needs the flexibility of an ARM," said Eugene A. Crane, executive vice president, Great Western. "It's also an excellent vehicle for buyers who are looking for a lower cost alternative to a jumbo fixed-rate loan."

The new 30-year loan is available for amounts ranging from $157,451 up to $500,000, and features a 60-day rate guarantee.

Both the monthly payment and the initial interest rate remain fixed for the first five years. In the sixth year, when the loan's interest rate begins to adjust monthly and payments adjust annually, several important consumer protections go into effect. These include a lifetime interest rate cap, an annual payment cap of 7.5 percent and a deferred interest option. The ARM is tied to the Federal Home Loan Bank's 11th District

Cost of Funds Index, historically one of the most stable indices.

The loan does not require private mortgage insurance, or PMI, and is fully assumable to a qualified buyer. For the nearest Great Western Bank home loan office or for more information call 800-GW-ASK-US.

Great Western Bank is a subsidiary of Great Western Financial Corp. (NYSE: GWF). With assets of $37 billion, Great Western is a real estate-oriented, retail bank. One of the nation's leading residential mortgage lenders, the company operates 1,000 mortgage lending offices nationwide.

OTTOWA, ONTARIO (APRIL 9) PR NEWSWIRE - Kinburn Technology Corporation of Ottawa has been advised that discussions between its parent, Kinburn Corporation, and BCE Inc. (NYSE: BCE) have not resulted in an agreed course of action and that the full amount of loans outstanding to its secured lenders, currently aggregating $831 million, became due and payable today. As previously announced, neither Kinburn Corporation nor Kinburn Technology Corporation has the ability to meet these demands.

In the absence of an agreed course of action with BCE Inc., Kinburn Corporation will work with the secured lenders as they exercise their rights to deal with their security.

The May 15 interest payment on Kinburn Technology's US$90 million principal amount of exchangeable debentures will be paid from funds held in trust by the trustee for the debentureholders, but Kinburn Technology does not expect to be able to meet future obligations under the debentures. The debentures are exchangeable at the rate of 37.2 shares per US$1,000 of face value of debenture into common shares of SHL Systemhouse Inc. (NASDAQ: SHKIF) presently owned by Kinburn Technology. WASHINGTON (APRIL 9) PR NEWSWIRE - The Competitive Telecommunications Association (CompTel) today characterized the announced acquisition of Telecom USA (NYSE: TTT) by MCI Communications Corporation (NASDAQ-NMS: MCIC) as the latest and most dramatic illustration of the long distance industry consolidation that can be expected as AT&T (NYSE: T), the dominant company in the field, is permitted to flex its market power against competitors.

"The MCI/Telecom USA merger may be a good match for those two companies, but it may bode ill for the future of competition in the long-distance industry and the American public that benefits from many strong competitors," said Jim Smith, president of CompTel. "This merger continues the trend toward consolidation arising from AT&T's leveraging of its market advantages to stem earlier losses in market share. Consolidation in the long-distance industry could accelerate to the point of oligopoly if AT&T is further deregulated by the FCC. There seems to be a pattern: AT&T announces it's not going to tolerate any further loss of its dominant market share and indeed does arrest that loss; the FCC relaxes regulation of AT&T and then proposes to virtually deregulate it despite its continuing market power; capital markets seem to respond by assuming the FCC will permit a three-firm oligopoly and making it more difficult for competitors to obtain financing; and the market pressures on competitive companies increase to the point where some find it necessary to be acquired rather than to lose a fight against a deregulated AT&T that has all the power and huge marketplace advantages.

"We will be interested in the FCC's reaction to this news," Smith continued. "The big airline companies have acquired the smaller competitive ones and raised prices in the years after airline deregulation. A similar pattern may be developing in the long distance market in anticipation of AT&T's deregulation, and that would be a harmful result for the American public.

"This development drives home that the FCC should look twice before it further deregulates AT&T," Smith concluded. "If AT&T is unleashed prematurely, while it still holds 70 percent of the total marketplace and myriad advantages deriving from its pre-divestiture monopoly, the danger is great that in 10 years the long-distance industry will be characterized by a tight three-firm oligopoly with a dominant price leader -- AT&T -- and very little of the price competition and technological innovation that competition has brought to the American people in the past decade."

(APRIL 9) UPI - William Howard Taft, our nation's 27th president, threw out the inaugural First Pitch back in 1910 in a game between the Philadelphia Athletics and Washington Senators. Washington blanked Philadelphia 3-0.

Eighty years later, there is no team in Washington, and the Athletics have moved West during an expansion boom. And the First Pitch tradition has changed somewhat.

President Bush, unable to schedule an Opening Day performance because of the baseball lockout, will be making the ceremonial pitch on the second day of the season - in Canada. He will attend a SkyDome game between the Texas Rangers - co-owned by his son - and the Toronto Blue Jays and might share the honor with Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney, according to the Blue Jays public relations director.

However, with the first pitch in Boston Monday, the end result will not change: a baseball season will begin.

Finally.

In the last round of exhibition games Sunday, Pittsburgh defeated Philadelphia 11-4, Minnesota beat Montreal 10-4, Cleveland trounced Cincinnati 12-6, New York Mets edged New York Yankees 2-1, Oakland defeated San Francisco 5-0, Los Angeles clipped California 4-2, San Diego nipped Seattle 2-1, and Houston downed Atlanta 6-4.

At Clearwater, Fla., Jeff King drove in four runs and Tom Prince three to lead the Pirates to an 11-4 victory over the Phillies. The Phillies finished 10-4, the top spring training record among National League clubs this spring, and posted the best winning percentage, .667, in their spring training history.

At Minneapolis, Marquis Grissom hit a pair of two-run homers to lead the Expos to a 10-4 triumph over the Twins.

At Louisville, Ky., left-handers John Tudor and Greg Mathews allowed eight hits to pace the Cardinals to a 4-1 victory over the Orioles.

At Columbus, Ohio, Cory Snyder and Sandy Alomar homered to highlight a seven-run fourth inning that carried the Indians to a 12-6 victory over the Reds in the second annual Ohio Cup Game.

At New York, Mackey Sasser and Kevin Elster hit back-to-back, eighth-inning home runs as the New York Mets defeated the New York Yankees at Yankee Stadium 2-1. Commissioner Fay Vincent will throw out the first pitch at Shea.

At Oakland, Calif., the Athletics shut out the Giants 5-0. Loser Scott Garrelts was the victim of shoddy support with the Giants committing five errors, resulting in three unearned runs.

At Los Angeles, Rick Dempsey collected a double and single to drive in two runs Sunday, lifting the Dodgers to a 4-2 victory over the Angels that completed a three-game Freeway Series sweep.

At San Diego, Bip Roberts hit a home run to tie the score and beat an infield dribble in the seventh to break the tie, giving the Padres a 2-1 win over the Mariners. The Padres finished the spring with 10 straight wins and a 12-2 record, best in the majors.

At Kissimmee, Fla., the Astros scored four times in the sixth inning against losing pitcher Tony Castillo to defeat the Braves. Todd Jones gained the victory in relief.

(APRIL 9) UPI - The shuttle Discovery has been cleared for take-off Tuesday and is set to carry the Hubble Space Telescope in its cargo bay. The one-point-five-BILLION-dollar telescope is being called ''the biggest single advance in the history of astronomy since Galileo.''

Organizers of Saturday's Farm-Aid-4 concert say they reached their goal of one-Million dollars to help America's farmers. Muscial acts ranging from Willie Nelson to Guns 'n' Roses performed at the Hoosierdome in Indianapolis. But singer John Cougar Mellencamp, a co-sponsor of the event says Farm Aid ''has NOT affected government to its fullest extent.''

(APRIL 9) UPI - Singers Michael Jackson and Elton John consoled Ryan White's family Sunday following the teen-ager's death from AIDS. 18-year-old White struggled to overcome discrimination related to his illness and opened the public's eyes to the fact that anyone can get AIDS. White had been battling a severe respiratory AIDS-related infection recently and was placed on life support one week ago. His doctor says he stopped responding to medication and quickly deteriorated during the last 24 hours.

Investigators searched the charred ruins of the Fontana Hotel in Miami Beach Sunday and discovered a fifth and sixth body. 21 people were injured Friday morning when a fire raced through the old hotel. A police detective says heavy debris is hampering recovery efforts. Support beams had to be installed to make the building safe for investigators. Quoting Detective Jim Hyde- ''There are many areas that still are UNsafe.''

Authorities in Lysekil, Sweden, say 75 people are confirmed dead following Saturday's fire aboard a ferry. Firefighters are still working to extinguish the blaze as the ship sits in port. The Lysekil police commissioner says the death toll is expected to reach as high as 148 once rescue workers have removed all the victims. The ferry was carrying passengers from Norway to Denmark when the fire broke out.

Opposition leaders in Nepal are praising King Birendra's decision to legalize political parties prohibited for 29 years. The monarch's announcement came Sunday in the wake of serious political unrest that began six weeks ago and left about 50 people dead. In Katmandu, residents cheered and whistled from rooftops upon hearing the news. Many chanted- ''This is the people's victory.''

(APRIL 9) UPI - Greek voters went to the polls for the third time in 10 months Sunday and appear to have broken the political stalemate between the right and left. With results from 91 percent of the polling stations, the conservative New Democracy Party is close to winning a majority in Parliament with 47 percent of the vote. The elections were necessary because elections held last June and November proved inconclusive.

Exxon will be in federal court in Anchorage Monday and lawyers for the oil corporation and its shipping company say they'll vigorously defend their clients. The companies each face five charges that they violated federal environmental protection laws. Exxon tried to avoid criminal charges during secret negotiations with the Justice Department. But the plea bargaining talks fell apart when Alaskan officials found out about the talks and refused to be part of any deal.

(APRIL 9) UPI - Minutes after the best game of his career, John ''Hot Rod'' Williams talked ''tough'' while serving notice to the defending champion Detroit Pistons.

The Cavaliers' forward scored a career-high 33 points Sunday, helping Cleveland hang on to defeat Detroit 100-97 in what could be a preview of the first round of NBA playoffs.

''It's definitely a big win,'' said Williams, who had also scored 30 points Friday in a loss to the Boston Celtics. ''This is a team we may have to play in the playoffs so we have to let them know that if they are to play us, it's going to be a tough fight.''

Cleveland is one game in front of Atlanta in the battle for the final Eastern Conference playoff spot. The Pistons, despite losing six of their last nine games, are 2 1/2 games ahead of Chicago in the fight for the No. 1 Eastern Conference playoff seed.

Williams' frontline teammate Brad Daugherty shouldered a major portion of the scoring burden, adding 22 points and collecting 11 rebounds.

''We did not do a good job in the low post defense,'' said Detroit Coach Chuck Daly, whose team has lost five of its last six road games and is 3-4 since guard Joe Dumars broke a bone in his left hand. ''They just kept running (plays) at Williams and Daugherty. Low post defense is going to determine our playoff possibilities.''

Williams, who was too quick for any one Pistons' forward to guard, received attention at different times by Bill Laimbeer, Mark Aguirre, Dennis Rodman, John Salley and James Edwards.

''I thought we were a little quicker than their big men, so you have to use your speed,'' Williams said.

Aguirre said the Pistons have the people to stop the Cleveland front court players, but said Williams, who hit 13 of 23 shots, was too much to handle Sunday.

''Everybody plays off him,'' Aguirre said. ''I think it brought Daugherty's game up to another level, then Mark Price played so smart for them. He knew they were going and he would go to the rim and draw the double team and dish them the ball.''

-- AROUND THE NBA --

Elsewhere in the NBA, Charlotte nipped Golden State 110-109, Houston blasted Orlando 146-123, Indiana tripped New York 99-97, the LA Lakers downed Denver 116-109, New Jersey topped Miami 102-101 and San Antonio dropped Portland 112-105.

Hornets 110, Warriors 109

At Charlotte, N.C., Kelly Tripucka hit a free throw with seven-tenths of a second left to give the Hornets their third straight victory, a franchise record. The Hornets, who have won four of their last five games at home, were led by Armon Gilliam with 19 points and 14 rebounds. Tripucka had 17 points while Richard Anderson and J.R. Reid added 15 each. Terry Teagle scored 23 points and Mitch Richmond added 22 for the Warriors.

Rockets 146, Magic 123

At Orlando, Fla., Eric Floyd had 32 points and 13 assists, leading Houston to a 20-point halftime lead and a devastating 23-4 third-period run. The Rockets breezed past Orlando with 23 points by Otis Thorpe and 20 by Akeem Olajuwon. Buck Johnson scored 16 points - 1 above his season average for a game - in the final period, and finished with 19. Nick Anderson scored 21 points for the Magic.

Pacers 99, Knicks 97

At Indianapolis, Chuck Person sank the winning basket with 1.5 seconds remaining in the game, allowing Indiana to snap a 10-game losing streak against New York. Person picked up a loose ball and hit the winning shot from the top of the key to give the Pacers its first win over the Knicks since February 1988. Detlef Schrempf led Indiana with 22 points while Patrick Ewing scored a game-high 30 points and pulled down 12 rebounds for the Knicks.

Lakers 116, Nuggets 109

At Denver, James Worthy scored 28 and A.C. Green added 26 points and tied his career high with 18 rebounds to power Los Angeles to its sixth straight victory. Magic Johnson scored 19 points and grabbed 11 rebounds, helping the Lakers improve their league-leading road record to 24-13. Fat Lever scored a season-high 31 points and grabbed a team-high 11 rebounds for the Nuggets.

Nets 102, Heat 101

At East Rutherford, N.J., Chris Dudley made a free throw with 50.9 seconds remaining and Chris Morris contributed 27 points and 11 rebounds to lift New Jersey. The Nets led by 18 points in the third quarter but had to hold on down the stretch to earn their fourth victory over Miami in five games this year. Purvis Short scored 21 points for the Nets and Sherman Douglas led Miami with 27 points. The Nets, 17-58, are one half-game better than the Heat, 17-59.

Trail Blazers 112, Spurs 105

At Portland, Ore., Clyde Drexler scored 26 points and grabbed 12 rebounds, and Terry Porter added 22 points and 10 assists against San Antonio. Spurs center David Robinson had 36 points, 19 rebounds, 3 blocked shots and 4 steals. Portland improved to 53-22, one game ahead of Utah for the second-best record in the Western Conference.

LIMA, PERU (APRIL 9) UPI - Independent presidential candidate Alberto

Fujimori has rejected any deal with novelist-politician Mario Vargas Llosa that would lead to the cancellation of a second-round election between the two political newcomers.

Fujimori, an agricultural engineer of Japanese descent, and Vargas Llosa appeared to finish in a virtual dead heat in national elections Sunday, according to projections from Peruvian news media based on selected ballot results.

Fujimori, whose campaign peaked in the final two weeks, won 30.2 percent of the vote compared to 29.8 percent garnered by Vargas Llosa, according to Radio Programas. Vargas Llosa, an internationally known novelist, was ahead 29 percent to 27.7 percent in a projection made by Panamericano Television.

Vargas Llosa, whose hopes for a first-round victory were dashed, immediately called for talks to avoid a second vote tentatively set for June 3. The runoff election will pick a successor to unpopular President Alan Garcia, whose term has been beset by runaway inflation and daily attacks by communist guerrillas.

''I believe that we can arrive at a formula to avoid a second round,'' Vargas Llosa said, pointing to Peru's grave economic crisis and a leadership vacuum that could result from the uncertainty of another round of campaigning.

But Fujimori, who was virtually unknown two months ago, said he was not interested in reaching an agreement.

''It's important to go to a second round and clarify some political points '' said Fujimori, who ran a vague campaign with few specifics on his plan for pulling Peru out of its crisis.

''We are not going to make any pacts,'' he said, also rejecting agreements with leftist parties that would lead to their support.

Luis Alva Castro, the candidate of Garcia's American Popular Revolutionary Alliance, was in third place Sunday with 17 percent to 21 percent of the vote, according to the projections. Official results were not expected for several weeks.

Projections showed Henry Pease of the communist United Left with about 6 percent of the vote and Alfonso Barrantes Lingan of the Socialist Left with 4 percent.

Four minor candidates split about 2 percent of the vote and some 11 percent of the ballots were left blank or annulled, Radio Programas said.

Projections also indicated neither Fujimori nor Vargas Llosa could count on having a majority of their party members in congress.

Election day was relatively quiet even though the communist Shining Path guerrillas had called for a boycott and threatened to disrupt the election.

There were no reports of major incidents in Lima. But the armed forces said 50 guerrillas armed with knives, rocks and sticks entered a village in the Ayacucho region and killed 17 residents, including women and children. No motive was given for the attack.

Vargas Llosa is the author of such novels as ''The Green House,'' ''The City and the Dogs,'' and ''The War at the End of the World.'' Fujimori, the son of Japanese immigrants, capitalized as an independent on Peruvian's disenchantment with politicians, fears over Vargas Llosa's plan of economic ''shock'' to contain inflation and voters' admiration of Japan according to pollsters.

(APRIL 9) UPI - Finally, leaving Dale Hawerchuk alone did not come back to haunt the Winnipeg Jets.

With the playoff series and score tied in Game 3 against Edmonton, Oilers forward Craig Simpson gave away the puck to Hawerchuk, who was stranded during a line change. Hawerchuk's unassisted goal with 3:30 left in overtime lifted the Jets to a 2-1 victory and series lead in the first round of Stanley Cup playoffs.

The Smythe Division matchup was one of four series played Sunday in the Campbell Conference. The Los Angeles Kings grabbed a 2-1 overtime triumph over the Calgary Flames in the other Smythe Division semifinal, and in the Norris, the Chicago Blackhawks beat the Minnesota North Stars 2-1, and the St. Louis Blues beat the Toronto Maple Leafs 6-5 in overtime.

The Wales Conference resumes play Monday night with the New York Rangers leading the Islanders 2-0, and the Washington Capitals and New Jersey Devils tied 1-1 in the Patrick Division. In the Adams, the Montreal Canadiens and Buffalo Sabres are tied 1-1, as are the Boston Bruins and Hartford Whalers.

All series are best-of-seven and switch sites after Game 4.

SMYTHE DIVISION

At Winnipeg, Manitoba, Hawerchuk, the No. 1 overall 1981 draft pick who for years was expected to carry the Jets single-handedly, remembered what he did before one of the most improved teams in the league discovered balanced offense.

''I had no decision but to shoot,'' Hawerchuk said after slapping a 40-foot, partially screened shot past Bill Ranford. ''I was the first guy up on a line change and the other guys out with me turned around to change. I was the only guy around, and I wasn't going to deke the team out.''

The Jets, with 21 points more than last year when they didn't make the playoffs, have thrived under first-year coach Bob Murdoch's four-line system but Hawerchuk's 85 points this season were the lowest of his nine-year career - including six 100-point campaigns.

The game-winner was his third goal in three playoff games and he is leading the Jets just as he did in 1987 when they defeated Calgary in the first round. Hawerchuk got injured in that series, however, and the Jets were beaten by Edmonton in the next round. Now they have a chance for revenge.

Edmonton's lone goal was score by Reijo Ruotsalainen and Winnipeg's other goal was by Paul Fenton.

At Inglewood, Calif., Tony Granato scored the first short-handed, overtime goal in NHL playoff history, unassisted at 8:37, to lift underdog Los Angeles to a 2-1 series lead over defending cup champion Calgary.

Wayne Gretzky, returning from a back injury that sidelined him more than two weeks, set up Tomas Sandstrom's goal early in the second period.

Granato, who came with Sandstrom at mid-season from the New York Rangers, took the puck away from Gary Suter near the redline. He skated down the right side and beat goaltender Mike Vernon's short side with a shot that found the top left corner of the net. The goal was his second of the playoffs.

The defending NHL champion Flames, owners of the NHL's top power play this season, went 0 for 9 with the man advantage. They have converted on only one of 19 opportunities in the series.

Calgary defenseman Al MacInnis suffered a bruised knee late in the second period and did not return. His 19-game playoff scoring streak - equaling the second-longest in league history - was snapped.

NORRIS DIVISION

At Toronto, Sergio Momesso scored his second goal of the game at 6:04 of overtime and rookie goaltender Curtis Joseph made 41 saves to send St.

Louis to a 3-0 series lead over Toronto, which stands one game from playoff elimination.

Momesso picked up a pass at center ice from Brett Hull, who contributed three points in the game. Momesso fired a 30-foot slap shot through the legs of Allan Bester, the losing goaltender in all three games so far.

Joseph, who was signed as a free agent out of University of Wisconsin this season, has won all three games for St. Louis.

Toronto's Tom Fergus forced the overtime with his second goal of the game and the series. Paul MacLean scored two goals for the Blues.

At Bloomington, Minn., Steve Larmer broke a scoreless tie at 10:12 of the third period and Greg Millen made 31 saves to give Chicago a 2-1 series edge over Minnesota.

Millen made a controversial stop with 8:26 left in the final period when the score was still 1-0. The North Stars thought they had tied the score on Dave Gagner's rebound of a shot by Shawn Chambers, but Referee Bill McCreary ruled the puck never completely crossed the goal line. Wayne Presley scored the other Chicago goal and the North Stars ended Millen's shutout bid on rookie Mike Modano's first NHL playoff goal, with 36 seconds left.

BEIJING (APRIL 9) UPI - China agreed to accept its first U.S. Peace Corps volunteers, putting back on track a program scuttled last year following China's crackdown on the pro-democracy movement, U.S. Embassy officials said Monday.

China had scrapped both the Peace Corps and Fulbright scholar programs last summer to protest U.S. government criticism of the Chinese army's violent suppression last June of pro-democracy protests in Beijing and other cities.

The Chinese government announced last week that it had agreed to resume the Fulbright exchange program for visiting scholars, although on an abbreviated scale.

Despite the moves, relations remain poor between Beijing and Washington. Economic and political sanctions imposed by President Bush after the crackdown, including a suspension of military sales to China, remain in place.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Ed Loo said China had in recent days again

''offered to accept'' the Peace Corps volunteers. The program, the first by the Peace Corps in China, was announced last year before the unrest broke out.

''We have relayed the Chinese willingness back to Washington, and now it's up to the Peace Corps,'' Loo said.

The program had originally expected to send about 20 Peace Corps volunteers to southwest Sichuan Province to teach English at half a dozen institutions. The teachers were to begin work this fall.

Last week, U.S. officials reached agreement with China's State Education Commission on resuming the Fulbright program for the 1990-1991 academic year, with each nation sending 16 scholars to the other for advanced research.

The 1989-1990 program, which was scrapped, would have involved 24 students from each country in the exchange program.

Since last year's student-led protests, the Chinese government has attempted to restrict overseas study to older scholars, who are more likely to return to China after their programs end.

Officials at a Sino-European management institute in Beijing recently canceled six-month internships in European countries for some three dozen business students. Of the 60 students who went on its European internships last year, 25 failed to return home.

(APRIL 9) UPI - Scattered showers moistened portions of the Midwest and southern Plains states early Monday, while gusty winds in Southern California buffeted sun-worshipers on spring break.

The National Weather Service reported scattered showers in parts of Iowa, western Wisconsin, Kansas and Nebraska. A mix of rain and snow fell early Monday from North Dakota to central Minnesota.

Skies were variably cloudy through Wisconsin and Illinois. Milwaukee and Chicago were both partly cloudy, with overnight temperatures in the 50s.

Most of Michigan had cloudy skies and lows in the 30s and 40s.

Mostly clear skies prevailed early Monday over the Middle Atlantic states of Pennsylvania, West Virgina and southern New Jersey, where lows ranged in the 20s and 30s. A freeze warning was in effect for most of Maryland.

A high-pressure system kept New England under clear skies, but temperatures dipped into the 30s early Monday. Bangor, Maine, slipped into the 20s overnight.

In the South, a high-pressure system spawned a relatively clear, cold night for most of the region. The mercury dipped into the 20s and 30s in western North Carolina. Temperatures ranged from 41 in Knoxville, Tenn., to 51 in Atlanta, and 74 in and Key West, Fla.

Widespread light drizzle dampened much of south Texas early Monday, while light rains showered New Mexico's northwest plateau, the north central mountains, the upper Rio Grande Valley and the central highlands. Rain also was reported in parts of Arkansas and Louisiana.

In the West, high winds were reported across the Southern California desert region. In Palms Springs, where thousands of young people have gathered for the annual spring break party binge, winds gusted to 48 mph.

It was 88 degrees at Death Valley, but highs in populated regions of Southern California were mostly in the 60s. Northern California ended Sunday with late afternoon sun and clear skies.

A run-off is likely for the election of Peru's next president.

Greece may have a new political party in power.

And, communism suffers more blows at the polls in Eastern Europe.

U-P-I has the details on this and other top news.

The shuttle Discovery is being preened for tomorrow's scheduled take-off.

Aside for minor technical fine-tuning, NASA engineers at Cape Canaveral say things look good for an on-time launch by Discovery's five-person crew.

Air Force meteorologists predict the weather will cooperate with the space program's third shuttle mission of the year.

(APRIL 9) UPI - It appears as if Peru's electorate will return to the polls in June. Election officials say yesterday's balloting to replace President Alan Garcia has resulted in a virtual dead heat between internationally renowned author Mario Vargas Llosa and a political unknown Alberto Fujimori. Peru's law calls for a second round vote when NO candidate garners a clear majority. Vargas Llosa has suggested a compromise to avoid another election, but Fujimori has rejected any such deal.

With nearly all the vote tallied in Greece, the conservative New Democracy Party has claimed victory over the perenially ruling Pan-Hellenic Socialist Movement. The vote was the third in a 10-month span. Despite N-D-P's percentage victory, a coalition of leftist parties could eke out a majority in Greece's 300-seat Parliament.

Hungarian voters have completed the second phase of their transition from a totalitarian state to a democratic one. Yesterday, the electorate cast ballots in the second and final stage to fill 386 parliamentary seats. With all of the vote tallied, the center-right Hungarian Democratic Forum has surged forth as the nation's foremost political party, winning at least 165 seats. The Alliance of Free Democrats appears to have captured 92 seats.

Also going to the polls in Eastern Europe were residents of Slovenia. The results have NOT been announced yet. Yesterday's vote in Yugoslavia's northwestern state was the country's first multi-party election in 45 years. Political analysts say the vote could ultimately play a decisive role in the future of Yugoslovia's six-state, two-province federation. Each of the parties vying for power has run on a platform of Slovenia's self-determination.

(APRIL 9) UPI - Japanese financial markets got a shot-in-the-arm from a weekend meeting of seven major industrialized nations. The Japanese yen and Tokyo stock prices rose during trading today.

Financial analysts say investors were encouraged by a joint communique issued in Paris by the Group of Seven nations. The Group of Seven said they will keep the Japanese yen's level under review.

Analysts say Japanese investors viewed the Group of Seven meeting as a success for Japanese officials trying to restore calm to the Tokyo markets.

The Tokyo stock market has lost nearly 27 percent of its value since the beginning of the year. The Japanese yen went into a nose-dive, too, falling from 145 yen to the U-S dollar... to as low as 160 yen to the dollar.

In Japan today, both the yen and the Nikkei stock average gained ground during the morning sessions.

(APRIL 9) UPI - Cola-maker Pepsico plans to finalize a deal today that will give it a bigger gulp of the Soviet market.

Pepsi executives and Soviet officials plan to sign a contract worth three-BILLION dollars.

The deal calls for trading Pepsi-Cola for ships and vodka, in what's branded as the largest deal yet between an American company and the Soviet Union.

Pepsico has been shipping its soft-drink syrup to Moscow and then making it into cola and bottling it since 1974... as the first large U-S corporation in the Soviet market. Pepsi has been taking its profit in vodka.

The new pact calls for the Soviets to trade 10 ships and freighters, plus more vodka. It allows Pepsico to more than double its Soviet bottling operation and sets the stage for the nationwide distribution of soft drinks in aluminum cans and plastic bottles. Pepsi now distributes its cola only in bottles.

MIAMI (APRIL 9) UPI - A federal judge has ordered General Development Corp. to honor paychecks it issued to 4,500 employees before filing for Chapter 11 bankruptcy late last week.

At an emergency hearing Sunday, bankruptcy Judge Jay Cristol also said he would appoint a special trustee to represent the interests of homebuyers during the bankruptcy proceedings.

General Development, one of Florida's largest and oldest real estate development companies, pleaded guilty last month to fraud charges. A federal grand jury accused GDC of bilking thousands of out-of-state residents who bought homes in its subdivisions.

The company filed for Chapter 11 protection Friday night after its major lenders refused to advance more credit. GDC has assets of $860 million and debts of $830 million, company attorney Brian K. Gart said at Sunday's hearing.

The company owes money to at least 10,000 creditors. That number would exceed 100,000 if people who bought homesites from GDC are treated as creditors, Gart said.

Sunday's hearing was held to determine whether GDC and its bankers should honor paychecks written before the Chapter 11 filing. Cristol ruled that the checks should be paid. GDC had 4,500 employees until Tuesday, when it laid off 1,100.

Gart also disclosed at the hearing that additional GDC subsidiaries are likely to be added to the bankruptcy this week. But company officials have not decided whether GDC's profitable time-share subsidiaries will be brought under the court's protection, Gart said.

GDC's financial troubles stem from its criminal problems. To resolve the criminal case, GDC agreed to plead guilty and to pay as much as $100 million in restitution over the next 25 years to the home buyers.

The restitution plan is pending before U.S. District Judge Lenore Nesbitt.

At Sunday's hearing, Cristol asked whether the cmopmany was using the bankruptcy filing to avoid the restitution order.

''I don't believe that order was the reason for this filing,'' Gart said. ''I'm almost certain it wasn't.''

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (APRIL 9) UPI - A land mine planted by the Irish Republican Army exploded Monday beneath a military vehicle in Northern Ireland, killing four soldiers and wounding four other people, officials said.

The IRA claimed responsibility for the 8 a.m. blast near Downpatrick, 20 miles south of Belfast, the most severe attack since 1983 on the Ulster Defense Regiment, a British-trained force.

A Royal Ulster Constabulary spokesman said the device appeared to have been planted in a drainage ditch and detonated by remote control as the soldiers patrolled in two armored jeeps along the secluded country road.

He said the explosion blew apart the first vehicle, sending debris into adjacent fields, leaving a large crater and shattering windows of nearby homes.

The official said all four occupants died instantly.

He reported three other soldiers in the second vehicle and one civilian were also injured.

Several neighbors who rushed to the scene said they found the four occupants of the second vehicle wandering around the field in shock, seemingly oblivious to their injuries as they picked up pieces of the multilated bodies of their comrades.

''There was nothing we could do but cover the bodies with our clothes. It was an awful site,'' said James Rankin, a resident who helped the surviving soldiers.

The UDR is recruited locally and serves exclusively in Northern Ireland, and has been targeted by the IRA as part of its fight to end British rule in Northern Ireland.

Scores of police and troops flew into the area by helicopter to search for the IRA assailants. Investigators said the gang detonated the land mine by a command wire leading to a nearby housing estate where a large number of windows were also shattered by the blast.

Shortly after the investigators converged on the explosion site, the IRA South Down unit called a newspaper to claim responsibility, indicating its fighters had fled before the search operation began.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher used the attack to condemn three recent decisions by Irish courts not to allow the extradition to Britain of IRA suspects because they ruled the charges were political.

''We need all the help to fight people who attempt these murders,'' she said. ''They are fighting against democracy itself. It is up to everyone to fight terrorism.''

UDR commander Brig. Charles Ritchie visited the scene and later went to the hospital where the four injured men were being treated for severe shock. The injured civilian sustained facial cuts when the windows of his car were shattered by the blast, police said.

''Having just come back from a scene of mass murder ... my heart goes out to the wives and the children of those soldiers,'' he said.

Secretary of State for Northern Ireland Peter Brooke condemned the incident.

''I am appalled by this attack,'' Brooke said. ''It is absolutely senseless and will not deflect us in our task of defending the community from these evil men. It is a very unchristian way to start Holy Week.''

In Belfast, two men were arrested after a 1,000 pound bomb was discovered outside a central city police station inside a jeep disguised as a police vehicle. The bomb was defused by explosives experts.

(APRIL 9) UPI - Prices on the Tokyo Stock Exchange surged in brisk trading Monday bolstered by hopes for the sagging yen's recovery, lifting the key Nikkei average to its fourth sharpest rise on record.

The blue-chip Nikkei Average of 225 selected issues, which jumped 3.6 percent or 1,029.72 points Friday, soared 1,119.15 points or 3.8 percent to 30,397.93.

The Nikkei, however, still remained 22 percent below its high of 38,195.87 set last Dec. 29.

The broader-based Tokyo Stock Exchange Index of all listed major shares climbed 80.01 points to 2,229.27.

An estimated 800 million shares changed hands, compared with 839 million shares Friday.

Advances hammered declines 816 to 59, while 47 issues remained unchanged.

Elsewhere in Asia, prices closed slightly lower in dull trading on the Hong Kong Stock Exchange in the absence of market-moving news.

The key Hang Seng Index, which slipped 4.88 points Friday, eased 1.39 points to 2,954.74. Utilities fell 0.85 points, financials dropped 0.49, industrials went against the trend and rose 6.18 points and properties closed down 9.54 points.

Turnover amounted to 911 million shares, down from the 1.12 billion shares traded Friday.

Prices closed slightly lower in light trading on the Singapore Stock Exchange as investors remained cautious despite the brisk recovery in Tokyo.

In Australia, stocks closed higher in active trading on the Sydney Sharemarket boosted in part by a strong advance in mining stocks.

The All Ordinaries Index, which gained 7.2 points Friday, climbed 15.3 points to 1,528.2 while the closely watched Gold Index rose 9.4 points to 1,620.6.

Volume amounted to around 60.1 million shares, compared with 70.2 million shares Friday.

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (APRIL 9) UPI - A veteran Communist Party candidate led the Slovenia state presidential race against a pro-secessionist rival Monday, according to preliminary results from Yugoslavia's first free elections in 45 years.

But Milan Kucan, 49, leader of the recently transformed Slovenian Communist Party of Democratic Renewal, fell short of a majority with 44.5 percent of the vote in Sunday's elections.

Kucan will face Joze Pucnik, 58, of the five-party United Slovenian Democratic opposition who wants to secede the state from Yugoslavia, in a second round of balloting April 22, when they will need to win only simple majority votes to win.

In the first free elections since the Communists took power in Yugoslavia in 1945, Slovenians also voted Sunday for 240 members of the three-chamber state Parliament, choosing from among 2,125 candidates from 17 political parties.

Results of the parliamentary polls are to be made public Tuesday.

Slovenia is the most liberal and industrialized state of Yugoslavia's six republics. Out of Slovenia's 2 million population, the electoral body amounts to 1.5 million of which nearly 1.2 went to the polls.

Each Slovenian opposition party and even the ruling Communists want the state to be self-governing, with, at minimum, more independence from the central government. Slovenian nationalist parties have gone further, demanding an independent Slovenia outside the Yugoslav federation.

The preliminary returns of about 1 million ballots showed that trailing Pucnik with 26.1 percent were independent candidate Ivan Kramberger, 54, with 19 percent and Liberal Party candidate Marko Demsar, 54, with 10.5 percent of the ballots.

Two left-wing candidates stood good chances to enter the four-member Slovenian state presidency to be headed by the state president.

Socialist poet Ciril Zlobec and Communist reformist Matjaz Kmecl along with two members of a united opposition bloc, Ivan Oman of the Peasants Party and Dusan Plut of the Greens Party, collected the biggest number of votes among 12 candidates.

The Yugoslav Communist Party, which has ruled the country since the end of World War II, abolished its ruling monopoly in January, giving way to a multi-party system which is to be formally adopted in constitutional changes later this year.

Slovenia, with 17 registered political parties, is one of three Yugoslav states that have passed laws formally recognizing political opposition groups.

Croatia, which will hold multi-party elections April 22, has registered 32 political parties, and Bosnia-Herzegovina, which still has to decide on an election day, has three registered parties.

Macedonia, Serbia and Montenegro have not yet passed laws on political parties.

Serbia, Yugoslavia's most populous state with 10 million people, and Montenegro, the smallest state with 600,000, held ''premature'' single-party elections in December to strengthen the ruling Communist Party authority.

(APRIL 9) UPI - Thousands of residents in Nepal's capital blared rock music and whistled from the rooftops of the Himalayan kingdom today to celebrate the planned creation of a multi-party political system. But the festivity was short-lived. Many of the revelers apparently forgot Katmandu was under a curfew. Hospital sources say police opened fire in several areas, killing at least two people.

Cola-maker Pepsico and Soviet officials plan to sign a three-BILLION-dollar contract in Moscow today. The accord is expected to expand sales of Pepsi Cola in exchange for Soviet freighters, ships and vodka. Pepsi hopes to double its bottling operation in the Soviet Union, eventually distribuing the cola in aluminum cans and plastic bottles.

KUWAIT (APRIL 9) UPI - Iraq said Monday it was expelling a U.S. diplomat in Baghdad in retaliation for the expulsion last Saturday of an Iraqi envoy at the United Nations in New York, the official Iraqi news agency INA reported.

INA quoted a Foreign Ministry spokesman in Baghdad as saying the decision to expel the U.S. diplomat was made on a ''tit-for-tat'' basis,but the spokesman did not name the American or say how long the diplomat was given to leave the Iraqi capital.

The spokesman also denied U.S. claims the Iraqi diplomat based at the United Nations was involved in a plot to murder two opponents of Iraqi President Saddam Hussein.

The expulsion order marked a heightening of tension between Iraq and the United States after British customs officials last week foiled an alleged Iraqi plot to smuggle U.S.-made components of triggers for nuclear weapons.

In addition, Saddam last week threatened to wipe out half of Israel with poison gas if Israel repeated a 1981 bombing raid on an unfinished Iraqi nuclear reactor near Baghdad.

The Foreign Ministry spokesman, speaking of the expulsion of the Iraqi envoy to the United Nations, said, ''The recent American decision cannot be isolated from the series of feverish and continued campaigns to injure Iraq, in what serves the aggresive objectives of Israel.

''It is obvious in this case, as in previous cases, the motive appears to be a premeditated intention to harm Iraq,'' INA, monitored in Kuwait, quoted him as saying.

''The accusations directed against the Iraqi diplomat working at our mission in the United Nations are utterly groundless,'' the Iraqi foreign ministry spokesman said.

On Saturday, Washington asked the Iraqi diplomat to leave the United States for ''abuse of priviliges.''

U.S. authorities accused him of offering a former driver for the Iraqi mission $50,000 to kill two Iraqi dissidents living in California. The U.S. State Department gave no details about the nature of the Iraqi diplomat's work or his name.

ATLANTIC CITY, NJ (APRIL 9) UPI - Donald Trump has reshuffled top management at his Taj Mahal Hotel and Casino, less than one week after the billion-dollar gaming establishment opened to the public, Trump executives said.

A Trump spokeswoman, who asked not to be named, said Sunday William "Bucky" Howard, 51, replaced Walter Haybert, 47, as president and chief operating officer of the casino resort.

Haybert was made chief financial officer, said the spokeswoman, who said she spoke on behalf of Trump consultant Karen Tuso. She declined to give a reason for the shake-up.

In another change, she said Edward Tracy, 37, was named president and chief executive officer of Trump Hotel Corp., the company that coordinates all four of Trump's Atlantic City properties.

The news came on the heels of an announcement that more than 3,000 slot machines at the Taj Mahal would be idled indefinitely pending major modifications at the casino. A Taj spokesperson said the shutdown was caused by the enormous volume of business, which caused accounting and mechanical problems.

The core of the problem, according to Trump advisors and state gaming officials, was the casino's failure to reconcile transfers of money from the cage - the central cash office - to changemaking booths, change machines, and the slots.

The spokeswoman denied other reports in Sunday's editions of the Atlantic City Press, which quoted anonymous sources as saying other Trump executives due for new jobs included Donald Wood, vice president of finance, and Steven Bolson, senior vice president of marketing.

The Press also reported that Michael Rumbolz, of TRUMP NEVADA Inc., who was brought in to help open the Taj Mahal, has been offered a permanent Atlantic City position.

The casino was the center of controversy even before it opened in a blaze of fireworks and glitz last week. Analyst Marvin Roffman, 50, was fired by his Philadelphia accounting firm for refusing to retract his published comments that the casino might have difficulty attracting enough gamblers to pay its bills during the resorts slow winter months. Roffman, who had worked for Janney Montgomery Scott Inc. for 16 years, was fired after an irate Trump called his superiors to complain.

ANALYSIS BY STEVE GERSTEL

WASHINGTON (APRIL 9) UPI - Rarely, much too rarely, the Senate escapes from its turgid meanderings to stage a moment of drama worthy of the finest theater.

One of these rarities came when the Senate reached a vote on whether to give a generous settlement to coal miners who lose their jobs as a consequence of the clean air bill.

The force behind this proposal was Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., a wily veteran of 72, who is the very powerful chairman of the Appropriations Committee, the president pro tem of the Senate and former Senate Democratic leader.

Arrayed against him: President Bush, Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell and Senate Republican leader Robert Dole.

Many considered this vote a test of personal power between Mitchell and Byrd, the man he succeeded as Democratic leader a year and a half ago. Byrd insisted it was not.

But certainly, it was a battle between Mitchell, the foremost supporter of clean air legislation, and Byrd, the man who as leader had succesfully blocked it from consideration.

It was a classic power struggle with the outcome in doubt as the roll call began in mid-afternoon. Neither Mitchell nor Byrd were sure of victory and both worked on their colleagues as the votes were recorded.

An important vote for Byrd was lost even before the roll call began when it was disclosed that Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La., who had left the city for a funeral, was prevented by the weather from getting back in time.

That, however, was only the start of Byrd's problems. Later, he was to say that the leadership and the administration ''peeled off three of my votes.''

One of these votes, that of Sen. Steve Symms, R-Idaho, was stripped from Byrd in public view.

Symms, one of the most active opponents of the clean air bill, had voted to support Byrd, apparently hoping that the addition of the coal miner amendment would kill the bill. His Idaho mate, Republican Sen. James McClure, had also voted with Byrd.

But Republicans, seeing no votes to spare, turned Symms and he eventually switched his ballot.

Even more dramatic was the vote cast by Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., a former candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination and a rising power in the Senate.

Biden had given Byrd his commitment to vote for the coal miner amendment, provided it did not kill the clean air bill. As the clock ticked, Biden prepared to keep his commitment.

Mitchell bluntly told him that adoption of the amendment would mean that Bush would veto the bill. Biden said he had never heard the White House flatly make that threat.

Certainly not by accident, assistant Senate Republican leader Alan Simpson was standing ''right there within 2 feet'' of Biden when Byrd and said White House chief of staff John Sununu was on the telephone.

Biden hustled into the cloakroom to take the call and was told by Sununu that the amendment was a ''deal buster'' and yes, indeed, the adoption of the Byrd amendment would draw a veto.

Biden, in an understatment, said that ''the phone call I received was incredibly timely'' and also persuasive. Biden voted against Byrd, and he turned out to be the key vote.

The final vote was 50-49 against the amendment. Had Biden voted the other way, Byrd would have won by the same margin.

Neither Byrd, nor anyone else, has disclosed the identity of the third vote that the West Virginia Democrat said was ''peeled off'' in the final hectic moments of the vote.

Biden indicated that the White House talked to other senators but divulged no names.

HOUSTON (APRIL 9) UPI - Domestic drilling decreased last week, but offshore drilling increased slightly, industry monitors reported.

A total of 937 rigs were working in the United States last week, compared with 946 the week before and 778 the same week a year ago, Baker Hughes Inc. reported Sunday.

Two more rigs went to work in the Gulf of Mexico last week, while another rig left the area for a different market. The changes pushed the rig utilization rate to 70.2 percent - or 151 working out of a fleet of 215 - the highest level of activity in the Gulf since late January, Offshore Data Services reported.

One less rig was working in European waters last week, dropping the utilization rate to 88.6 percent, with 117 rigs working out of 132, ODS said. There was a net increase of two working rigs worldwide, inching the overall utilization rate up to 80.4 percent, with 538 rigs working out of a fleet of 669.

There were 347 rotary rigs working in Texas last week, compared with 348 the week before and 244 the same week a year ago. Louisiana had 151 working rotary rigs last week, 150 the week before and 129 the same week a year ago; New Mexico, 38, 36, and 36; Oklahoma, 119, 119, and 120; Canada, 93, 135, and 117.

BY JOE FASBINDER

(APRIL 9) UPI - WordStar, the granddaddy of word-processing programs, has picked up another revision number, putting it almost one full digit ahead of the young upstart that has seized a big chunk of the market.

That WordStar 6.0 is a major rewrite of the old favorite is evident on all levels, from the feel of the program to the appearance of the screen.

Gone are the menus that took up a third of your screen in versions up to 5.5. Pull-down menus have arrived.

Other changes mean WordStar is now almost as sophisticated as WordPerfect version 5.1, which has been on the shelves since January and probably qualifies as the most popular word processing program for IBM-compatible systems.

Both are complicated. If you need evidence, just dial into a commercial bulletin board and look at the sheer volume of questions people ask about WordPerfect.

There are people out there who care about how their letters are kerned.

Kerning, or manipulation of the spaces between letters and words, is one of the things that has been added to WordStar 6.0.

It sure is a change from days when WordStar ran under the CP/M operating system - before IBM was making home computers. In those days, 64 kilobytes of memory was a lot, and WordStar could do wonderful things with it.

Today, many major programs require 640K.

After years of putting together a word processing program that would operate in small memory environments, WordStar 6.0 is changing. It now takes up to 384K of memory. And the fun stuff - Advanced Page Preview and peripherals that let you import graphics - requires at least 512K of memory.

But it will still run on a computer with just two 360K floppies - just like it did in the old days.

To be fair, WordPerfect also will run with 384K of memory, but it needs a pair of 720K or larger floppies and a ''hard drive is recommended,'' according to the manual.

If you install all the good extras that comes with WordPerfect 5.1, you kiss goodbye nearly 5 megs of hard disk space.

Both programs have mouse support, and it's really zippy in WordPerfect, going through menus at warp speed.

With WordStar 6.0, however, you can use only a Logitech-compatible mouse.

The big change in WordStar 6.0 involves that buzziest of word processing buzzwords - laser support.

WordStar International of San Rafael, Calif., unveiling Version 6.0, emphasized that ''the latest release of its flagship word processing program ... fully supports the new Hewlett-Packard LaserJet III printer.''

Not only does WordStar support each bell and whistle on that new generation laser printer, WordStar International actually worked with the printer manufacturer to make sure the bells and whistles work just right.

So WordStar, introduced at the dawn of the personal computer age in 1979 (compared to 1982 for WordPerfect), now supports the newest of the scalable-font printers.

In WordStar, ''typefaces and point sizes can now be selected on-the-fly so users no longer need to pre-install point sizes,'' said WordStar spokeswoman Tenley Dooley.

This, of course, lets you set up a letter that looks a lot more like a typeset page from a magazine than a letter.

Pretty neat stuff for a word processing program Dooley boasts can still be operated - at least on a basic level - by someone with virtually ''no previous computer experience.''

At a basic level, WordStar is still word processing for people who type - rather than for people who assemble documents that look very much as though they had been put together in a desktop publishing environment.

Sure, you can set things up so that you get shaded, 12 point Courier micro-justified on alternate lines, with the proper kerning, if that's what you want from your $2,000-plus laser printer. You can do it just as if you were using WordPerfect 5.1.

But Wordstar can brag that you never have to remove your fingers from the keyboard if all you want to do is type a document. It is, first and foremost, a word-processing program for typists.

Software: WordStar 6.0, from WordsStar International, 33 San Pablo Ave., San Rafael, Calif., 94903; System requirements: IBM PC, XT or AT compatible, 384K RAM, two 360K floppies. Suggested retail price: $495; Copy protection: No; Reviewer's evaluation (on a scale of 1 to 5) 4 - highly recoemmended.

Software: WordPerfect 5.1, by WordPerfect Corp., 1555 N. Technology Way, Orem, Utah, 84057; System requirements: IBM PC, XT or AT compatible, 384K RAM; dual 720K floppies (hard disk is recommended.) Suggested retail price: $495; Copy protection: No; Reviewer's evaluation (on a scale of 1 to 5): 4, highly recommend.

By JAN A. ZVERINA

DETROIT (APRIL 9) UPI - The folks trying to make ''fahrvergnugen,'' or driving pleasure in German, a household word in America also are trying to make the new Passat GL sedans and wagons household cars here after selling them overseas since 1987.

The 1990 Passat GL, Volkswagen's largest car ever sold here, replaces the Dasher and Quantum models that never really took the West German automaker outside the small car business.

The front-drive Passat GL sedan is about the same size as a Toyota Camry, Mazda 626, or Chrysler's Dodge Spirit and Plymouth Acclaim twins - in other words another large compact entering one of the most competitive segments of the auto market.

Because of that, VW has chosen to start the bidding for the Passat GL sedan at only $14,770, including air conditioning, power steering, disc brakes, adjustable steering wheel and a split folding rear seat.

A 5-speed manual is also standard, with a new 4-speed automatic transaxle offered for $795 more. The Passat wagon, sold with an automatic only, starts at $15,885.

Those prices make the Passat, which means 'trade wind' in German, the most inexpensive European car of this size offered in America, although a fully loaded version can cost nearly $20,500, which rivals or exceeds the price of many Japanese and American models.

Evaluated was a Passat GL costing $18,085. It had an automatic gearbox, since VW expects 80 percent of U.S. buyers to go shiftless.

Its $15,565 base price was raised by a $1,200 package containing electric windows, mirrors and locks, cruise control and AM-FM stereo cassette. Also added were anti-lock brakes ($835), metallic paint ($165), and a $320 destination fee.

At first blush, the Passat GL has a decidedly European appearance, not unlike the Audi 80/90 sedan. Its roofline may also remind some of the Ford Taurus.

Its cabin is finished in a rich looking fabric, and offers generous head and leg room both in the front and rear. Motorized shoulder belts with manually fastened lap belts meet the passive restraint requirement for 1990.

Its supportive front seats are fully adjustable, even for height, while its rear seats even have a recliner adjustment. But some drivers may have trouble getting comfortable because the Passat subscribes to the European driving position that requires short legs and long arms.

Its smoothly contoured dashboard, similar to the one in VW's new Corrado sports coupe, has the solid, no-nonsense look now found in all German cars.

Its analog instrumentation is complete and well arranged, but partially obstructed by the steering wheel when it is in its lowest position - a common complaint carmakers seem bent on ignoring.

Otherwise, a variety of column stalks, rocker switches and twist knobs operate all major controls, and are either immediately at hand or easily identified.

Its cargo space rivals much larger sedans, but lacking is a switch to open the rear hatch from the driver's seat.

Under the Passat's hood is a 2.0 liter, four-cylinder, 16-valve engine that delivers 134 horsepower at 5,800 rpm. EPA fuel mileage ratings are 21 city-30 mpg highway. It is the same engine now found in VW's smaller Golf GTI and Jetta GLI.

The electronically controlled automatic gearbox has shift points that can be adjusted using a console switch marked ''sport'' or ''economy.'' This transaxle was developed soley by VW after Renault quit a joint venture arrangement, delaying the Passat's U.S. introduction by two years.

Unfortunately, it is this transaxle that may be the bane of the new Passat.

Drivers will notice a distinct downshift lurch from fourth to third gear as the car slows below 40 mph. VW says this aids braking and is characteristic of the new transaxle. But it was found to be downright annoying during urban driving.

The Passat GL's 2.0 liter engine has ample acceleration, although it is slightly noisier than one might expect for such a well appointed sedan. Word is a narrow angle V6 engine is under development for future models.

Otherwise, the Passat GL has the typically tight steering that seems to want to spring back to center, and a taut, controlled ride VW owners will find familiar.

The test car exhibited a fit and finish rivaling the best in the industry. While access to the engine's oil filter and spark plugs is excellent, the drive belts might be hard for do-it-yourselfers to change.

Each Passat is covered by a 24 month/24,000 mile basic warranty. VW hopes to sell 40,000 Passats a year through its almost 800 U.S. dealers.

(For each car written about in his weekly Roadtalk column, UPI Auto Writer Jan Zverina test drives the vehicle for one week, driving it between 250 and 500 miles on both city and rural roads.)

ATHENS, Greece (APRIL 9) UPI - The conservative New Democracy party, one seat shy of an absolute majority in the 300-member Parliament, announced Monday that it was ready to form a government after winning assurances of support from a minor party.

New Democracy leader Constantine Mitsotakis, who won Sunday's elections with 150 seats in the single-chamber Vouli, or Parliament, said he expected to receive the mandate and would form a government Wednesday.

He made the announcement after the small Demoocratic Renewal party, with one seat in the legislature, assured him of support during a meeting Monday.

Mitsotakis's narrow victory came after a 10-month struggle at the polls with the two major left-wing parties, the Pan-Hellenic Socialist Movement, or PASOK, and the Communist-led Alliance of the Left.

With more than 99 percent of the results tallied, PASOK won 123 seats and the Alliance of the Left took 19. The remaining eight went to independents and the small parties.

In terms of the popular vote, New Democracy won 46.9 percent, PASOK 38.6, and the Alliance of the Left 10.3, with 4.2 percent going to the independents and small parties.

Political sources said President Christos Sartzetakis would call on Mitsotakis to form a government after he received the official list of the new deputies in the Vouli, and the New Democracy chief could receive the mandate late Monday or early Tuesday. Sartzetakis was asked to stay as caretaker prime minister until a new government was formed.

Democratic Renewal party chief Costis Stephanopoulos said he would have preferred that the two larger parties formed a coalition to tackle the country's acute economic crisis, but, as that did not seem possible, he was ready to support a New Democracy government.

This did not mean he would join the government, but only that he would support it in Parliament, he said.

A total of 40 political parties contested the polls, the third in 10 months. New Democracy found its bid for power challenged by the combined forces of PASOK and the Alliance of the Left, which fought on a single ticket in some constituencies.

Mitsotakis, bitterly attacking former Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou for changing the electoral law before June to keep the conservatives from power, said two seats were still disputed and his party may still win an overall 151 seats.

New Democracy's supporters celebrated victory after it became clear they had won the struggle with their leftist rivals. Party supporters ran wild in the streets of Athens early Monday, honking car horns and waving blue party flags.

Because of the changed electoral law, New Democracy narrowly missed winning a clear majority in June and November, falling five and three seats short in Parliament. Under the old electoral law they would have won a comfortable majority in June.

Mitsotakis told reporters that, after forming a government, his party intended to pass a bill reverting to the old electoral law, but that this was not a priority item in his program.

He said eight years of PASOK rule between 1981 and 1989 resulted in an economic crisis because the Socialists emptied the treasury and late last year the government had to take a syndicated loan from foreign banks to pay salaries and pensions. His first priority would be to tackle the economic crisis facing the country, the New Democracy leader said.

Sunday's elections were hotly contested, and interest was high. Of more than 8 million people eligible to vote, some 6.6 million showed up at the ballot boxes.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 9) UPI - Supporters of legal abortion Monday asked the Supreme Court to hear a case challenging the tax exempt status of Roman Catholic organizations over alleged involvement in political campaigns.

In a brief filed with the court, three groups - the National Abortion Rights Action League, the Women's Legal Defense Fund and Population Planning Associates - urged the justices to accept an appeal by the Abortion Rights Mobilization over an appeals court's dismissal of their suit against the National Conference of Catholic Bishops and its social policy action arm, the U.S. Catholic Conference.

In September 1989, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 2nd Circuit dismissed the nearly 10-year-old challenge to the church's tax exempt status.

ARM contended in its suit that the government was giving the church agencies an improper subsidy by allowing them to retain their tax-exempt status while involved in partisan political campaigns.

In reaching its decision the appeals court found that Abortion Rights Mobilization did not have standing to bring the suit.

The brief urging the Supreme Court to hear ARM's appeal is addressed to the standing question.

''Every individual and every organization engaged in debate in the political marketplace is at risk that this administration or a future administration will skew the outcome of that debate by subsidizing the views of their political opponents,'' the brief argued.

It said under the reasoning of the appeals court, a group like the NAACP would not be able to challenge the tax exempt status of a group that used tax-deductible contributions to campaign for political candidates who support a constitutional amendment permitting racial segregation in the public schools or allow a conservative think tank to challenge a liberal think tank's use of similar contributions for political candidates who support socialism.

''Government exists to serve the political will of the people, not to shape it,'' the brief argued. ''For this reason, standing doctrines (which set the right to sue) should be construed as liberally as the Constitution will permit when citizens allege that government is illegally subsidizing the campaigns of their political opponents.''

The tangled history of the case began in 1980 when ARM filed suit in the U.S. District Court in New York against the Internal Revenue Service seeking to force revocation of the church agencies' exempt status.

In 1983, the district court issued subpoenas on the conferences ordering them to supply documents to ARM as part of the case. When the church refused to comply, the district court issued contempt citations and levied fines of $50,000 per day on each conference. In 1988, the Supreme Court ordered further hearings in the case and suspended the fines.

The Catholic agencies then challenged ARM's standing and the appeals court agreed with the church and dismissed the suit.

The petition for a Supreme Court hearing on the issue comes less than a week after the bishops' conference announced it was hiring a large public relations firm and a political polling organization to conduct a multi-million dollar anti-abortion campaign.

SRINAGAR, INDIA (APRIL 9) UPI - The government Monday established indirect contact with Moslem separatist kidnappers and got a one-hour extension of a deadline to free three jailed militants to save the lives of three hostages, a senior official said.

But the new deadline expired at 4 p.m., and there was no further word on the efforts to free the hostages.

Security forces, meanwhile, shot one person dead in downtown Srinagar when a group of residents left their homes in violation of a curfew to purchase vegetables from a lone vendor who had ventured out with a basket of wares, police sources said.

There was also confusion as to the fate of the top military commander of the Jammu and Kashmir Liberation Front, the most powerful of a number of underground organizations engineering a popular uprising against Indian rule of predominantly Moslem Kashmir that has left more than 180 people dead since mid-January.

Newspaper reports Monday quoted government statements as saying Yaseem Malik was killed trying to flee from a paramilitary police raid on Sunday. But senior officials in Srinagar, the summer capital of Jammu and Kashmir state, 400 miles north of New Delhi, were unable to confirm his death.

Police sources Sunday said Malik had been wounded and captured. A reliable militant source Monday claimed Malik, 20, escaped after sustaining a leg wound and was in hiding.

A senior state official speaking on condition of anonymity said the government had established indirect contact with separatists holding Kashmir University Vice Chancellor Mashir-ul-Haq, his private secretary, Ahmed Ghani, and H.L. Khera, the general manager of state-run Hindustan Machine Tools.

He said authorities asked the abductors, members of the Kashmir Students Liberation Front, to extend a 3 p.m. deadline they set for the release of three jailed militants in exchange for the lives of their captives.

The kidnappers agreed to a one-hour extention, but called on the government to either lift a curfew slapped on the entire Kashmir Valley after the abductions on Friday or halt house-to-house searches by police, troops and commandos, the official said.

At the end of the hour-long extension, the government had still not agreed to either condition, the official said, adding, ''The impasse is continuing.''

The official declined to reveal how contact was made with the kidnappers, although several efforts were known to have been underway.

One such effort was pursued by federal Railways Minister George Fernandes, who met Sunday with the fathers of several militant leaders and the families of two of the three separatists, whose freedom was demanded in exchange for the lives of the hostages.

Fernandes was assigned to monitor Kashmir by Prime Minister V.P. Singh.

Senior officials also tried recruiting several local journalists as intermediaries, but to no apparent avail.

A source close to Gov. Jagmohan, who administers Jammu and Kashmir state, said he wanted the hostages freed immediately and he was prepared to release the three jailed militants only after a gap of more than one week.

''Let them release the hostages. They should not brutalize their act,'' the source quoted Jagmohan as saying. ''It can be that they (the jailed militants) are released after 10 or 12 days.''

The Press Trust of India quoted an official source in the state winter capital of Jammu as saying authorities were ''in no mood'' to accede to the kidnappers' demands.

In New Delhi, meanwhile, Singh reiterated charges neighboring Pakistan was arming and supporting the Kashmiri militants and Sikh separatists in northern Punjab state.

Both India and Pakistan claim sovereignty over Kashmir and have battled for the western Himalayan region in all three wars they have fought since 1948. India currently holds two-thirds of it.

The insurrection in Indian Kashmir, which New Delhi is surpressing with troops and police, has escalated tensions. Pakistan denies arming and training the militants, but openly supports their demand for self-determination.

ORLANDO, FL (APRIL 9) UPI - More than 300 guests, some wrapped in blankets, were evacuated from a downtown hotel before dawn Monday because of a smoky three-alarm fire. There were no reports of injuries.

The blaze started in the laundry room at the Harley Hotel, said Greg Gentleman of the Orlando Fire Department. "The fire was basically contained to the laundry room on the third floor, which suffered extensive damage. The problem was we had heavy smoke on several floors of the hotel. There were 306 guests registered, and all were evacuated," he said. Some wandered around outside wrapped in blankets, he said.

An arson team was at the six-story hotel, investigating the cause of the blaze, a standard procedure for a large fire even though there was no evidence of arson, Gentleman said.

The laundry room was closed at the time of the blaze, which was reported at 4:42 a.m. and was declared out at 5:25 a.m., he said. Despite the smoke damage, the hotel remained open.

It was the second major hotel fire in Florida in four days. Early Friday, fire gutted the 102-room Fontana Hotel on Miami Beach. Six bodies had been recovered by Monday and eight people were still missing. Another 21 were treated for smoke inhalation and anxiety attaacks.

Search crews resumed the grisly search for bodies at daybreak Monday. Firefighters said it may be several weeks before the cause of that fire is known.

BEIJING (APRIL 9) UPI - China kept a tight lid Monday on reports of rioting in a remote northwest border region, but Western diplomats said they were told by Chinese officials the reports were essentially accurate.

Chinese sources during the weekend said the government in western Xinjiang

Province had sent in troops to quell rioting by hundreds of Moslem Uighurs near Kashgar, a fabled city on the old Silk Road route near the border with the Soviet Union's Asian republics.

Officials in the Kashgar district and city public security bureaus, reached by telephone from Beijing, confirmed Kashgar had been closed to foreigners but gave no reason why, saying they ''weren't clear'' about unrest in the region.

Foreign journalists were told by the Xinjiang provincial foreign affairs office they could not fly to Urumqi.

But a Western diplomat, speaking on condition of anonymity, said a member of his embassy met with a Xinjiang province official Monday in Beijing and was told ''the reports of unrest appear to be accurate.''

An Australian resident of Beijing who was in Urumqi during the weekend said witnesses back from Kashgar said mobs of Uighurs had run through the city wielding knives. But there were no firm details and no accounts of casualties.

The Chinese sources said troops were sent to Kashgar to put down the unrest. The Australian said he was told by a soldier in Urumqi that several planeloads of troops had flown down.

Although a spokesman for the Xinjiang province office in Beijing dismissed the reports as ''a rumor,'' officials at the Kashgar public security bureau, reached by telephone from Beijing, said only they had no information.

The riots are believed to be the first large-scale unrest reported since China's crackdown last year on the pro-democracy movement in Beijing. They came after repeated warnings by Xinjiang officials of increased ethnic unrest in the region.

Regional authorities recently arrested underground activists and confiscated anti-government leaflets.

Xinjiang is one of China's most worrisome minority regions, bordering the restive Soviet central Asian republics.

About 6 million of Xinjiang's 15 million inhabitants are Moslem Uighurs of Turkic descent. The region is also home to Kazakh, Tajik and Uzbek minorities, and its central desert has served as China's nuclear testing ground since the early 1960s.

Since the communist takeover in 1949, native Uighurs have been gradually outnumbered by dominant Han Chinese. But increasing calls for stepped-up alerts along the border indicate China's fears that radical separatist sentiment will spill over into the region from the neighboring Soviet republics.

China has blamed ethnic unrest by Moslem Uighurs and Buddhist Tibetans on ''splittist plots with imperialist support'' and called for increased vigilance. Lhasa, the Tibetan capital, has been under martial law for more than a year since Chinese troops fired on pro-independence Tibetans last March.

GENEVA, SWITZERLAND (APRIL 9) UPI - World trading nations began a review Monday of the current state of play at the faltering Uruguay Round free trade talks due to end in a package deal by December.

Officials attending the talks within the framework of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade said the key participants all called for work to be accelerated if the end-of-year deadline is to be met.

U.S. delegate Rufus Yerxa warned against pessimism, saying there is enough time to get a package agreement if others like the United States are ready "to change gear and accelerate."

Discussions on agricultural trade, however, "must move beyond polemics," Yerxa said in a clear reference to U.S. differences with the European Community on farm trade.

EC delegate Tran van Thinh also avoided gloom, saying he "sensed misplaced panic" among some participants. Tran singled out EC insistence, however, on "legitimate ways and means of fighting dumping" as part of a package - referring to the Community's current campaign against Japanese "screwdriver" assembly activities in Europe. The EC also believes developing countries still have "to prove their negotiating good faith," he said.

Australia and New Zealand complained about a continued "lack of any clear perception about the way forward" on agriculture, while Canada said others have still failed to make adequate offers on reducing import barriers in general.

Third World nations made the same complaint against the industrialized countries, particularly in the textiles and clothing sector. India said a successful Uruguay Round was "unthinkable" unless free trade in textiles was included. Hong Kong made the same point, saying that the textiles sector accounted for 40 percent of employment in the British colony.

The review session, scheduled to end Wednesday, was called to single out major current sticking points requiring higher-level negotiating policy decisions.

Trade ministers of the biggest western and Third World countries are to meet in Mexico April 19 and 20 and theoretically produce fresh instructions for the negotiators in Geneva so several deadlocks can be broken.

Aimed at cutting trade restrictions by an average 30 percent, the talks were launched in Punta del Este, Uruguay, at the end of 1986 by members of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

Initial draft accords on the various issues from basic import tarrifs to farm trade and services are supposed to be ready by end-July so a final package is ready for a ministerial conference in Brussels in December.

But the Uruguay Round is as much as one year behind is some areas and GATT Director General Arthur Dunkel has warned for some time that high-level policy decisions are needed fast if it is not to fall far short of objectives.

There are major arguments among the industrialized nations themselves and between the industrialized and the developing countries. Some of the biggest:

- Washington demands the European Community phase out farm export subsidies by a complicated formula to calculate their value in terms of import duties which could be reduced and eliminated. That is rejected as "unrealistic" by the EC.

- The United States and other industrial nations want Japan to be far more generous in offers made so far to open up Japanese markets for industrial as well as agricultural products.

- The EC insists on steps to prevent Japanese "dumping" of goods either made in Japan or assembled in plants in Europe and ranging from cars to computers.

- Large agricultural exporters gathered in the so-called Cairns Group, including Australia, Argentina, and Canada, want better access everywhere for their products,

- Third-World producers of textiles and clothing want an end to import quotas by the industrialized nations under the Multi-fiber Arrangement,

- Developing countries producing tropical products demand preferential treatment for those goods,

- Western nations, above all the United States, want freedom of business for service industries which causes Third World concern about banks being taken over by multinational corporations.

BUDAPEST, HUNGARY (APRIL 9) UPI - The Hungarian Democratic Forum began negotiations to form a center-right coalition government Monday based on its landslide victory in Hungary's first democratic elections in four decades.

Forum President Jozsef Antall said the decisiveness of Sunday's balloting was a clear mandate for a return to the ''well-balanced politics of the center,'' the kind of government Hungary enjoyed before the communist takeover in 1947.

''The Hungarian people, after having gotten through the last 40 years, cast their votes the same way they did 40 years ago,'' Antall told a news conference. ''... The Hungarian people are clear in their support for national values, the values of Christian democracy, of a liberal state ruled by law, and of a market economy.''

Antall, 58, a librarian favored to become prime minister, said talks on forming a coalition government already were underway and he hoped an agreement would be reached within a month.

One small party involved in the talks was the Independent Smallholders, the coalition leader in Hungary's last democratically elected government in 1945.

The Forum's chief non-communist rival, the liberal Alliance of Free Democrats, said it would go into opposition to ensure against what campaign manager Balint Magyar called ''the creation of one-party rule in the disguise of a multi-party coaltion.''

According to complete but unofficial results from Sunday's second and final round of balloting, the center-right Forum captured 164 seats, or 42 percent, of the 386 seats in parliament compared to 92 seats, or 23 percent, for the Free Democrats.

The Smallholders party finished third with 44 seats, or 11 percent. The Hungarian Socialist Party, the reincarnation of the old communist party, won 33 seats, or 9 percent. The remaining mandates were won by smaller parties or independents.

The Hungarian Socialist Workers Party, the unrepentant Marxist wing of the Communist Party, was eliminated from competition in the initial round of voting March 25.

The national Election Commission was expected to certify the official results on Tuesday.

Antall ruled out a possible partnership with the Socialists, and indicated the Forum would not seek an alliance with the Free Democrats, its chief rival during the sometimes-acrimonious campaign.

He said the immediate task of a Forum-led government would be reviving Hungary's moribund economy, which has been crippled by 40 years of central planning and the largest per-capita foreign debt in Eastern Europe.

Antall said Hungary would seek membership in the European Community, ''concentrating all our means to get into this organization as soon as possible.''

Although the margin of the Forum's victory in the second round surprised many political observers, the center-right party did not win enough seats to claim an outright majority in the parliament. There were indications of tough bargaining ahead for the Forum in trying to forge an alliance with the Smallholders.

Taking their opposition role to heart, the Free Democrats Monday accused the Forum of running a dirty campaign and making cheap appeals to nationalist sentiments.

Magyar said negative campaigning was a major factor in the party's disappointing performance in the second round. On March 25, the Free Democrats finished less than three percentage points behind the Forum.

Ivan Petre, a member of the Free Democrats' executive committee, said ''we do have anxieties'' over how much of a voice the opposition would be allowed to have under a Forum-led government.

He cited an appeal Monday by prominent Forum member Ivan Petre for an end to live television coverage of parliamentary debates.

Turnout was relatively light in Sunday's runoff, in part because of cold, rainy weather that kept many of Hungary's 7.8 million registered voters inside.

The Election Commission estimated voter turnout at about 44 percent, down sharply from the 64 percent average in the first round of balloting March 25.

Apart from the bad weather, another factor behind the low turnout Sunday was a general lack of enthusiasm for the second round, party officials said.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 9) UPI - In a warning to Japan and other U.S. trading partners, the Justice Department's antitrust chief said Monday he is considering prosecuting overseas trade conspiracies in American courts.

James Rill, the assistant attorney general for antitrust enforcement, made the comment while discussing what he called Japan's recent ''significant steps'' toward trade reform.

Rill said he is cnnidering whether to bring suit in U.S. courts for trade restraint conspiracies that occur in foreign nations.

''It's something I'm studying very actively at the moment,'' Rill told reporters.

The Bush administration believes tough antitrust enforcement ''enhances efficiency, enhances competitiveness and contributes to the openness of markets in the United States,'' Rill said.

''There is a perception,'' Rill said, ''that price-fixing, bid-rigging, market allocations through boycotts have become very prevalent in Japan.''

U.S. courts could have jurisdiction over such cases if the companies involved do business in the United States or have offices on U.S. soil, he said.

''We would be looking in the U.S. courts where the effect of a conspiracy, for example, is to restrain U.S. trade,'' Rill said. ''The fact that the conspiracy may have occurred overseas would not prevent us from exercising jurisdiction ... where we can reach the parties to the conspiracy through U.S. offices or otherwise.''

But Rill emphasized the idea is ''under review. I'm not prepared to make a final announcement on that.''

Rill said officials would talk with ''our Japanese counterparts about the types of steps that might be taken to identify exclusionary practices in distribution ... specifically about guidelines for criminal prosecution'' under Japan's anti-monopoly act.

''We want to be sure that price-fixing, bid-rigging and market allocation isn't a profitable way of doing business in Japan,'' he said, suggesting Japanese penalties for such violations ''right now do not effectively prevent it.''

During trade talks in Washington last week, Rill said, Japan agreed to take ''very, very significant steps'' toward more aggressive antitrust enforcement.

Rill pointed to reforms promises by the Japanese, but said ''much more needs to be done, '' including a ''fleshing out of these commitments'' by Japan.

DALLAS (APRIL 9) UPI - Vitamin B might help correct a metabolic defect that can lead to blood vessel disease and increased risk of stroke, researchers reported Monday.

The defect, called mild hyperhomocysteinemia, causes slight-to-moderate increases in homocysteine, an amino acid in the blood. At normal levels, homocysteine is harmless but scientists say even a mildly elevated level can lead to atherosclerosis or hardening of the arteries, which in turn boosts the risk of stroke.

A team headed by Dr. Bruce Coull of Oregon Health Sciences University in Portland studied 99 people at high-risk for strokes because they either had experienced a stroke or ''mini'' stroke or had histories of high blood pressure, diabetes, smoking and atherosclerosis.

Researchers found about one-third of the high-risk subjects had homocysteine levels that were 1 1/2 times higher than 31 healthy volunteers with no history of heart disease of stroke. The proportion of people with eleveated homocysteine levels was about the same among the various high-risk groups.

Homocysteine, like cholesterol, has been shown to damage blood vessels by causing lesions on the vessel walls. If a blood clot forms on the lesion and blocks blood flow to the heart or brain, it can trigger a heart attack or stroke.

Coull said supplements of various B vitamins - biotin, B-6 and B-12 - or folic acid appear to stimulate the normal break down of homocysteine in the body. That avoids the build-up of potentially toxic levels of hydrogen peroxide, a byproduct of the normal metabolic process, which may cause the lesions.

''By lowering the levels, we may be minimizing the ongoing damage to blood vessels and may even reverse atherosclerosis,'' said Coull, whose findings were published in the American Heart Association journal Stroke.

Preliminary results are encouraging from a study using 2 milligrams of folic acid a day to treat 24 patients with the metabolic defect, the neurologist said.

If longer term studies show that folic acid can prevent the arterial damage due to excess homocysteine, Coull said an inexpensive 30-minute test to check levels of the amino acid could be used to screen people whose atherosclerosis cannot be explained by high cholesterol levels.

Once identified, those with mild hyperhomocysteinemia could be treated with either vitamin B complex or folic acid.

Scientists believe a nutritional defeciency or genetic error may cause mild hyperhomocysteinemia, which commonly appears in adulthood and affects men more often that women up to age 50. The disease is equally prevalent in men and postmenopausal women.

It has no symptoms in many individuals, but may cause leg pain due to vascular disease in others.

The milder form of the disease is more common than marked hyperhomocysteinemia, which affects one in every 20,000 births. Children affected by the severe genetic defect have 20 times the normal levels of the amino acid and are prone to strokes.

They often are tall and thin, with long arms and legs, like victims of Marfan syndrome, another inherited condition that also weakens blood vessels and is linked to heart disease.

AUSTIN, TX (APRIL 9) UPI - Last year was the worst year for the thrift industry with losses mounting to $19 billion and the government's cost to clean up the industry will keep rising, a banking industry monitoring service said Monday.

The losses were so staggering, they overshadowed the impressive performance by a majority of the thrifts, a report by Sheshunoff Information Services Inc. said.

Of the nation's 3,083 thrifts, 1,925 institutions or 62 percent, earned $4.4 billion in 1989, it said. But those earnings paled before the $23.4 billion lost by the other 38 percent of the institutions.

Alex Sheshunoff, company president, said despite the profitablity of the majority of the thrifts, many were operating in either overbuilt or overpriced real estate markets. He said a few thrifts have also been weakened further by ill-advised investments in risky assets such as junk bonds.

Institutions in Texas, Arizona, California, New York, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania accounted for three-fourths of the total industry loss. "Each of these states has real estate problems or is home to a few large thrifts that have made questionable investments," Sheshunoff said.

The report said that for the first time since 1985, most of the industry's losses came from S&Ls outside the Southwest. However, Texas thrifts with losses of $6.2 billion lost the most money. Texas was followed by Arizona with a loss of $2.3 billion and California with $1.9 bilion.

The report said the industry's losses took a big bite out of its tangible capital which fell $11.4 billion, or 53 percent, in 1989. At the end of the year, the industry showed a tangible capital to assets ratio of 0.79 percent. The new federally required minimum is 1.5 percent. Tangible capital includes common equity, certain preferred equity and retained earnings.

The report said many of the 524 S&Ls with negative tangible capital and $302.4 billion in total assets, "seem destined for a number of fates ranging from new private owners to being eternally run by the government."

Reflecting the problems confronting the industry, the report said total industry assets dipped 7.6 percent to $1.28 trillion in 1989 from $1.39 trillion in 1988, the only year-to-year decline of the decade. The assets declined because the thrifts sold them to improve their capital-to-assets ratios or that regulators sold them.

Noting the industry's future looked uncertain, Sheshunoff said the thrifts face several risks. They include having to deal with credit risk arising from deteriorating real estate values, interest rate risk posed by holding fixed-rate mortgages, and controlling overhead expenses as interest spreads shrink.

The report also noted the cost of cleaning up the thrifts continues to get bigger. The General Accounting Office, it said, now estimates the cost at $325 billion, or $68 billion more than previously estimated. "In our opinion, this new estimate may prove to be much, much too low," Sheshunoff said.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 9) UPI - Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., called Monday for the Democratic Party to regain its soul by backing a five-year 27 percent cut in defense spending with the money to pay for a wide range of performance-tested domestic programs.

Kennedy, one of the most liberal voices of the party, conceded that having lost five of the past six national elections, Democrats are adrift and in danger of losing all power unless the party reinvigorates itself and rediscovers its liberal principles.

In a speech at Georgetown University, Kennedy argued that a possible ''peace dividend'' from lessening Cold War tensions could give Democrats a unique opportunity to re-establish themselves by pushing for new domestic programs without having to ask for many new taxes.

Among the programs he outlined was national health insurance, which he has championed for years, a drastic expansion of the Head Start education program, a restructing of the nation's school system and a plan to use defense industries to improve the country's transportation and communications systems.

''The Democratic Party can never regain the presidency, or ultimately keep its congressional power, by disguising or repudiating our own basic identity,'' Kennedy said. ''We are, both by history and belief, the carriers of principles and ideas best described as progressive, liberal, activist, concerned and ambitious for our country.''

''If as Democrats we continue to drift - if we run from our values and our enduring beliefs, we can be certain that the voters will not follow us,'' Kennedy said, arguing that the party's central problem ''is the temptation to retreat from the very reasons we are Democrats, the very ground of our party's being.''

Kennedy complained that with the president enjoying extraordinarily high popularity ratings, Democrats are giving too much ground and ''almost conceding a second term to President Bush - or hoping against hope that he stumbles somewhere along the way.''

To regain the initiative, Kennedy suggested the dramatic new push for domestic programs be paid by military cuts.

''We can easily reduce Pentagon spending in real terms by at least 7 percent in 1991 and by 5 percent more, each year and every year through 1995,'' said Kennedy, who recently visited the Soviet Union and was convinced that nation ''is not going back to the past.''

''This would free a minimum of $170 billion for other uses and it would still leave defense spending at the same level as in the post-Korea and post-Vietnam periods,'' he said.

The money, Kennedy argued, should not go to cutting the federal deficit, but should be placed in what he called a ''National Needs Trust Fund'' and then doled out to domestic programs proven to work.

Kennedy conceded that in the past Democrats too often supported programs that, while conceived with the best of intentions, were not effective.

''The problem in the public mind - and the public is right - is that in the past, the money went out, whether or not the results came in,'' Kennedy said. ''Conditioning programs on results is critical to gathering public support.''

''The peace dividend must become a way to start solving problems, as distinct from merely throwing money ay them,'' Kennedy argued.

Kennedy's speech had multiple purposes.

In terms of internal Democratic politics, the address was a pointed call from a party elder for his colleagues to take the offensive.

''We will not succeed by silence, but by speaking out, taking risks for our ideals, and by daring to advance ideas that really will change the status quo,'' he said. ''I have often said that a party must stand for something. And I deeply believe this is where Democrats must stand in the 1990s. It is the only way to win - and it is the right thing to do.''

But the speech was also a warning to Bush, who has said that any ''peace dividend'' should go to cutting the deficit.

Kennedy's suggestions, however, were dismissed as meaningless rhetoric by White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater.

''It's like a freebie for every member of Congress to pick out a number,'' Fitzwater said of the suggested defense cut, adding that reducing military spending was a complicated exercise involving many factors.

NEW YORK (APRIL 9) UPI - The American Exchange Monday reported two membership seats were sold on the exchange for $146,000 and $145,000, both down from the last sale April 4, when a seat sold for $147,000.

A spokeswoman for the AMEX said the current bid for an exchange seat is $140,000, while the offering price is $151,000.

Meanwhile, the Coffee, Cocoa and Sugar Exchange Inc. reported a full membership seat changed hands at $88,000, up $3,000 from the previous sale April 5.

A spokeswoman at the CS&CE said a full membership, which permits trading in options and futures of coffee, cocoa and sugar, is currently bid at $85,000 while the asking prices is $90,000.

In addition, a full membership seat changed hands on the Chicago Board of Trade, the nation's largest futures exchange, for $324,000, up $4,000 from the previous sale April 6.

The CBOT said seats are currently quoted at $315,000 bid, $325,000 asked.

(APRIL 9) UPI - The Irish Republican Army claims responsibility for an attack which killed four Ulster Defense Regiment soldiers this morning in Northern Ireland. Four other people were injured when a land mine exploded beneath a military vehicle near Downpatrick... 20 miles south of Belfast. Officials say the mine appears to have been planted in a drainage ditch and detonated by remote control.

One person was killed and nine were injured early today when fire broke out aboard a ferry off the coast of Wales. It was the second recent blaze on a European vessel. Arson is suspected in both fires. A spokesman for the maritime division of the Transport Ministry says firefighters have Hungary's Democratic Forum followed up yesterday's election victory by starting negotiations today to form a center-right coalition government. There were indications of tough bargaining ahead for the Forum in trying to forge an alliance with the Independent Smallholders Party. Forum President Jozsef Antall said yesterday's balloting was a clear mandate for a return to what he called the ''well-balanced politics of the center.''

LONDON (APRIL 9) UPI - Officials said Monday they quelled uprisings at eight jails where inmates had revolted in solidarity with convicts still occupying part of Strangeways Prison for a ninth day, despite calls to stop them by force.

One of the most serious revolts ended Monday morning at Bristol Prison, 120 miles southwest of London, according to the Home Office, which oversees the nation's 125 penal institutions.

More than 400 inmates had occupied three wings of the facility, where 12 guards and 13 convicts were wounded in clashes during the weekend siege.

Authorities sprayed water over the roof of the prison to prevent rebels from assembling there and deployed police in full riot gear. Guards regained control of two wings and later compelled the surrender Monday morning by about 200 inmates in remaining A-wing, where the rebellion began.

Despite the government's assurance the Bristol uprising had been contained two prisoners remained on the roof.

Officials said they believed the Bristol uprising was incited by convicts who were transferred from Dartmoor Prison, a medium-security facility where a similar uprising occurred Saturday and where at least one person was confirmed dead.

Officials identified the convict found dead inside a torched Dartmoor cell as Barry Goodhall, 27, who had been serving a six-year term for robbery.

Another inmate remained on Dartmoor's roof Monday, shouting that he wanted a transfer because of alleged brutality by guards.

The British Broadcasting Corp. showed footage of massive destruction inside the Dartmoor jail, which was built in 1810 to house prisoners of war during the Napoleonic period.

Inside one multistory wing, all 120 cells had been wrecked, with a mountain of furniture, doors, railings and debris hurled onto an anti-suicide net, causing it to collapse.

Guards said convicts tried to crush them with heavy blocks of masonry.

''One block of granite weighs about one hundredweight (about 110 pounds) and they were pushing down three-foot blocks onto us,'' said John Mawson of the Dartmoor Prison Officers Association. ''It was very trying.''

Authorities also reported some trial proceedings had been disrupted because of difficulties in getting convicts from the disturbed jails. Aside from Bristol and Dartmoor, the other facilities affected were in Stokeheath, Pentonville, Brixton, Hull, Cardiff and Leicester.

Disturbances of varying intensity erupted over the weekend at the jails, where rioting inmates occupied buildings and clashed with prison guards largely to show solidarity with the rebellious Strangeways convicts.

Strangeways officials meanwhile pressed on with their tactics of trying to wear down about 20 defiant prisoners with sirens, chants, loud rock music and low-flying helicopters.

There has been one fatality at Strangeways, where other deaths were reported inside parts of the jail captured on April 1.

Prison Gov. Brendan O'Friel has eschewed using force to take the rest of the facility, apparently after assessing that injuries would be inevitable for anybody advancing into the central rotunda held by the rebels.

But the government came under increased calls to use tough tactics. The Sun newspaper said crack army Special Air Service troops should be used to break the siege. It accused officials of ''fancy psychology'' and said every day the occupation goes on costs the taxpayer more money.

Conservative politician Sir John Stokes agreed, saying rebellions had spread because Strangeways was not crushed the first day.

''If the police have not got the sufficent power to do it, then the best thing to do would be to call in the SAS, and the whole thing would be over in five minutes,'' he said.

Prison authorities issued a stern warning to the nation's 47,000 inmates.

''Firm action is going to be taken in relation to any other incident,'' a statement said. ''No prisoner will gain anything whatsoever from other incidents of this kind.''

DETROIT (APRIL 9) UPI - Internal Revenue Commissioner Fred Goldberg Jr. said Monday this year's tax filing season has gone extremely well, but said the system remains too complicated and admitted he does not prepare his own returns.

"The law is terribly complicated," said Goldberg, a Yale-educated attorney. "It is too complicated for the American public. The American public deserves an easier system. I deserve an easier system, too." Goldberg, who took up his current post last July, said more taxpayers are filing earlier this year and processing is faster.

Computerized electronic filing "has taken off. It's way ahead of what we projected," he told reporters at a news conference before addressing the Economic Club of Detroit. Goldberg said electronically filed returns can be processed more rapidly and contain fewer errors.

The commissioner said the accuracy rate on tax advice given out by IRS personnel has improved to the high 70s this year from the low 60s a year ago.

But he admitted the percentage of taxpayers who get through to the IRS in one or two phone calls has dropped to the low 70 percents this year from about 82 percent last year.

Goldberg blamed the problem on budget cuts and said the upcoming spending plan provides for some needed improvements. "The most important thing in the tax system is to find ways to make it easier for the American public," Goldberg said.

Goldberg said improvements are needed in the handling of pensions and retirement and foreign taxes paid by corporations and the definitions of head of a household and dependency.

"Those (definitions) are too complicated. They are designed to deal with the abuse cases rather than the vast majority of compliant taxpayers," he said.

Goldberg said the IRS is working to persuade its tax collection agents that "heavy-handed tactics don't work," adding, "I think we're making a lot of progress."

BANGKOK, THAILAND (APRIL 9) UPI - Prince Norodom Sihanouk Monday proposed a peace plan that would enhance the U.N. role and divide power between the Vietnamese-back Phnom Penh government and the three-part resistance coalition he heads.

Previously, the resistance fighting for 11 years to oust the Vietnamese-installed Phnom Penh government had demanded that the three rebel groups and Phnom Penh each get a quarter share in any future government.

In a statement signed at his liberated zone at Phum Sereipheap inside Cambodia, Sihanouk admittted his new ''Plan Sihanouk'' to solve the 11-year conflict probably would not receive full support from Sihanouk's resistance ally, the Khmer Rouge, or from the Cambodian government.

''There will be many important points which will be, undoubtedly, rejected by the Khmer Rouge and certain no less important, points which will be rejected by the pro-SRV (Socialist Republic of Vietnam) group of Mr. Hun Sen,'' it said.

Sihanouk proposed a new round of Cambodian peace talks in Bangkok beginning April 15, following the failure of talks in Jakarta in late February. However, Phnom Penh announced last week that Cambodian Prime Minister Hun Sen could not attend due to illness.

Khmer Rouge radio said Monday Hun Sen's illness was a ploy to avoid a U.N. role in a Cambodia settlement.

''Both the Vietnamese bosses and their lackey, puppet Hun Sen, are seriously ill due to the fear that the world will force them to accept the five-point peace proposal of Samdech Norodom Sihanouk or the 16-point principle of the five permanent members,'' the Khmer Rouge radio said.

The three-pronged resistance has been fighting to overthrow the government installed by Vietnam in 1979 when it invaded Cambodia.

Sihanouk's statement proposed creation of a Supreme Council of the Cambodian States composed of six members from the Cambodian resistance's side and six members from the Phnom Penh regime's side.

''The president of the SCCS will chosen by consensus of the 12 members of this SCCS,'' the statement said.

Earlier Sihanouk argued with Hun Sen over the sharing of power, demanding that the three resistance forces based in camps along the Thai border should acquire 75 percent of power in a future government while the Phnom Penh regime, which controls more than 90 percent of Cambodia's land and people, takes the rest.

The statement said Sihanouk proposed the announcement of an immediate cease-fire under U.N. supervision in order to avoid ''placing the cart before the oxen.''

It said the five permanent members of the U.N. Security Council should send a strong armed force to Cambodia before the announcement of the cease-fire.

''These Blue Helmets, whose supreme commander will be Javier Perez de Cuellar, secretary general of the United Nations, will be charged with implementing the cease-fire in place and preventing this or that Cambodian army from continuing to attack the enemy in order to try to take away from it additional territories,'' it said.

In recent days the Phnom Penh forces had dealt a serious blow to Sihanouk's resistance forces by capturing much of the territory it had seized near the Thai border since Vietnam withdrew its army from Cambodia last fall.

Vietnam said it withdrew its last troops from Cambodia in September but the resistance forces have rejected that claim, charging Hanoi left behind thousands of soldiers who now are wearing Cambodian uniforms.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (APRIL 9) UPI - Rainstorms slowed the grisly search for bodies and evidence Monday in the blackened rubble of the Fontana Hotel, where at least six people were killed in a fire last week.

Eight other people were unaccounted for and presumed dead. Firefighters and engineers spent most of the morning waiting out the rain and trying to shore up fractured beams in the gutted lobby of the hotel.

A torrential downpour early Monday dumped more than 3 1/2 inches of rain on Miami, flooding streets and jamming traffic.

''We had a delay getting a construction crew to the scene. The rain slowed them up today,'' Miami Beach police spokesman Tom Hoolahan said.

All six bodies found so far have been recovered, the latest one on Monday. But the body of only one victim has been positively identified, that of a 92-year-old man. Another has been tentatively identfied, and medical examiners said the identities of the others may never be known with certainty.

A yellow flag marked the site where search dogs indicated there may be a seventh body, but that area could not be checked until crews finished shoring up the collapsing building.

While they worked inside, firefighters and federal arson investigators carted out loads of rubble and soggy ash Monday, spread them on the ground then combed through the debris with rakes. They were looking for bits of bone, jewelry, or anything that might help to identify victims or learn what caused the fire.

''They are continuing the slow and tedious process of going through the damage,'' Hoolahan said.

Fire gutted the 102-room Fontana early Friday. Twenty-one people were treated at hospitals for smoke inhalation and anxiety attacks and 150 were relocated by the Red Cross.

Firefighters said it may be several weeks before the cause of the fire is known.

Meanwhile in Orlando Monday, more than 300 guests, some wrapped in blankets, were evacuated from a downtown hotel before dawn because of a smoky three-alarm fire.

There were no reports of injuries.

The blaze started in the laundry room at the Harley Hotel, fire department spokesman Greg Gentleman said.

''The fire was basically contained to the laundry room on the third floor, which suffered extensive damage. The problem was we had heavy smoke on several floors of the hotel. There were 306 guests registered, and all were evacuated,'' he said.

An arson team was at the six-story hotel, investigating the cause of the blaze, a standard procedure for a large fire even though there was no evidence the blaze was deliberately set, Gentleman said.

The laundry room was closed when the fire began. Despite smoke damage, the hotel remained open.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 9) UPI - Damage from Hurricane Hugo is forcing federal researchers to move Aquarius, the world's most sophisticated underwater research station, from the sea floor off St. Croix, the government said Monday.

The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration said although Aquarius was not damaged by Hugo's winds and waves, its surface support buoy was demolished and its on-shore research station was badly damaged.

Nearly seven months after the September 1989 hurricane, there still is no regular telephone service to the station, NOAA spokesman Dane Konop said. Another problem is the loss of access to emergency medical care, he said.

No research is being done in Aquarius, which has a laboratory and living quarters that allow teams of up to six scientists to live and work on the sea floor for several days. The 81-ton station will be floated to the surface and towed to a new location this summer, officials said.

The new research site has not yet been chosen, although it will be in the Caribbean, the Florida Keys or the Bahamas, Konop said. NOAA is seeking recommendations from oceanic scientists about what should be the next base for Aquarius, and research projects should be under way at the new site ''by the end of the fall,'' he said.

Since its completion in November 1987, Aquarius has been based off St. Croix, U.S. Virgin Islands. Projects have included an investigation of massive coral die-offs in the Caribbean - research that NOAA said may provide clues to understanding the causes and effects of global climate change.

The day-to-day operations of Aquarius are coinducted by the National Undersea Research Center at Fairleigh Dickinson University of Rutherford, N.J.

Analysis By: Frederick M. Winship

NEW YORK (APRIL 9) UPI - If a banal and tedious drama is to be turned into acceptable - even thrilling - theater by the magic of music, you need a composer with the talents of Verdi and Puccini or Gershwin and Rodgers.

Unfortunately the musical inspiration of British composer Andrew Lloyd Webber is not potent enough to bring his new pop opera, "Aspects of Love," to any sort of believable life. And there are no name stars in the cast to provide audience appeal.

The $8 million show, which opened Sunday at the Broadhurst Theater, may have $11 million in advance ticket sales but it will never join the ranks of great musicals of the English-speaking theater, no matter how much success it had in London before coming to Broadway.

"Aspects of Love" is based on a slender 1955 novel by a minor Bloomsbury author, David Garnett. In this adaptation by Lloyd Webber with lyrics by Don Black and Charles Hart, the story becomes a pretentious case study of three generations of heartless free lovers.

The show deals with the operatic themes of unbridled passion, ruthless seduction, convenient marriage, homoerotic diversion, cradle robbing and narrowly averted incest, not necessarily in that order.

A half-hearted attempt to explore the emotional toll exacted by this British spinoff of "La Ronde" is expressed in such simplistic terms that 2 1/2 hours in the theater requires as much audience fortitude as a four-hour Wagnerian epic.

The show opens with its "hit" song, "Love Changes Everything," a nice enough melody that seems to be repeated in insufferable variations in virtually every other aria in this completely sung work.

Lloyd Webber is not as successful as Stephen Sondheim in transforming a narrow musical impulse into lyrical expansiveness that occasionally packs the emotional wallop Sondheim achieved in "A Little Night Music."

After a while at the Broadhurst, you long for spoken dialogue as a relief from the commonplace, often awkward lyrical verse that accompanies Lloyd Webber's always well crafted score. Perhaps some of the brilliance of Garnett's novella might then shine through.

"Aspects of Love" deals with the romantic advertures and frustrations of Alex Dillingham, an Englishman who ages from 17 to 35 in the course of the evening. He falls in love with an older provincial French actress, Rose Vibert, but she makes the practical decision to marry his uncle, George Dillingham, a painter who has made his fortune as an art forger.

George and Rose have a precocious daughter, Jenny, and when George suffers financial reverses, Rose returns to the theater and become the toast of Paris. Never one to avoid extramarital affairs, Rose has her backstage romances and a fling with an Italian sculptress, Guilietta Trapani, who once was George's mistress, while continuing a flirtation with Alex, who becomes the obsession of teenage Jenny.

This might be amusing in the hands of a brilliant cast but "Aspects of Love" is also the victim of uneven casting, the fault of director Trevor Nunn, although all the actors and actresses sing well except for Ann Crumb as Rose. She has a shrill voice that is not helped by the general overmiking of this show.

Crumb, an American actress who created Rose in London, does not possess the charm of personality to make her character the sympathetic femme fatale created by Garnett. She is tough, loud and without stature and we cannot believe for a minute that she is capable of playing the classics on stage.

Nor does British actor Michael Ball, as Alex, have the sex appeal the role calls for, no matter how ingratiating his stage presence and forceful his voice. He's beefy but not beefcake.

The real star of the show is the London musical veteran Kevin Colson, who creates a wonderfully complex and attractive George Dillingham, a white-maned roue whose first experience with moral indignation in a long life causes him to have heart failure.

Another fine performance is turned in by another American actress, Kathleen Rowe McAllen, who plays Giuletta with all the allure of sexual abandon that makes her attractive to both sexes. If she could only learn to project her words when singing, she would be even more of an asset to the show.

Walter Charles as Rose's manager, Suzanne Briar as George's housekeeper, and Deanna Du Clos and her sister Danielle Du Clos, as Jenny growing up, are excellent, especially Danielle in her depiction of a blossoming girl experiencing her first romance.

Unlike Lloyd Webber's "Cats," "Starlight Express," and "The Phantom of the Opera," "Aspects of Love" is not overwhelmed by elaborate sets and stage effects.

Maria Bjornson, best known for her European opera productions, has designed a series of largely unlovely scenes ranging from a drab villa in the French Pyrenees to a grimy Parisian theater by combining such elements as weathered brick walls and slatted panels.

Only a backdrop that opens into a jagged horizontal landscape echoing distant mountain peaks has any aesthetic appeal, and much of that is due to Andrew Bridge's lighting. Bjornson's costumes are also pretty awful, especially that transvestite lingerie designed for Rose.

"Aspects of Love" has been described as a new direction and a high minded one at that for Andrew Lloyd Webber. Maybe he'd better stick to cats, masked monsters, and roller skates.

JERUSALEM (APRIL 9) UPI - Jews across Israel began celebrating the holiday of Passover at sundown Monday, welcoming Soviet immigrants and gathering for festive meals to retell the story of their ancestors' exodus from Egypt.

This Passover occurs during a year promising to bring a record number of Soviet emigres to Israel - as many as 100,000 according to government estimates, compared with slightly more than 12,900 in 1989.

Israeli families, army camps and other organizations invited thousands of newcomers from the Soviet Union and other countries for the traditional ''Seder'' meal.

Passover is observed for seven days in Israel and eight days elsewhere. During the holiday, Jews forego leavened bread and instead eat unleavened bread, called matzo, to remind them of their ancestors' hasty flight from Egypt when they did not have time to let their bread rise.

Families clean their homes from top to bottom - some devout Jews even leaf through books - to make sure every corner is free of all traces of leavened bread, known as ''hametz.''

Across Israel Monday, Jews crowded stores for last-minute shopping to buy flowers, candles and other items before hurrying home for the start of the holiday. By late afternoon, the streets of West Jerusalem were empty and shops closed.

Traditionally on the first night of Passover, families and friends gather for the Seder, where the Hagaddah book is read aloud recounting the Jewish exodus from Egypt after 10 generations in captivity.

''This Passover is coming when the days (of) our dreams are becoming real '' said Natan Sharansky, the one-time Soviet refusenik who arrived in Israel in 1986 after serving nine years of a 13-year sentence on Soviet charges of spying.

This Passover, Soviet Jews were seeing ''the real fruits of our struggle '' Sharansky said.

Special emphasis in Israel this Passover has been on Soviet immigrants, many of whom will be attending their first Passover seder.

The Ministry for Religious Affairs has printed 30,000 volumes of Hagaddot with Russian translations, while the Absorption Ministry has distributed thousands more in English, Spanish, Hungarian and several other languages.

More than 15 public seder ritual meals are being held around the country, and some institutions have organized special weeklong programs for new immigrants.

Dozens of model seders were held in the weeks leading up to Passover. At the meal, matzo and other foods including bitter herbs are eaten to commemorate the years in slavery.

During a daylong call-in program on Israel Television and Army Radio, Israelis invited more than 17,000 immigrants who have arrived in recent months to thehr,homes for the festive meal.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 9) UPI - The White House said Monday it was ''total nonsense'' that the administration deliberately underestimated the cost of bailing out the savings and loan industry, but acknowledged it will cost more than it figured.

Press secretary Marlin Fitzwater also said the rising expense could affect future deficit estimates and budget proposals, but repeated, ''We don't have any interest in raising taxes.''

Charles Bowsher, comptroller general, said Sunday that a tax increase is needed to pay for the bailout, which the his GAO estimated last week will cost far more than it initially anticipated.

GAO, the investigative arm of Congress, said in a report Friday that the bailout cost over 30 years should reach at least $325 billion, maybe as much as $500 billion, rather than the $257 billion it had estimated last July.

The 10-year cost, previously estimated by the Bush administration at $166 billion, is projected by the GAO to be about $243 billion instead.

Bowsher, appearing Sunday on NBC's ''Meet the Press,'' charged that the administration's early estimates were artifically suppressed so that it could appear to meet deficit-reduction targets.

''Total nonsense,'' Fitzwater scoffed when asked about the comments at his daily briefing with reporters at the White House.

As for the GAO's new bailout estimate, Fitzwater said: ''We don't have an analysis that would allow us to reject or endorse the GAO numbers, except to say there is clearly going to be additional costs.''

''And those numbers are going to have to be decided upon at some point,'' the press secretary said. ''We are concerned about the rising cost.''

Fitzwater, noting the Bush proposed his bailout plan 18 days after taking office, also said: ''The best thing to do, we believe, is to work speedily with the funds and the process that we now have in place.''

He said, ''A lot is being done. But there is no question that the cost is increasing and we will have to take that into account in deciding future actions.''

LONDON (APRIL 9) UPI - Author Salman Rushdie does not have to emerge from hiding to face blasphemy charges for his novel ''The Satanic Verses'' because Britain's blasphemy laws apply only to Christianity, not Islam, the nation's High Court ruled Monday.

A three-judge panel refused after a four-day hearing to overturn an earlier magistrate's decision that a summons for blasphemous and seditious libel should not be issued against Rushdie and his publishers.

The proceedings were launched by the British Moslem Action Front, an Islamic group trying to use legal means to punish Rushdie, who faces a death sentence issued by the late Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

A Moslem mystic chanted prayers outside the High Court, hoping that the panel would rule in the favor of the front.

Rushdie has been in hiding since Khomeini made his decree on Feb. 14, 1989 over ''The Satanic Verses,'' which many Moslems find offensive for its portrayal of a character they believe is based on their religion's founder the prophet Mohammed.

Moslem lawyers argued ''The Satanic Verses'' attacked God, Abraham, Mohammed, his wives and the Koran, the holy book of Islam. They said Rushdie's book led to the deaths of 30 people during protests in Pakistan and India.

The allegations were denied by Lawyers for Viking Penguin, Rushdie's publishers.

The judges acknowledged in their ruling that blasphemy statutes protecting one religion and not another appeared to be a gross anomaly, but said it was Parliament's function, not theirs, to write the the laws.

Imposing a new statute to include another religion could promote intolerance and encourage rival faiths to take each other to court, they said.

''Widening the laws for blasphemy would cause insuperable problems, and do more harm than good,'' the judges ruled.

Lawyers for the front pledged to contest the decision in the House of Lords, Britain's last avenue of appeal. Ali Azhar said the ruling would ''sadden many millions of hearts in this country and beyond.''

Viking Penguin saluted the decision.

''We believe that in the interests of freedom of expression and of mutual tolerance in this plural, democratic and multi-cultural society, the time has come for the law of blasphemy to be abolished by statute,'' spokesman Bob Gregory said.

''We would have found it inconceivable for the publication of the novel to have led to our prosecution, the more so since overt threats to the life of its author have gone unprosecuted,'' Gregory said.

LONDON (APRIL 9) UPI - Stock prices closed slightly higher in sluggish trading Monday on the London International stock exchange.

The blue-chip Financial Times 100-stock index, which fell 28.6 points last week including 18.4 points Friday, closed up 6.6 points to 2,227.7. The narrower top 30 industrial average added 2.1 point to 1,742.3.

Volume amounted to a light 304 million shares, compared with 580 million shares Friday.

Market watchers noted that Monday was the first day of a three-week trading account, which some said helped to keep large investors sidelined, particularly with an extended Easter holiday weekend approaching.

Analysts said continuing political jitters in Britain and volatility in Tokyo also combined to keep large institutional investors on the sidelines.

The improved performance in Tokyo, where the Nikkei Average climbed 1,119.15 points, or 3.8 percent, to 30,397.93, had little impact on investors.

On the economic front, the Central Statistical Office reported Britain's producer output prices, or prices of manufactured goods, rose 0.7 percent in March from February.

The government agency announced that producer input prices, or prices of raw materials and fuels purchased by manufacturing industry, rose an unadjusted 0.1 percent in March.

Market economists had forecast a 0.4 percent rise in output prices and a 0.9 percent rise in input prices.

Analysts said investors almost totally ignored the report.

Among the most widely traded stocks, Scottish TV fell 22 cents to $7.64 after reporting declining advertising revenues.

B.A.T. Industries gained 19 cents to $12.08 in expectation of a California court's decision on Axa-Midi's bid for one of its subsidiaries, Farmers Group.

Polly Peck climbed 21 cents to $6.25 amid speculation the company may issue a new stock for its U.S. fruit business.

Among the day's other highlights, Rolls-Royce gained 6 cents to $2.99, WPP Group gained 16 cents to $10.15 and Guinness lost 12 cents to $10.43.

Elsewhere in Europe, prices closed broadly lower in active trading on the Frankfurt Stock Exchange.

The closely watched German Stock Index, which lost 20.71 overall last week including 10.55 points Friday, fell 1.2 percent or 23.98 points to 1,923.86.

Traders said prices fell amid investors' nervousness over the currency union with East Germany and what the West German central bank will do about it.

(APRIL 9) UPI - Hungarian Democratic Forum leader Jozsef Antall was virtually unknown a year ago but rose in a few months from librarian to leader of Hungary's most powerful party.

At age 58, he now appears poised to become the country's first democratically elected prime minister in more than four decades following his party's landslide victory in parliamentary elections.

He was born April 8, 1932, in Budapest, the son of Jozsef Antall Sr., who as Hungarian commisioner of refugees is credited with saving the lives of Poles, Jews and allied prisoners of war during World War II.

Antall earned a doctor of philosophy from the L. Eotvos University in Budapest and went to work as a high school teacher and librarian.

He was later promoted to director-general of the Semmelweis Museum, Library and Archives on the History of Medicine, the job he now holds.

Antall was chairman of a revolutionary committee that fought against the invading Soviet troops in the 1956 uprising. After the rebellion was crushed he was arrested and lost his job.

He returned to politics in 1987 as one of the founding members of the Democrat Forum, an organization of dissident intellectuals opposed to one-party rule.

His rise to national prominence came in mid-1989 when he took a leading role in round-table talks with the communist government, which led to the peaceful transition to multiparty democracy.

On Oct. 21, 1989, he was elected chairman of the Forum at its second national convention.

Antall is married and has two sons.

MOSCOW (APRIL 9) UPI - Pepsi-Cola signed a $3 billion deal Monday to more than double production and sales of soft drinks in the Soviet Union in exchange for ships and the rights to sell more Soviet vodka in the United States.

In addition to Stolichnaya vodka, Pepsico Inc. will receive at least 10 Soviet-built ships in exchange for Pepsi under the barter agreement. Pepsico Executive Committee Chairman Robert Kendall called the deal the largest trade pact ever between a U.S. company and the Soviet Union.

The barter arrangement is necessary because Soviet law prohibits foreign companies from taking profits out of the country in hard currency and the Soviet ruble is not convertible into other currencies.

Kendall said Pepsi had been willing to work under a barter system to establish itself in the huge Soviet market.

''If you had a convertible ruble it would solve a lot of problems,'' he said. ''(But) if you wait for a convertible ruble, by the time you have a convertible ruble somebody else will have the market.''

The deal signed in Moscow Monday extends and expands a 1972 agreement for Pepsi to produce and sell soft drinks in the Soviet Union until the year 2000. It covers an estimated $3 billion in total sales of Pepsi in the Soviet Union and Stolichnaya in the United States.

Kendall said about 1 billion servings of Pepsi are now sold each year across the Soviet Union. Pepsi imports and sells 1 million cases of vodka in America through Monsieur Henri Wines Ltd. of White Plains, New York.

''The lines at the (Pepsi) kiosks in Moscow show that Pepsi is a popular drink,'' Kendall said at a Moscow news conference called to announce the pact.

Under the agreement, Pepsi will invest more than $1 billion to upgrade existing facilities and incrase the number of its bottling plants in the Soviet Union from 24 to 50.

The agreement also calls for the development of plastic bottles and cans for soft drinks in the Soviet Union, where the drinks are now sold only in glass bottles, said Anatoly Belichenko, first deputy chairman of the Soviet commission on food and procurement.

Belichenko said after the expansion, ''all big Soviet cities will have a Pepsi bottler. Our goal is by the year 2000, that a bottle of Pepsi will be within a 10-minute walk for all Soviets.''

But the Soviet official added that with the Soviet Union's current per capita consumption of soft drinks at about 7 gallons a year, there was no danger of catching up the the United States, where he said consumers drink an average of 49.4 gallons of soft drinks annually.

''We prefer milk and water,'' he said with a laugh.

Monday's deal also calls for investments in equipment and supplies to allow the opening of two long-delayed Pizza Hut restaurants in Moscow, now expected this summer.

At one point, Pepsi announced that Pizza Hut - a Pepsico subsidiary - would be the first American fast food in Moscow. But McDonalds has since opened its popular hamburger outlet in the Soviet capital, while the Pizza Hut locations remain empty.

Pepsico, based in Purchase, N.Y., is one of the largest consumer products companies in the world and had total sales of $15 billion in 1989, with brand names including Kentucky Fried Chicken, Frito Lay and Taco Bell.

The most unusual part of the Pepsi-Soviet deal involves the American company taking part of its profits in the form of at least 10 Soviet freighters and tankers that will be leased internationally through a Norwegian partner.

''We think we'll have the same success marketing Soviet ships as we have marketing Soviet vodka,'' Kendall said.

He said the agreement shows the type of cooperation that can be achieved between the Soviet Union and the United States.

''I always have believed trade between nations improves understanding,'' Kendall said. ''President Bush and President Gorbachev should during their meetings have Pepsi and Stolichnaya on the table to remind them what good agreements are.''

COPENHAGEN, DENMARK (APRIL 9) UPI - Swedish police told Monday of finding ''bodies everywhere'' and ''many dead children'' in the fire-gutted Scandinavian Star ferry and predicted the death toll from the weekend blaze could reach 200.

About 358 people were rescued from the Bahamian-registered, Danish-operated vessel after it erupted into flames at 2:30 a.m. Saturday during a voyage from Norway to Denmark. Officials in both Norway and Denmark said early evidence indicated the fire was deliberately set, as the vessel's captain has contended.

Fire services in the small west coast Swedish harbor of Lysekil had put out fires on board the vessel by Monday and police and rescue services were able to penetrate most areas of the charred vessel.

''It is a horrible sight. There are many, many children and it seems as though there are many more dead than we were led to believe from the passenger lists,'' said Police Inspector Aimo Laaksonen.

''There are bodies everywhere, piled up high. Parents who have tried to save their children and are lying on top of them. By the end of the operation, we may be looking at 200 dead,'' Laaksonen said.

He added that the death toll was likely to rise because groups were issued tickets but only the group's leader's name was registered, and children under the age of 7 were not registered at all.

''It is chaos. There are so many nooks and crannies on the vessel. There are more bodies at every turn,'' Laaksonen said.

By Monday afternoon the remains of 85 passengers had been recovered from the gutted and blackened ferry. Each of the bodies was tagged by a task force of 10 Norwegian policemen, put into coffins and loaded onto special refrigerated trucks before being sent to Oslo, where identification is to take place.

The Scandinavian Star was still listing at the quayside Monday and cars and articulated trucks on board the vessel could not be removed.

''That will have to come when it's safe to do so,'' Laaksonen said.

In Oslo Monday, a 32-member group of pathologists, dentists and forensic scientists began work to identify the first 43 bodies, which arrived in the Norwegian capital on Sunday night.

Earlier, in Lysekil, Police Chief Anders Onso said identification in many cases may be impossible.

''After such a fire has raced through the vessel, the job will be extremely difficult,'' Onso said.

As the job of removing the dead from the vessel continued, police in Denmark and Norway began their investigations into the cause of the fires that hit the vessel on Saturday morning.

The Scandinavian Star's Norwegian captain, Hugo Larsen, told police at least two fires had been started and said they could only have been set by an arsonist.

Both in Copenhagen and Oslo, investigators seemed to agree that the fire was most likely the work of an arsonist.

''The chain of events clearly indicate that someone started the fires. We are currently checking all known arsonists,'' said Assistant Oslo Police Chief Magnar Aukrust.

In Esbjerg, Denmark police said they were closely scrutinizing documents and passenger lists from a similar fire last September on board the Tor Scandinavia, which burst into flames during a crossing from Britain to Sweden, killing an elderly couple.

Both fires were reported to have started in bed linen outside cabin sections of the two ferries.

Severe criticism of safety measures on board, and of the crew of the Scandinavian Star, continued to flood in Monday as more details emerged of the chaotic evacuation of the vessel, the lack of trained personnel and lack of a common language among the Filipino and Portugese crew.

''Communication is alpha and omega in all safety work. It is vital that the crew are able to communicate with each other,'' said Ivan Leth, chairman of Denmark's School of Seamanship.

The three Scandinavian seamen's unions have repeatedly complained of the practice of registering Scandanavian ships under foreign flags of convenience to permit the use of inexpensive foreign crews.

PARIS (APRIL 9) UPI - The explosion of an Ariane rocket carrying two U.S.-built Japanese communications satellites was caused by a water pipe blockage in one of the four engines, an inquiry into the accident concluded Monday.

Arianespace Chairman Frederic D'Allest, presenting the report of the investigation into the $430 million loss, said Ariane booster launches will be resumed ''by next summer.'' The precise date is to be announced later this spring.

The inquiry board issued 44 recommendations, all accepted by Arianespace and the European Space Agency. Nine major recommendations will be applied before the next Ariane flight is authorized, the report said.

The dramatic failure of the 192-foot, three-stage Ariane-4 rocket on Feb. 22 grounded Europe's space program and ended a string of 17 successes for Arianespace, a European consortium that competes with the U.S. rocket industry. Ariane flight No. 36 blew up two minutes after liftoff from its jungle launch pad on the coast of French Guiana,

The inquiry board report said the explosion occurred following a loss of thrust in one of the rocket's four engines about 6 seconds after launch.

''It is due to an almost total obstruction of the water-feeding circuit of Viking Motor D. Its operation is not at fault. This obstruction is located immediately upstream of the motor, before the water pump,'' the report said.

''The precise cause of the incident is either the untimely presence of a foreign object in the water pipes or a failure in the main water valve. The inquiry board felt that the second explanation was the less probable '' said the report.

Lost with the Ariane 4 rocket was Superbird-2, the second in a series of high-power Japanese communications satellites, and BS-2X, a three-channel direct broadcast relay station.

Superbird's value was reportedly as much as $200 million, while the BS-2X had an insured value of $73 million.

The report said that ''another anomaly occurred at 2.4 seconds after firing of the motors in the propulsion bay of one of the liquid strap-on boosters. A propellant leak (N204) caused an incipient fire at the same time a small combustible leak occurred.''

''At the completion of its research the inquiry board was not able to establish any correlation between both incidents,'' said the statement.

Arianespace now holds contracts valued at more than $2.25 billion to launch 32 satellites, five of which are owned by U.S. companies.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 9) UPI - The honor system of reporting health and safety problems with cosmetic products appears to do a poor job of protecting consumers, a federal report indicated Monday.

In its first assessment of the cosmetics industry in more than a decade, the General Accounting Office raised serious questions about the government's ability to police the booming industry.

''It's incredible that the $18 billion cosmetics industry can urge millions of Americans to apply chemicals to their bodies daily and not be held accountable,'' said Rep. Ron Wyden, D-Ore., head of the House Small Business subcomitteee that requested the report.

GAO investigators found the Food and Drug Administration has no plans to review the safety of 884 toxic chemicals available for use in cosmetics.

In addition, the FDA lacks the power to require the cosmetics industry to perform safety testing. ''FDA officials have found that many manufacturers lack adequate data on safety tests and have generally refused to disclose the results of these tests,'' the report stated.

''Most Americans will be stunned to learn that the government doesn't know whether the cosmetic products used by millions of Americans contain dangerous ingredients,'' Wyden said.

The FDA also has no authority to force a cosmetic maker to report consumer injuries. Under the current voluntary system, only 3 percent of an estimated 4,000 to 5,000 cosmetics distributors have ever informed the FDA of injuries to consumers, the report said.

''Because it is a voluntary program ... FDA will never be able to require reporting from all companies, particularly those that may be least likely to report because they have experienced problems with their cosmetics,'' the investigators wrote.

The types of injuries consumers have reported from cosmetic use include serious eye infections from mascara contaminated with microbes, respiratory problems from hair sprays and neurological damage from hair dyes. Some women have also suffered serious burns when highly flammable products used on their hair caught fire.

Government estimates show less than 40 percent of the nation's 2,000 to 2,500 cosmetics manufacturers are registered with the FDA, said the GAO, which is the investigative arm of Congress. Registration is important because it is the list the FDA uses to decide where to conduct inspections - its primary tool for overseeing the cosmetics industry.

The Cosmetic, Toiletry and Fragrance Association has disputed the government estimates, saying that many of the companies the FDA considers cosmetic manufacturers are no longer in business or are not involved with cosmetics. The trade group had no immediate comment Monday on the GAO report.

Wyden said called the current honor system of regulating the cosmetics industry ''absurd.''

''Anyone could make cosmetics in their bathtub and not have to tell the FDA their location or any information about the product,'' he said.

The Oregon Democrat said he thinks it is time to rewrite the statute regulating cosmetics, which he said has changed little since it was adopted in1938.

LOS ANGELES (APRIL 9) UPI - Striking Kaiser Permanente employees were voting Monday on a contract designed to end a weeklong walkout at Southern California hospitals and clinics operated by the nation's largest and oldest health maintenance organization.

About 11,000 members of Local 399 of the Hospital and Service Employees Union were eligible to vote on the proposed pact at eight separate locations at 11 a.m. and 2 p.m. in voting supervised by the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service.

Union officials expected a heavy turnout of the eligible rank-and-file members - whole fill service, clerical and technical jobs - with results expected to be released late Monday.

Union leaders agreed Friday at the request of a federal mediator to present the contract offer to union members who walked off their jobs April 2 at seven Kaiser Permanente hospitals and 45 clinics. The union leadership presented the contract proposal without recommending either acceptance or rejection.

"(The lack of a recommendation) indicates this offer contains no substantial changes from the one that workers voted down March 30," union spokeswoman Janet Coffman said. "Because of this, the bargaining team did not feel a recommendation was in order."

Union officials said the newest three-year contract offer was only slightly better than the March 30 proposal with salary improvements in the second and third years, "longevity compensation" for longtime employees and a guarantee that workers could use a floating holiday for the Martin Luther King Jr. holiday.

The $44 million March 30 contract offer - which union leaders recommended for approval and members voted down - called for salary increases of five to six percent in the first year and three to five percent pay hikes in each of the second and third years.

Kaiser spokeswoman Janice Seib called the latest offer "a good contract." "It ensures that our employees will continue to be among the highest paid in the industry," she said.

Coffman said that if union members ratify the pact, they could return to work as early as Tuesday. Seib said the strikers, if the contract is approved, probably would return to their jobs on a staggered basis over a three-day period. Union officials said pickets would remain at Kaiser facilities until the results of the vote are known.

Seib said Kaiser, despite the walkout by 11,200 employees, has "managed very well." "We have operated at about 40 percent of normal capacity," she said. "It is actually quieter than normal. People have stayed away. The outpatient load has been lighter than normal."

She said about 1,000 supervisory and management personnel, including many from Northern California Kaiser hospitals, have filled in for the absent employees.

Several hundred patients at the affected hospitals were transferred to other Kaiser facilities and most elective surgeries were canceled or postponed. Employees at Kaiser facilities in San Diego, San Bernardino and Riverside counties and in Northern California are not involved in the walkout, nor were registered nurses at any of the facilities.

Kaiser Permanente serves 6.2 million members nationwide and 2.2 million in Southern California. About 90 percent of its members are enrolled through group plans or through their employers.

Meanwhile, in another medical dispute, 273 nurses at Bakersfield Memorial Hospital walked off their jobs Monday after negotiations broke down Friday. No new talks were scheduled. About 130 nurses began picketing the 294-bed hospital at 6 a.m. Monday. Maureen Anderson of the California Nurses Association said the dispute involved salaries, benefits and work rules.

Hospital spokesman Rick Riley said hospital operations were routine Monday. He said supervisory personnel, a "significant number of nurses" who crossed the picket line and about 50 nurses imported from outside Bakersfield have maintained staffing levels. The hospital spokesman said no patient transfers have been necessary and many areas of the hospital had a full complement of nurses Monday.

(APRIL 9) UPI - Scores of police and troops are searching an area south of Belfast, Northern Ireland, for assailants who killed four British soldiers today with a bomb. Officials say the blast was triggered by remote control as two armored vehicles drove by on a remote country road. The Irish Republican Army claims responsibility.

Officials once again suspect arson in a second recent fire aboard a European ferry. One passenger was killed and nine others injured this morning by a blaze aboard a Danish-owned vessel off the coast of Wales. Authorities say the fire apparently started inside two UNoccupied cabins, leading them to suspect arson.

The official Iraqi news agency reports that Iraq is striking back in a diplomatic dispute with the United States. The agency reports that Iraq is expelling a U-S diplomat in Baghdad in retaliation for Saturday's expulsion of an Iraqi envoy at the United Nations in New York.

More than 300 guests were evacuated from an Orlando hotel before dawn today due to a smoky fire. There are NO reports of injuries. The flames were contained mostly to a third-floor laundry room, but sent thick smoke through several floors. The blaze comes three days after a hotel fire which killed at least six people in Miami Beach.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 9) UPI - President Bush will meet in coming weeks by Venezuelan President Carlos Andres Perez and Bolivian President Jaime Paz Zamora, the White House said Monday.

Press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said Perez will make a state visit April 26, which will include at formal dinner at the White House and a meeting with members of Congress, and that Paz Zamora will make a ''working visit'' May 8.

Perez is to come to Washington following his attendance the day before at the April 25 inauguration of Violeta Chamorro as the new president of Nicaragua.

The drug war is expected to be a major topic during the meeting between Bush and Paz Zamora. The two, along with the presidents of Colombia and Peru, signed a joint strategy at the Feb. 15 drug summit in Cartagena, Colombia.

NEW YORK (APRIL 9) UPI - A former bank official who delivered bundles of cash to Imelda Marcos in New York said Monday he once he flew to Korea as "a satchel man" with $100,000 in cash for the Philippines first lady.

Oscar Carino, 60, said Marcos took $14,000 of it and handed it out to generals' wives for expenses at the funeral of South Korean President Park Chung-Hee.

As Marcos's racketeering and fraud trial began its second week, the former vice president with the Philippine National Bank in New York described how he flew to Seoul with the money to meet the Marcos's funeral entourage after Park was assassinated in October 1976.

"You went to Korea on the orders of Mrs. Marcos's secretary?" asked defense lawyer Gerry Spence. "Yes, they were referring to me as a satchel man," Carino replied. "A bagman?" Spence asked, almost under his breath. "Yes, I carried it close to my legs," Carino answered. "Your legs?" asked the exasperated Spence. "Of course, $100,000 is a lot of money," Carino snapped back.

The trial of Marcos and former Saudi arms dealer Adnan Khashoggi was scheduled to be recessed Monday afternoon for the Passover and Easter holidays and reconvene April 17.

Marcos is charged with racketeering, conspiracy, fraud and obstruction of justice by plotting with her late husband - ousted Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos - to divert money stolen from the Philippine treasury into real estate and art investments in Manhattan and around the world. Khashoggi is charged with obstruction of justice and fraud for helping the Marcoses in their transactions.

Earlier Monday, Carino recalled that Mrs. Marcos's aide, Gliceria Tantoco, had told him her boss had sweet-talked her husband into changing his mind about buying the Crown building in midtown Manhattan.

He said Tantoco told him after the building had been purchased for about $51 million that Mrs. Marcos talked with her husband on the phone from New York. "I asked her, what happened here, I thought the decision was not to go ahead?" "She cried to him," Carino quoted Tantoco as saying.

Carino said Tantoco "told me the president gave the building to her as an 'inheritance,"' explaining the word was loosely translated from the Tagalog word "pamana."

He also described how he set up a secret, $45,000 loan from an American bank for attorney Edgardo J. Angara, now a Philippine senator. Carino didn't say when he arranged the loan, but it would have been before July 1984 when he quit his job and asked the Marcoses for a government position.

He testified that he borrowed the money, and arranged to have a "Mr. Blas" deliver it to Angara. He said the senator had paid it back last August. Closely questioned by Spence about the loan, he replied, "I borrowed that money. It was just an accomodation."

"Don't you know it is illegal to borrow from your own bank in the United States?" Spence asked. "It was not my bank. It was from a U.S. bank," answered Carino.

Last week, Carino described how Mrs. Marcos on visits to New York City ordered Philippines National Bank officials to deliver $100,000 bundles of cash to her. He said the bank went "unreimbursed."

Carino has denied any wrongdoing in his dealings with the late Philippine president Ferdinand Marcos and his wife. The present Philippine government claims Carino received $1.4 million during the couple's reign.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 9) UPI - The United States plans to use leftover funds from a $47 million humanitarian aid program to help begin repatriating the Nicaraguan Contra rebels, White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said Monday.

Fitzwater said the administration hopes to use $3.6 million from the aid package approved by Congress last year to support a repatriation effort overseen by the Organization of American States and the United Nations.

In making that announcement, Fitzwater said the commitment was not made earlier because the administration held out hope of seeing Congress approve a larger request for $30 million in repatriation funds before its recess last week for Easter.

''This is just a stop-gap measure,'' Fitzwater said of the immediate $3.6 million earmarked for demobilization of the U.S.-backed rebels. ''This isn't going to deal with the whole problem.''

The United States has urged the Contras to disarm and return to Nicaragua since the upset election victory in February of opposition candidate Violeta Chamorro, which signaled the end of an almost decade-long civil war.

The Washington Post reported Monday that the various parties to the conflict in Nicaragua - the Sandinistas, Chamorro and the Contras - were on the verge of an agreement on the repatriation of the Contras and their families, mostly from camps in neighboring Honduras.

The agreement, pegged to a formal cease-fire and carrying an April 17 target date, has been complicated by the lack of funds or a U.S. commitment to the OAS to supply needed money to operate the program, the Post said.

However, State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler said the United Nations and the OAS, which jointly will supervise repatriation under the auspices of the International Commission for Support and Verification, had been ''informed of our intention to move quickly to disperse these dollars'' as bridge financing until additional aid is approved by Congress.

''I don't think this comes as a big surprise to them,'' she added.

With the political defeat of the Marxist-led Sandinista regime, a primary goal of U.S. foreign policy in Central America was achieved. Now, Fitzwater said, President Bush is determined to press Congress as soon as possible after the Easter recess for action on the full $300 million in aid he has proposed for Nicaragua.

''We believe the money is needed there, that it is a worthy cause, that the United States has pushed this as an ultimate goal of its policy for years and that we do have a responsibility to make this money available,'' he said.

The aid to Nicaragua, linked by Bush to a $500 million request for Panama, remains bogged down on Capitol Hill despite urgent appeals by Bush. Lawmakers have questioned the amounts and intended uses of the aid requests, which come at a time of mounting competition from the emerging democracies of Eastern Europe and other countries for foreign aid dollars.

"Executives at Paramount think that the interest isn't there for another movie," he said. "There is an interest. That's obvious. But the movie will have to measure up to the standards that Star Trek has set in the past.

"'Star Trek V' (a box-office bust) had four or five plots - all underdeveloped. There just has to be a good, finished script." The hard-core fans are lobbying for a revival of the movies. BEIRUT, LEBANON (APRIL 9) UPI - A Belgian delegation is negotiating with the Abu Nidal Palestinian terrorist group to swap a member of the organization imprisoned in Brussels with Belgian hostages in Lebanon, officials said Monday.

''It is true that one point we have been discussing is the release of Mr. Saeed Nasser, who is imprisoned in Belgium,'' Jan Hollants Van Loocke, director general for political affairs at the Belgian Foreign Ministry, told reporters after meeting with Walid Khaled, spokesman for Nidal's Fatah Revolutionary Council.

Nasser is an Abu Nidal group member jailed in Belgium since 1983 for an attack against a synagogue in Brussels.

The Belgian government official arrived Sunday in Beirut and held three meetings with Khaled, accompanied by the Belgian Charge d'Affairs Jan Kamps.

''It's also true that these discussions are part of a process with the aim of releasing not only Mrs. (Jacqueline) Valente's child and Fernand Houtekins, who is a Belgian, but also the four Belgians who are still in Lebanon,'' Van Loocke said at the group's headquarters in the Mar Elias refugee camp of Moslem west Beirut.

Jacqueline Valente, 31, her two daughters and five other Belgians were snatched from a pleasure boat, Silco, off the Gaza Strip coast on Nov. 8, 1987.

The Belgians included Valente's Belgian boyfriend, Fernand Houtekins, 42, his brother Emmanuel, along with the latter's wife Godelieve Kets and their two children Laurent and Valerie.

Valente's daughters were released in Libya in 1988. She reportedly gave birth to two babies in captivity.

The Fatah Revolutionary Council said in a statement Sunday it had agreed to respond to an appeal by Libyan leader Col. Moammar Gadhafi to free Valente and her family. It said it would free Valente, Houtekins and their baby girl Sophie. The group did not explain why the other baby would not be freed.

No demands were listed for the release of the other four Belgians.

''I am not here to finalize the negotiations, because we are still discussing. We may have meetings in the coming days,'' Van Loocke said. ''We just hope with the cooperation of Khaled himself we could accelerate the process and get a final result as soon as possible.''

The Belgian official said the captors were negotiating other demands than the release of Saeed.

''Other points may be part of the arrangements,'' he said.

Van Loocke revealed that he recently paid at least three secret visits to Lebanon during which he met Khaled.

Khaled said he was satisfied with the discussions since ''they (Belgian authorities) are showing seriousness in dealing with our demands more than ever.''

''We agreed to continue our meetings and discussions to reach a quick settlement concerning the four Belgians and we affirm that priority should be given to the case of our brother Nasser Saeed,'' Khaled said.

NAIROBI, KENYA (APRIL 9) UPI - Ethiopian rebels said Monday government jet fighters killed 73 and wounded 360 in four cluster-bombing raids on the northern port of Massawa.

The clandestine radio station of the Eritrean People's Liberation Front described the bombings as ''a barbaric act'' and said, ''The use of cluster bombs is aimed at inflicting heavy damage on innocent people inhabiting a huge area in Massawa.'' The port city lies 470 miles north of the capital Addis Ababa.

Cluster bombs are anti-personnel weapons that contain multiple smaller bombs that detonate close to the ground, spreading fragments over a wide area.

Diplomats in Nairobi, who asked not to be identified, said they believed the U.S. version of the bombs was only in the possession of the U.S. and Israeli armed forces. But they said the technology was widely known.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman would not comment on who now had the bombs and there was no Ethiopian government comment on the rebel claims.

The EPLF, fighting a 27-year-old war of independence for Eritrea province, took control of Massawa in February, cutting the government's only Red Sea access to northern Ethiopia and isolating a government garrison at the local capital of Asmara, 40 miles to the west.

Further south, meanwhile, rebels of the Tigre People's Liberation Front advancing on Addis Ababa said they had captured the strategic town of Rabel, 112 miles north of the capital. There was no independent confirmation of the claim.

DURBAN, SOUTH AFRICA (APRIL 9) UPI - Union activists erected barricades on township roads Monday to halt public transportation in strife-torn Natal province in support of a work stoppage to protest alleged police bias in the handling of fighting between rival black movements.

Businesses in the Indian Ocean port city and the provincial capital of Pietermaritzburg reported a low turnout of black workers Monday and clashes continued between black factions despite the deployment of extra army units and police in the area.

The Congress of South African Trade Unions called for the boycott of public transportation to protest what it called police bias in the self-governing territory of KwaZulu in favor of the Zulu movement Inkatha, followers of moderate black leader Mangosuthu Buthelezi.

Buthelezi loyalists in KwaZulu, covering large predominantly Zulu areas of Natal, are fighting supporters of African National Congress-linked organizations, including Cosatu and the United Democratic Front.

An escalation of the conflict in the Edendale Valley outside Pietermaritzburg has left more than 80 dead and scores wounded in the past two weeks. Some 3,000 people have died in fighting since 1987.

The conflict over the weekend spread to the township of KwaMakuta, south of Durban, where at least 15 people were injured and one killed. Refugees said the fighting began when KwaZulu policeman shot and wounded a mini-bus driver, who crashed into another vehicle.

At least three other people were killed and dozens injured in the area of Stanger, 40 miles north of Durban, during the weekend after hundreds of Inkatha supporters marched on the local police station and demanded ANC representatives be ordered out of town.

Private relief sources estimated Monday recent fighting has forced nearly 40,000 people into refugee camps.

In Durban's central business district, relief workers reported the presence of 4,000 refugees, mainly from the black township of Umlazi, seeking shelter at bus stops and along vacant lots of land and church centers.

Wendy Annecke, the Natal coastal coordinator of the women's organization Black Sash, has made urgent appeals for clothing, food, medicine and blankets.

Sunday night, about 250 women and children who fled KwaMakuta huddled at the Midwood Gardens opposite the city hall.

Roger Burrows a member of parliament from the white opposition Democratic Party, which monitors the conflict, said nearly 40,000 refugees are scattered across the province. More than 21,000 are in official refugee centers.

NEW YORK (APRIL 9) UPI - Joyce Carol Oates was named Tuesday winner of the annual $25,000 Rea Award for the Short Story, the largest American literary award in this field of writing.

Michael Rea, president of the Dungannon Foundation which has been giving the award since l986, said the award puts Oates ''solidly in the camp of premier short fiction writers, her many and verstatile literary accomplishments notwithstanding.''

Oates, 51, a professor at Princeton University, was chosen by a jury of prominent writers, who cited her for ''her ability to constantly reinvent not only the psychological space she inhabits, but herself as well, as part of her fiction.''

Oates is the author of 20 novels and many volumes of short stories, poems and essays, and a number of plays. Her short stories have been included in the O. Henry Prize collections and she is a member of the American Academy and Institute of Arts and Letters.

NEW YORK (APRIL 9) UPI - The very best in life includes traveling from Chicago by the American European Express, eating at Le Cirque in New York and spending the night at the Ritz Carlton in Washington, D.C., the Punch In travel information service company said Monday.

The electronic information service which surveys restaurants, hotels and travel facilities worldwide granted a rare A-plus grade for the absolute best in dining to a limited number of restaurants, mostly serving French cuisine.

The best tables in the world are to be found at New York's Le Cirque, "absolutely the best" in North America; Jamin, in Paris, "small, select and unsensational but one of the best restaurants in the world;" and, in London, at La Taunte Claire and at L'Arlequin, "two of the best small restaurants in the world, not equaled in America and rarely in France," Punch In said in its regularly updated survey.

Also winning an A-plus ranking are Scaletta, in Milan, Italy, which spearheads the "Italian Nouvelle Cuisine" movement; San Domenico, in New York, dubbed "America's best Italian restaurant;" the restaurant of Paul Bocuse, the chef of international fame who put Lyon, France, on the map as the home of "one of the world's best;" and Louis XV in Monte Carlo where chef Alain Ducasse is described as "a genius."

Only one restaurant on the list combines great taste and affordability: Lee Hamilton's Steak House, in Caracas, Venezuela, where $15 recently bought lunch for two, the survey said.

In the hotel category, Switzerland lives up to its tradition of meticulous hospitality with two hotels earning the A-plus grade: the Suvretta House in St. Moritz, "perhaps the world's best run resort hotel;" and the Noga Hilton in Geneva, which together with its Le Cygne dining room, "proves that modern and Hilton can add up to Geneva's best restaurant and hotel experience."

Another Hilton hotel, the Nile in Cairo, Egypt, is "one of the first and remains one of the best" with its romantic view over the world's longest river.

In Washington, D.C., the Ritz Carlton hotel, a favorite spot of former First Lady Nancy Reagan, is described as "real class, all the way," and ranks among the world's best hotels, together with Montreal's Four Seasons "a name that has become synonymous with the word upscale," while "splendid in every way" is One Devonshire Garden, in Gloscow, Scotland.

To travel in style, Singapore Airlines ranks No. 1 with its "fantastic business and first class," which earn an A-plus grade. One notch below are Virgin Atlantic and Pan Am "on its Latin runs and its First Class

Transatlantic."

For railroads, American European Express offers the "finest train service ever experienced in the United States, including fine cuisine, wines, and service."

Punch In ranks travel facilities, hotels and restaurants from A for excellent to F for failing. Its regularly updated listings are available worldwide through electronic delivery and through syndication in the United States.

LOS ANGELES (APRIL 9) UPI - MCA Inc., reversing the trend of selling movies to pay-cable television, has sold the first-run television rights to ten of its 1989 movies, including "Born on the Fourth of July," to CBS Inc.

Industry executives said the deal, worth an estimated $55 million, will give the third-place network the right to air the movies during the 1990-91 season, about two years before they usually would have been shown on network television.

Besides "Born on the Fourth of July," which won the Academy Award for best direction, the movies covered by the agreement include "Field of Dreams," "Sea of Love," "Do the Right Thing," "Uncle Buck," "The Wizard," "Renegades," "Shocker," "K-9" and "Fletch Lives."

The deal represents the first time in more than a decade that a network has won first-run rights from a major studio. Time Warner Inc.'s Home Box Office and Viacom Inc.'s Showtime-The Movie Channel have become the dominant players in bidding for movie rights.

"This deal may be an indication that the pay cable networks have apparently decided that they don't want to pay premium prices for long-term deals, given the slowdown in the pay cable market," said Paul Marsh, an analyst with Bateman Eichler, Hill Richards.

Entertainment analyst Jeffrey Logsdon of Crowell Weedon said MCA is widely known to have been displeased with changes in HBO's pricing structure. Furthermore, HBO already has deals in place with Paramount Pictures and Warner Bros. and may have decided against paying premium prices for more films.

Marsh also noted that CBS, as the "weak sister" of the networks, needs programming. "They're thinking that a solid slate of films will boost their ratings," he said.

CBS has also been spending top prices recently for sports programming in an effort to boost ratings and attract younger viewers. It spent more than $1 billion for four years of major league baseball, $1 billion for seven years of the NCAA Basketball Tournament and more than $1 billion for four years of the National Football League's National Conference and the 1992 Super Bowl.

Marsh also noted that the deal is only for one year. "So MCA can always go with someone else next year," he said.

SPACE CENTER, HOUSTON (APRIL 9) UPI - A human skull covered with make-believe skin and packed with radiation detectors will ride into orbit Tuesday with the crew of the shuttle Discovery to learn more about the health risks of long-duration space flight.

''It - at least to me as the operator of that experiment - is not a passenger,'' said astronaut Kathryn Sullivan. ''It's a device, a measurement device, actually a very sophisticated one and one that has considerable potential to provide some very significant data.''

The commercially available human skull, called a ''phantom head,'' is used in clinical and research settings to determine dose distributions for radiation therapy. The one aboard Discovery was first launched into space aboard the shuttle Columbia last August and again aboard Atlantis in February.

The skull is part of an experiment package, known as a detailed supplementary objective, or DSO, that contains a number of devices to measure radiation aboard the shuttle.

''It is, in addition, only one of 11 devices in that experiment,''

Sullivan said. ''So its significance to us, or the fact that this sensor happens to be shaped like a human head, is really pretty trivial.''

The 11-pound skull, known as a RANDO Phantom, was sliced into sections and implanted with more than 100 radiation detectors and nuclear track detectors.

The skull then was reassembled and covered with a plastic material made to resemble human skin both in composition and appearance. Covering the skull with a skin-like substance allows more accurate measurements of radiation exposure.

Once the shuttle is in orbit, the skull, contained in a cloth bag, and other sensors will be mounted on the right wall of the orbiter's lower deck to monitor radiation in the crew cabin.

Scientists are trying to gather data on the radiation environment in space and what effects, if any, it might have on shuttle astronauts and crew members of future long-duration flights to the moon or Mars.

''When you have an energetic particle encounter an object, whether it's a piece of metal or a human being ... it deposits its energy and, as part of the process involved in that, can create secondary particles or rebounds of other particles scattered off the original impact,'' Sullivan said.

''That depositing of energy in a human organism and the effects of the secondary particles can have significant biological effects, and we need to understand those if we're going to commit crews to long-term flights.''

The two previous shuttle flights of the skull involved missions launched into orbits carrying the spacecraft farther away from the equator than normal.

Discovery's flight to launch the $1.5 billion Hubble Space Telescope will place it in a 380-mile circular orbit, the highest ever for the shuttle. At that altitude, the astronauts will be exposed to slightly higher radiation levels than usual.

Discovery pilot Charles Bolden said he had no ''undue concern.''

''That's something the biomedical world has looked at and they have given me the feeling they feel relatively comfortable we're not going to be exposed to any undue added amount of radiation that might cause some problems,'' he said.

''I realize they could be wrong, but it's not something I'm overly concerned about. I feel the gain from this is far greater than the risk.''

CHICAGO (APRIL 9) UPI - Grain and soybean futures were mixed but mostly lower at the close Monday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Corn rallied during the final minutes and was unchanged to fractionally higher. Locals and commercials were featured buyers on the rally. Corn had underlying support from steady to firm basis levels, but gains were limited by reports of a slight increase in country movement.

Wheat gave up its early gains and closed moderately lower. News the Soviet Union was in the market for 300,000 tons of wheat was supportive, and there were bids from three other countries for around 340,000 tons. But when the buying dried up, prices retreated and were lower across the board at the final bell.

Soybeans made session highs at midmorning, then sold off in quiet trading. South American soybeans and soybean meal are beginning to move which kept Chicago soy complex futures on the defensive.

The entire floor was pressured by the forecast for rain and warmer temperatures across the Grain Belt through midweek.

At the close, corn was unchanged to up 1/2, soybeans down 3 3/4 to up 2, wheat off 2 to 4 1/2 and oats down 1 1/4 to 2.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 9) UPI - Greyhound Lines filed a $30 million racketeering suit against its striking union Monday, claiming the violence surrounding a 39-day walkout is a union effort to take by force what workers can't win in negotations.

In announcing the legal action, Greyhound executive Anthony Lannie said the parent Amalgamated Transit Union and its locals involved in the strike ''have tried to use violence to achieve an inflated financial settlement they could never win at the bargaining table.''

''There is a word for that - extortion,'' Lannie told a news conference.

The union promptly denied the charges, accusing the company of using the violence of ''common criminals'' as an excuse to refuse to negotiate.

''The company's charges ... are further evidence that Greyhound management is using these tragic events as a smokescreen to avoid participating in good faith negotiations,'' said James La Sala, president of the Amalgamated Transit Union.

He called the suit ''a desperate attempt by Greyhound management to avoid its legal and moral responsibilities to negotiate in good faith.''

In addition to damages, the federal court suit under the controversial Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act also asks the court to bar the union from further violence and seeks the removal of two union local presidents - in Atlanta and Charlotte, N.C. It claims those leaders are responsible for much of the violence, which has primarily taken the form of shots fired at buses.

Fred Ingram, the president of Local 1493 in Charlotte, said, ''I don't know what they are talking about here really. We haven't condoned any violence.''

''None of us have done any of these things he has accused us of doing,'' Ingram said.

But Lannie said the trial would show deep union complicity in the violence.

The suit was filed in Jacksonville, Fla., Lannie said, because that was the site of the most damaging incident, a March 11 shooting in which seven passengers were injured. The company is seeking a jury trial.

According to the compliant, strike-related violence has cost the company $10 million. Under the RICO law, it can seek triple that cost in damages.

''Greyhound has been forced to bring this suit to protect itself, its employees, the communities it serves and the traveling public against a concerted and unlawful assault by the defendants,'' the eight-count complaint said.

According to the suit, there have been 26 shooting incidents involving Greyhound buses and three incidents where shots were fired into company terminals since the strike by the company's more than 9,000 employees began March 2. The only death has been that of a picketer crushed by a bus driven by a strikebreaker.

Lannie said the most recent incident occurred Sunday night near Fort Worth Texas.

The suit charges a large number of specific offenses it claims show a pattern of racketeering activity.

Named as defendants were the International Amalgamated Transit Union; the Amalgamated Council of Greyhound Local Unions; Edward Strait, president of the council; Smith Williamson, council secretary-treasurer; Ingram, president of Local 1493 in Charlotte, as well as the local itself; and Rafael Rivera, president of Local 1600, the Atlanta-based local itself, and 16 other members of the local in Florida.

During his news conference, Lannie denied reports Greyhound is for sale. He also repeated that the company would not return to the bargaining table until there have been seven days with any violence.

LOS ANGELES (APRIL 9) UPI - Jury selection in the retrial of former McMartin Pre-School molestation figure Raymond Buckey was at least temporarily put off Monday when his attorney called in sick, complaining of a recurring back problem.

Superior Court Judge Stanley Weisberg did not officially postpone jury selection by late morning, but the process did not get under way as scheduled.

Another attorney may be appointed to assist Danny Davis in the case, but it seemed unlikely that jury selection would commence Monday even if that were to occur.

Raymond Buckey, 31, a former teacher at the now-closed Virginia McMartin Pre-School in Manhattan Beach, faces retrial on eight molestation counts stemming from the alleged sexual assaults of three of his pupils.

Buckey and his mother, Peggy McMartin Buckey, 62, were acquitted of 52 other molestation counts Jan. 18. The eight counts Buckey is being retried on were charges on which jurors deadlocked.

The January verdicts climaxed a nearly three-year, $13 million trial, the longest, costliest criminal trial in U.S. history.

About 400 potential jurors were summoned to court this week for the selection of a panel of 12. Each of the jurors was to be asked to fill out a questionnaire on whether a lengthy trial would create an economic, career or health hardship.

Once jury selection begins, the process of finding a panel is expected to take about three weeks. Opening arguments are expected to begin in mid-May.

The case stems from the alleged molestations of children at the now-closed pre-school in Manhattan Beach from 1978 until 1983.

Buckey, who spent nearly five years in custody after the case was first filed in 1984, but who is now free on a $3 million property bond, has steadfastly maintained his innocence.

Prosecutors say his retrial will be shorter than the original court proceedings and should last no longer than nine months.

When originally filed, the case involved hundreds of molestation charges against Buckey, his mother and five other former McMartin Pre-School teachers. However, five of the defendants and scores of charges were dismissed in 1985 and 1986 before the first trial on grounds of insufficient evidence.

The dismissed defendants included Buckey's elderly grandmother, Virginia McMartin, who founded the preschool, and his sister, Peggy Ann Buckey.

NEW YORK (APRIL 9) UPI - Dow Jones & Co. Monday reported first-quarter income of $24.86 million or 25 cents a share, down from $200 million or $1.99 a share in the year-ago quarter. Revenues for the quarter were $427.06 million in 1990, a five percent increase compared with $406.76 million in the same period of 1989.

The first quarter of 1989 included a one-time gain of $164.1 million, or $1.63 a share, from the sale of the financial service firm's investment in a cable operating company. Excluding the one-time gain, first-quarter income for 1990 amounted to a 30.6 percent decline compared to the year-ago quarter, the company said.

"Operating income of the company's business publications segment increased 20.2 percent from the 1989 first quarter," the company said. "But this was more than offset by a 34.6 percent decline in information services operating income, which was attributable mostly to losses from a foreign exchange trading service being introduced by the company's Telerate Inc. subsidiary."

"The comparison between first-quarter information services operating results in 1990 and 1989 is distorted by the inclusion this year of 100 percent of the expenses of developing The Trading Service," the company said. "As a result, Dow Jones' 1990 first-quarter operating income was $62.03 million, a 22 percent decline from $79.75 million in last year's first quarter."

The information services segment, which includes the results of Telerate and the Dow Jones Information Services Group, reported revenue of $184.33 million, a nine percent increase compared with the year-ago period.

Revenue for the business publications segment, which includes the Wall Street Journal and its overseas editions, Barron's magazine and other publications, rose 3.5 percent to $189.3 million.

Ottaway Newspapers Inc., Dow Jones' community newspapers segment, reported first-quarter operating income of $4.47 million, a 39.3 decline from the first quarter in 1989.

MOSCOW (APRIL 9) UPI - Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev's new presidential council Monday called for more economic and political sanctions against Lithuania to fight the republic's desire to secede.

The conservative Soyuz group of legislators in the Supreme Soviet proposed at the same time that the Lithuanian parliament be dissolved and direct central rule be imposed on the rebellious republic.

In the republic's capital Vilnius, Lithuanian President Vytautas Landsbergis accused Moscow of blocking efforts to end the crisis over independence by refusing to participate in ''talks or even preliminary good will contacts.''

The official news agency Tass said Monday Gorbachev's presidential council a new advisory body somewhat similar to a Cabinet, declared that Lithuanian actions took the crisis ''into a deadlock.''

''The present leadership of Lithuania with its anti-constitutional actions and escalation of illegal measures blocks the possibilities of getting out of the crisis,'' Tass said in its report on the council meeting.

The council said that the republic's leaders ''aggravate the situation and bears the full responsibility for it.''

''The members of the presidential council, using the mandate of the Third Congress of People's Deputies, came to the conclusion of the necessity of taking further measures of economic, political and other character aimed at the defense of the U.S.S.R. constitution,'' Tass said.

Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze told the Novosti news agency on his return from a U.S. visit that he felt the Bush administration agreed that a ''reasonable solution'' should be found ''so that both Gorbachev could continue perestroika to its logical end and the Lithuanian people were happy.''

At the Supreme Soviet, the Soyuz group of about 300 conservative legislators proposed Monday that the Lithuanian parliament be dissolved and new elections be called. It also proposed direct presidential rule of the republic.

The nationalist Sajudis movement dominated Feb. 24 elections for Lithuania's new parliament and the Legislature declared the republic's independence at its first meeting.

Gorbachev has since attempted to exert more central control in the Baltic republic and Soviet troops have occupied several buildings on behalf of a branch of the local Communist Party loyal to Moscow.

''The social and political situation in the republic remains difficult and has a marked tendency toward further aggravation,'' the Soyuz statement said. ''It is characterized by the dismantling of the Soviet socialist order, by the attempt to break existing ties to the U.S.S.R. and by further polarization in the republican population ... on political and ethnic grounds.''

The Soviet government newspaper Izvestia reported Monday that 50 people were arrested in the Ukraine for participating in unsanctioned rallies to support the Lithuanian declaration of independence.

Izvestia said authorities were investigating 58 Parliament deputies in the Ukraine for supporting the rallies.

NEWARK, NJ (APRIL 9) UPI - Jazz great Sarah Vaughan was carried to her grave in a horse-drawn hearse Monday as friends and neighbors remembered her as an unequaled talent who never forgot her roots.

Vaughan, who began singing as a young girl in the choir of Mount Zion Baptist Church in Newark, died last Tuesday of lung cancer at her home in Los Angeles. She was 66.

''She never forgot us, she never got that high,'' said Ruth Christmas, who grew up with Vaughan, destined to become known as the ''Divine One.''

A two-hour public viewing was held in a Newark funeral home where about 1,000 people paid their respects, followed by a 1 1/2-hour service at the 500-seat church.

''To hear Sarah, it was hearing the angels sing,'' said the Rev. Harry Jones, a gospel singer who called Vaughan his inspiration. ''She was a grand lady.''

Among the mourners at the service were Billy Eckstine, who first heard Vaughan sing at an amateur show at Harlem's Apollo Theater, and Ralph Copper, then and now the emcee of the Apollo.

''Sarah Vaughan was the greatest singer that has ever been,'' Cooper said. ''She was just fabulous and she will never be duplicated.''

On a dare at age 18, she sang ''Body and Soul'' at an amateur night at the Apollo and caught the attention of Eckstine, then a jazz singer with pianist Earl Hines's band.

''She walked on the stage as a little girl and she just opened her mouth up and that was the end of it,'' Cooper said. ''She took over completely.''

That appearance led to an offer to join Hines's orchestra as a second pianist, with a vocal career quickly following. Her first hit record was ''It's Magic'' in 1947.

In his eulogy, the Rev. Granville Seward said Vaughan once told him her style developed as she tried to imitate the horn sections of the bands she appeared with.

''She tried to do what the horns did ... and that comes from the church, because when you can't say it with words you have to moan,'' he said. ''She watched over her audience, almost wearing herself out, but as long as they kept applauding, she had something else to give.

''Last Tuesday God put the last piece in Sarah's puzzle and her voice is hushed now, (but) a voice born in heaven is singing again,'' he said to the filled church. At least 500 more people heard the service over loudspeakers in the streets outside.

Newark Mayor Sharpe James said Vaughan was a symbol of hope for all of those who followed her at Newark's Arts High School.

''For 50 years because of Sarah every boy and girl who attended Arts High could dream great dreams, that they could be number one,'' he said.

Following the service, Vaughan's coffin was placed inside a glass-paneled, 105-year-old hearse drawn by two white horses for the 3.5-mile trip to the Glendale Cemetery in Bloomfield for burial.

Flags flew at half-staff throughout Newark during the week, with purple bunting draped on City Hall.

Vaughan was born in Newark on March 27, 1924. She began her music studies at 7 and was a church organist at 12. Her mother sang in the choir and her father played guitar.

''They say she was a legend of her time, but she was a legend for all time '' said Schomamar Kelliehan, 16, of Newark, who cut school to stand outside the church during the service.

ISLAMABAD, PAKISTAN (APRIL 9) UPI - U.S.-backed Afghan guerrillas said Monday they shot down a government jetfighter and captured its pilot in heavy fighting around the besieged eastern garrison town of Khost.

Resistance sources said the guerrillas used a Stinger missile to shoot down the aircraft, but there was no word on the condition of the pilot.

Official Kabul Radio said government forces have killed 310 guerrillas in the past four days in retialatory attacks at Khost, 15 miles from the Pakistan border.

Resistance sources said four guerrillas were killed and 43 wounded in intense bombardment by government aircraft on their positions outside Khost.

The reports could not be independently confirmed.

The guerrillas, based mostly in Pakistan and backed by the United States and some Middle East nations, control about 90 percent of Afghanistan's territory.

The sources said no government planes have been able to land at Khost airfield since the guerrillas captured the strategic Toora Ghara ridge overlooking the facility. They said all government supplies were being dropped into the town by parachute from transport planes flying at high altitude to avoid rebel ground fire.

The Moslem guerrillas have been fighting the Kabul government since 1978, when a coup brought the first of series of communist rulers in Kabul. The Soviet Union invaded Afghanistan in 1979 to support the government against the guerrillas, but withdrew its more than 100,000 troops in February 1989.

ELIZABETH, NJ (APRIL 9) UPI - John Emil List slept in his Victorian mansion the night after killing his wife, elderly mother and three teenage children, a prosecutor said Monday.

Assistant Prosecutor Eleanor Clark used a report by Dr. Laurence Simring, a psychiatrist who examined List for the prosecution, in her cross-examination of the defense's psychiatrist, Dr. Sheldon Miller.

The report included references to List spending the night at home with the bodies of his family and eating breakfast the next day before making his escape, which lasted almost 18 years.

Clark drew from Miller that List engaged in target practice in the weeks before the Nov. 9, 1971, killings.

List, 64, faces multiple life sentences if he is convicted of five counts of murder. But his lawyer, Elijah Miller Jr., hopes to convince the jury in Union County Superior Court that List was driven by a religious obsession and should not be held legally responsible.

Under cross-examination, Dr. Miller acknowledged that List acted deliberately, making it unlikely that the defense can meet New Jersey's strict standard for a diminished capacity defense.

But Dr. Miller kept repeating that List felt he had no choice, given his financial problems and the disintegration he saw in his family. ''The weighing of pros and cons was not in his repertoire at that time,'' Dr.

Miller said.

List was trying to make a living as an insurance salesman after losing a number of jobs as an accountant.

His wife Helen, 45, suffered from tertiary syphilis, which had affected her eyesight and her brain. She was treated for syphilis in the late 1940s which she apparently contracted from her first husband, a soldier who died in Korea.

List's boyhood as the son of an authoritarian father in a strict German Lutheran community in Bay City, Mich., made both venereal disease and the prospect of being unable to support his family especially horrible to him, Miller told the jury earlier.

At the time of the killings, List had gone into the insurance business after losing a middle-management post with the Xerox Corp. in Rochester, N.Y. His wife was almost bedridden and had become addicted to alcohol and tranquilizers.

After shooting his family and tidying up his heavily mortgaged home, List left notes for relatives and his business partner, and a five-page confession for his pastor.

He covered his tracks so carefully that the bodies were not discovered for 28 days, by which time List had begun a new life in Denver as Robert P. Clark.

He was arrested last year in Richmond, Va., where he was living with his new wife, who he met through the Lutheran church.

A friend of his new wife reported List to police after seeing a story about the killings on a TV show, ''America's Most Wanted.'' The program featured a bust of List altered by an artist to show how he would have aged.

The case is expected to go to the jury this week.

MINNEAPOLIS (APRIL 9) UPI - Soo Line Corp. and a Canadian Pacific Ltd. subsidiary completed their previously announced merger Monday. At a special meeting Monday, the merger was approved and adopted by the holders of more than 96 percent of Soo Line's shares.

As a result, the shares of Soo Line common stock outstanding before the merger have ceased to be outstanding. Each share held by public shareholders has been converted, subject to the exercise of dissenters' rights, into the right to receive $21.50 in cash, without interest.

The merger was the second step in a two-step transaction. The first step was the acquisition in January by Soo Line Acquisition Corp. of more than 40 percent of the outstanding Soo Line shares pursuant to a cash tender offer at $21.50 a share. Prior to that acquisition, Canadian Pacific owned about nearly 56 percent of the outstanding Soo Line shares. Canadian Pacific expects to continue to operate Soo Line under its current name.

Soo Line is a Minneapolis-based holding company involved in transportation and real estate. Soo Line operates the tenth largest rail system in the United States through its principal subsidiary, Soo Line Railroad Co. Canadian Pacific is an international company dealing in transportation and waste services, energy, forest products, real estate and hotels, and telecommunications and manufacturing.

WICHITA, KS (APRIL 9) UPI - Learjet Corp. would be sold for $75 million to a U.S. subsidiary of Bombardier Inc. of Montreal under a definitive agreement announced Monday by its parent companies. The sale is subject to bankruptcy court approval as part of the Chapter 11 proceedings involving Learjet's parent, Integrated Resources Inc. of New York.

Under the agreement, the new Bombardier subsidiary would assume the liabilities associated with ongoing operations of Learjet, including outstanding loans under Learjet's $38 million line of credit. Learjet would retain certain liabilities, including those from certain equity participation agreements and lawsuits.

Bombardier and Integrated said they would not comment further on the sale until court authorization is received. Integrated, which sought protection from creditors Feb. 13 in New York, said last summer it was seeking a buyer for the Wichita maker of business aircraft.

The day before the bankruptcy filing, Integrated said it would sell Learjet to Gulfstream Aerospace founder Allen Paulson for $60 million. Paulson later dropped his takeover bid for Learjet because of uncertainties surrounding Integrated's bankruptcy filing.

Although Learjet was not part of Integrated's bankruptcy filing, the Chapter 11 procedures were expected to delay its sale. Learjet, which also has an aerospace division, employs 2,750 people worldwide. Its sales reached $264 million in 1989, up 20 percent from the previous year.

Learjet was founded in the late 1950s to manufacture a small business jet. The company now makes three light jets and one medium jet, and is a subcontractor for commercial and government programs.

Bombardier Inc. is a Canadian corporation that designs, develops, manufactures, and markets transportation equipment, motorized consumer products, and civil and military aerospace products. EAST BERLIN (APRIL 9) UPI - East Germany's prime minister-designate announced Monday he would present a list of 24 cabinet ministers to Parliament for approval Thursday on a proposed broad-based coalition government.

Christian Democratic leader Lothar de Maiziere, expected to become the first non-communist prime minister in the country's 40-year history, said the CDU would occupy 11 ministerial posts. He said the Social Democrats would occupy seven such posts, one more than they were originally offered.

De Maiziere, during a break in the coalition talks, said the remaining cabinet posts would be divided between the Alliance of Free Democrats with three posts, the German Social Union with two and the Democratic Awakening with one post.

The agreement on the cabinet list followed tough bargaining over the weekend between the political parties involved in the bid to form the broad-based coalition government.

The Social Democratic Party insisted it should get seven posts but was only offered six initially.

In a surprise announcement, de Maiziere said Monday that acting SPD Chairman Markus Meckel would be nominated as Foreign Minister. The CDU and the DSU had hoped to fill that post with one of its members.

As expected, the center-right DSU, sister party of the Munich-based West German Christian-Social Union, was given the Interior Ministry post. The party's General Secretary, Peter-Michel Diestal, was named for the job.

The agreement was seen as a victory for the SPD, which got only 21 percent of the vote in March 18 elections, East Germany's first free election since the nation came into existence after World War II. The SPD will also get the trade, finance, labor and social affairs, communications, farm and research and technology ministries.

Pastor-turned politician Rainer Eppelmann, who heads the Democratic Awakening, one of the trio of parties in the conservative alliance, is to get the post of disarmament minister. Since the 1970s Eppelman has been known as an ardent peace activist.

TRENTON, NJ (APRIL 9) UPI - Allstate Insurance Co. filed its long-promised lawsuit against New Jersey's new car insurance law in federal court Monday, claiming the plan to lower "obscene" rates is unconstitutional because it takes away insurance company profits without due process.

"This law is an unfair and unconstitutional effort to avoid facing up to the real problems of auto insurance in New Jersey by punishing Allstate and other insurers," Allstate attorney Floyd Abrams said after the suit was filed.

"Filing this suit is in the best interests of Allstate's customers, shareholders and New Jersey employees," Abrams, the nationally recognized constitutional expert who represented The New York Times in the famous Pentagon Papers case, said.

The suit, filed in U.S. District Court in Newark, attacks a portion of the law that requires insurance companies to pay off $1.4 billion of the $3 billion debt of the Joint Underwriting Association, New Jersey's financially troubled pool for high-risk drivers.

Insurance companies would not be allowed to pass the expense on to customers, and those who object would not be permitted to stop writing auto policies in New Jersey unless they also abandon their other insurance business in the state.

That amounts to a seizure of insurance company property - insurance profits - without due process, and is a violation of the Constitution, the company argued.

The action also keeps Allstate from making a "fair and reasonable" profit and violates the contract Allstate signed as a former member of the JUA that protected it against JUA liabilities, according to the suit. The law also attempts to punish insurance companies, making it a "bill of attainder," which is barred by the Constitution.

The payoff of the JUA debt is the key to eliminating the $222 annual surcharge all insured motorists in New Jersey pay to subsidize the pool. Lawyers, doctors and bodyshops - all blamed by Florio for contributing to high insurance costs - would also help the payoff with a $100 annual license fee increase, and motorists would pay vehicle registration fees $15 to $50 higher depending on the value of their vehicle.

Named in the suit were Gov. Jim Florio, Attorney General Robert Del Tufo, and Acting Insurance Commissioner Jasper Jackson. The suit seeks an eventual injunction barring enforcement of the law, but not an immediate order barring it from taking effect while the suit is in court, Abrams said.

Also sought is an order that Florio not communicate with the state insurance commissioner in any way adverse to Allstate's interests, a request Abrams said was prompted by an earlier letter to Jackson asking that Allstate be kept from passing on legal costs of the suit to customers.

Florio, speaking with reporters after retired Metropolitan Life executive Samuel Fortunato was sworn in as state insurance commissioner Monday afternoon, said he was not worried by the suit.

"This lawsuit is going to depend upon the perception of whether the state of New Jersey has the right to protect drivers in New Jersey from obscene automobile rates," Florio said.

"I'm confident the court is going to uphold the right of New Jersey to protect the interest of (motorists)," he said. "The law is clearly constitutional because the state has the authority to regulate the insurance industry."

A plan to lower car insurance rates was one of Florio's key promises in the race for governor last year, and he made an immediate push for the law after taking office Jan. 16. The plan was signed into law March 12, less than two months later.

Allstate, of Northbrook, Ill., had threatened to sue over the plan even before it passed the Assembly or Senate, but Florio said his attorneys assured him it would withstand any legal challenge.

The law was challenged on narrower grounds last month by Twin City Insurance Co., a subsidiary of the Hartford Insurance Co. that wanted to leave the state in anticipation of losses it feared the JUA payoff could bring.

Twin City attempted to simply turn in its insurance license, but a trial judge and eventually the state Supreme Court said that it must file a plan for orderly withdrawal and cannot leave without Insurance Department approval. That process, which the court said was required in previous law as well as the new law, can take up to five years.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 9) UPI - Yields for 13-week and 26-week Treasury bills dipped Monday at the government's weekly auction.

The Treasury Department auctioned $8.2 billion of 13-week bills at an average discount of 7.80 percent, down from 7.83 percent at last week's auction. The latest yield was the lowest since Feb. 26, when the auction yielded 7.72 percent.

The government also sold $8.2 billion of 26-week bills at an average discount of 7.80 percent, down from 7.81 percent last week and the lowest rate since March 5, when the rate stood at 7.79 percent. The discount rate understates the actual yield to investors.

The investment, or coupon-equivalent, rate was 8.07 percent on the 13-week bills at an average price of $9,802.80 per $10,000 face value. The investment rate on the 26-week bill was 8.23 percent at an average of $9,605.70 per $10,000.

HOLLYWOOD (APRIL 9) UPI - Paul Hogan has wrapped up his latest movie for Paramount, ''Almost an Angel,'' which co-stars Elias Koteas and Linda Kozlowski, the blonde beauty who appeared with the Australian star in both ''Crocodile Dundee'' films.

''Almost an Angel'' was produced and directed by John Cornell from a screenplay written by Hogan, who also acted as executive producer of the romantic comedy, which is due for release during the Christmas holidays.

This time around Hogan plays an oddball burglar who recovers from an accident believing he has been sent back to earth as an angel.

FROM SOLO TO VOICESTRA

Singer Bobby McFerrin will make the East Coast debut with his human voice orchestra ''Voicestra'' May 17, 18 and 19 at the Boston Opera House.

After the pressure of working solo for several years, the Grammy-winning pop and jazz improviser said he realized he wanted to work with other singers in a spontaneous group setting.

CAJUN FILM

Emily Lloyd, James Earl Jones and Faye Dunaway will star in ''Scorchers,'' a contemporary feature film set in the steamy southern bayou country of Cajun Louisana.

Scheduled to begin production Apr. 24 on locations in Louisana, ''Scorchers'' is the dramatic story of two women who face their loss of innocence over the course of a single night in the small town of Bayou La Teche.

The picture will be co-produced by London-based Goldcrest Films and Richard Becker of Producers Representative Organization.

DISNEY RELEASE

Buena Vista Pictures Distribution has acquired the rights to the independently produced movie ''Martians!!!'' and retitled it ''Spaced Invaders.''

''Spaced Invaders,'' directed by Patrick Read Johnson and produced by Luigi Cingolani, will be released Apr. 27 under the Touchstone Pictures banner, a Disney subsidiary.

The comedy follows the misadventures of a group of mixed-up Martians who mistake a 50th anniversary of the rebroadcast of Orson Welles' ''The War of the Worlds'' on a local radio station as an invasion summons. The film stars Douglas Barr and Royal Dano.

ALL-STAR SPECIAL

Rosemary Clooney's ''Fifth Annual Singers'' Salute to the Songwriter'' anniversary concert will feature some of the country's biggest stars.

The Apr. 24 concert, to be held at The Los Angeles Music Center, is to benefit the Betty Clooney Foundation for Persons With Brain Injury.

Joining Rosemary on stage will be Liza Minelli, Linda Ronstadt, Bea Arthur Bob Hope, Tony Bennett, Debby Boone, Ginger Rogers, the Hi-Lo's and others. Among the honorees will be composers Marvin Hamlisch, John Kander and Fred Ebb and Jimmy Webb.

CAST REPLACEMENT

Lolita Davidovich has replaced Elizabeth Perkins, who withdrew for health reasons, in a starring role in ''The Object of Beauty'' for Avenue Pictures.

Co-starring with Davidovich are John Malkovich and Andie McDowell, along with Peter Riegert and Rudi Davies, for director Michael Lindsay-Hogg.

Davidovich earned her movie spurs playing the title role in ''Blaze'' opposite Paul Newman.

JAZZ MASTERPIECES

Columbia Records' important Jazz Masterpieces series is out with its 11th set of reissues in four years. The latest batch of seven releases includes more works by Miles Davis, Billie Holiday and Roy Eldridge, and opens the Columbia vaults on Bix Beiderbecke for the first time.

So far, more than 3 million units of the first 84 releases have been shipped to stores. The next wave, due in July, will feature Chet Baker with strings, more Beiderbecke, saxophonist Charlie Rouse, and a new collection of scat singers.

CARIBBEAN JAZZ

The eighth annual Floating Jazz Festival aboard the SS Norway this October will be filled with good vibes. Vibraphonists Lionel Hampton, Gary Burton and Terry Gibbs will be aboard the Oct. 20 sailing with their own bands, and are certain to perform together at least once during the cruise.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 9) UPI - Charles Keating, former chairman of the failed Lincoln Savings and Loan Association, testified on his own behalf Monday and again blamed federal regulators for the nation's thrift crisis. "In Arizona, they virtually destroyed the (thrift) industry by taking it over " Keating told U.S. District Court Judge Stanley Sporkin.

The former thrift executive's testimony came during a pretrial hearing on a government motion to dismiss a lawsuit Keating filed last May seeking to regain control of Lincoln.

The Irvine, Calif., thrift, owned by Keating's American Continental Corp., was seized by regulators last April after it was found to be operating in an "unsafe and unsound" manner. Protecting Lincoln's depositors from losses is estimated to cost taxpayers as much as $2.5 billion, making it the nation's costliest thrift failure.

Keating initially testified in January after being called to the stand by government attorneys. During two days of testimony, he denied any wrongdoing and said Lincoln could have been saved had federal regulators not intervened.

"My battle is to get Lincoln back," Keating told reporters outside the courtroom. "I ran a perfectly legitimate savings and loan. It's hogwash to say otherwise."

Federal regulators have filed a $1 billion fraud and racketeering suit against Keating and other American Continental executives involved in Lincoln's failure.

Under questioning by Sporkin, Keating continued his philosophical debate that regulators, not those they regulate, are responsibile for the mounting losses of the thrift industry. Keating said regulators crippled the thrift industry by tightening direct investment rules, which had been loosened in the early 1980s.

Last week, the federal General Accounting Office estimated the cost to taxpayers of bailing out the thrift industry at between $325 billion and $500 billion.

Keating said those losses could have been diminished had federally insured deposits not been used to finance speculative thrift ventures. "On a pure platform, I think it is a wrong use of government funds," he said, adding that his companies used government-insured deposits to finance real estate ventures because it was permitted under their charter.

Keating also said the amount of fraud and dishonesty in the thrift industry has been overblown and accounts for an insignificant amount of the industry's losses.

While Keating testified, another former American Continental executive refused to do so, invoking Fifth Amendment protection against self incrimination.

Jack Atchison, a former American Continental auditor, did not appear in court as a defense witness. Atchison joined Keating's company after serving as senior partner in the Phoenix office of the accounting firm Arthur Young.

The accuracy of Arthur Young audits on American Continental transactions has been questioned during a congressional investigation of Lincoln's failure.

TBILISI, GEORGIA, USSR (APRIL 9) UPI - Thousands of Georgians staged nearly round the clock rallies Monday and turned their government headquarters into a massive shrine to the victims of last year's Soviet military crackdown in Tbilisi.

About 60,000 people gathered at the Georgian National Stadium and vowed to support the Baltic republic of Lithuania's bid to break free from Soviet rule.

''This Union of Soviet Socialist Republics is nothing but a modern incarnation of the Russian Empire,'' Georgian National Independence Party leader Irakli Tsereteli told the stadium crowd.

At least 150,000 mourners held an all-night vigil outside the government building and about 30,000 demonstrated near the Soviet army's Transcaucasian command post in separate protests earlier in the day.

Patriarch Ilya II, head of the Georgian Orthodox Church in one of the world's oldest Christian nations, led a prayer service that culminated the nightlong vigil.

The rallies were held on the first anniversary of the tragedy April 9, 1989, when Soviet troops wielding small shovels and tear gas cannisters brutally supressed a peaceful nationalist demonsration in front of the government headquarters.

Sixteen people were killed during the attack, four later died in a hospital and soldiers shot one man to death for allegedly violating the state of emergency imposed by Moscow in the wake of the violence last year.

Georgians also include in the toll the unborn child of a pregnant woman slain in the crackdown.

The rallies ended Monday with long lines of people still waiting into the evening at the government building to file past what had become a giant flower-covered shrine to last year's dead.

Hundreds of wreaths and banners blanketed the building's grounds. Mourners placed candles among the flowers, crossed themselves and knelt to pray before photographs of the victims displayed at the base of a tall gold cross.

Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev sent the Georgian people a message Sunday expressing regret for the military crackdown, which the Congress of People's Deputies condemned in a Dec. 24 resolution.

The crowd at the stadium, home to the Georgian national soccer team that last month withdrew from all Soviet competition, jumped to its feet and gave a prolonged standing ovation to show support for Lithuania's March 11 declaration of independence.

Roars of approval rocked the stadium when one speaker cried: ''If the Kremlin brings troops to Lithuania the Georgian people will stage a general strike and paralyze this republic.''

Georgian nationalist leaders said, however, they do not agree with the Lithuanians' unilateral bolt for freedom and will follow the Estonian example of a phased transition to independence.

Most of the dozens of speakers at the earlier all-night vigil addressed the throng in their native Georgian tongue, but an Estonian visitor from the northern Baltic region swept by secessionist fever drew cheers up and down Tbilisi's Rustaveli Avenue when he said in Russian: ''Forgive me for using the language of the enemy.''

The tens of thousands of mourners outside the Georgian Council of Ministers building sank to their knees and thrust candles and clenched fists against the night sky at 3:30 '.a. as the exact anniversary of last year's tragedy approached.

The crowd parted to let Georgia's white-bearded patriarch slowly make his way to the podium under a large wooden cross and an icon to the mother of God.

''The 9th of April for us is a grief and a sorrow,'' the patriarch said at the massacre site. ''We have gathered here to bless their souls and spirits. We need today as never before to be together in friendship and love.''

The huge throng sang Georgian national songs and ancient battle hymns led by a choir of men and boys in black gowns and skullcaps embroidered with brilliant gemstones flashing in spotlights and television camera strobes.

After the patriarch's prayer service, the mourners burned in effigy Gen. Igor Rodionov, commander of the Soviets' Transcaucasian forces at the time of the crackdown last year.

Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze flew to his native Georgia immediately after the tragedy and oversaw the firing of the republic's leadership.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 9) UPI - The European consortium Airbus Industrie said Monday that the Turkish flag carrier Turk Hava Yollary will acquire five Airbus A340-300 four-engine widebody aircraft and took options another five.

Terms of the contract with THY Turkish Airlines were not disclosed. List price for the A340-300 is $100 million without engines, which normally represent 20 percent to 25 percent of the plane's total cost.

The aircraft will be powered by CFM International CFM56-5C2 engines and seat 280 passengers in a three-class layout. Deliveries will begin in 1993.

Airbus Industrie, based in Toulouse, France, said the planes will enable THY to increase its capacity on long- and very long-range international routes.

THY currently operates a fleet of 13 Airbus A310s and has one additional aircraft on order, according to Airbus Industrie of North America Inc., the company's commercial office in Washington.

(APRIL 9) UPI - Greyhound Lines said today it has filed a suit charging the union representing its striking workers with organizing violence against the company. The federal racketeering suit... filed in Jacksonville, Florida... claims the Amlgamated Transit Union has used co-ordinated criminal actions to ''cripple Greyhound financially.'' The suit claims 26 shooting incidents involving Greyhound buses since the strike began March 2nd.

A Cincinnati art gallery turned over to prosecutors today copies of 174 photos from a controversial exhibit to be used as evidence in an obscenity case against the gallery. The Contemporary Arts Center has been indicted for exhibiting allegedly obscene photographs by the late artist Robert Mapplethorpe. The copies turned over to the court allow the exhibit to stay open at least until Friday.

The jury was seated this morning in Charlotte, North Carolina, for the federal perjury trial of P-T-L minister Sam Johnson. Johnson is charged with lying to the federal grand jury that indicted P-T-L founder Jim Bakker BAY'-kehr in 1988. Johnson could face 60 years in prison if convicted of the charges stemming from his alleged lapse of memory about 10-thousand dollars in ''hush money'' paid to Jessica Hahn.

The White House today announced that it plans to use three-point-six-Million dollars in leftover humanitarian Contra aid to begin returning the rebels to their native Nicaragua. News secretary Marlin Fitzwater says the money is left over from a 47-Million dollar aid package Congress approved last year. He called it ''just a stop-gap measure.'' The Contras have been re-settling in Nicaragua since the opposition was elected to lead the country in February.

LIMA, PERU (APRIL 9) UPI - Novelist and presidential hopeful Mario Vargas Llosa was locked Monday in an uphill battle with the surging campaign of Alberto Fujimori, who rose from obscurity to challenge the popular author's political aspirations.

Unofficial projections by public opinion firms working for the news media showed Vargas Llosa with 29 percent to 33 percent of the vote and Fujimori 27 percent to 30 percent, neither achieving the 50 percent needed to win the election outright.

The National Election Council, which runs elections in Peru, plans to release official vote totals only in 15 to 20 days.

The projections are based on vote totals from polling tables selected as representative of various areas of the country and were accepted as largely accurate by the presidential candidates.

Alfred Torres of the polling firm Apoyo said the political climate favored Fujimori and his Change '90 campaign in a second-round election tentatively set for June 3.

''If the second round were tomorrow, the emotional factor would prevail and Change '90 would be favored,'' he said, but added a campaign in which Fujimori defines his policies could change the results.

It was hard to label Fujimori in the politicat spectrum. During the campaign he purposefully left his views and proposals vague.

Fujimori would have a majority if he picked up the support in the second election from voters who cast ballots Sunday for Garcia's party and two leftist coalitions, all of whom are political opponnts of Vargas Llosa.

Deputy Jose Barba Caballero, a member of the political commission of Garcia's party who appeared to win a Senate seat, said the party would meet Tuesday to decide on its position for the second round. But he indicated he would support Fujimori and rejected Vagas Llosa's call for talks to reach an agreement and avoid a second-round election.

''If the second round is eliminated Mario would be president and Mario does not mean peace for Peru, Mario does not mean a national project for Peru,'' he said. ''Unfortunately, at the beginning (of the campaign) he began an open campaign of confrontation, of division with the other parties.''

The campaign of Fujimori, 51, peaked in the final two weeks after ruling party candidate Luis Alva Castro and others strongly attacked Vargas Llosa's announced economic ''shock'' program to tame inflation that reached a historic high of 2,775 percent in 1989. Peru also is suffering an economic depression.

Vargas Llosa had called for a first-round victory to give him the mandate for a severe program of economic reforms that would free foreign exchange rates, drastically cut the size of government and subsidies of basic products and stimulate a free market.

Fujimori was vague about his program during the campaign and refused to answer repeated, specific questions election night about his proposat for pulling Peru out of its economic quagmire.

He promised to stimulate agriculture, small- and medium-sized mines and the nation's industry but would not say how he would accomplish those tasks. He said once the nation's economy was revived, structural economic changes could be made.

BY VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (APRIL 9) UPI - Tommy Chong of ''Cheech and Chong'' is on his own these days, but he hasn't left the 1960s behind in his new movie ''Far Out Man,'' a comedy about a burned-out eternal hippie musician.

It's Chong's first solo picture since he and ex-partner Cheech Marin attained fame and riches in the 1970s and 80s.

Playing the title role in ''Far Out Man,'' the Canadian-born Chong still holds to the credo of the days of his youth.

''The hippie era was really a beautiful time,'' he says. ''The young people of this country were united then. Hippies weren't concerned with the color issue.

''We literally stopped a big war and promoted love, peace and happiness. But mostly, the 60s was a period when a lot of people celebrated together and partied together purely for the sake of having a good time.''

Chong, obviously still likes to have a good time and he tries to make sure all around him are also enjoying themselves.

His new film is a classic case of nepotism, with more than a dozen jobs filled by members of his extended family.

Chong alone accounts for three positions - writer, director and star.

His daughter, Rae Dawn Chong, plays a principal role, as does her husband C. Thomas Howell. In addition there is Chong's wife Shelby, sons Paris and Gilbran Chong, and daughter Robbi Chong.

''It's an old Chinese custom,'' said the half-Chinese Chong. ''You find any Chinese business and you will see all kinds of relatives employed. If you're going to indulge in nepotism, I say do it right.''

In addition to his family, Chong employed stars Martin Mull, Paul Bartel, Judd Nelson, Michael Winslow and, in a brief scene, former partner Cheech.

Essence of the story: Chong, as ''Far Out Man,'' cannot adjust to the 1990s and is finally brought around by Rae Dawn and Paris, abetted by Howell and Shelby, who plays a character named Tree. All of them, including Chong, play themselves or characters very much like themselves.

Chong thought it would be pretentious to label the Cinetel Films release ''A Tommy Chong Film.'' So it is advertised as ''A Tommy Chong Attempt.''

Due for release May 4, ''Far Out Man'' was some two years in the making.

''We wrapped principal photography in three weeks, then we shot second unit for about two years,'' he said, laughing. ''We worked around Tommy Howell's schedule.''

Among the most difficult assignments in the $1 million-plus film was Chong's financial negotiations with members of his family. Howell agreed to defer his considerable salary in favor of participation. The other stars accepted token salaries.

''Rae Dawn was the tough one,'' he said. ''She wanted her salary up front. Demanded it. She didn't want to hear stories about family loyalty. I tried to haggle but she said, 'If you want me, you pay me.' We couldn't afford her in the budget, so it came out of my own pocket.

''My son Paris, who's 15, kept threatening to turn me in to the juvenile authorities for working him overtime after the schoolteacher left the set. Claimed I was violating the child labor laws.

''He was a problem too because he grew four inches during filming. In one scene he walks through a door and comes out the other side four inches taller and more than a year older.

''Even so, the best deal was made by my wife Shelby. She gets all the profits. All! She's my accountant.

''It wasn't easy getting my family to work in the picture. Shelby isn't a comedienne and the only reason she did it was because I begged her. Rae Dawn had other things to do, so I had to lure her with money.''

And how did it feel not to have Cheech at his side throughout production?

''It felt very strange and uncomfortable,'' Chong said, downing a soft drink. ''I miss him terribly. It was closer than a marriage, a working partnership. I tried to get him back, but he wants to see what he can do on his own.

''I understand that. Cheech wanted to change his image. I found myself a lot of times feeling lonely. Eventually maybe we'll work together again. I never really wanted to break up. I still feel breaking up was a mistake.''

Because of the split, Chong wanted to test the waters on his own. He was determined to make a low-budget picture to avoid the possibility of losing money in a film without Cheech.

''I didn't want to lose money for anyone,'' he explained. ''Coming in under $2 million almost guarantees I have a fail-safe situation. It's already in profit on TV and cassette sales.

''With a Cheech and Chong movie I could have gone for an $8 million budget. I didn't want that money put into it to avoid a big loss. So we're doing a lot of publicity.

''We've tested the picture and realize it's not going to be another 'Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles,' but it will make a profit.''

NEW YORK (APRIL 9) UPI - The dollar held its own and even edged up slightly against the Japanese yen in New York dealings Monday as world central banks intervened without apparent conviction after a weekend Group of Seven meeting.

Currency traders said the Federal Reserve sold dollars in New York to support the Japanese currency, acting on a mildly worded G-7 final statement pledging coordination in world currency markets. European central banks intervened too, but their concerted action was no barrage.

Late-morning Fed intervention pushed the dollar down to a low of 156.60 yen from the opening price of 156.95 reached in Asian and European trading but the dollar later recovered. In late trading, the U.S. currency was fetching 157.90 yen, up a bit from Friday's rate of 157.65 yen.

"We're closing with a stronger dollar," said Harris Trust & Savings Bank vice president and analyst Earl Johnson. However, "I wouldn't say the yen is out of the woods yet," he added, citing "very vague" G-7 results.

The central banks "did catch the market by surprise," said Creditanstalt Bankverein vice president George De Luna. "But once they pulled out and stopped intervening, the dollar-yen (exchange rate) started climbing." In any event, he said, "it would take something more than just intervention to get (the rate) back down, in my mind."

Saturday's G-7 meeting in Paris yielded less than a resolute pledge to halt the yen's decline, and traders reported moderate intervention. Dollar-selling was much heavier after G-7 finance ministers agreed in September to take action to keep the dollar from climbing higher.

U.S. players saw light central bank action in Far East and European markets, but they "were largely unswayed by it and gently bid the dollar higher," said currency analyst Marc Chandler of the MMS International advisory firm.

Participants now are "testing the central banks' resolve," Chandler said, but action is likely to be restrained durign this pre-Easter week, so the real test of G-7 resolve could be put off until next week.

Against other currencies the dollar mainly eased. In late trading it changed hands at 1.6930 West German marks, off slightly from 1.6950 Friday.

Other dollar rates: 1.4978 Swiss francs, off from 1.50; 5.6835 French francs, off from 5.6950 francs; and 1,243 Italian lire, off from 1,245.25. The British pound declined to $1.6340 from $1.6420.

European trading left the dollar mainly lower. In Frankfurt it closed at 1.6918 marks, off from 1.6955, and it declined as well in Zurich at 1.4955 Swiss francs, down from 1.4965.

In Paris the dollar ended at 5.6795 French francs, off from 5.7010, and in Brussels it was at 34.94 Belgian francs, down from 35.08. In London, the pound rose to $1.6395 from $1.6385. In Milan, the dollar rose to 1,248.90 lire compared with 1,248.05.

In Tokyo trading, the dollar declined by 1.02 yen to close at 156.45 compared with 157.47 at the end of last week. Traders said the Bank of Japan intervened as it had been doing before the G-7 meeting.

Republic National Bank in New York closed cash gold at $376.50 an ounce, off from $380.75 Friday. The New York Commodity Exchange settled gold at $376 an ounce, off from $380.70. In Zurich, gold fell to $375.50 an ounce from $378, while in London gold declined to $375.25 an ounce from $377.75.

Republic closed cash silver at $5.12 an ounce, down from $5.18. Comex spot silver closed at $5.104 an ounce, off from $5.164. Zurich silver was unchanged at $5.15 an ounce, but the metal rose in London to $5.15 an ounce from $5.13.

CICERO, IN (APRIL 9) UPI - The schoolmates of Ryan White attended a memorial service before classes Monday and mourned the death of the youth who spent much of his life fighting AIDS and discrimination against its victims.

White, 18, died Sunday at Riley Hospital for Children in Indianapolis after a long struggle against acquired immune deficiency syndrome, which robs the body's immune system of its ability to fight infection and disease.

Hamilton Heights High School students, returning from a weeklong spring break, attended the morning service in the gymnasium for their dead classmate.

''One of the things that made me feel best is that he enjoyed coming to school,'' principal Steve Dillon said of White after the ceremony.

White was diagnosed with AIDS in December 1984 after contracting the virus from a blood-clotting agent used to treat his hemophilia. He was originally given six months to one year to live, but survived more than five years.

''He lived so much longer than anyone thought,'' said Heather Hall, a junior at Hamilton Heights High. ''The last month of school he wasn't there very often. But he was a fighter, and we thought he'd pull through.''

Reporters were barred from attending the brief memorial service and from approaching students on school grounds.

Dillon said classes would be held Wednesday, the day of White's funeral, but students would be excused to attend the 2 p.m. service at Second Presbyterian Church in Indianapolis.

Although White lived in Cicero and was not Presbyterian, officials Monday said the funeral site was chosen because it could accommodate the anticipated crowd.

''It can certainly handle over 1,000,'' said Brian Buchanan of Flanner and Buchanan Mortuary, the funeral home handling arrangments.

The Rev. Ray Probasco, a Methodist minister and friend of the White family will preside at the ceremony.

During the five years between the diagnosis and his death, the teenager traveled the world to help lessen fear and panic about AIDS.

''It is quite rare that someone so young can make such a major difference in such a short lifetime. Ryan White, however, was no ordinary young man '' said New York City health commissioner Woodrow Myers, who was Indiana state Board of Health director when White was diagnosed with AIDS.

''He was chosen to lead us all out of ignorance and hatred of people with AIDS, and in doing so he led us to knowledge and to compassion,'' Myers said.

White was hospitalized March 29 with an AIDS-related respiratory ailment that ultimately proved fatal. Upon his death, praise for White and condolences for his family came from across the country.

President Bush, who last Tuesday planted a tree in White's honor in Indianapolis, issued a brief statement from Camp David, Md., saying his ''death reaffirms that we, as a people, must pledge to continue the fight, his fight, against this dreaded disease.''

A number of celebrities, including singer Willie Nelson and football player Howie Long, visited White's room during his stay, although the teenager was heavily sedated and on a respirator.

Singer Elton John, a close friend of White's, arrived in Indianapolis April 2 when news of the youth's condition broke.

He has remained in the city, dedicating a song to White during his performance Saturday at Farm Aid IV and Monday helping with funeral arrangements, said Pam Perry, spokeswoman for the Indiana University Medical Center, which includes Riley Hospital.

Singer Michael Jackson, another friend of White's, visited Ryan's mother, Jeanne, Sunday at the White's home in Cicero, about 25 miles north of Indianapolis.

Other details regarding the funeral, including possible celebrities in attendance, were not available Monday, said Perry.

''I'm pretty sure that (Elton John is) going to stay,'' Perry said.

She said her office had received several telephone calls from other celebrities, whom she declined to name, asking about the funeral.

''But no one has made any kind of commitment. All I can say at this time is that we've had many inquiries from people around the country,'' she said.

Visitation was scheduled for Tuesday at the Flanner and Buchanan Mortuary in the Indianapolis suburb of Carmel and for Wednesday morning at the Second Presbyterian Church.

While the family will allow reporters to attend the visitations and the funeral, photographers will be allowed at neither, Perry said. The burial Wednesday at a cemetery in Cicero will be closed to reporters, she said.

In 1985, White drew national attention when parents and administrators fought his effort to enter the seventh grade at Western Middle School in Russiaville, Ind. In April 1986, a court cleared White's return to class permanently and he finished the year without incident.

White, his mother and his younger sister Andrea moved to Cicero in 1987. Later that year, students at Hamilton Heights High School, who had been educated about AIDS before White's arrival, welcomed him with open arms.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 9) UPI - The Energy Department has agreed to spend more than $1 billion to clean up toxic and radioactive contamination at its nuclear weapons facility at Fernald, Ohio, the Environmental Protection Agency said Monday.

The EPA said it has signed a proposed consent agreement with the Energy Department that requires four specific cleanup actions to be carried out at the Feed Materials Production Center, all under the EPA's supervision.

The agency said the consent agreement had been submitted to the Justice Department for final approval, which is expected within 15 days. The public then will have 30 days to comment on the cleanup.

EPA officials said the consent agreement outlines one of the biggest cleanup operations ever required under the federal Superfund toxic waste cleanup program.

The Fernald plant, a 1,050-acre facility near Cincinnati, has become heavily contaminated by toxic and radioactive wastes generated during several decades of operations involving the production of radioactive uranium metal for the government's nuclear weapons program.

In addition to releasing tens of thousands of pounds of uranium dust into the environment during operations, Fernald was used as a storage site for other radioactive wastes that have leaked into ground water beneath the plant.

The plant, now operated by Westinghouse Co. for the Energy Department, was shut down in the spring of 1989 because of operational and environmental problems.

Under the proposed consent agreement, the Energy Department agreed to:

-Remove contaminated ground water from under the plant site, an operation that is now under way, the EPA said.

-Stabilize structurally unsound tanks containing radioactive wastes.

-Collect contaminated rainwater runoff from the waste pit areas.

-Prevent the spread of contaminated ground water under a nearby stream called Paddy's Run, which is off the plant site.

The consent agreement also calls for the Energy Department to produce ''decision documents'' laying out cleanup plans for specific problem areas at Fernald, with the administrator of the EPA to have final say over all disputed issues. The cleanup plans are due on a staggered schedule running through March 1992.

The Energy Department estimates the consent agreement will require cleanup efforts costing $950 million over the next 12 years and environmental studies costing $80 million.

EPA officials said the consent agreement would replace a 1986 ''compliance agreement'' between the agency and the Energy Department that did not specify any cleanup operations.

BONN, WEST GERMANY (APRIL 9) UPI - West German authorities Monday arrested a couple on charges that for 24 years they leaked top-secret information to East German intelligence services, the West German daily newspaper Bild reported.

The mass-circulation daily said the couple, whom it identified only as Joachim-Paul P., 45, and his wife, Giesela, 42, were charged with treason.

The paper said Joachim-Paul, a senior executive in the printing offices of the West German air force in Cologne, had access to top secret mission plans for tactical and stratigic air force operations.

Giesela, a Lufthansa employee, began delivering the illegal information supplied by her husband shortly after she married him when she was 18, the daily said.

In the article released in advance of Tuesday publication, the daily said the couple delivered the information to East German intelligence services.

The paper quoted an official of the West German security department as calling the affair ''a very, very serious case of high treason.''

Bild also said that several former East German agents are now working for the Soviet Secret Service or KGB.

The paper said the last message the couple received from the agent running them read: ''You can continue your work in peace. Your information from the Ministry of National Security has been stored away.''

NEW YORK (APRIL 9) UPI - The stock market closed mixed Monday in the second lightest trading day of the year as many investors were sidelined by the holidays this week.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which fell 4.05 Friday, rose 4.95 to close at 2722.07.

Among broader market gauges, the New York Stock Exchange composite index rose 0.57 to 187.35 and Standard & Poor's 500-stock index rose 1.29 to 341.37. The price of an average share gained 11 cents.

Declines led advances 821-664 among the 1,996 issues crossing the NYSE tape. Big Board volume was 114,970,000 shares, compared with 137,557,410 shares traded Friday. The lightest volume of the year remains the 114,790,000 shares traded Mar.12.

The Passover holiday, which begins after sundown Monday, and Good Friday, when major exchanges will be closed, served to keep many players on the sidelines. Also contributing to the light trading was the fact that many investors were on the sidelines awaiting first-quarter earnings reports.

No economic reports were scheduled until Thursday and Friday, and earnings data should only begin to be released this week, so there were few trading incentives on the horizon, analysts said.

An unpleasant earnings surprise came just before midday, when the blue chips backed off their highs after Goodyear Tire and Rubber, a component of the Dow industrials, eased on reports that it expected to post a sharp drop in first-quarter profits. The broad market then turned lower in the early afternoon, drifting in quiet trading.

In the early going, computerized program buying, used to profit on price spreads between stocks and stock index futures, boosted prices in an otherwise sluggish market.

Also boosting stocks early on, analysts said, was a rebound in bank stocks which took a beating Friday on fears that regulatory reviews of their lending practices, especially in real estate, may put bank earnings under pressure.

"The recovery in bank stocks came amid a feeling that the selling was overdone Friday," said Jerome Hinkle, a trader with Sanford C. Bernstein & Co. "This should already be factored into the market."

But others were surprised by the renewed buying of banking issues. "A lot of bank stocks made new lows last week," said Rodd Anderson, vice president of equity trading at Shearson Lehman Hutton Inc., "and I think the market should be more nervous about that than it is."

On the trading floor, Ames Department Stores was the most active issue, down 1/4 to 3 1/4. Late reports said the company expects a 1990 loss of $228 million after a special charge against earnings.

Telecom USA followed, catapulting 16 1/4 to 38 1/8 after agreeing to be acquired by MCI Communications for $42 a share, or about $1.25 billion. Philadelphia Electric was third, up 1/8 to 16 7/8.

Also active was Federal National Mortgage Association, up 1 3/8 to 33 3/8, rebounding after its tumble Friday along with other bank-related issues. Elsewhere in the banking sector, Citicorp added 3/4 to 23 5/8 in active trading, BankAmerica rose 7/8 to 26 3/8, Chase Manhattan rose 1/2 to 28 1/8, and Manufacturers Hanover climbed 5/8 to 31 5/8.

Among the other blue chips, Goodyear Tire was down 1/2 to 35 3/4, AT&T rose 5/8 to 42 1/8, IBM eased 1/2 to 105 3/8, Coca-Cola jumped 1 3/8 to 79 1/4, and Merck rose 5/8 to 73 3/8.

Elsewhere, Network Equipment Technologies plummeted 5 3/4 to 15 1/8 after reports saying it expected fourth quarter earnings of ten cents a share on lower margins. It earned 33 cents a share a year earlier.

Volume of NYSE-listed issues, including trades in stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 143,583,820 shares, compared with 167,268,350 shares traded in the previous session.

Prices closed lower in moderately active trading on the American Stock Exchange. The Amex Market Value index fell 1.33 to close at 359.68. Declines led advances 339-246 among the 831 issues traded. The price of an average share lost five cents. Composite volume totaled 14,440,600 shares, compared with 17,884,690 shares traded Friday.

Salomon's put warrants on the Tokyo stock market's Nikkei index led the Amex issues, up 1/8 to 10 1/2. The warrants allow investors to profit from the Tokyo market's declines.

The National Association of Securities Dealers composite index fell 0.73 to 430.17.

NEW YORK (APRIL 9) UPI - CBS cancelled ''The Pat Sajak Show'' Monday, effective at the end of the week, and will replace it with programming to be announced at a future date.

Sajak, the emcee of the popular ''Wheel of Fortune'' quiz program, has been the CBS late night entry since Jan. 9, 1989, when he inaugurated the much-ballyhooed challenge to the dominance of NBC's ''Tonight'' show and Johnny Carson.

The program drew excellent ratings its first week on the air, but has been on a downhill slide almost ever since.

The show has a 2.8 rating and a 10 share for the season, but in its last week it managed only a 2.2 rating and an eight share.

The announcement of the Sajak show's demise was made by Rod Perth, vice president for late night programs, CBS Entertainment, who said:

''Pat Sajak is a gentleman and a unique television personality and we wish him much success in future projects.''

He said CBS was developing original late night programming for the fall, but had no immediate announcement about interim programs.

Mike Weisman, who recently became executive producer of the show, will remain at CBS and will be part of the team working on new late night programming.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 9) UPI - Consumer advocates Monday called on Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan to send letters to all emergency rooms notifying them about the first effective treatment for spinal cord injury.

In a letter sent to Sullivan, Public Citizen Health Research Group claimed the government's failure to clearly inform doctors about the new drug treatment could have led to needlessly severe disability for hundreds of spinal cord injury victims.

On March 30, the National Institute of Neurological Disorders and Stroke held a news conference to announce discovery of the first effective treatment for the devastating spinal cord injuries that disable about 10,000 Americans.

A nationwide study found people given a steroid drug called methylprednisolone within eight hours of spinal cord injury had significantly better motor and sensory skills than untreated patients six months after their accidents.

Details of the study will be published in May in the New England Journal of Medicine. But because the findings were so striking, the National Institutes of Health took the unusual step of holding a news conference to alert doctors to the results.

Methylprednisolone is a common drug in emergency rooms. However, researchers emphasized its use for spinal cord patients differs significantly from past uses. At the news conference, only sketchy details of administering the drug were provided, and NIH later established a number that doctors could call for further information between 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. on weekdays.

Dr. Sidney Wolfe, director of Public Citizen, said he fears many doctors still have not received enough information to properly use the disability-reducing drug, and ''written communication'' should be sent to all emergency rooms and trauma centers.

Spinal cord injury patients ''are not, in many cases, getting the drug because the people in charge of the emergency rooms and trauma centers where the drug could be given have not seen the written information that documents the effectiveness of this treatment,'' Wolfe wrote.

HHS officials could not be reached for comment Monday. A spokeswoman for the National Institute of Neurological Disorders and Stroke, which hosted the news conference, said it had no plans to send out written information to emergency rooms.

Wolfe cited a recent Newsday survey which found that six of nine major trauma centers in the New York area said they had not yet started using the new treatment strategy because they did not have enough data.

In the 10 days since the treatment was announced, an estimated 260 Americans with spinal cord injuries arrived at hospitals soon enough to be helped by the drug, Wolfe said.

''Any further delay in notifying all emergency rooms about this is recklessly irresponsible and will only add to the suffering and misery of these spinal cord victims ... who could have benefited from the new treatment,'' Wolfe wrote.

The study, directed by Michael Bracken of Yale University medical school in New Haven, Conn., showed that in the best cases, the drug produced enough improvement that a person with a mild spinal cord injury might avoid being confined to a wheel chair. For more serious injuries, the drug treatment might help a severely injured person be able to stand or regain hand movement, Bracken said.

BOISE, ID (APRIL 9) UPI - Abortion rights advocates said Monday they have dropped a voter initiative drive that sought to prohibit the state from interfering with a woman's right to have an abortion before the 26th week of pregnancy.

Jane Crosby, a spokeswoman for the Idaho chapter of the National Organization of Women, said her group and other pro-choice groups now think such a law is not needed.

The group's announcement came ten days after a bill that would have given Idaho the most restrictive state abortion statute in the nation was vetoed by Gov. Cecil Andrus.

"What we have left is an abortion law that reflects Roe vs. Wade," Crosby said, referring to the 1973 Supreme Court decision legalizing abortion nationwide. "All of the conditions that led to the initiative no longer exist. We have good abortion law in Idaho now."

Lois Warner, president of the Treasure Valley chapter of NOW, said she felt certain the 38,743 signatures needed by July 1 to place the pro-choice initiative measure on the ballot could have been gathered.

About 20,000 signatures had been gathered since the measure was drafted last June, when abortion rights advocates feared the political climate in Idaho would necessitate such a law, Crosby said.

The bill Andrus vetoed March 30 would have forbidden abortion as a means of birth control - banning all abortions except in cases of profound fetal deformity, threat to the life or health of the mother, or in restricted cases of rape and incest.

Andrus, a longtime foe of abortion, said he vetoed the bill because its exceptions were drawn far too narrowly, especially for victims of rape and incest, and because it would have virtually outlawed all abortions in Idaho.

National anti-abortion groups said the Democratic governor betrayed them and vowed to stop him from being elected to an unprecedented fourth term in November.

Meanwhile, Warner said abortion rights groups in Idaho will work diligently to see that candidates favoring a woman's right to have an abortion are elected to the state Legislature this year.

BY VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (APRIL 9) UPI - Theresa Russell plays it tough as a street-smart police narcotics officer in ''Impulse,'' one of the few plausible female cop films made.

Russell's character is Lottie Mason, who along with her undercover drug assignment, works overtime on the vice squad by posing as a hooker to bust sex solicitors.

Unlike most films of its genre, ''Impulse'' director Sondra Locke did not have Russell knockout muscular thugs or face Uzi-wielding terrorists.

Nor does she get into jams where she is saved at the last minute by the heroics of her boyfriend or male counterparts.

Russell says she spoke to several police women to prepare for her role and worked out with a physical trainer to get her muscles in shape for the running and fights scenes demanded of her.

But because she is extraordinarily feminine, it would seem Russell would have found it difficult to play hard-boiled Lottie.

''The women I interviewed were very much the way I played Lottie,'' she explained. ''They were mothers and wives and whatever, but there was also an almost-macho attitude. But not really. It was more like women athletes. That's what I used.

''They have this kind of top-of-the-line separate being, a little bit masculine in outlook. Sort of a 'don't mess with me' look. But they also maintain their feminity.

''Some of them had long hair, like I wear mine in the film. They told me long hair helps on the hooker detail.

''One of the interesting elements of the story is Lottie's temptation to break the law herself by running away with a great deal of money. She's a complex, burned-out case who needs to get away from the pressures of her job.

''Her needs, sexuality and psychological problems aren't all that differentfrom male cops who handle pressure the same way.

''I liked the different dimensions, the layers of her personality and character that are revealed under stress. I'd read some other female cop scripts and chose not to do them because they were so one-dimensional.

''Lottie attracted me because she didn't need some guy to come and rescue her. She is in almost every scene, a real protagonist - not 'the girl' the camera cuts to between action scenes.''

Russell realizes movies continue to run to violence and action, and if an actress expects to work regularly she must make the adjustment by finding scripts that call for women involved at the core of the action.

''Usually action films have the actress wringing her hands while the hero is in danger. She's supposed to bring out the good side of him.

''Lottie is a different character than I've ever played. After this, maybe I'd like to play a woman body-builder. It would be a wonderful way to get myself in really top physical shape.

'''Impulse' has encouraged me to try other action pictures. Not that I want to abandon mainstream feminine parts like in 'Black Widow.' I've always looked for off-beat parts.

''Maybe if 'Impulse' earns a lot of money it will encourage producers to make more films with women in action.

''It might open doors for actresses. I think women want to see more of their own sex in leading roles in movies. There simply aren't enough pictures being made that focus on females and if that means action films, then let's do more of them.''

BOSTON (APRIL 9) UPI - The rise of Hollywood and its ''Empress,'' Bette Davis, can be traced in an exhibit that opened Monday and includes everything from a factory clock to one of the fiery actress's Oscars.

Boston University's Department of Special Collections, the depository of more than 110,000 items from Davis's personal papers, is holding the six-month exhibit to honor the film legend, who died last year of cancer at age 81.

''The materials constitute a history of the film industry,'' said Howard Gotlieb, the university's director of special collections. ''You can trace the growth of an industry from the advent of sound to the present.''

Davis, who acted in 100 films during a 50-year career, was nominated for 10 Academy Awards, more than any other actress. She won the coveted Best Actress Oscar twice, in 1935 for her role in ''Dangerous'' and in 1938 for ''Jezebel.''

''Her name became synonymous with film,'' said Gotlieb. ''There is no one in motion pictures that is as famous as Miss Davis was.''

According to Gotlieb, at the exhibit's opening ceremony Sunday, actor Roddy McDowall said of his longtime friend, ''She was not the queen of Hollywood. There were many queens. She was the Empress.''

One item in the collection is a 1962 photograph of Davis along with actress Joan Crawford, a longstanding rival. Davis exhibited her biting wit with the caption, ''Warner Bros. gave a luncheon for the two former queens (only one in my opinion) at the beginning of 'Baby Jane.' The horror is we look alike.''

Also in the collection are the daily letters Davis wrote to her mother, a notorious ''stage mother,'' as well as many photographs, movie stills, awards and other memorabilia.

Prominently displayed are the 1938 oil portrait of Davis that appeared in ''Jezebel'' and the Best Actress Oscar she won in 1935 for ''Dangerous.''

Born in Lowell in 1908, Davis worked briefly in a textile factory before her acting career blossomed. Hating the job and having to ''punch the clock'' before and after a shift, Davis vowed to buy the clock after she became rich and famous, Gotlieb said. The clock is also in the collection.

Davis's diaries, love letters, Newton High School yearbook and eighth-grade home economics notebook, in which she recorded her height and weight, can also be examined.

Davis, whose tempestuous reputation almost matched the fame of her big blue eyes, had to be ''wheedled and cajoled'' into giving her papers to the university, Gotlieb said.

The actress took her time ''determining whether we truly appreciated her '' Gotlieb said. ''After all, what's more personal than your papers?''

Gotlieb, who has collected the papers of more than 1,500 20th century figures, said Davis ''was terribly proud but also terribly knowledgeable about her own role in life and in her occupation.''

ORLANDO, FL (APRIL 9) UPI - Easter week travelers will pay at least 3.8 cents more for gasoline than they did this time last year, and consumers pay the highest car-fuel prices in Hawaii, Alaska and Washington, D.C., the American Automobile Association said Monday.

The AAA's first Fuel Gauge Report for 1990 showed the national average price for gasoline at $1.118 a gallon, compared to $1.08 last Easter. The average includes self- and full-serve prices of regular leaded, unleaded and premium unleaded gasoline.

According to the AAA, self-serve gasoline averaged for $1.044 a gallon for regular leaded, $1.026 for unleaded, and $1.198 for premium unleaded. Full-serve prices averaged $1.225 a gallon for regular leaded, $1.283 for unleaded, and $1.416 for premium unleaded.

The national average price for mid-grade gasoline was $1.119 a gallon for self-serve and $1.395 for full-serve. Diesel fuel averaged $1.149 a gallon for self-serve and $1.278 for full-serve.

The AAA said gasoline prices are highest in Hawaii, at $1.438 per gallon; Alaska, $1.272; and the Washington, D.C. area, $1.231.

District of Columbia gasoline prices were far above the average prices for theneighboring states of Maryland, at $1.086 a gallon, and Virginia, $1.125.

Missouri stations have the lowest statewide prices, averaging $1 a gallon, followed by New Jersey, at $1.014, and Idaho, at 1.02, the AAA said.

The region with highest average gasoline prices was New England, at $1.163 a gallon, while the Southwest registerd the lowest average gas prices, at $1.108.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 9) UPI - Elias Freij, a prominent Palestinian spokesman and mayor of Bethlehem, said after meeting Monday with Secretary of State James Baker that the United States opposes the settlement of Soviet Jewish immigrants in Israeli-occupied territory, including East Jerusalem.

''When Soviet Jews come to Israel, that is the business of Israel and the Soviet Jews, but there should be no Soviet immigrants coming into the Jewish settlements in occupied territory,'' Freij told reporters after the 35-minute meeting with Baker.

Asked if Baker had made any comment about the immigration of Soviet Jews into the occupied territories, Freij said, ''He does not support that. I am convinced that the secretary (Baker) does not want Soviet Jews to come and live in the occupied territories.''

A reporter asked, ''Including East Jerusalem?''

Freij responded, ''East Jerusalem is occupied and this is the current position of the U.S. government.''

A State Department official in the Near East bureau said he had no specific comment on Freij's characterization of Baker's views, but added, ''Our position is well known.''

East Jerusalem was taken and annexed by the Israeli government in 1967. The area of the city limits was expanded at the time to include about 26,000 acres of what used to be considered the West Bank.

The United States and other major powers have not recognized the Israeli annexation of Jerusalem. U.S. policy calls for the city to remain undivided, but does not specify who should have sovereignty over the ancient city, which is regarded as holy place for Jews, Moslems and Christians.

Freij also said he is encouraged by events in Israel, where Labor Party leader Shimon Peres appears ready to form a new government that will accept Baker's invitation for talks in Washington with Egypt, leading to direct negotiations in Cairo between Israeli and Palestinian delegations.

''The peace process ought to be supported by all men of good will. The sooner there is peace, the better for everybody,'' Freij said.

EAST BERLIN (APRIL 9) UPI - East Germans extended the search for mass graves to the site of a former Soviet internment camp near the Czech-Polish border Monday as one of the darkest chapters of their country's Stalinist history continued to unfold.

Graves containing the bodies of tens of thousands of victims of Stalinism have been discovered at former Soviet prison camps, which operated in East Germany from 1945 to 1950, over the last few weeks.

Army volunteers began excavations near the Czech-Polish border, along the outer wall of the Bautzen camp and in the surrounding hills Monday. The East German news agency ADN, quoting survivors, said as many as 16,000 prisoners died at Bautzen.

The camp was run by the feared Soviet secret police as one of 11 main internment camps in East Germany after World War II. The camps housed former Nazis, members of the Hitler youth group, Social Democrats, and in some cases, people who had simply been picked up by police or denounced by their neighbors on the flimsiest of evidence.

Since the camps were closed in 1950, a cloak of silence had hovered over their existence. The hard-line communist government, which ruled the country until last fall, reportedly threatened former inmates with harsh reprisals if they disclosed the conditions in the camps in which they were kept.

Today, many are still afraid to talk of their experiences.

Villagers living near the recently discovered graves said that between 1945 and 1947, trucks would go into nearby forests once or twice a week. Gunshots could be heard and the next morning, fresh mounds of dirt would be seen among the trees, they said.

Kurt Mueller, a villager of Schmachtenhagen, recently tipped off the authorities about such a site at the Five Oaks forest north of Berlin.

''I reported it in order to get the historical record straight, not to sow hatred against the Soviets,'' he said. ''The system was at fault, not the people.''

The Association for the Victims of Stalinism in Cologne said 90,000 of an estimated 200,000 Germans held in Soviet detention camps in East Germany after the war were either killed or died as a result of their treatment. Other sources put the figure at 56,000 dead.

The East German daily Neue Zeit said that although the Soviet camps were often situated on the premises of former Nazi death camps, they did not employ gas chambers as the Nazis did.

Witnesses have described the Soviet camps as a combination of death, labor and internment camps.

Although some of the prisoners were executed, most appear to have died as a result of the horrific sanitary conditions and lack of proper nourishment.

Wolfgang Titz, a researcher at the national memorial at the former Sacheshausen camp, said that hunger and tuberculosis, not mass executions, were the biggest killers at the Soviet camps.

NEW YORK - Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady criticized Monday a Democratic proposal to toss out the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings budget-balancing law, asserting that spending cuts are the only way to trim the U.S. deficit.

''It's very important that Gramm-Rudman stays in place, and President Bush is very determined that it does,'' Brady, fresh from a Group of Seven monetary policy meeting in Paris, told New York business leaders.

Brady also called for broader presidential powers in the budget process, such as the line-item budget veto - today not a presidential prerogative. He also demanded congressional discipline in spending.

He said finance chiefs of the Group of Seven industrial democracies referred ''again and again'' to the U.S. deficit at their Saturday meeting during which the Japanese yen's decline and events in Eastern Europe were examined.

Brady told a Greater New York Savings Bonds Committee luncheon that the need to finance the deficit - which Treasury officials estimate at $124 billion in fiscal 1990 - has hindered U.S. savings accumulation.

He rejected a recent suggestion by Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, that the Gramm-Rudman law be repealed because it has lost its effectiveness.

He also dismissed the Democrat's call for higher taxes for people in upper tax brackets and on tobacco, alcohol, gasoline and pollutants.

''We don't want to get into a debate ... on which is the most virtuous tax which is the handsomest tax,'' Brady said. ''What we have to pay attention to in this country is the spending side.''

''We simply have to increase the discipline that the Congress has put upon it when it spends money,'' he said.

The line-item veto issue is ''a symbol'' of the perennial White House-Congress spending tussle, he said, adding: ''We simply have to give the president a chance to make sure you're getting your money's worth.''

NEW YORK (APRIL 9) UPI - A survey of 755 American women around the country shows 60 percent would not oppose their daughters serving in military combat units, McCall's magazine reported Monday.

Seventy-nine percent of those questioned said they approved of combat duty for women in general.

Those questioned said they saw no difference between women ''risking their lives as policewomen or firefighters and those who put their lives at risk in the military,'' the magazine reported.

The telephone survey of McCall's readers, conducted between Feb. 13 and 19 was a joint effort by the magazine and Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., who has proposed a four-year experiment in which women would serve in Army units, such as infantry and tank corps, now only open to men.

No margin of error was given for the poll.

In the poll, 83 percent of women between 18 and 45 said they favored combat for women, while 74 percent of those over 45 approved of the idea.

Of those who have a son, 79 percent said they would approve of his serving in a combat post.

The magazine compared the findings of the survey with another recent nationwide poll of 1,557 men and women by The New York Times and CBS News found that 72 percent of those questioned approved of women in combat.

The approximately 230,000 women in the armed forces are officially barred from combat.

(APRIL 9) UPI - U.S. crude oil prices plunged another 71 cents a barrel Monday as demand for gasoline failed to overcome an excess of crude, bringing the five-day drop in crude prices to $2.09 a barrel, or 10.2 percent.

Three major oil companies - Sun Co., Radnor, Pa.; Marathon Oil Co., the Findlay, Ohio, unit of USX Corp. and the Conoco Inc. unit of Du Pont in Houston - also cut their price for crude at the wellhead by 75 cents to $17.50 a barrel for WTI, the lowest rate since last July.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, the benchmark West Texas Intermediate for May delivery plummeted 71 cents to $18.44 a barrel, $2.09 and 10.2 percent lower than last Monday's closing price.

On the U.S. Gulf Coast spot market, where crude is bought and sold for cash, WTI was quoted at $18.45 a barrel, a loss of 70 cents.

The decline in crude prices had been expected to happen earlier and not to be nearly as sharp as it has been, said Michael McDermott of Paine Webber Inc. in New York.

''Why it took this long to happen, I have no idea. It should have happened a month ago,'' he said.

''Traders anticipated gasoline would support prices ... and it turned out not to be true,'' the analyst said.

Partly because of this expectation, traders had taken few hedge positions against a decline, explaining to some extent the sharp falloff in prices over the last week, the analyst said.

''The oil market tends to go down twice as fast as it goes up,'' McDermott said.

Hd aid WTI prices have now fallen to where he expected they would. ''I've seen enough. Now, let's wait and see. ... I look for a (WTI) rebound to $19.20-$19.40 a barrel.

''The thing to watch is gasoline. There is an oversupply of crude but a fairly tight market in gasoline. I think we could see some support from gasoline,'' the analyst said.

Unleaded gasoline for May delivery nosedived 1.22 cents to 60.89 cents a gallon on the Merc, a decline of 5.19 cents a gallon, or 7.85 percent, over the last week.

Prompt delivery gasoline fell 1.1 cents on the New York Harbor cash market to 61.1 cents a gallon.

The respected Middle East Economic Survey in Nicosia reported that March output of the 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries rose to 24,090,000 barrels daily, the highest level in nine years and 2 million barrels over the cartel's self-imposed ceiling for the first half of 1990.

''The high production is having an impact,'' said McDermott, noting, however, that most OPEC production is so-called sour crude having relatively high sulphur content that is not easily digested by many U.S. refineries.

''I thought 'sweet' crude would be protected by gasoline and that's just not happening,'' he said.

On the European spot market, Britain's widely traded North Sea Brent lost 21 cents to $16.79 a barrel, a loss of $1.51 on the week.

United Arab Emirates' Dubai light - the key OPEC crude from the Middle East shipped mainly to the Far East - dropped 57 cents to $14.28 a barrel, a drop of $1.52 from a week ago.

On the Merc, heating oil for May delivery finished the day at 53.07 cents a gallon, down 0.64 cent on the day and 2.2 cents on the week.

Prompt delivery heating oil rose 0.65 cent on the New York Harbor spot market to 59.1 cents a gallon.

WEST BERLIN (APRIL 9) UPI - The Schering chemical company, one of West Germany's largest pharmaceutical concerns, is exploring possible collaborations with ten East German state-run companies, a company spokesman said Monday.

Guiseppe Vita, a senior official at Schering told a news conference Monday that the company was seriously considering forming a joint venture with the East German VEB Fahlberg-Liste company.

He said Schering and VEB-Fahlberg-Lise were planning to set up a consulting firm to advise doctors, chemists, and agricultural concerns.

The Schering executive said this was a first step toward establishing a joint venture.

Although Vita said he did not expect such investments to result in short-term profits, he pointed out that although risky, the investments would ''be sensible in the long run.''

He said Schering currently was involved in talks with ten East German state-run companies to assess the possibility of forming joint ventures.

The Schering concern reported a 225 million deutsche mark ($110 million) profit in 1989 on revenues of 5.85 billion deutsche mark ($2.9 billion).

He said he expected the concern's revenue to grow by 5 percent this year.

ATLANTIC CITY, NJ (APRIL 9) UPI - One-third of the Taj Mahal Casino Resort's 3,010 slot machines went back on line Monday after overwhelming patron demand clogged the house accounting system and forced a shutdown of the new casino's slot operations last week.

Also Monday, Donald Trump awaited approval from state gaming regulators to reshuffle top management at his $1 billion Taj.

Trump wants to make Taj vice president Willard ''Bucky'' Howard president of the casino hotel and move current president Walter Haybert to the position of chief financial officer.

Trump also wants Edward Tracy, president of Trump Castle Casino Hotel, to take over running all four of Trump's Atlantic City properties.

The New York developer also owns Trump Plaza Hotel Casino and Trump Regency, formerly the Atlantis Casino Hotel and now a luxury non-casino hotel.

Because all of the executives already have state gaming licenses, Casino Control Commission spokesman Thomas Flynn said the new appointments would likely sail through the regulatory process.

Frederic Gushin, deputy director of the state Division of Gaming Enforcement, said about 920 slot machines were returned to operation Monday morning. Taj officials planned a phased return of the remaining machines, Gushin said.

''We will be monitoring and assuring that the number of machines do not overwhelm the banking system,'' Gushin said.

The large amount of slot machines on the casino floor, a heavier-than-anticipated volume of play, personnel who lacked training and difficulties experienced by back-of-the-house operations in supporting the casino floor operations resulted in a voluntary shutdown of the slot operations about 9:30 p.m. Friday, Gushin said.

Casino workers were unable to track accurately the cash flow from the change booths to the slot machines and back again.

The Taj Mahal, featuring a 120,000-square-foot casino, one of the largest in the world, opened for business Apr. 2.

LOS ANGELES (APRIL 9) UPI - The federal government filed a class-action suit Monday against American Airlines, alleging the company's weight policy for flight attendants is unfair to women older than 40.

The lawsuit, which alleges sex as well as age discrimination, was filed in U.S. District Court by the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission. It attacks American Airline's weight policy, calling it ''one of the most stringent and inflexible in the industry.''

The suit was brought on behalf of women older than 40 who did not meet American's weight restrictions and therefore were not hired as flight attendants or were not allowed to return from leave-of-absences - including maternity leaves - because of their weight.

American's policy states that ''a firm, trim silhouette, free of bulges, rolls or paunches, is necessary for an alert, efficient image,'' Ralph D. Fertig, an EEOC attorney, said. In addition to requiring that flight attendants' weight be proportionate to their height, the airline also uses 1959 insurance company tables for average adult weight-to-height ratios, Fertig said.

But according to the lawsuit, women flight attendants are held to a more stringent standard than their male counterparts. Women must maintain their weight at 17.5 percent below the life-table weight, while men must be only 2.5 percent below, Fertig said.

The lawsuit claims age discrimination because women tend to become heavier as they age, yet standards are not relaxed for flight attendants older than 40, Fertig said. ''If you're over 40 and you have to go on a serious crash diet'' to meet American's requirements, ''it could have a serious impact on your health,'' he said.

The effect ''is to make women become skinny and flacid ... and not as good flight attendants as if they had more muscle.''

Moreover, the weight policy also is used as a pretext for preventing women older than 40 from becoming or continuing to work as flight attendants, Fertig said.

American Airlines could not be reached for comment Monday.

But three American flight attendants who are representing the lawsuit appeared at a news conference Monday to describe what they believe are the airline's unfair policies.

One of them, Sherri Cappello, 46, said she was fired for being overweight by American's standards on the same day she received her 25-year service pin.

Cappello, who is 5-foot-4, said she weighed 144 pounds - 15 pounds over American's maximum weight for her height - when she was fired Aug. 4, 1989.

According to Cappello, older attendants are given less time to lose weight than their younger counterparts. She explained that she was given ''one chance'' to lose the weight, while others routinely get ''three chances.''

''You can only take so much for so long. I finally decided I was going to fight back,'' said Cappello, who is vice president of the Association of Professional Flight Attendants.

Of American's 18,000 flight attendants, ''at least hundreds'' and potentially thousands of women who are not yet 40 could be affected by the policy, Fertig said.

The lawsuit asks for a permanent order against American, barring it from age or sex discrimination. It also asks the court to reinstate attendants who were fired or forced to quit because of the weight standards, and to give them back pay.

SEATTLE (APRIL 9) UPI - The co-chairman of Nordstrom Inc. charged Monday that a Wall Street Journal reporter probably had a hidden agenda that may have included stock manipulation or boosting the fortunes of a labor union by writing an unflattering story on the retail chain.

Nordstrom Co-Chairman Jim Nordstrom said a Feb. 20 story by Susan Faludi ''was inaccurate in content, biased in viewpoint and emotionally charged from the onset to tarnish the reputation and image of our company.''

His comments were made in an April 3 letter to Warren H. Phillips, chairman of Dow Jones & Co., publisher of the Wall Street Journal, that was released publicly by Nordstrom's Monday.

Nordstrom said the first reaction of company officers to Faludi's front-page article was to ''take the article at face value.'' But he said after reviewing the article some substantial errors were found.

Roger May, a spokesman for Dow Jones, said the Journal stood by the story. He did not have any other comment.

In his letter Nordstrom said the Journal is either ''a scandal sheet and totally irresponsible by allowing a reporter to go unchecked, which is not likely, or someone is operating on an agenda of which we are not yet aware.''

''This agenda could be envisioned as an opportunity for financial gain considering the increased position of shorting Nordstrom stock for a period prior to publication,'' he said, referring to the practice of selling short, a technique used to take advantage of an anticipated decline in a stock price.

''It could be taking a naked advocacy position in favor of the (United Food and Commercial Workers) union in its attempt to survive,'' Nordstrom said.

The UFCW, which represents about 2,000 Nordstrom employees in the Puget Sound area, has been locked in bitter and very public contract negotiations with Nordstrom since last summer.

Nordstrom also suggested Faludi tried to ''create an emotional furor'' with the story for the ''furtherance of her career.''

Faludi, who interviewed several dozen current and former Nordstrom employees, portrayed a company in which employees work in a pressure cooker atmosphere under the eyes of Big Brother-type management that forces them to meet or exceed unwritten guidelines or get out.

Several of the people interviewed in Faludi's article focused on charges that Nordstrom workers are frequently expected to perform duties off the clock. That is one of the main charges lodged against Nordstrom by the UFCW.

Nordstrom said many of Faludi's article were either wrong or seriously distorted. He said in the case of one disgrunted former employee there were no company records that the woman ever worked for Nordstrom.

The letter to Dow Jones was not the first attempt by Nordstrom management to fight back against negative media coverage of its troubles.

The company recently pulled its advertising from The Seattle Times and Seattle Post-Intelligencer, initially blaming poor returns for the money it spent. However, Jim Nordstrom was quoted in the Times soon afterward as saying, ''We think your coverage is horrible, the worst in the nation.''

Nordstrom recently hired an outside public relations firm to handle queries from the press for the first time in the company's history.

ANKARA, TURKEY (APRIL 10) UPI - At least 15 suspected Kurdish separatist guerrillas were killed and many wounded in two days of clashes with security forces in southeastern Turkey, reports from the area said Monday.

The clashes began Saturday when a group of suspected separatists tried to enter a village near Hakkari, some 640 miles southeast of Ankara.

Turkish state radio said 15 Kurdish guerrillas were killed, but independent reports said more than 20 died and 15 were wounded.

Guards at the village of Oymakkaya, where the first clash occurred, fired on the separatist gunmen when they tsied to enter, prompting heavy fighting.

Security forces informed of the fighting rushed to Oymakkaya to assist the village guards, killing nine Kurds, wounding three and capturing 12. Half of those captured were found to be of Syrian origin, the reports said.

The remaining guerrillas fled to the nearby hills under cover of darkness, with the security forces in close pursuit.

The Turkish forces caught up with them Sunday, and fighting continued until early Monday, by which time several more Kurds were killed. Three members of the security forces were wounded.

Separatist guerrillas led by the Marxist-Leninist Kurdish Workers' Party began armed attacks on the security forces in August 1984, when they vowed to set up an independent Kurdish state on Turkish soil.

Clashes in the area have killed more than 2,000 people, including 90 in 1990.

Last week President Turgut Ozal held a meeting with the National Security Council, which includes top military brass, to decide on measures to be taken to quell the mounting violence in southeastern Turkey.

Prime Minister Yildirim Akbulut has been under intense fire from opposition parties for his handling of the situation. The opposition called on him to resign so fresh elections can be held to allow a strong government to emerge and handle the problem.

(APRIL 9) UPI - Arson strikes another ferry in Europe... Greyhound filesa racketeering suit against its union... and Senator Kennedy proposes a 27 percent defense cut... These stories and more from the wires of United Press International.

Arson is suspected in the second instance of a fatal blaze aboard a European ferry in recent days.

British officials say the latest blaze came early today on a ferry off the coast of Wales, killing one passenger and injuring nine others.

Authorities say an investigation is underway... but they suspect the fire was deliberately set because it apparently started in two empty cabins.

Scandinavian authorities also suspect arson in a tragic fire that engulfed a ferry off the Norwegian coast Saturday, killing as many as 200 people.

By this afternoon, the remains of 85 passengers had been recovered from the first fire. But officials say they expect the death toll to rise because NOT everyone aboard the ferry was registered.

One police inspector describes the scene as a ''horrible sight'' with ''many, many children'' among the bodies. The inspector says there appears to be many more dead than officials were led to believe from the passenger list.

Democratic Senator Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts says the Democratic Party must regain its soul by backing a five-year plan to reduce defense spending and use the money to fund domestic programs that work.

In a speech at Georgetown University, Kennedy said the Democrats are adrift after losing five of the last six presidential elections and are in danger of losing all power unless they re-invigorate themselves.

Kennedy says the way back for the Democrats is to re-discover the party's liberal principles. He says Democrats must NOT run away from the party's enduring principles and beliefs.

Kennedy has long been one of the most liberal voices in the Democratic Party. He said today that the so-called ''peace dividend'' gives the party a chance to seize the initiative in domestic programs.

He complained that with President Bush enjoying extraordinarily high popularity, the Democrats are giving too much ground and- in his words- ''almost conceding a second term to President Bush....''

At the White House, news secretary Marlin Fitzwater dismissed the Kennedy remarks as meaningless rhetoric.

(APRIL 9) UPI - Britain's secretary of state for Northern Ireland calls it ''a very UNchristain way to start Holy Week.''

Officials say four British soldiers died and four other people were injured in a land mine explosion early today about 20 miles south of Belfast.

As investigators traveled to the scene, the Irish Republican Army called a newspaper to claim responsibility for the blast.

Officials say the mine apparently was planted in a drainage ditch and detonated by remote control as the soldiers passed in two armored jeeps.

The blast blew apart the first jeep, showering debris, shattering the windows of nearby homes and killing the four soldiers inside instantly.

Three soldiers in the second jeep and one civilian were also injured.

British Prime Minister Thatcher condemned the attack, as well as recent Irish court rulings NOT to allow extradition to Britain of I-R-A suspects charged with crimes the courts described as political.

An improved weather forecast this afternoon was good news NOT only for the shuttle Discovery crew and their NASA colleagues, but for a schoolteacher, a mother, an engineer, a computer scientist and a museum worker, too.

The five are amateur astronomers who will be given time to use the one-BILLION 500-Million-dollar Hubble Space Telescope that the shuttle crew is to put into orbit on the mission.

The five were picked from among several hundred applicants from across the nation to carry out their own projects, along with 162 professional astronomers scheduled to use the most advanced instrument of its kind in its first year in orbit.

Ana Larson is a Seattle mother of two who recently returned to school at the University of Washington and plans to use the Hubble Telescope to hunt for planets in the process of being born.

Science teacher James Secosky of Shortsville, New York, says the chance to use the Hubble is beyond his wildest dreams. Secosky started his interest in astronomy as a youngster with a 20-dollar telescope.

The shuttle is scheduled to blast off tomorrow. But forecasters are tracking a small weather system of low clouds and rain that could force a delay in the lift-off.

(APRIL 9) UPI - Greyhound Lines today filed a 30-Million-dollar racketeering suit against its striking union, claiming the union is trying to use violence to gain what it canNOT obtain at the bargaining table and on picket lines.

Greyhound filed the suit in Jacksonville, Florida... the scene of the most serious of many shooting incidents involving cross-country buses since the walkout began on March 2nd.

A Greyhound spokesman told a news conference in Washington, D-C, that the Amalgamated Transit Union and its locals involved in the strike are trying to use violence to get a financial settlement they woN'T get in negotiations.

The suit also seeks to remove union local presidents in Atlanta and Charlotte, North Carolina.

Local chief Fred Ingram said in Charlotte he has NO idea what the company is talking about and that union officials have NOT done any of the things mentioned in the suit.

Hungary appears to be heading toward a center-right coalition government following the nation's first democratic elections in four decades.

The Hungarian Democratic Forum began negotiations today to form a coalition government. Forum President Jozsef Antall says yesterday's balloting calls for a return to what he called the ''well-balanced politics of the center.''

The center-right party won by a landslide in yesterday's second and final round of voting. However, it did NOT win enough seats to claim an outright majority in parliament.

Turnout was relatively low, with officials blaming rain and a general lack of enthusiasm for the second round. In the words of one poll observer- ''in the first round people were more enthusiastic because it was that round that did the job of getting rid of the communists.''

LOS ANGELES (APRIL 10) UPI - A trial over the word ''telesis'' opened Monday, with lawyers for both Pacific Telesis and International Telesis Group claiming their clients were the first to use the term in their names.

Both companies - which are unrelated - basically claim they are legally entitled to use ''telesis'' in their names. And both claim they were the first to call themselves ''telesis'' - and that the other should stop using that name.

The lawsuit was filed by Pacific Telesis in March 1988 to stop International Telesis Group from using ''telesis'' in its name, which PacTel lawyers said is registered as a valid service mark. Service marks are similar to trade marks, but apply to services while trade marks are used to register products.

''Telesis'' means progress that is intelligentally planned and directed.

Pacific Telesis is one of seven regional holding companies that were formed as a result of the break-up of AT&T in 1982. International Telesis Group, on the other hand, is a comparatively small communications firm with offices in Los Angeles and London.

In opening statements Monday, PacTel lawyer Andrew J. Belansky described how Pacific Telephone registered the ''telesis'' name with the Patent & Trademark Office on Aug. 8, 1983. That filing put the world on notice that PacTel was using the name nationwide, Belansky said.

Moreover, if the filing wasn't enough, the barrage of publicity after AT&T's divestiture would have been enough to let International Telesis know that the ''telesis'' name was taken, Belansky told U.S. District Judge Robert M. Takasugi, who is hearing the case.

By calling itself ''International Telesis,'' Belansky said, the consulting firm ''creates confusion. ... Those using telecommunications services are likely to assume International Telesis is in some way associated with Pacific Telesis,'' he said.

Not so, countered William J. Robinson, an attorney for International Telesis. In his opening statement, Robinson said that the public is not likely to confuse PacTel with the consulting firm, which advises large, multinational companies about telephone systems.

Furthermore, according to Robinson, International Telesis began using its name as early as March 1983 - months before PacTel. In bringing the lawsuit, PacTel was taking ''a hard-line approach'' and acting in ''bad faith,'' Robinson told the court.

Pacific has asked for an injunction to stop International from calling itself ''International Telesis Group.'' International, meanwhile, wants to continue using the name and attorneys' fees from PacTel.

More than 30 witnesses are expected to testify during the trial, including Donald Guinn, former chairman and chief executive of Pacific Telephone & Telegraph, who began his testimony Monday. And the defendant, International Telesis, has promised the trial could reveal some startling disclosures about alleged potential regulatory violations by Pacific Telesis.

(APRIL 9) UPI - Amalgamated Transit Union officials deny allegations in a 30-Million-dollar racketeering suit filed today by Greyhound Lines. The nation-wide bus line charges that the union is trying to use violence to win what it canNOT get with the strike it began on March 2nd.

A former bank official says he delivered bundles of cash to Imelda Marcos. The testimony came in the former Philippine first lady's fraud and racketeering trial... which began its second week today in New York.

A man already in jail for beating his wife was arraigned today on charges of killing Oregon prisons director Michael Franke. Frank Edward Gable declared himself innocent of last year's murder in an in-jail interview.

The General Accounting Office is raising serious questions about the honor system of letting cosmetic companies report health and safety problems with its products. In a report on its first check in more than a decade, the G-A-O questions the government's ability to police the booming industry.

The White House says it plans to use left-over funds from a 47-Million-dollar humanitarian relief program to begin repatriating Contra rebel forces in Nicaragua.

Mikhail Gorbachev's new presidential council is calling for more sanctions against Lithuania to fight the republic's drive to secede. The group of conservative legislators also wants to impose direct Soviet rule on Lithuania.

The conservative New Democracy Party in Greece announced today in Athens that it can form a government. A minor party with one seat has agreed to support New Democracy to give it an absolute majority in parliament.

(APRIL 9) UPI - The Amalgamated Transit Union today accused Greyhound Lines of using the issue of violence surrounding the month-long strike as a ''smoke-screen to avoid participating in good-faith negotiations.'' The union responded to a 30-Million-dollar racketeering suit Greyhound filed in Jacksonville, Florida. Greyhound charged that the union is trying to win with violence what it will NEVER get at the bargaining table.

Congressional investigators say the honor system of letting cosmetic makers report health and safety problems of their products is NOT protecting consumers. The General Accounting Office says the F-D-A has NO plans to review the safety of 884 toxic chemicals used in cosmetics... and lacks the power to require safety tests. One lawmaker said it's ''incredible'' that the cosmetics industry is NOT held accountable.

The Philippine military says police agents captured the deputy chief of the 19-thousand-member communist New Peoples Army as he arrived from Hong Kong at the Manila airport. The Philippine national police chief says intelligence agents cornered the car carrying Antonio Cabardo as he left the airport. Two other communist rebels were also captured, but their driver escaped.

U-S-backed Afghan guerrillas say they downed a government fighter jet and captured its pilot during heavy fighting around the besieged eastern garrison town of Khost. Resistance sources report that the guerrillas used a ''Stinger'' missile to bring down the plane. There is NO word on the condition of the pilot.

Schoolmates of 18-year-old AIDS victim Ryan White attended a memorial service before classes today, remembering the young man whose five-year battle against the deadly disease ended this weekend. (APRIL 9) UPI - One of the most liberal voices of the Democratic Party is calling on his collegues to take the offensive and rediscover the party's liberal principals. Massuchusetts Senator Edward Kennedy says the so-called ''peace dividend'' from lessening Cold War tensions in Europe may give Democrats the chance to push for new domestic programs without having to ask for new taxes.

A bitter battle is nearing an end in Texas, where voters will decide the Democratic gubernatorial nomination tomorrow. Representatives for both Attorney General Jim Mattox and Treasurer Ann Richards say the runoff is too close to call. But the nastiness continued even as the campaign wound down, with Mattox pressing his accusations that Richards has used illegal drugs.

Interior Secretary Manuel Lujan spent the day touring parts of Alaska in advance of workers resuming the clean up of the nation's worst oil spill next month. While Lujan viewed the shorelines soiled by the Exxon Valdex oil spill, state and federal officials called on Exxon to release scientific assessments of the damage from the March 24th, 1989 spill.

Colombian President Virgilio Barco says the war on drugs will fail unless the global appetite for illegal substances is curbed. Barco spoke at the opening of a world ministerial-level drug summit in London. Barco told the 112-nation conference says the war will be won only- quoting now- ''when we have succeeded in penetrating the hearts, minds and habits of the consumers of cocaine, opium, heroin and other lethal drugs.''

(APRIL 9) UPI - A West German newspaper reports that authorities today arrested a couple on treason charges. The report says the couple passed top-secret information to East German intelligence agents for 24 years. The paper says the man had access to top-secret mission plans for tactical and strategic West German air force operations. His wife reportedly was a Lufthansa employee who delivered the information to the East Germans.

In Yugoslavia, preliminary returns today from the state presidential election in Slovenia show a veteran Communist Party candidate in the lead... but falling short of a majority with about 45 percent of the vote. That means he likely will face a run-off against the candidate backed by a five-party opposition coalition that wants Slovenia to secede from Yugoslavia.

Officials say a Belgian delegation is negotiating with the Abu Nidal Palestinian terror group holding Belgian hostages in Lebanon. An official of the Belgian Foreign Ministry told reporters in Beirut that the talks included discussion of the exchange of a Palestinian imprisoned in Belgium for a woman, her two daughters and five other Belgians kidnapped from a pleasure boat off the Gaza Strip in November 1987.

Britain's High Court says Salman Rushdie will NOT have to come out of hiding to face blasphemy charges for his novel ''The Satanic Verses.'' The panel refused to overturn an earlier decision that the nation's blasphemy laws apply only to Christianity, NOT Islam. An Islamic group has been trying to legally punish the author for the book considered blasphemous by many Moslems.

(APRIL 9) UPI - The union representing striking Greyhound workers says the bus line is using the violence of- quote- ''common criminals'' as an excuse to stay away from the bargaining table. The union is responding to a 30-Million-dollar racketeering suit filed against it by Greyhound, which blames the union for the violence surrounding the 39-day walkout. The union denies the charge.

Police in Miami Beach, Florida, say workers found three more bodies today in the rubble of the burned Fontana Hotel, bringing the confirmed death toll to nine. Six people remain unaccounted for in Friday's blaze at the 102-room hotel. Today's search was hampered by heavy rains and work to shore up the building so the recovery operation can proceed safely.

Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze predicted today that a new era will dawn at the Washington, D-C, summit between President Bush and Soviet President Gorbachev. Shevardnadze told a Soviet news agency that the talks will produce what he terms a ''genuine break-through.'' He says a dozen agreements will be signed, including trade and economic accords.

Even though official election results will NOT be announced until tomorrow Hungary's Democratic Forum today began consultations on forming a center-right coalition government. The Democratic Forum won a landslide election yesterday in the first democratic elections in Hungary in four decades. A party leader says the election result provides what he termed a clear mandate that Hungarians want a return to centrist politics.

(APRIL 9) UPI - Students at Hamilton Heights High School in Cicero, Indiana, attended a memorial service before class today to honor the memory of 18-year-old Ryan White, the young AIDS victim who succumbed to a respiratory illness yesterday. The closed service came the day after White's death in an Indianapolis hospital... his last illness noted around the world. Funeral services are scheduled for Wednesday.

NASA forecasters are keeping a close watch on a weather system that threatens to delay the launch of the shuttle Discovery and the one-point-five-BILLION-dollar Hubble Space Telescope tomorrow. Officials say there is a 40 percent chance that the morning lift-off could be delayed by low clouds and rain. NEVERtheless, officials cleared the Discovery for launch, saying super-cold liquid oxygen and liquid hydrogen fuel will begin being pumped into the craft's tanks early tomorrow.

The government says it's looking for a new place to put the world's most sophisticated underwater research station. The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration says it wants to move Aquarius from the sea floor off Saint Croix because of damage from Hurricane Hugo. (APRIL 9) UPI - Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze is predicting a ''genuine break-through'' at the super-power summit in Washington, D-C, next month.

In fact, Shevardnadze told a Soviet news agency that the May 30th to June 3rd summit will mark the dawn of a new era in super-power relations.

He also reiterated, however, that a unified Germany canNOT be in NATO... then added that a compromise solution is- his words here- ''quite possible.''

Shevardnadze is predicting that a dozen agreements will be signed during the summit, including trade and economic accords. He says the world is on the threshhold of what he called ''a peaceful period in humankind's development.''

He says his next meeting with Secretary of State Baker will center on overcoming the final hurdles blocking agreement on strategic arms reductions.

In a related development, Assistant Secretary of State for Human Rights Richard Shifter said U-S officials have been assured by Moscow that there are NO more so-called ''prisoners of conscience'' in the Soviet Union. , Shifter said the assurances were given last week during the visit of the Soviet foreign minister to Washington, D-C. And he added that American officials have NO reason to doubt the Soviet claims.

(APRIL 9) UPI - The tide of change keeps washing across East Europe, where East Germany's prime minister-designate announced today that he will present a list of 24 Cabinet members to parliament for approval on Thursday.

In Hungary, the Democratic Forum opened consultations to establish a center-right coalition government. The forum scored a landslide election victory yesterday in the first free balloting in Hungary in four decades.

In Bratislava, Czechoslovakia, Poland and Hungary took the first steps in forming a new working relationship to replace the Warsaw Pact and its economic trading arm. The three nations- with Austria, Yugoslavia and Italy observing and participating- met behind closed doors to formulate positions on the new union.

Elections also were held in Slovenia, with a veteran Communist Party leader leading in the presidential balloting... but without the required majority. He now faces a run-off against the candidate backed by an opposition party coalition that favors Slovenian secession from Yugoslavia.

In Paris, an aide to French President Francois Mitterand said Western nations drew up the draft statutes for a European Bank for Reconstruction and Development for Eastern Europe. They acted after the Soviet Union pledged to limit requests for funds from the institution.

The new presidential council in the Soviet Union- comparable to the U-S Cabinet- called for more economic and political sanctions against Lithuania to fight the republic's move to secede from the Soviet Union.

At the same time, a conservative group introduced legislation in the Supreme Soviet that would dissolve the Lithuanian parliament and impose central rule on the rebellious province.

Thousands of people staged almost around-the-clock demonstrations in Soviet Georgia and turned their government headquarters into a virtual shrine to the victims of a brutal Soviet military crackdown last year.

(APRIL 9) UPI - The labor dispute involving Greyhound and more than nine-thousand striking workers is heading to the courtroom.

The bus line today filed a 30-Million-dollar racketeering suit against the union representing its striking employees. The company contends in its suit that the union is using violence to get what it caN'T achieve at the bargaining table.

The union denies the allegation, saying Greyhound is using the violence that has surrounded the 39-day-old walkout as an excuse NOT to bargain.

Union president James La Sala describes the suit as a ''desperate attempt by Greyhound management to avoid its legal and moral responsibilities.''

According to the suit filed today, there have been 26 shooting incidents involving Greyhound buses and three shooting incidents at Greyhound terminals since the strike began March 2nd. The only death was that of a picketer crushed by a bus driven by a strikebreaker.

A defense attorney forced a delay until at least tomorrow in the jury selection process for the re-trial of Raymond Buckey in the McMartin Pre-school molestation case.

Attorney Danny Davis told Superior Court Judge Stanley Weisberg by telephone that he re-injured his back yesterday and would NOT be able to make it to court today for the opening of jury selection.

Davis has represented the former pre-school teacher for six years in what has become the longest and costliest criminal prosecution in U-S history.

(APRIL 9) UPI - Work to cleanup the nation's worst oil spill will resume next month, and officials are calling on Exxon to make public their studies on the damage to Alaska's environment.

The oil company and state and federal governments have kept secret their damage assessments in anticipation of pending civil litigation.

Alaska Governor Steve Cowper says the fairest way to do it would be for all involved to release their evidence as soon as they get it.

Exxon is remaining NON-committal about joining the other scientific efforts, but says it's ''evaluating'' the proposal.

While officials argue, Interior Secretary Manuel Lujan toured areas hit by the Exxon Valdex oil spill. Lujan says he wants to evalute the shorelines before assessment teams advise what kind of work still needs to be done.

In another environmental devolopment, the government says it will spend more than one-BILLION dollars to clean up its nuclear weapons plant at Fernald, Ohio. The cleanup of toxic and radioactive contamination at the Fernald plant will involve one of the biggest cleanups ever under the Superfund program.

The facility near Cincinnati has released tens of thousands of pounds of uranium dust... as well as leaking radioative wastes into ground water.

Colombian President Virgilio Barco sounded a call for action today at the opening of the 112-nation world ministerial-level conference on the drug war.

Barco says there can be NO victory in the fight against drug-traffickers until the global appetite for illegal substances is cut.

Barco's nation is on the front-lines of the drug war, and he told the conference that fight must win over the ''hearts, minds and habits'' of drug-users around the world.

The U-N-sponsored conference hosted by British Prime Minister Thatcher in London is aimed at finding ways to reduce demand for drugs and at promoting international co-operation in combatting the production and movement of cocaine.

Health Secretary Sullivan denied that anti-drug efforts have failed in the United States and pointed out that casual drug use among high school seniors has declined dramatically in the past two years.

SUNNYVALE, CA (APRIL 10) BUSINESS WIRE - Xerox Imaging Systems Inc. (XIS) Tuesday announced the new Datacopy GS plus flatbed scanner designed for desktop publishing.

The GS plus scans full page, 256 level grayscale images approximately 20 seconds faster than most competitive scanners. Standard size documents can be scanned at 300 dots per inch (dpi) in 10 seconds in binary mode.

Supporting Macintosh SE series and Macintosh II series systems, the IBM PC AT, XT, PS/2 or compatible, this scanner offers adjustable resolution between 75 and 300 dpi in increments of 1 dpi.

An enhanced light source and one pixel jitter resolution ensures highly accurate image reproduction. In addition, the Datacopy GS plus provides a scan window of 8-1/2 inches x 14 inches for reading full-size legal documents in a single-pass without any loss of information.

The Datacopy GS plus offers several product configurations for Macintosh and IBM desktop computer users. Mac users receive MacImage and Image Copy software.

Image Copy is a ''quick scan'' utility that pulls images directly into most publishing and graphics packages used with the Macintosh. The PC version comes bundled with PC Image 1.6 image capture program. Page Mate and VP Mate quick scanning utility software is provided for PC AT and XT computers using the DOS operating system.

Users with OS/2 operating systems receive PM Mate and VP Mate. All versions come with the appropriate interface cable and SCSI interface card.

An optional Automatic Document Feeder (ADF) with a 50-page capacity input hopper is also available for the Datacopy GS plus. Its unique design allows ''first-in, first-out'' scanning for more effective data management. Like a copier, documents remain on the platen for multiple scans without refeeding.

Designed for efficient power usage, the scanner operates on only 40 watts, compared to 150 to 240 watts for most competitive devices. A switch setable, universal power supply allows the GS plus to be used anywhere in the world by simply setting the main voltage and changing the main fuse.

Xerox Imaging Systems Inc. is recognize as an industry leader in desktop scanning, image processing, text recognition and desktop communications for IBM PC, PS/2 and Apple Macintosh systems. XIS markets Datacopy and Kurzweil brand scanners userd in both office scanning systems and reading machines for the visually impaired.

IRVINE, CA (APRIL 10) BUSINESS WIRE - Financing for a $100 million apartment development in Irvine has been finalized, clearing the way for construction to begin on a 755-unit apartment community in one of Orange County's largest commercial business centers, officials of developer Forest City Properties Corp. announced Tuesday.

Dai Ichi Kangyo Bank Ltd., the world's largest bank, approved a $93 million loan for the project, providing Forest City with the financing necessary to commence construction on the development at the intersection of Jamboree Road and Campus Boulevard.

Designed by architects McLarand, Vasquez & Partners, the apartment project will comprise five separate buildings with four-story elevations clustered around a central plaza.

This development, and another 200 condominium units Forest City will build in a subsequent phase, will comprise nearly all of the residential component of the master-planned, 40-acre Mola Centre. The entire urban community as planned will include, in addition to the residential component, some 500,000 square feet of office space, a 450-room hotel, an eight-screen movie theater, a child care center, restaurants and a shopping center.

SAN JOSE, CA (APRIL 10) BUSINESS WIRE - C-Cube Microsystems Tuesday introduced the Image Master kit, the first image compression development platform for the Apple Macintosh II to implement the international JPEG standard.

The kit consists of the Image Master board and C-Cube's Compression Workshop software. The board is a single NuBus card that incorporates C-Cube's CL550 processor. The Image Master kit allows original equipment manufacturers (OEMs) and software developers to evaluate the CL550 and to integrate the JPEG image compression standard into their products.

Introduced last month, the CL550 processor is the first and only VLSI (very large scale integration) implementation of the JPEG (Joint Photographic Experts Group) international standard for image compression, as defined by the CCITT/ISO standards organization.

The Compression Workshop includes a software emulation of the CL550, as well as a suite of utilities to simplify application development.

The Image Master kit also provides Adobe Photoshop plug-in modules that allows developers to experiment with JPEG in a real application environment.

The Image Master board compresses and decompresses 24-bit color images using the JPEG baseline image compression standard. Compression ratios from 10:1 to 100:1 can be selected by the user. The Image Master runs at 10 megahertz.

The supporting Compression Workshop software includes several tools to simplify application development, including a set of resource plug-ins. The plug-ins provide consistent application interfaces that are identical for both software and hardware JPEG environments. The Compression Workshop also includes a demonstration application -- with source code -- capable of compressing and decompressing PICT files using the JPEG algorithm. The source code provides a sample application interface to the resource plug-ins.

The Image Master kit comes with a demonstration version of Adobe Photoshop image processing software, with JPEG compression and decompression plug-in modules.

Available now, C-Cube's Image Master development kits are priced at $3,000.

CHICAGO (APRIL 20) BUSINESS WIRE - Informix Software Inc. (NASDAQ:IFMX) has reached a strategic agreement with Lockheed Integrated Solutions Co. for Lockheed to resell customized document and image management solutions based on the Informix-OnLine multimedia database engine.

Through this agreement, Informix and Lockheed will jointly market customized solutions that include hardware, software and a wide range of technical and training services designed to support the application life cycle from design through implementation and use.

OnLine will be at the core of these document and image management solutions. With OnLine, users can integrate unstructured information such as digitized images, word processing documents, graphs, spreadsheets, facsimiles and voice into an SQL-based relational DBMS.

OnLine was developed specifically for multiuser systems and provides several capabilities that enable users to efficiently manage documents and images within the database structure. OnLine provides both full and incremental online archiving which allows system backup to occur while the application continues to run at peak performance.

OnLine also provides integrated locking, logging and recovery features which protects the integrity of the database by managing data on a transaction basis.

As one of Informix's integrator partners, Lockheed will resell customized image and document management solutions integrated with OnLine and other Informix application development software. These solutions require a unique integration of hardware and software, coupled with custom software development. This integration will be provided by Lockheed.

In addition to the hardware and software solution, Lockheed will provide a wide range of technical and training services to assist customers through the design, implementation and use of these applications.

Informix Software Inc. is a leading supplier of information management software providing solutions from the database through the desktop. Informix products include powerful distributed database management systems robust application development tools, and graphical- and character-based productivity software for delivering information to every significant desktop platform.

LOS ANGELES (APRIL 10) BUSINESS WIRE - Paul, Hastings, Janofsky & Walker has added three banking and finance partners of a major New York City law firm to its New York office.

Joining as partners in the banking and finance practice of Paul, Hastings are Euclid Irving, Marguerite Kahn, and Brian Pusch, formerly partners at Mudge Rose Guthrie Alexander & Ferdon. The three attorneys add more than 37 years of banking and finance law experience to Paul, Hastings' already significant presence in this area.

''The addition of three such highly regarded and active attorneys with strong ties to the financial community is another step in our Firm's commitment to building a strong banking and finance practice in New York '' said Ronald Kreismann, managing partner of the Firm's New York office.

''We already have a significant finance-related presence in New York, particularly in aircraft-finance matters and our three new partners substantially expand our capabilities in banking, acquisition finance, secured lending and project finance.''

Irving, Kahn and Pusch represent a number of major international financial institutions in a wide variety of matters. They join the Firm's national banking and financial services practice group headed by Michael Owen and Harold Reichwald.

Paul, Hastings, Janofsky & Walker has over 400 lawyers nationwide and is among the 40 largest firms in the United States. Opened in 1986, the Firm's New York office currently has 34 attorneys. ''The continued growth of our New York office is important for our strategy of enhancing our reputation and practice on the East Coast,'' said Robert G. Lane, the Firm's managing partner.

''It is most gratifying to see the continued expansion of the major practice areas within our New York office. With our three new banking partners joining John Howitt in New York and a team headed by Mike Owen and Hal Reichwald in Los Angeles, we have strong banking capabilities in the financial centers of the East and West Coasts. We anticipate our banking practice to play a significant role in the continued growth of our New York office and the Firm as a whole.''

Paul, Hastings, Janofsky & Walker is an international law firm with headquarters in Los Angeles. In addition to New York and Los Angeles, the Firm has offices in Atlanta, Ga; West Los Angeles and Orange County, Calif.; Stamford, Conn.; Tokyo, Japan; and Washington, D.C.

PHOENIX (APRIL 10) BUSINESS WIRE - Coopers & Lybrand, the international accounting, tax and consulting firm, has established its first real estate resource center.

The new center, located in Phoenix, will provide parties either considering or already involved in the acquisition of Arizona real estate with the analytical means to identify potentially desirable properties throughout the state, and to assess those properties against current and long-term economic trends.

Stanley D. Friedman, partner in charge of Cooper & Lybrand's west region real estate industry group, will head the Phoenix resource center.

Coopers & Lybrand's real estate experts feel that the failure of thrift institutions in Arizona and other locations, will soon result in an increased volume of transactions as properties eventually find their way to new owners.

This is evidenced by the large number of Arizona properties being offered by the Resolution Trust Corp., the federal agency formed last year to liquidate failed thrift institutions.

Coopers & Lybrand's new resource center will enable its users to analyze the properties held by the RTC and other financial institutions in the context of economic data for the areas where the properties are situated.

The critical element in Coopers & Lybrand's approach is its proprietary data base used to analyze the type, location and size of available real estate assets, and then to apply the relevant economic data and specific market conditions for the development of investment strategies.

The Coopers & Lybrand resource center concept is the result of the firm's recent purchase of Mountain West Research, a Phoenix-based real estate research, economic and consulting firm.

Current plans call for Coopers & Lybrand to establish additional resource centers in markets where the RTC and key financial institutions are dominant property owners.

One of the world's leading accountant, tax and management consulting firms Coopers & Lybrand provides solutions for businesses in a wide range of industries. The firm offers its clients the expertise of more than 16,000 professionals in 98 U.S. cities, as well as more than 61,000 people in 104 countries worldwide.

EL SEGUNDO, CA. (APRIL 10) BUSINESS WIRE - International Rectifier Corp. (NYSE/PSE:IRF) reported that on April 9 a Federal District Court in Los Angeles, after a lengthy trial, held valid all five of its key U.S. patents relating to power MOSFET technology and ruled that Siliconix Inc. had infringed those patents.

Eric Lidow, IR president and chairman, commented, ''We are gratified by the court's decision and believe that it confirms International Rectifier's technology leadership in the power MOSFET field.''

The court ruling upheld International Rectifier's U.S. Patents Nos. 4,376,286; 4,593,302; 4,642,666; 4,680,853 and 4,705,759.

The amount of damages incurred by IR from Siliconix's infringement will be determined in the next phase of the court proceedings.

International Rectifier holds numerous U.S. and foreign patents on its HEXFET power MOSFET technology and has a number of additional applications pending. To date, Hitachi, Toshiba, Matsushita and Unitrode have entered into royalty-bearing license agreements under the patents.

Introduced to the market in the late 1970s, IR's HEXFET brand pioneered the commercial use of power MOSFETs and continues to lead that fast-growing market.

Penetration of the available $2 billion power transistor market by power MOSFETs is rising steadily, from 18 percent in December 1988 to 27 percent in December 1989, according to reported industry statistics.

Power MOSFETs are displacing bipolar power transistors and creating new applications in a wide variety of motor control and power switching functions. Key market segments include industrial controls, computer/peripherals, automotive, defense/aerospace, telecommunications, appliances and consumer electronics.

International Rectifier processes and assembles HEXFETs in a $100 million plant in Riverside County. The unique 285,000-square-foot facility uses continuous-flow manufacturing and automated process control for high-volume, low-cost production.

International Rectifier is a major worldwide supplier of power semiconductors and the international leader in power MOSFETs with its HEXFET line.

GREELEY, CO (APRIL 10) BUSINESS WIRE - Monfort Inc. announced Tuesday that it has appealed a decision by the National Labor Relations Board (NLRB) relating to the company's hiring of applicants when it reopened its Greeley beef packing plant more than eight years ago.

The appeal was filed yesterday with the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Last week, the NLRB ruled that Monfort adversely applied lawful hiring criteria against certain former employees in 1982, after the plant had been closed for two years because of economic conditions. The ruling reversed a decision by an NLRB administrative law judge in 1985 that Monfort had properly and legally formulated and applied its hiring criteria to former employees.

In announcing its decision to appeal, Monfort Vice President Gene Meakins said:

''We respectfully believe that the NLRB's most recent decision is illogical and incorrect as it relates to applying the hiring criteria, and we are confident that our appeal will result in reinstatement of the original decision by the trial judge, who was the only impartial official of the NLRB to hear all of the witnesses and testimony in the 50-plus days of hearings conducted over a period of two years.

The case originated with a charge filed by Local 7 of the United Food and Commercial Workers (UFCW) Union which claimed that Monfort had discriminated against former union employees when it reviewed applicants for the reopening of the plant in 1982.

After 50 days of testimony and thousands of pages of transcript taken over a two-year period, Administrative Law Judge Roger B. Holmes ruled on Nov. 22, 1985, that Monfort had not discriminated against former union members in the hiring process.

The union then appealed to the NLRB in Washington, which was silent on the case for four and one-half years -- until its announcement last Friday that it had overturned part of the trial judge's decision. The NLRB ruled that the hiring criteria was proper and that Monfort had no obligation to consider any applicants who did not apply individually, but that the criteria was applied adversely to some former employees.

A substantial number of former employees, along with other applicants, were hired for the reopened plant.

LOS ANGELES (APRIL 10) BUSINESS WIRE - American Health Properties Inc. (NYSE:AHE) announced Tuesday that the company had adopted a share purchase rights plan designed to protect the company and its stockholders from coercive, unfair and inadequate takeover bids and practices.

''In adopting the rights plan,'' said Robert L.B. Diener, president of the company, ''the board is expressing its confidence in the company's future and its determination that the company's stockholders be given every opportunity to participate fully in that future. The plan is designed to strengthen the board's ability to deter a person or group from attempting to gain control of the company without offering a fair price and equal treatment to all stockholders.''

The rights initially wil trade together with the company's common stock and will not be exercisable unless certain triggering events occur. Among the triggering events is the acquisition of 10 percent or more of the company's common stock. If the rights become exercisable, under certain circumstances they entitle the holder to purchase additional shares of common stock at a discounted price.

Prior to the time that the rights become exercisable, the board of directors has the power to redeem the rights, at a price of 1 cent per right.

The rights plan provides for the distribution of one right for each outstanding share of the company's common stock held of record as of the close of business on April 20, 1990. The rights will expire on April 20, 2000.

SAN DIEGO (APRIL 10) BUSINESS WIRE - A Cubic Defense Systems engineer has been found innocent of all charges in U.S. District Court in San Diego after enduring seven and one-half years of investigation and legal proceedings in connection with the alleged falsifying of records on a U.S. mine detector contract.

A federal court jury found Dennis B. Fink, 41, innocent of all counts in connection with the mine detector case. Charges against Fink had included conspiracy to defraud the government and submitting false reports on the mine detectors.

Fink had been tried on the charges last year in the same federal court and a jury acquitted him on two counts but was unable to reach a verdict on the other 21. For most of the charges, the jurors voted 10-2 to acquit, according to an informal poll of the jurors following the trial.

A co-worker of Fink's, William B. Bauder, program manager for the mine detector program, was previously acquitted on all counts in connection with the case.

Both men argued from the beginning that the case was essentially a contract dispute with the Army. They contended that disputed test results far exceeded the Army's requirements and were intended to be more stringent than the Army requested.

The verdicts were the cause for enormous relief by Cubic Defense Systems officials who see the acquittal as a vindication of their position in the dispute with the Army.

Cubic Defense Systems was awarded an $8 million contract in 1981 to retrofit 9,500 mine detectors and produce 2,100 new detectors for the U.S. Army Mobility Equipment Research and Development Command.

The Army terminated the contract in February 1984.

SANTA CLARA, CA (APRIL 10) BUSINESS WIRE - Sequel Inc., a recent spin-off of Unisys Corp., Tuesday announced it has acquired with the approval of the bankruptcy court the rights to the Priam name and certain Priam patents, in addition to the equipment and inventory of Priam's repair and mature products business.

While Sequel's bid for these assets was accepted by the bankruptcy judge three weeks ago, the agreements between Sequel and Priam were not signed until Tuesday.

Sequel has specifically acquired the equipment and inventory to repair or manufacture Priam 14-inch, 8-inch standard, 8-inch advanced, and 5-1/4-inch V100 disk drives and related components. Sequel will also support the Priam DataDrawer, consisting of two 8-inch drives and controller boards mounted in a frame.

Sequel will provide exclusive new build and remanufacturing support for all of the disk drive products that it acquired. Priam drives are used in a variety of applications, including minicomputers, personal computers, medical imaging equipment, and large telecommunication systems. Priam, a San Jose company, was founded in 1978.

Established in November 1989 through a management buyout from Unisys, Sequel is the second largest producer of 14-inch head disk assemblies (HDAs) in the world. Its 375,000-square-foot facility in Santa Clara contains 45,000-square-feet of Class 10,000 and Class 100 cleanrooms, 47,000-square-feet of raised test floor, and over $67 million worth of manufacturing and processing equipment.

Sequel provides remanufacture and new build HDA support to OEMs. Major computer architectures currently supported include Sperry, Burroughs, and IBM.

NEW YORK, PHILADELPHIA (APRIL 10) BUSINESS WIRE - The Long-Term Credit Bank of Japan Ltd., Tokyo, has contributed $1 million to establish an endowed scholarship program for MBA students at the University of Pennsylvania.

The fund will support students enrolled in the Joseph H. Lauder Institute of Management and International Studies, which offers an MBA from The Wharton School and an MA in international studies from Penn's School of Arts and Sciences.

''This contribution is being made in recognition of the long and fruitful relationship which the bank has had with Wharton and its graduates,'' said Mr. Tetsuya Horie, president of The Long-Term Credit Bank of Japan, ''and as a symbolic way of celebrating the twenty-fifth year of the bank's operations in the United States.''

The first ''Long-Term Credit Bank of Japan Scholars,'' as they will be known, are expected to be awarded for the next academic year. Scholarships will be made according to the school's customary criteria for awarding financial aid.

''In establishing this fund, The Long-Term Credit Bank of Japan has recognized a critical factor in the education of future leaders of global business,'' said Russell E. Palmer, dean of the Wharton School. ''We are honored that the bank has chosen to make this long term investment in the students of the Lauder Institute.''

The Long-Term Credit Bank of Japan Ltd. is the 20th largest bank in the world with $188 billion in assets. In the United States, the bank has two branches (New York, Chicago), an agency (Los Angeles), and two representative offices (Dallas, Atlanta).

SAN FRANCISCO (APRIL 10) BUSINESS WIRE - Novell Inc. (NASDAQ:NOVL), developer of NetWare systems software products, Tuesday announced the transfer of its FastPath gateway business to Shiva Corp., a local and wide area networking company located in Cambridge, Mass.

Under the terms of the agreement, Novell will no longer manufacture and market the FastPath. Shiva will manufacture, sell, support and continue development of the ''Shiva FastPath'' beginning in the summer of 1990.

With assistance from Novell, Shiva will assume responsibility for support of all current FastPath customers. Novell will register Shiva as a Novell-certified NetWare Developer, entitling Shiva to special support, development software, services and marketing programs.

In consideration for this business opportunity, Shiva will pay a royalty per FastPath to Novell. Novell will retain ownership of the current FastPath technology.

The agreement continues Novell's consistent commitment to networking software development. Licensing the FastPath to Shiva lets Novell refocus its Macintosh development resources on NetWare and other Novell software solutions. Shiva's strength in Macintosh networking promises FastPath customers ongoing product enhancements and assures current users a continued high level of service and support.

Both Shiva and Novell market their products through common distributors -- Micro D, Softsel, Microamerica and major resellers such as Businessland. Customers should see no decline in service or availability. Because Novell and Shiva have many customers in common, network administrators who use the products will be familiar with both companies.

Shiva Corp. has been developing Macintosh networking hardware and software since 1987. Shiva's products have won critical acclaim for their ease of use and innovative solutions to peripheral sharing, remote network access, and local and wide area network routing.

Recent developments include the Shiva Ethergate, an EtherTalk serial and wide area gateway, and the Shiva NetModem V.32, a 9,600-bps AppleTalk modem.

Novell Inc. is the leading independent provider of open, high-performance systems software products. The company's NetWare network operating system has become a standard for personal computer-based local area networks. Novell had revenue of $422 million for fiscal 1989.

FREMONT, CA (APRIL 10) BUSINESS WIRE - Abaton Tuesday announced the introduction of LaserScript, a 300-dpi PostScript-compatible laser printer for the Macintosh and PC environments.

LaserScript is a multihost, multiapplication desktop page printer, and is priced at $2,995. The printer will be introduced at the Macworld Expo in San Franciso, April 10-13.

''An office environment that utilizes Macs and PCs can share the LaserScript for applications ranging from spreadsheets and wordprocessing to presentation graphics and desktop publishing,'' stated Diana Tu, printer product specialist at Abaton. ''Our unique Everex engineering has delivered a flexible, powerful printer that is poised to grow with the demands of the industry.''

The LaserScript is full compatible with all existing PostScript and HP LaserJet Series II applications, eliminating the need for software alterations. Thirty-five Bitstream scalable outline fonts for PostScript emulation and 24-bitmapped fonts for HP emulation are resident in the LaserScript.

Two cartridge slots support HP LaserJet II or compatible font cartridges for quick access to a large selection of fonts.

The powerful 15 MHz NS32CG16 embedded system processor from National Semiconductor running the Microsoft/Bauer PostScript interpreter gives the LaserScript performance capabilities greater than the LaserWriter IINTX. LaserScript comes with 3MB of memory standard and is expandable to 6MB for those users who require larger download font capability.

The LaserScript features an AppleTalk port, a Centronic parallel port and two RS-232 serial ports for use in Apple, DOS, OS/2 and UNIX environments. The I/O interfaces are on a separate user plug-in card. This allows for flexibility in the future as new standards emerge.

An automatic electronic detect feature directs traffic through the ports on a first-in, first-out basis, allowing the printer to be shared by a variety of users.

The LaserScript will begin volume shipping in May, and includes a 1-year warranty and 90 days on-site service.

SAN FRANCISCO (APRIL 10) BUSINESS WIRE - Dayna Communications Inc., Tuesday announced EtherPrint, an Ethernet to LocalTalk converter for LocalTalk-compatible printers.

EtherPrint is expected to ship in June of this year with a suggested U.S. retail price of $499.

EtherPrint is a 5.5-inch x 7.5-inch x 1.5-inch box with a built-in Ethernet transceiver and a mini-DIN 8 LocalTalk port. A 15-pin connector port allows thick Ethernet, twisted-pair or fiber-optic cables to be attached through an external transceiver. The device comes with an external power supply, a 3-foot LocalTalk cable, and a 10-inch mini-DIN 8 to DB9 adapter cable.

EtherPrint will support any LocalTalk-compatible network printer, including the Apple LaserWriter and ImageWriter families, the IBM 4216 Personal Page Printer II, the Hewlett-Packard Desk Writer, and QUME printers. EtherPrint supports AppleTalk Phase 1 protocols, as well as Phase 2 protocols which allow the network to be divided into multiple zones.

Dayna Communications Inc., is a privately held company that designs and manufactures a range of products to meet the connectivity and productivity needs of personal computer users.

FORT MILL, SC (APRIL 10) BUSINESS WIRE - Springs Industries (NYSE: SMI) announced Tuesday that a continued decline in both volume and margins in finished fabrics and somewhat lower margins in home furnishings and industrial segments will result in first quarter earnings at about one-half the 86 cents per share level of the comparable quarter of 1989.

While comparing unfavorably with the first quarter of 1989, the earnings should follow more closely the pattern of 1986, 1987 and 1988, when they were 53 cents, 51 cents and 59 cents per share, respectively. Detailed sales and earnings figures for the quarter will be released on schedule in about a week.

SAN FRANCISCO (APRIL 10) BUSINESS WIRE - Lotus Development Corp. Tuesday announced a new desktop information product for Apple Macintosh personal computers that allows any business person to perform sophisticated sales prospecting and market analysis.

Priced at $695 and distributed through computer software retailers, Lotus MarketPlace combines CD-ROM (compact-disc, read-only memory) databases of names, addresses and marketing data on U.S. businesses and U.S. households, with software for targeting customers, analyzing markets, and creating high-quality lists for business prospecting and direct marketing. The product will be available in the third quarter of 1990.

Lotus and Apple Computer, Inc. also announced an agreement under which the companies will market the product through a number of cooperative programs throughout the year.

''Lotus MarketPlace extends our expertise in CD-ROM technology to a broad, new base of users -- any business person who needs to be more efficient and productive in finding and keeping customers,'' said Jim Manzi, president and chief executive officer of Lotus. ''By combining CD-ROM databases of leading business and consumer information with highly intuitive software, Lotus MarketPlace gives users desktop control over a critical element of the marketing process: identifying new customers and markets.''

''Lotus MarketPlace continues the tradition of innovative applications brought to business users by the Macintosh,'' said John Sculley, chairman, president and chief executive officer of Apple Computer. ''It is the first in a series of applications that capitalize on CD-ROM to empower business users with practical, cost-effective, and strategic access to massive amounts of vital business data.''

Desktop Control for Sales Prospecting, Market Intelligence

Lotus MarketPlace was developed to address business professionals' increasing need for more control and efficiency in finding new customers.

''Businesses spend billions of dollars annually in finding new customers, including more than $400 million on electronic sources of consumer and business information,'' said Dan Schimmel, director of Lotus' Desktop Information Products Division. ''These costs, coupled with the increasing costs of a sales call and rising postal rates, are creating tremendous pressure to optimize use of direct marketing dollars.''

Target customers for Lotus MarketPlace include small- to medium-sized businesses, who have strong marketing requirements to reach different customers on an ongoing basis; sales and marketing professionals at branch offices of large companies; and specialized direct marketers, who have frequent need for limited numbers of highly-targeted prospects.

''Lotus MarketPlace will open the door to direct marketing for many thousands of small- and mid-sized businesses that aren't using the techniques of direct marketing effectively today. Lotus MarketPlace is a fine product will lots of potential,'' said Jonah Gitlitz, president of the Direct Marketing Association. High-Quality Data, Multiple Applications

The Lotus MarketPlace product line includes two editions -- Lotus MarketPlace: Business and Lotus MarketPlace: Households. Lotus MarketPlace: Business includes information on 7.5 million U.S. businesses. Lotus MarketPlace: Households consists of demographic and lifestyle data on 80 million households and 120 million consumers.

Lotus MarketPlace comprises data from two leading industry sources. Lotus MarketPlace: Business contains data from Trinet, Inc., a leading provider of U.S. business information. Lotus MarketPlace: Households is based on data supplied by Equifax Marketing Decision Systems, the nation's leading provider of consumer-based marketing information.

Typical uses of the product include analyzing the potential of a new product, planning for expansion into a new geographic area, conducting a sample survey, and defining sales territories. A commercial insurance agent, for example, could use Lotus MarketPlace: Business to identify, by company size, number of employees, and annual sales, construction companies most likely to be interested in group employee health, disability, and life insurance policies. An air transport service might use Lotus MarketPlace to evaluate the potential for a special lower-priced overnight service for electronics companies in the Northeast.

Users navigate through the data using a series of selection criteria. Selection choices for Lotus MarketPlace: Business include company address, area code, annual sales, number of employees, and type of business by SIC code, a classification system that groups establishments by their primary product or service. Selection choices for Lotus MarketPlace: Households include geographic location (to the five-digit Zip Code level), gender, estimated household income category, buying behavior, and propensity to buy over 100 common product categories. By mixing and matching their selections, users can shape and build lists that reflect their exact needs.

Users have unlimited flexibility to view, edit and further customize data before actually ''buying'' lists. Users can also select random samples, of either number of names or percentage, of the lists they've built for test mailings or market research. Once satisfied with a list's characteristics, the user ''buys'' the list by clicking a button icon on the computer screen.

An innovative meter, similar to a postage metn choices for Lotus MarketPlace: Business include company address, area code, annual sales, number of employees, and type of business by SIC code, a classification system that groups establishments by their primary product or service. Selection choices for Lotus MarketPlace: Households include geographic location (to the five-digit Zip Code level), gender, estimated household income category, buying behavior, and propensity to buy over 100 common product categories.

By mixing and matching their selectionssage. Users can output lists and analysis reports to any software package supported on the Macintosh, including lead tracking software, relational database software, label printers, spreadsheets, or word processing packages.

Information can also be exported to PC packages through an Apple Superdrive or other data-transport method. This provides users with the flexibility to merge Lotus MarketPlace-generated data with internal data for increasing productivity and synergy of sales prospecting and marketing activities.

Lotus MarketPlace offers a number of standard report formats, including individual customer/prospect records, a prospect tracking report, contact forms, and a telemarketing listing for businesses, as well as the ability to develop customized reports. Lotus MarketPlace is compatible with a variety of standard label formats, and supports multiple fonts for laser printers.

Each edition of Lotus MarketPlace includes the software, a demonstration program, sample data, documentation, the purchase of the first 5,000 names of the user's choice from the CD-ROM disc, and a data order form. After returning the signed order form to Lotus, the user is sent the business data disc or one of eight regional data slices of household information. This data distribution method ensures that the user gets the most current information of choice.

Lotus MarketPlace data is updated quarterly. Users are offered several purchasing and data slice options; they have the option to convert to an annual subscription with four quarterly updates ($150), order additional data slices of the household data ($100 each), or obtain more names using the current disc ($400 for 5,000 additional names).

Pricing, Availability, and Distribution

Lotus MarketPlace will be available in the third quarter of 1990 and will be sold through Lotus-authorized resellers, including Apple dealers. Suggested retail price for each version of Lotus MarketPlace is $695, which includes the software and the purchase of the first 5,000 names of choice from the disc.

System requirements include an Apple Macintosh computer with a hard drive; 4MB of RAM; and an Apple CD-ROM drive.

Lotus Development Corporation is the leading developer of applications software for personal computers and information services delivered on CD-ROM.

Apple Computer, Inc. develops, manufactures, and markets personal computer systems for use in business, education, science, engineering, and government.

SANTA CLARA, CA (APRIL 10) BUSINESS WIRE - Gazelle Microcircuits Inc.

announced Tuesday that it is receiving $4 million in funding from the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency (DARPA), the Department of Defense's central research and development organization, to develop ultra-high-speed data communications products.

This funding is from a new program that allows DARPA to receive a payback much like a venture capitalist from investments in companies having technology important to national defense and competitiveness.

Gazelle, a supplier of high-performance, silicon-compatible integrated circuits based on gallium arsenide, is the first company to receive funding under this program.

Under the terms of this agreement, Gazelle will design and manufacture gallium arsenide chips and subsystems operating at 1 gigabit per second (1,000 megabits per second) and faster. This speed is 100 times faster than the popular ethernet standard and 10 times faster than the fiber-optic distributed data interface (FDDI) specification.

The new components will be based on the ultra high-speed data communications technology Gazelle recently introduced as its Hot Rod series of transmit/receive integrated circuits.

These chips break an important bottleneck restricting innovative computer applications. They allow computers to talk to each other as fast as they can compute internally. This capability is needed for such applications as parallel processing, distributed computing, high-resolution graphics and high-definition television.

DARPA has funded several important research and production projects in the past, but this is the agency's first agreement under its newly granted authority to support advanced research and development by innovative means other than traditional contracts and grants. Under the agreement, Gazelle will pay DARPA a fair return on its investment in a manner much like a conventional venture investor.

DARPA can elect in 12 months either to receive royalties on any sales of the products developed under the agreement or, payments calculated on the appreciation of Gazelle's stock. Under the agreement, DARPA can protect U.S. economic interest by limiting foreign use of the technology.

Gazelle Microcircuits Inc. was founded in 1986 to produce high-performance easy-to-use digital gallium arsenide integrated circuits for high-volume applications within the computer, communications and military/aerospace industries.

SAN FRANCISCO (APRIL 10) BUSINESS WIRE - Shiva Corp., a Cambridge, Mass., networking company, Tuesday began shipping the newest in their popular line of network modems, NetModem V.32.

A 9600 bps multi-user AppleTalk modem, NetModem V.32 is on display during MacWorld Expo at booth 140 in Moscone Center.

Like Shiva's previous NetModems, NetModem V.32 connects directly to AppleTalk and can be shared by all Macintoshes and PCs on the network. NetModem V.32 is completely Hayes-compatible and is accessed the same way that Mac users select a LaserWriter: in the Macintosh's ''Chooser.'' To indicate the progress of a call, NetModem V.32 provides flashing LEDs in the Macintosh menubar and modem sounds through the Macintosh speaker.

In addition to modem sharing, NetModem V.32 includes telebridging, the ability to link remote networks over regular phone lines. Two geographically separate AppleTalk networks, each equipped with a NetModem V.32, can combine into a single internetwork and share resources such as printers, file servers, and electronic mail. Incorporating both a modem and a router, NetModem V.32 is the first product to include an all-in-one solution to remote network routing.

NetModem V.32 also provides Dial-In Network Access, a feature which allows a single remote Macintosh or PC to dial-in to the NetModem V.32 and access the connected AppleTalk network. Once dialed in, the remote computer can use AppleTalk resources as if directly connected to the network.

Requests for a high-speed NetModem have been coming in to Shiva since 1986 when the company introduced its NetModem V2400. But Shiva chose to wait until the technology matured and a standard emerged.

Established in 1984 by the Consultative Committee on International Telegraph and Telephone (CCITT), the V.32 standard has become widely accepted and used by modem manufacturers. V.32 support ensures compatiblity between modems, regardless of manufacturer. Without such a common standard, modems would not be able to ''talk'' to one another.

Shiva Corp. has been manufacturing AppleTalk networking products since 1987. Along with the popular NetModem V2400, Shiva products include NetSerial, NetBridge, and TeleBridge. Shiva recently broadened its networking line to include an Ethernet/LocalTalk gateway, EtherGate, which will soon support local and remote connections to TCP/IP networks.

NEW YORK (APRIL 10) BUSINESS WIRE - Barclays de Zoete Wedd (BZW), the international investment banking and securities arm of the U.K. -based Barclays Group, Tuesday announced plans to expand its international securities business to provide U.S. equity research and sales services.

Senior analysts and sales and support staff, formerly with Drexel Burnham Lambert, have joined the firm's U.S organization in New York and Chicago.

The announcement was made by Daniel Morris, chief executive of Barclays de Zoete Wedd Inc.

Joining BZW in New York are Richard B. Hoey, a leading economist, who was ranked number two in Institutional Investor's 1989 all-American research team poll, and Abby Joseph Cohen, a nationally recognized investment strategist.

Industry sector analysts, who have joined BZW from Drexel, include Chad E. Brown, paper and forest products; Joel D. Fischer, petroleum,; Ernest G. Jacob, insurance; John E. Keefe, financial services; Ruth E. Ketler, specialty retailing; and Linda B. Meltzer, telecommunications.

Also joining BZW are four analysts who, over the past 10 years, hve consistently received high rankings from Institutional Investor; Jeffrey B. Edelman, retailing; David Healey, automobiles; James R. McCann, engineering and machinery; and Terence M. York, building and construction. The U.S. equity sales staff includes a Chicago-based team headed by Hugh Feehan.

BZW has applied for the required securities and banking regulatory approvals to undertake a full service brokerage service in the United States.

Commenting on the announcement, Morris said, ''BZW already provides U.S. and overseas investors with research on more than 2,000 non-U.S. companies and 21 countries.

''The addition of this very experienced and highly regarded U.S.team rounds out our research and sales coverage of the world's primary equity markets.''

Headquartered in the United Kingdom, BZW provides a full range of international investment banking and securities services. The company employs 3,000 staff, more than half of who are engaged in activities outside the United Kingdom.

BZW offices are located in London, New York, Toronto, Tokyo, Hong Kong, Singapore, Sidney, Paris and Madrid.

BZW established its New York presence in 1987 by offering non-U.S. institutional sales and research services. Other BZW units in New York now provide corporate finance, merger & acquisition advice and capital markets services to corporate clients.

MONTGOMERY, AL (APRIL 10) BUSINESS WIRE - Blount Inc. (ASE:BLT.A), an international manufacturing and construction company, Tuesday announced results for its fourth quarter and fiscal year ended Feb. 28, 1990.

Net income for the fourth quarter was $9 million (75 cents per share) on sales and revenues of $155.7 million. That compares to $2.6 million (21 cents per share) on sales and revenues of $230.9 million during last year's fourth quarter. Current results include net income from continuing operations of $2.4 million (20 cents per share) and net income after taxes from discontinued operations of $6.7 million (55 cents per share).

In the fourth quarter, the company adopted a plan for the disposal of its resource recovery operations. Discontinued operations included a gain on the sale of W+E Umwelttechnik AG of Zurich, Switzerland, net of a provision for disposal of Blount Energy Resource Corp.

For the year, net income was $21.8 million ($1.81 per share) on sales and revenues of $683.8 million. That compares to last year's net income of $47.4 million ($3.94 per share) on sales and revenues of $1,062.3 million.

Current year results include net income from continuing operations of $18 million ($1.50 per share) and net income after taxes from discontinued operations of $3.8 million (31 cents per share).

Last year's twelve month results included a $128.6 million after-tax gain on the sale of the company's specialty steel business, after-tax charges of $10.4 million for the sale or discontinuance of certain other operations, and an after-tax charge of $10.8 million for a change in accounting for claim revenue on construction contracts.

For the fourth quarter, Blount's manufacturing operations reported operating income of $6.8 million and sales of $85.5 million, compared to $5.7 million operating income and $79.9 million sales a year earlier. For the year, operating income from manufacturing increased to $31.3 million on sales of $335.5 million from last year's operating income of $23.6 million on sales of $322.3 million.

Last year the company took $6.5 million in charges against manufacturing operations principally as a result of costs anticipated for environmental needs at its facilities.

Blount's construction operations reported fourth quarter operating income of $.8 million on revenues of $70.2 million, compared to $2 million operating income on revenues of $151 million last year. Fourth quarter income reflects reduced cost estimates in connection with litigation on a construction project and provides for additional costs for certain subcontractor arbitration proceedings related to a construction joint venture.

For the fiscal year, operating income from construction was $2.5 million on revenues of $348.3 million, compared to last year's operating loss of $64.9 million on revenus of $740 million. Last year reflects $64.7 million in charges against construction operations and its revenues included two large solar energy projects.

Corporate expenses of $4.9 million for the fourth quarter were lower than $5.3 million in last year's fourth quarter. For the year, corporate expenses were $14.6 million, compared to last year's $28.7 million. Last year's expenses included charges of $11.5 million principally associated with the sale of assets.

EINDHOVEN, NETHTERLANDS (APRIL 10) BUSINESS WIRE - ''The rise in Philips' sales in the first quarter of this year was in line with our expectations.''

This was announced by the Philips President, C.J. Van der Klugt, at the Philips annual general meeting of shareholders held in Eindhoven on Tuesday afternoon, April 10.

In 1989 Philips reported nominal sales growth of 2 percent. Disregarding the effects of exchange rate movements and changes in consolidations, that meant a sales increase of 7 percent on a comparable basis. In its 1989 annual report, Philips forecast that in 1990 sales would grow by 6 percent on a comparable basis and that net income from normal business operations would further increase.

Philips will publish its figures for the first quarter of 1990 on Thursday May 3.

NEW YORK (APRIL 10) BUSINESS WIRE - Saks Fifth Avenue unveiled Tuesday the first phase of its New York store flagship renovation which, when completed, will generate a 30 percent increase in selling space and result in an expansion of all nine selling floors.

Melvin Jacobs, Saks' chairman, presided over the 8:30 a.m. press breakfast during which floors four through eight were revealed for the first time.

The remodeling and expansion of the Saks flagship is part of a 36-floor office and retail development that Saks is building in partnership with the Swiss Bank Corp. Located directly behind the existing Fifth Avenue building, the multi-use structure will extend from 49th to 50th Streets.

The nine-story tower base, encompassing approximately 111,000 square feet of space, will link up to the corresponding floors of the existing Saks building.

The fourth floor houses an expanded women's shoe salon; the fifth floor is devoted to SFA's Real Clothes collection and women's active and spectator sportswear; the sixth floor contains European styled men's wear and one of the largest Armani boutiques in America; the seventh floor offers women's career clothing, including The Works and Liz Claiborne; and the eighth floor features a new presentation for infants and toddlers.

Interior architect Walker Group/CNI and exterior architect Lee Harris

Pomeroy Associates, p.c. and Abramovitz Kingsland Schiff let the classical architecture of the existing Saks building set the tone for the design of the new tower. Saks' landmark status also influenced the design. The renowed design firm of Naomi Leff and Associates contributed their expertise to shops for Real Clothes, The Works, and the Beauty Salon.

Faced with alternating panels of ribbed and smooth limestone, with symmetrical recesses and setbacks, the tower has been designed to echo the architectural style of Rockefeller Center while conforming to SFA's neo-Renaissance palazzo style.

Inside, to facilitate the smooth flow of space between the existing Saks building and the new tower, ceiling heights will be the same in both buildings. Over the coming months, Saks will open other floors devoted to other businesses.

The main floor will focus on men's dress furnishings. The second floor will concentrate on men's sportswear, men's Real Clothes and made-to-measure shirts; the third floor will offer advanced European designer ready-to-wear for women; and the ninth floor will house an enlarged beauty salon.

The entire project will culminate this fall with the complete renovation of the existing Fifth Avenue flagship, which will include a restaurant overlooking Fifth Avenue Rockefeller Center. Construction will result in additional entrances on 50th and 49th Streets.

NATICK, MA (APRIL 10) BUSINESS WIRE - Prime Computer Inc. (NYSE:PRM) Tuesday introduced a diagnostic software program for applications based in the company's leading database management environment that allows users to easily identify parts of the application that could be further improved.

Called MONITOR.PROGRAM, the diagnostic tool simplifies the process of optimizing computer code within application software to further improve the software's speed and efficiency. By examining reports from MONITOR.PROGRAM, technically knowlegeable users or consultants can pinpoint segments of computer code that could be improved.

MONITOR.PROGRAM was created specifically for users of the more than 6,000 installations of applications based on Prime INFORMATION, Prime's relational-based data management environment. Prime INFORMATION holds the world's largest market share of all database management systems that are compatible with the popular PICK operating system.

Many of the country's largest independent software application developers and value-added-resellers (VARS) have based their applications on Prime INFORMATION. More than 2,000 Prime INFORMATION applications are being used each day to perform database management projects in the world's commercial, government, educational and scientific marketplaces.

MONITOR.PROGRAM gives users the choice of three monitoring modes through which they can examine code. Users can analyze programs statistically, sequentially or line-by-line. Executed through standardized menus or specific commands, MONITOR.PROGRAM generates reports in standard or custom formats for each monitor mode.

MONITOR.PROGRAM is licensed by Prime's Minicomputer Business Unit for $2,000 to $9,000, depending on the 50 Series superminicomputer for which it is licensed. MONITOR.PROGRAM is available for shipment in the United States immediately.

The Minicomputer Business Unit of Prime Computer Inc., with headquarters in Natick, Mass., is a worldwide supplier of integrated commercial system solutions and the leading fourth-generation language supplier in the PICK data management marketplace with its Prime INFORMATION software environment.

CHICAGO (APRIL 10) BUSINESS WIRE - Eastman Kodak Company is demonstrating a powerful mix of advanced imaging products here at the Association for Information and Image Management (AIIM) show.

In addition, Kodak is showing the ability to link its offerings to a variety of computer systems.

Kodak products are featured in the AIIM booths of seven other vendors -- including Digital Equipment Corporation, IBM Corporation, and Sun Microsystems -- marking significant advances in Kodak's strategy to offer imaging products that can be used in existing computer environments.

''Kodak believes electronic image processing will become as common and convenient during the 1990s as data processing became in the 1980s,'' said Lawrence J. Matteson, group vice-president and general manager of Kodak's Imaging Information Systems Group. ''Our total presence at AIIM demonstrates Kodak's ability to make that vision a reality.''

Kodak's own booth includes a variety of products that draw from Kodak expertise in both electronic and film-based imaging technologies. Included are several new and recently intoduced products:

-- The Kodak Imagelink digital workstation gives users the ability to view, print and transmit film-based images electronically.

-- Kodak Imagelink desktop software lets PC users access images stored on the Kodak KIMS system 5000 and integrate them with word processing, spreadsheets or other PC "window" functions.

-- Kodak Optistar products allow users to output computer (COM) data interchangeably to microfilm or to 8 mm magnetic tape cartridges, and to retrieve date interchangeably from 8 mm tape or optical disk.

-- The Kodak automated disk library, model 560, stores up to 75 gigabytes of data in three square feet of space

-- using 5 1/4-inch optical disks and WORM or erasable drives from almost any manufacturer.

STAMFORD, CT (APRIL 10) BUSINESS WIRE - A New Jersey court decision affecting General Reinsurance Corp. has been widely reported.

The case involved asbestos related claims made by an insurance company owned by Owens Illinois, against its reinsurers including General Re.

General Re's involvement relates to the reinsurance written between 1977 and 1982. General Re said that the claim is in the ordinary course of its business and that the loss, net of reserves and reinsurance would not be material to the financial condition or the annual earnings of General Re.

The decision which is at the county court level, will probably not be available for a week or so. When it is recorded, it will be reviewed to access the prospects for an appeal.

ATLANTA (APRIL 10) BUSINESS WIRE - In the office of the future, workers will be able to turn their desktop telephone systems into multimedia communications centers, as demonstrated in Atlanta Tuesday by Northern Telecom (NYSE:NT) at SuperComm/ICC '90's SUPERHOME and SUPEROFFICE exhibit.

Northern Telecom's demonstration shows an office-of-the-future scenario where one office worker places a telephone call to another location using a desktop computer. During the conversation, the worker uses screen-based telephony to view videos sent from the other location while a co-worker watches the same program. The worker also accesses a switched video network to preview the company's new series of television commercials and can store a clip of it for later use.

Additionally, the exhibit features a bandwidth-on-demand simulation which explains how users will be able to dial-up higher-capacity communications systems to integrate facsimile messages, transfer and share data, share animated graphics and communicate over full motion video using desktop workstations.

In the future, services such as shared video images, video conferencing, and full-motion video to the desktop will be made possible through the use of fiber networks. Implementation of these networks will allow connectivity between various sites at all levels of communication, from voice to video.

Northern Telecom is the leading global supplier of fully digital telecommunications systems. The company provides products and services to the telecommunications industry, businesses, universities, governments and other institutions worldwide. Northern Telecom Inc., with its headquarters in Nashville, Tenn., employs approximately 22,000 people across the United States.

BOSTON (APRIL 10) BUSINESS WIRE - Keane Inc. (AMEX:KEA) reported earnings and revenues Tuesday for the first quarter ended March 31, 1990.

Revenues were $22,671,000, up 43 percent; pretax income rose to $1,907,000 up 36 percent, and net income increased to $1,125,000, or 27 cents per share, from $827,000, or 21 cents-(a) per share a year ago.

According to company President John F. Keane, ''The increase in revenues and net income is due to the expanding market for custom software development services, Keane's differentiated market position as a result of its strong project management expertise, and the company's growth strategy which includes acquisitions.''

In January Keane completed a 3 for 2 stock split, and on March 9, Keane successfully completed a public offering of 826,950 share of stock at a price of $14.625 per share. Certain shareholders of the company sold an additional 250,000 shares.

Net proceeds to the company were used to repay existing indebtedness, and will be used for working capital and other general corporate purposes including possible future acquisitions.

Keane Inc. is a $90 million custom software development services company which designs, develops, integrates and maintains software for corporations and hospitals. Headquartered in Boston, the company markets its services through a network of 20 branch offices located in metropolitan areas in the Eastern half of the United States.

MORRISTOWN, NJ (APRIL 10) BUSINESS WIRE - AT&T Tuesday announced a plan to make major changes in its telephone switching systems, making it much easier for telephone companies to offer new services like computer networking and broadcast-quality video.

AT&T's new Service Net-2000 architecture will give customers individual, personal control over a wide-ranging portfolio of narrowband, wideband and broadband public network services.

These services and the products used to provide them will be introduced over the next few years, within the Service Net-2000 framework.

A key feature of Service Net-2000 will be a ten-fold increase in the power and potential of AT&T's 5ESS (R) Switch. A new switching module will serve more than 25,000 lines, ten times the capacity of the current module.

SONET and SDH are world standards for fiber optic transmission that helps connect systems from different manufacturers.

Service Net-2000 will help network providers control costs by using common technology in the service and access nodes. Commom line units will be used for customer connections, making it simpler for network providers to manage inventories. AT&T expects to produce these common line units in high volume, and believes they will prove to be a significant competitive advantage.

An important feature of the company's plan is the integration of today's SONET-based digital access and cross-connect systems (DACS) into the Service Node.

Service Net-2000 will employ common operations, administration, maintenance and provisioning (OA&MP) systems. Today's functionally oriented, separate systems will become integrated into the network. New customer-oriented systems will result, helping end users and network managers get the most out ot their equipment.

These customer-oriented operations tools will evolve from today's systems, in full compliance with Bellcore and global standards. Today's familiar OA&MP environoment will be maintained, while offering the potential to greatly automate the tedious tasks that are part of running today's telephone networks.

NEW YORK (APRIL 10) BUSINESS WIRE - R. Mackereth Ruckman has been elected vice president and treasurer of Time Warner Inc. by the company's board of directors, it was announced Tuesday by Time Warner Chief Financial Officer Bert W. Wasserman.

Ruckman, known as Mack, had served as an assistant treasurer of Time Warner Inc. (formerly Time Inc.) since 1986.

Prior to that, Ruckman was vice president and district manager/media specialist of Manufacturers Hanover Trust Company since 1984. He joined Manufacturers Hanover on the audit staff in 1972. From 1976 to 1978 he worked in corporate administration, overseeing business plans for divisional lending offices. In July 1981 he was promoted to corporate lending/team leader responsible for expanding the bank's relationships with corporate clients.

Ruckman holds a B.S. in finance from West Virginia University (1971) and an M.B.A. in finance from the Fordham Graduate School of Business Administration (1976). He also attended the American Banking Association's International Banking School in Boulder, Colo. (1981).

Born in Tuscaloosa, Ala., Ruckman makes his home in Bronxville, N.Y., with his wife, the former Ginger Kelly, and their three sons and daughter.

CLEVELAND, OH (APRIL 10) BUSINESS WIRE - At Cleveland-Cliffs Inc's annual meeting of shareholders today, M. Thomas Moore, chairman and chief executive officer, reported the following:

o Cliffs expects the bankruptcy reorganizations of Wheeling-Pittsburgh Steel Corporation and LTV Steel Company to occur in 1990 and 1991, respectively. The reorganization of Sharon Steel Corporation is more uncertain.

o The new magnetite pellet process at Tilden Mine in Michigan, which started in August, 1989, averaged 88 percent of concentrate capacity in the first quarter of 1990. Ore body development is being accelerated and process refinements are continuing in order to attain design performance and bring costs in line with expectations. The recent production trend has been favorable. Cliffs' share of Tilden's magnetite pellet production capacity is 1.3 million tons per year or about 20 percent of Cliffs' share of the total capacity of the mines it manages.

o First quarter earnings are not yet available, but historically they are not representative of full year earnings due to the winter shutdown of most Great Lakes shipping. First quarter sales volume was less than 1989 although still high by historical standards, and first quarter production was under 1989 due to the Tilden magnetite project's planned effect on capacity and production schedule. Net interest expense was lower in the first quarter than last year.

o Earnings for the full year 1990 will primarily depend on steel industry operating levels and related iron ore demand as well as Tilden production performance.

Cliffs-managed mines are currently scheduled to produce at near capacity levels; however, this could change depending on the year's pellet shipment requirements. Also, labor contract negotiations are occurring at several iron ore industry mines in North America in 1990, including Cliffs-managed mines in Michigan.

Cleveland-Cliffs Inc, as manager of six iron ore mines in North America and Australia for the ownership interests of Cliffs and various steel companies, is the world's largest producer of iron ore pellets. Cliffs holds a mojor iron ore reserve position in the United States and is a substanital iron ore merchant.

DALLAS (APRIL 10) BUSINESS WIRE - Oryx Energy Co. (NYSE:ORX) and its operating partner, Santa Fe Minerals Inc. Tuesday announced an $18.5 million subsea completion in the Gulf of Mexico on Garden Banks Block 224.

The 14.6-mile underwater flowline from the wellhead to the platform will be a record length for the Gulf of Mexico and the second longest in the world.

Garden Banks Block 224 is expected to begin production in early 1991, at a rate of 20 million cubic feet of gas per day (MMcf/D). The subsea completion, in 745 feet of water, will be connected to an Oryx Energy-operated platform now under construction on High Island Block A-384 to the north/northwest.

This is the second subsea completion for Oryx Energy and the first for Santa Fe Minerals, Inc.

Subsea completion technology allows more economical development of off-shore oil and gas reservoirs that cannot be reached from existing platforms.

Because of the water depth on Garden Banks Block 224, this subsea completion will result in considerable capital savings over installation of a conventional platform. Last month Oryx Energy announced its first subsea completion, a $4 million project on High Island Block A-370 that will produce between five and 10 MMcf/D beginning in the fourth quarter of 1990.

Oryx Energy has a 50 percent working interest in the Garden Banks Block 224 project. Santa Fe Minerals, Inc., has the other 50 percent working interest and is the operator. The two companies acquired the lease (OCS-G-6364) for $7.3 million in 1983 at OCS Lease Sale No. 74.

The Dallas-based Oryx Energy conducts its domestic operations through Sun Energy Partners, L.P. Oryx Energy, the managing general partner and 98-percent owner of the partnership, is the largest independent oil and gas producer in the world, with assets in excess of $5 billion and proved reserves of more than one billion equivalent barrels. Oryx Energy trades on the New York Stock Exchange with the symbol ''ORX'' and the partnership with the symbol ''SLP.''

CHICAGO (APRIL 10) BUSINESS WIRE - Unisys Corp. has announced the availability of InfoImage Folder, a new image-enabled information system designed to automate the processing of business documents.

Unisys corporate vice president of Document Imaging and Office Systems Roy Beers described InfoImage Folder as ''The marriage of imaging technology and open information systems -- a business solution that combines the capabilities of the industry's best document imaging systems with the connectivity, flexibility and investment-protection advantages of industry-standard computer architectures, operating systems, and communications networks.''

The new system allows users to capture paper-based information into electronic files that can be ''handled'' just as paper files are handled. The electronic files can be organized into ''folders'' that can contain many ''documents,'' each of which can have many ''pages.''

Users can even ''attach'' electronic notes, annotations and comments to an InfoImage Folder document without altering its image.

SANTA BARBARA, CA (APRIL 10) BUSINESS WIRE - Advanced Computer Communications (ACC) Tuesday announced a Basic Ordering Agreement inder which Digital Equipment Corp. can purchase ACC data communications products and services, including the ACS Series 4000 family of bridges, routers and network management products.

According to Gary Krall, ACC director of marketing, ''This agreement allows ACC to continue the relationship it has had with Digital since 1975 while providing ACC with an opportunity to reach those customers who are looking to Digital for system integration.

''The contract facilitates the ordering process of ACC products,'' said Krall. ''It allows Digital to be more responsive to its customers' requirements for bridges, routers and other data communications equipment.''

Under the terms of the contracts, Digital is provided with a blanket purchasing agreement that allows it to acquire ACC's data communications product offerings for resale or internal use.

ACC's Series 4000 bridges, routers and combined bridge/router promote data communications between remote Ethernets or token ring LANs using industry standard protocols such as DECnet, Transmission Control Protocol/Internet Protocol (TCP/IP), Spanning Tree Protocol and the Simple Network Management Protocol (SNMP) for management.

The agreement between the two companies also provides for the procurement of communications processor boards from ACC's System Division in Columbia, Md. These communications processors, namely the ACP Series 5000, 6000 and 7000, offload host processing of communication protocols and are available for Digital MicroVAX, UNIBUS, and VAXBI computers.

EVENDALE, OH (APRIL 10) BUSINESS WIRE - GE Aircraft Engines received firm orders during March for its most advanced high bypass turbofan engine, the CF6-80C2, with a potential value of $830 million, excluding spare parts.

VARIG, the Rio de Janeiro based airline, placed an engine order valued at $365 million for six firm and five option Boeing 747-400 aircraft. This order reaffirms VARIG's longstanding confidence in the CF6-80C2 engine. The airline now has 106 -80C2 engines either on order or in service on a variety of aircraft, including three Boeing 747-300s, six 767-200s and four 767-300ERs. VARIG has also placed orders for six firm and four option McDonnell Douglas MD-11 aircraft powered by the CF6-80C2.

Aeroflot, the Soviet national airline, joined GE in making history during the month of March by placing the first order it has ever placed with a western engine manufacturer. Aeroflot selected the -80C2 to power five Airbus Industrie A310-300 aircraft after extensive evaluation of the -80C2 and engines offered by competing manufacturers. Delivery of Aeroflot's first A310 aircraft is scheduled for late 1991. The potential value of Aeroflot's order is 150 million.

The Dutch airline, KLM, exercised options on two 747-400 aircraft, bringing the total of -80C2 powered 747-400s in its fleet to 15. The value of KLM's latest firm engine order is $58 million.

Lufthansa German Airlines added a firm order valued at $20 million for -80C2 engines to power an Airbus Industrie A310. Lufthansa now has 10 GE-powered A310s either in-service or on firm order.

Hapag-Lloyd, the Hannover, West Germany international air carrier, firmed an order for one additional Airbus Industrie A310 in an engine order valued at $20 million. This brings to seven the total number of -80C2-powered A310 aircraft either on order or already in service within the Hapag-Lloyd fleet.

American Airlines, the largest operator of CF6-80C2 engines opted to increase the number of GE engines in its fleet during the month of March. American exercised options on seven more McDonnell Douglas MD-11s, bringing its total number of that aircraft on firm or option order to 50. The potential value of American's latest engine order is $217 million. In addition to its MD-11s, American has chosen the -80C2 to power its fleet of 37 Airbus Industrie A300-600s and 55 Boeing 767-300s. The number of CF6-80C2 engines either on order or in service with American Airlines is 334.

LOS ANGELES (APRIL 10) BUSINESS WIRE - Color Systems Technology Inc. (ASE:CLR) Tuesday announced that its financial restructuring has been successfully completed through the cooperation of its creditors, including the General Electric Pension Trust (GEPT), U.S. Concord Inc., Equitable Lomas Leasing and Leasetec Corp.

The company has been able to reduce its outstanding debt from $26.7 million to $7.4 million, of which $4.75 million is long-term debt. As consideration for this restructuring, the company's creditors will own approximately 40 percent of the company.

The company will issue approximately 3.5 million additional shares of its common stock to creditors in exchange for their respective discounted claims against the company. These shares will be issued with a restrictive legend, which restricts trading in the shares for at least two years, unless registered sooner by the company with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Although existing shareholders will find that their interest in the company has been diluted, the net book value of their shares will be a negative 17 cents per share at the end of Dec. 31, 1989, compared with a negative $2.85 per share at the end of fiscal year 1989.

Buddy Young, president and chief executive officer, indicated that, ''This major restructuring dramatically improves the company's balance sheet. With the removal of a major portion of its debt, the company is in a position to enhance its growth.''

He further noted that, although the improved balance sheet and reduced interest expense burden is quite beneficial, the company's future prospects still hinge on the success of the company's current aggressive efforts to further the development and expansion of its basic business of color conversion of black-and-white feature films and television series.

PALO ALTO, CA (APRIL 10) BUSINESS WIRE - MAI Basic Four Inc. (MBF) has become a Hewlett-Packard Co. value-added reseller (VAR), the two companies announced Tuesday.

Under terms of the VAR agreement, it is anticipated that MBF will buy $7.5 million worth of HP 9000 UNIX-based minicomputers. MBF will resell the computers with MANBASE, its MRP II (manufacturing-rsource- planning) software solution to manufacturers.

MBF said it entered into a strategic relationship with HP because of its leadership in industry-standard minicomputers, its highly regarded VAR program, the flexibility of its product architecture and its major presence in manufacturing. This is the largest VAR contract MAI signed since it decentralized late last year into several industry-business units.

''This agreement is the strongest demonstration yet of our new role as a super VAR, offering our users a very potent mix of hardware and software we can assemble,'' said Fred Anderson, president, MAI Basic Four. ''Our new open-systems strategy favors precisely this kind of powerful hardware/software combination.

''With MBF's MANBASE manufacturing systems already in use at more than 400 sites nationwide, we expect to enjoy even greater success among Fortune 500 users now that we're aligned with a name-brand vendor,'' Anderson said.

Designed for growth and compatibility, MANBASE manufacturing software can be moved easily from one scalable HP 9000 minicomputer to another. According to Anderson, the HP platforms are ideal for MBF's primary market -- users needing five to 200 terminals.

MBF will sell HP 9000 series 800 multiuser minicomputers, which represent the broadest line of compatible reduced-instruction-set (RISC) systems. HP's Precision Architecture RISC (PA-RISC) systems, including 12 HP-UX-based models, serve up to 800 users. HP-UX minicomputers, which are based on and fully comply with AT&T's UNIX system, use PA-RISC to provide greater performance, higher reliability and lower cost of ownership than systems from competing vendors.

''This agreement combines HP's strengths in RISC technology and leadership in the UNIX market with MBF's expertise in manufacturing software,'' said Bernard Guidon, general manager of HP's General Systems Division.

''Through its broad family of UNIX-based computers that provide outstanding functionality and price/performance, HP is matching customer demand for industry-standard hardware that takes full advantage of leading software packages.''

Based in Tustin, MAI Basic Four Inc. integrates, markets and services business information-processing systems for industry-specific multiuser applications throughout the world. The company operates in 35 countries and has a customer base built by the shipment of more than 45,000 systems worldwide.

Hewlett-Packard Co. is an international manufacturer of measurement and computation products and systems recognized for excellence in quality and support. The company's products and services are used in industry, business, engineering, science, medicine and education in approximately 100 countries. HP has 94,000 employees and had revenue of $11.9 billion in its 1989 fiscal year.

Tokyo (APRIL 10) - Japanese industrial plant exports during the fiscal year which ended in March are expected to show a hike of 12 billion dollars - up 50 percent from the previous year, industry sources said Tuesday.

If final figures confirm that expectation, it will be the first time in seven years that plant exports top the 10 billion-dollar mark.

The high plateau is expected to hold stead through the current fiscal year, the sources said.

Japanese plant exports are rising especially to Southeast Asia and the Middle East against the backdrop of rising oil prices and increasing demand for petroleum products overseas, they added.

MELBOURNE, Australia (APRIL 10) - Ford Australia suffered a 1.6 per cent fall in net profit during 1989 despite being the market leader in the booming local car market, the company said Tuesday.

Chairman Bill Dix said the subsidiary of the U.S. Ford Motor Company posted a net profit after abnormal items of 124.1 million dollars (94.5 million U.S.) for the year to December 31, compared with 126 million dollars (95.9 million U.S) during 1988.

Before abnormal items - largely foreign exchange losses this year but gains last year - net profit rose from 95 million dollars (72.3 million U.S.) to 133.9 million dollars (101.9 million U.S.), he said.

Ford grabbed 24.2 percent of the market - compared with 25.7 per cent the previous year. Toyota came second with an 18.8 percent share while General Motors Holden gained 17.5 percent.

Vehicle sales in Australia swelled 16.4 percent to 607,499 last year, Mr. Dix said.

Ford would invest 1.2 billion dollars (910 million U.S.) over the next five years to modernise facilities and products in Australia, he said.

TOKYO (APRIL 10) - The Japanese Government will partially unfreeze a third yen loan to China which had been withheld following the military crackdown on pro-democracy unrest in Beijing last June, the Nihon Keizai Shimbun reported on Tuesday.

The financial newspaper, quoting a government source, said the funds, from a 810 billion yen (5.1 billion dollars) loan package for fiscal 1990-1995, will be limited to projects related to power construction and other areas considered vital to stabilizing living standards.

But the money will not be provided before the summit of the leaders of the Group of Seven industrialized countries, scheduled for July in Houston, Texas, in order to guage the reaction of the participants, the source was quoted as saying.

The source cited the serious economic crisis in China as a reason for the partial unfreezing.

BEIJING (APRIL 10) - China's industrial output grew 1.4 percent in March on a year-on-year basis, apparently heading off a recession after six months of economic stagnation for two quarters, official reports said Tuesday.

After declining 0.9 percent in January and February, industrial output in the first quarter of 1990 came in even with the same period last year at 88.3 billion dollars, the State Statistical Bureau said.

The recovery came after Premier Li Peng acknowledged last month that an 18-month-old austerity program had been too harsh and ordered the relaxation of a tight money policy.

Credit would be infused into industrial production, he said, with preference to large- and medium-sized state firms, which he called China's economic "backbone."

But rural industry that fueled the overheated 20.7 percent industrial growth in 1988 continued to lead, with the statistics bureau reporting a continued decline in state industry output of 1.1 percent in March.

Rural industries, including collectively-owned factories, are generally more efficient that their state-run counterparts.

The government's austerity program cooled overall industrial growth to 6.8 percent in 1989, and the figure fell to 0.7 percent in the year's last quarter before going into negative numbers in January and February.

China has set an industrial growth target of about six percent this year and forecasts an increase in the gross national product (GNP) of five percent.

SEOUL (APRIL 10) - South Korea's stock market fell Tuesday to its lowest level in two years as gloomy prospects for the economy's future continued to depress the market.

The Composite Price Index fell six points to 810.0 points amid a light turnover of eight million shares, about half usual trading volumes.

The market index has dropped 11.7 percent since the beginning of the year and is down 19.6 percent since it hit its peak of 1,007.7 last April.

The nosedive came as another sign of investor skepticism over a government package of economy-boosting measures announced last week.

Dealers said the plunge came as investors were seeking to get rid of stocks they bought with credit and liquidate their holdings to invest in real estate amid growing inflationary pressures.

"Investors are now paranoid, without knowing where to put their money," a dealer said, adding that many believed the current economic slowdown was due to structural problems from slow technological renovation and sluggish investments in manufacturing facilities.

TOKYO (APRIL 10) - Japan's Kobe Steel Ltd. said Tuesday it had formed a new company in Texas to market welding supplies to companies in the United States, including the petroleum and shipbuilding industries.

The new company, Kobelco Welding of America Inc., is capitalised at 0.3 million dollars and based in Houston. Sales of various wires for mild and stainless steel are expected to grow from seven million dollars this year to 11.4 million dollars in 1992, it said.

Kobe said that sales of welding supplies had grown beyond the capacity of Kobelco America Inc., the company's Houston-based unit for marketing construction machinery which previously handled sales of welding equipment.

Japan's biggest producer of welding products, Kobe controls 50 percent of the domestic market.

HARARE (APRIL 10) - Zimbabwe will earn around 132 million dollars (54.12 million U.S.) from exporting some 400,000 tons of maize this year, outgoing Agriculture Minister David Karimanzira announced Thursday.

He said the Grain Marketing Board (GMB) expected a total intake of some 1.2 million tons of maize harvested in 1989.

This would give the country a reasonable surplus above the normal carry-over requirements and so allow for exports.

Mr. Karimanzira said the GMB would adopt a more aggressive export policy to reduce the cost of holding stocks while also improving the board's trading account and the national balance of payments.

On the outlook for this year, he said the situation appeared to be much the same as last year, and that maize in particular had responded favourably to recent rains.

KUALA LUMPUR (APRIL 10) - The International Natural Rubber Organisation (INRO) bought 2,500 tons of natural rubber in February to support prices, its buffer stock manager said Tuesday.

INRO buffer stock manager Aldo Hofmeister has bought a total of 3,300 tons in the first two months of the year to keep rubber prices within an agreed band.

"The market is holding at this level. It doesn't seem to know which direction to go," Mr. Hofmeister said, adding that he was concerned that prices had hardly moved in the past two weeks.

Rubber brokers said there had been no INRO intervention in the market for the past two weeks.

The buffer stock manager may buy rubber at his discretion when prices fall below a five-day moving average price of 185 MalaysianSingapore cents a kilo, culled from prices here and in Singapore, London and New York.

Purchases are dictated when the five-day moving average price falls below 174 MalaysianSingapore cents. The indicator price was 181.65 cents on Monday.

The upper intervention levels which govern sales from the buffer stock are 251 cents and 262 cents.

TOKYO (APRIL 10) - Fuji Heavy Industries Ltd. president Toshihiro Tajima announced his resignation Tuesday ahead of the expected restructuring of the troubled company by its biggest shareholder Nissan Motor Co. Ltd.

Mr. Tajima told a news conference that he would step down in June to be replaced by Isamu Kawai, who is now president of Nissan's 40 per cent-owned truck and bus affiliate Nissan Diesel Motor Co. Ltd.

Fuji Heavy, which makes Subaru cars, heavy machinery and aircraft, said last month it expected its operating losses to swell to 23 billion yen (148 million dollars) in the year to March, almost eight times its initial estimate.

The revised estimate reflected lower-than-expected car exports to the United States, a downward revision in domestic car sales and increased spending.

Fuji suffered a loss of four billion yen (25.8 million dollars) in the six months to September.

But it estimated at the end of last year that its losses for the full 12 months would only be three billion yen (19.4 million dollars)) due to an improved performance in the second half.

The annual loss is the first since the company, an affiliate of Nissan and Industrial Bank of Japan Ltd., was listed on the Tokyo Stock Exchange in 1960.

Nissan holds 4.2 percent of Fuji while the bank holds about four percent.

TOKYO (APRIL 10) - Japan has been asked to come up with concessions aimed at opening its market to European agricultural produce, European Economic Community (EEC) officials said here Tuesday.

The request was made during a visit here in late March by European Commission vice-president Frans Andriessen to Japanese Agriculture, Forestry and Fisheries Minister Tomio Yamamoto, officials at the EEC's permanent Tokyo delegation said.

Mr. Andriessen's request targets tariff reductions on imported European food and agricultural products, they said

Earlier trade concessions made by Tokyo principally benefitted the United States according to Mr. Andriessen, who called for new concessions to be drawn up in time for the the next EEC-Japanese ministerial summit in Brussels on May 29.

The EEC request primarily concerns processed goods including dairy products, cheese, powdered milk, starch, cakes, confectionery and tomato concentrate, observers said.

Officials from the European Commission, the EEC's executive, and the Japanese ministry of finance met here Monday for annual financial talks, reliable sources said.

The development of the banking and financial sector in Japan and the EEC was reviewed, particularly in the light of a new banking directive in Europe and deregulation of financial markets in Japan, the sources said.

The European Commission was represented by Geoffrey Fitchew, director general for financial institutions and company law and Jean-Francois Pons, international monetary affairs director.

Also in Tokyo, Japanese and European financial institutions which specialise in long-term credit were meeting for talks on stepping up cooperation on investment, Japanese banking sources said.

WELLINGTON (APRIL 10) - State-owned Television New Zealand (TVNZ) on Tuesday denied an Australian report that it had committed equity funds to Bond Media, which is 64 percent owned by Alan Bond's embattled Bond Corp.

Graeme Wilson, controller of planning and public affairs, denied the company had committed equity funds to Bond Media. He said a statement would be issued later.

The Sydney Morning Herald reported Monday that TVNZ was understood to have committed 35 million dollars (26 million U.S) in equity funds to the Bond company.

Bond Media is seeking at least 250 million dollars (190 million U.S.) in new capital to reduce its bank debt to 320 million dollars (245 million U.S.) and redeem 200 million dollars (150 million U.S.) in preference shares held by Kerry Packer's Consolidated Press Holdings.

Last week, Consolidated Press began a wind-up action against Bond Media in the West Australian Supreme Court over the 200 million dollar (152 million U.S.) debt.

Mr. Packer's new Television Corp of Australia has attracted few acceptances for its 53 million dollars (40 million dollars) share-swap bid for Bond Media.

The offer has been extended to May 11, two days after the deadline set by a banking syndicate for Bond Media to bed down its capital restructure before taking possible wind-up action.

TOKYO (APRIL 10) - Japan's Mitsubishi Metal Corp. and Mitsubishi Mining and Cement Co. Ltd. said Tuesday they would merge into a diversified metals and building-materials giant with annual sales of almost six billion dollars.

The decision was prompted by "challenges of the operating environment" and "agreement that combining resources would be in the long-term interests of shareholders, customers and employees," a joint statement said.

The merger, to take effect December 1, will bring to an end 40 years of operating as separate firms. The two were both divisions of the same company until 1950 when the metal mining division was spun off into Mitsubishi Metal.

The company is now Japan's biggest non-ferrous metals concern with activities ranging from the smelting of gold, silver, copper, zinc and lead to the production of aluminium cans. Mitsubishi Mining and Cement is one of the country's four biggest cement producers, and also distributes coal and oil.

The merged company, with some 9,000 employees, expects to post a pre-tax profit of 40 billion yen (280 million dollars) in its first year on sales of 900 billion yen (5.8 billion dollars). The combined assets of the two companies will total 880 billion yen (5.7 billion dollars), the statement said.

Under the agreement, shareholders will receive nine Mitsubishi Metal shares for every 10 shares they hold in Mitsubishi Mining, the statement said. Shares in Mitsubishi Metal closed at 760 yen Tuesday while shares in Mitsubishi Mining closed at 686 yen.

Mitsubishi Metal president Takeshi Nagano will become chairman of the new company while Mitsubishi Mining president Masaya Fujimura will be president.

"Our former presidents had been considering the merger for 40 years," Mr. Nagano told a news conference. "Our post-war period has now ended."

"I'm sure annual sales of the merged company will top one trillion yen (6.45 billion dollars) within five years," he added.

Mr. Nagano cited ceramics as a specific area of mutual interest. "We have been seeking to develop ceramic products. Mitsubishi Mining and Cement already has high technology in this field," he said.

Turnover was up 4.8 percent at 1.32 billion pounds (2.2 billion dollars) and final dividend was fixed at 7.25 pence, giving a total for the year of nine pence. Earnings per share were up from 20.8 pence to 23.7.

The result was below the least optimistic market forecasts of profit of around 120 million pounds, and Taylor Woodrow shares were down six pence at 243 in mid-session trading in London.

PARIS, April 10 (AFP) - A prime Paris office site has been sold for 2.78 billion francs (487 million dollars) in one of the biggest property deals in the French capital in recent years, the estate agents who handled the deal said Tuesday.

Publishers Hachette had put the two buildings, close to the Paris bourse, out to tender, and accepted the 2.78 billion franc offer in a second round of bidding, Arjil Immobilier said.

They did not reveal who had bought the 40,000 square meters (48,000 square yards) of office space.

The offices are currently occupied by the Nouvelles Messageries de la Presse Parisienne (NMPP), which handles newspaper distribution throughout France.

The NMPP is due to move to a new Paris site during next year.

BRUSSELS (APRIL 10) - The European Commission on Tuesday decided to take judicial measures to force West Germany to abandon plans to introduce a new tax on lorries using its motorways.

Bonn has three weeks to reply to the Commission's written request to abandon the plan, and depending on the response Brussels "could decide to take the matter rapidly before the European Court of Justice," the European Economic Community executive said in a statement.

West Germany is planning to introduce from July 1 an annual tax of between 1,000 and 9,000 Deutsche marks (590 and 5,300 dollars) on lorries using its motorways, with the rate varying according to the size of the vehicle.

West German truck drivers will not be out of pocket, as the truck tax they have paid will be deducted from their normal road tax, and the Commission feels the tax discriminates against drivers from other EEC member countries and could complicate the operation of the single European market in 1993.

It does not contest the principle of making drivers pay for the use of road networks.

West Germany has argued that its drivers are currently at a disadvantage because they have to pay motorway tolls in EEC countries such as France, and because West German tax on petrol is higher than elsewhere.

European Transport Commissioner Karel van Miert of Belgium retorted Tuesday that the Commission's proposals for harmonising fuel and truck taxes across the EEC were "entirely adequate" to ensure fair competition between European truckers.

But the EEC ministers have so far been unable to reach agreement on these proposals, first put forward more than two years ago, or on a system whereby payment for use of the road network would be equally shared among vehicles.

Belgium has threatened that if West Germany pushes ahead with the plan, it will revive a similar scheme which it abandoned two years ago under pressure from the European Commission.

MILAN, Italy (APRIL 10) - The Italian business world is rife with rumours of a deal linking Italian computer firm Olivetti and Dutch group Philips, although neither side has given any information on current talks.

Olivetti's press office on Tuesday refused to go further than a statement issued last week that it had made "exploratory contact" with Philips on "the possibility of cooperation in various sectors, such as printers and electronic components," and refused to say how long the dialogue had been going on.

But most financial analysts here believe the talks cover a much wider field.

Europe's leading computer concerns, faced with falling sales and increased Japanese competition, have been looking for link-ups with other companies for some time.

Italian experts stress that Olivetti is holding up well against the problems of the micro-computer market despite a fall in profits.

Turnover for 1989, due to be announced at the end of the month, is expected to be up 7.5 percent at more than 9,000 billion lire (7.2 billion dollars).

Philips would be a natural partner as the two groups have complementary interests in several sectors.

Some analysts have suggested that the Dutch group, whose computer division is showing a loss, and Olivetti, could be planning a joint venture to produce computers.

CAEN, FRANCE (APRIL 10) - A French woman has just married a man who died a year ago, after winning permission for the ceremony from President Francois Mitterrand, authorities in the western village of Cricqueboeuf said Tuesday.

Anne-Marie Bernicot, 35, was married Saturday and officially declared a widow on Sunday.

French law allows for marriage after the death of one of the partners, but the procedure had precedent only in the cases of engaged military personnel, or of engaged and pregnant women.

Ms. Bernicot, a Parisienne, was not pregnant, and her fiance, Pierre-Jean Camon, who died of illness aged 59, was not in military service, local authorities said. But she made a special request to Mr. Mitterrand, which he quickly approved in November.

Cricqueboeuf Mayor Jean-Gaston Moore said: "Publications of the bans of marriage, and a witness statement, proved the formal wish of the deceased to marry."

HANOI (APRIL 10) - U.S. legislators due here this week will not visit the strategic naval base at Cam Ranh Bay in southern Vietnam currently used by the Soviet Union, a Vietnamese Foreign Ministry spokesman said here Tuesday.

A trip to the base was not on the agenda for visits by Representative Patricia Schroeder, due to arrive in Hanoi on Friday, Senator Robert Kerrey, due Saturday, and Senator Art Torres, scheduled to arrive Wednesday, the spokesman said.

Recent reports in Washington said the legislators would be visiting the U.S.-built base which was abandoned at the end of the Vietnam War in 1975 and then occupied by the Soviet Union. The U.S. lawmakers wanted to verify assertions by the Soviet Union that it was reducing its forces at Cam Ranh Bay.

The spokesman added that recent reports in Washington that the United States would be able to use the base in the future were "totally unfounded."

On Monday the State Department denied the statement by Representative Thomas Ridge, a Pennsylvania Republican, that Vietnam had suggested the U.S. military return to Cam Ranh Bay once the Soviet Union withdrew from the base.

Mr. Ridge had said the proposal was raised privately at a conference in Bali, Indonesia, attended by several U.S. congressmen and ranking Vietnamese officials.

Moscow announced recently that it had withdrawn its fighters from the base and would reduce its naval presence there.

Soviet Ambassador to Phnom Penh Rashid Khamidoul has said since that the Soviet Union intended to withdraw completely from the base, its largest outside the Soviet Union.

The reduction of Soviet forces in the region has been cited by some U.S. lawmakers as a reason for also paring back the costly U.S. military presence in East Asia.

Mrs. Schroeder's delegation is also looking into possible alternative sites for two giant U.S. bases in the Philippines whose leases expire next year. Negotiations on renewing the leases are due to begin in coming weeks but many influential Filipinos oppose continued presence of the bases.

LONDON (APRIL 10) - The United Nation's World Health Organization (Who) is to introduce new moves to limit the worldwide demand for narcotics, it was announced in London on Tuesday.

Who director-General Hiroshi Nakajima told an international drugs conference that the health administrations in Latin American countries would be strengthened to expand educational work on the negative effects of drug consumption.

New prevention and drug treatment programs would be set up in Europe and Australia, Nakajima said, describing narcotics abuse as a ''global threat for mankind''.

At the conference scheduled to last through Wednesday, government representatives from 112 countries are discussing possibilities to limit the production and consumption of drugs.

Princess Anne called on the delegates to let deeds follow their proclamations. She said as president of Britain's Save the Children Fund she had seen the devastating effects of drugs on youths.

''Drug processing, trafficking and using is a criminal waste of human and economic resources which this world cannot afford,'' she said.

Like most delegates, Princess Anne said narcotics production should be limited by offering an alternative to farmers who cultivate drug crops.

She demanded more international cooperation to cut down the narcotics trade and more information in the consumer countries to make clear the dangers of drug abuse.

According to figures presented at the conference, a record amount of 4,000 kilograms of cocaine was confiscated in Europe during the first three months of 1990, compared with 6,300 kilograms for all of 1989.

SANTIAGO (APRIL 10) - Chile's new government plans to maintain its diplomatic relations with South Africa at the charge d'affaires level pending progress in efforts to end apartheid, the Foreign Ministry has said.

President Patricio Aylwin, who took office in March after 16 years of military rule by General Augusto Pinochet, has no plans to fill the ambassadorial post left vacant with the resignation of Roberto Soto Mackenney -- the Pinochet-appointed envoy --, a ministry spokesman said Monday.

Gen. Pinochet's government had strong diplomatic and commercial ties with South Africa.

Mr. Aylwin's government is awaiting clear signs of progress toward ending racial segregation in South Africa as a condition for considering normalizing ties, the spokesman added.

FRANKFURT, West Germany (APRIL 10) - Dresdner Bank, West Germany's second largest private bank, said Tuesday its net consolidated profit rose 25.2 percent last year to 650.2 million Deutsche marks (382.4 million dollars).

Operating profit on client operations was up 17.1 percentto a record 1.88 billion Deutsche marks (1.1 billion dollars), the bank said, and overall operating profit rose 20 percentto a level as good as the record result of 1986, but did not give a figure.

The bank's operations on its own account showed a profit increase of 23 per cent, bank president Wolfgang Roeller told a press conference, but did not give a figure.

Dividend was increased by two Deutsche marks to 12 Deutsche marks for the year.

Mr. Roeller said that the bank had made an excellent start to 1990, with operating profit on client operations showing an eight percentincrease and overall operating profit up "considerably more" than this.

Revenue from interest rose 2.8 percentlast year to 4.22 billion Deutsche marks, despite a reduced interest margin under pressure from competition in the market, Mr. Roeller said.

Service activities paid for on a commission basis did even better, with revenue up 20.9 per cent, double the increase in 1988.

Commissions totalled 1.81 billion Deutsche marks, or 30 percentof the bank's total revenue, up from 25.7 percenttwo years ago.

"Strict cost management" had enabled the bank to limit the increase in operating expenses to 3.8 percentto 4.16 billion Deutsche marks, Mr. Roeller said.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 10) - For the second time in three years, large numbers of bottlenose dolphins are dying off a U.S. coastline, raising familiar questions about pollution that few seem equipped to answer.

Some 300 of the air-breathing mammals have died since January off the coastlines of Louisiana, Alabama, Florida, Texas and Mississippi, and the number is going up by the day.

In Texas, where a disproportionate number of deaths has occurred, marine mammal specialists have blamed a cold snap which froze over the usually ice-free Matagorda Bay earlier in the year.

But they have no explanation for the carcasses which have washed up hundreds of kilometers away, or why it is happening now.

What haunts them is the fear that the death toll will reach the proportions of a mortality in 1987 that killed some 800 bottlenose dolphins off the eastern seaboard.

The animals, often blistered and peeling, littered the coasts of New York, New Jersey, and the Carolinas over a nine-month period, unsettling the scientific community and alarming swimmers.

Scientists believe the mysterious illness ultimately decimated up to half the bottlenose dolphin population living off the mid-Atlantic coast, which has been estimated at 4,000 to 6,000. Most died at sea or were eaten by sharks.

Dr. Joseph Geraci, a veterinarian at the University of Guelph, Ontario, put forward the theory after numerous autopsies that a naturally-occurring algae may have triggered the deaths.

Seemingly ''natural'' causes have been linked to other mass mortalities, including that of 14 humpback whales off Cape Cod in 1988, about 7,000 seals off northern Europe the same year, and a string of sea lions that died in convulsions off of California last year.

The alga blooms and viruses linked to those deaths may have been indirectly caused by human activity, according to some marine experts.

The fact that such deaths are becoming an almost annual event, afflicting mass quantities of animals near industrial areas, has led some scientists to believe that the answer must lie in pollution.

But none can prove it.

''A lot of people wanted to hear that pollution was the problem, but there was no data,'' says Mark Swingle, a marine biologist at the Virginia Beach Science Museum. ''There were large amounts of pollutants in the blubber (of the mid-Atlantic dolphins), but no direct evidence that those pollutants caused their deaths.''

Dr. James Mead, curator of marine mammals at the Smithsonian Institution, cites the growing contamination of coastal waterways and a ''gut feeling'' as the basis of his suspicions.

''There is a lot of circumstantial evidence that man has upset the marine environment to the extent that weird things are happening,'' he says. ''Weird things happened before, but now they're happening more severely and more commonly.''

Daniel Martineau, a marine mammal specialist at Cornell University who has studied the effects of polychlorenated biphenyls (Pcbs) on beluga whales in the St. Lawrence River, says environmental causes are simply ''common sense''.

With a little more research, he says, that conclusion will be born out. But research funds are hard to come by, and there is little previous data to go by.

Testing a specimen for the presence of toxic compounds costs at least 800 dollars per dolphin, and only a few U.S. labs are equipped to conduct such tests.

Using live animals in controlled testing is unthinkable because of the popularity the animals have acquired through television shows like ''Flipper.'' Deliberately contaminating them would be out of the question.

Even if it weren't, Martineau says, it is almost impossible to find a ''clean'' dolphin whose body isn't already contaminated with toxic elements like Pcbs.

Nina Young, a marine mammalogist at the Washington-based Center for Marine Conservation, says it may be too late to prevent future mass die-offs before some of the answers are found.

''For 30 years or so we've had mass strandings of pilot whales and other marine mammals'', she said, ''and we didn't take samples before we realized what we were dumping into the ocean. Now we're finding ourselves in this catch-up mode.''

LONDON (APRIL 10) - British clothing store chain Next said Tuesday it made pre-tax losses of 46.7 million pounds (77.8 million dollars) in the year ended January 31, against a profit of 62.3 million pounds (103.8 million dollars) the previous year.

Next had already seen its profit tumble in the year to January 31, 1989 after showing a profit of 92.4 million pounds the previous year, as a result of a slowdown in retail sales due to a sharp increase in British interest rates.

Market analysts had expected Next to show a loss in the year to January, but the figure was much worse than the most pessimistic forecasts of losses of up to 20 million pounds.

Next shares fell six pence to 73 pence in early trading in London on Tuesday after shedding four pence on Monday.

Turnover in the year to the end of January was down to 949.2 million pounds from 1.13 billion the previous year, and final dividend was set at two pence, giving a total for the year of 4.7, down from 7.4.

Next has closed 265 shops over the past three years after too-rapid expansion in the early 1980's and now has only about 400 shops.

It has made an exceptional provision of 73.1 million pounds to cover the cost of restructuring, to include closing shops and cutting staff.

KATHMANDU (APRIL 10) - Nepal Tuesday returned to normal with streets busy with people including foreign tourists even as preparations were underway for the second phase of consultations between the government and the leaders of political parties.

Prime Minister Lokendra Bahadur Chand told a news briefing here that the second phase of the consultations could begin later Tuesday or on Wednesday.

The second phase of consultations is expected to be more difficult than the first which took place at the weekend and ended in King Birendra's lifting of the ban on political parties at the end of seven weeks of demonstrations for multi-party democracy.

The second phase will center on the formation of an interim government to run the administration until elections.

The question now arising is whether the interim government should be formed now or after the constitution is amended.

Staking claims to the interim government would be the Congress Party and factions of the Communist Party as well as the supporters of the Panchayat system who will most probably form the Panchayat Party.

The Panchayat, though discredited, has a well-knit organization.

The shape of the constitutional reforms to be promulgated by Birendra is also expected to be discussed, and for this a constitution reforms commission is to be constituted.

Meanwhile, life in the Nepalese returned to normal. But there were reminders of the violence of the past week in the form of burnt tires, broken street railings and non-functioning street lights.

ADDIS ABABA (APRIL 10) - Ethiopia will get more aid from the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund (IMF) in future, a senior Ethiopian oficial said here following talks the two bodies in Washington, the Ethiopian Herald reported Tuesday.

Fasika Sidelil, secretary of the Worker's Party of Ethiopia central committee, said both financial instiutions appreciated new policy measures announced by Ethiopia last month, the official English-language newspaper said.

The central committee on March 6 approved a package of reforms bringing little political change but opting for a mixed economy in which state controls would disappear or be relaxed and in which the private sector would play an "unlimited" role in the country's economic life.

The report gave no further details but said that Mr. Fasika had briefed both World Bank president Barber Conable and IMF director Michel Camdessus on the new measures.

A major result of the economic reforms has been a dramatic fall in grain prices which went down by 30 to 40 percent within a week. The lifting of state controls has allowed peasant farmers to sell their crops directly on the open market.

JERUSALEM (APRIL 10) - The Israeli police stepped up protection for the 120 deputies of the Knesset with a day to go to a crucial vote of confidence in premier-designate Shimon Peres.

Reports here Tuesday said groups with an interest in the vote might try to stop certain deputies from showing up for the Wednesday vote on Peres' proposed minority-based government.

Police units in Jerusalem were also reinforced, with demonstrations expected in the government district.

Doubts remained to the last whether Peres could scrape together support from 61 deputies as he claimed he would.

His Labor Party claimed he was certain of a vote from a bare majority consisting of Labor itself (39), liberals, civil-rights activists, socialists, communist Arabs, the ultra Jewish orthodox party Agudat Israel and a renegade Likud Bloc member, Abraham Sharir, who is being heavily rewarded for switching sides.

The proposed cabinet rates as a minority one because the Arab deputies have stipulated they will not join a Peres-led government.

A struggle to win three liberal deputies from the Likud Bloc continued Tuesday despite celebrations of Judaism's feast of Pesoh (the passover). Acting Prime Minister Itzhak Shamir hopes to retain the loyalty of the three, who are led by Trade and Industry Minister Itzhak Modai. Peres has offered Modai the finance portfolio.

WARSAW (APRIL 10) - President Wojciech Jaruzelski of Poland starts an official four-day visit to the Soviet Union Wednesday.

The visit comes as two sensitive issues hang over bilateral relations -- difficult economic negotiations that have bogged down over an outstanding Polish debt, and vocal support in Poland for Lithuanian independence.

A third, long-standing point of contention might be resolved, however.

Mr. Jaruzelski and his large Polish delegation will visit the site of the 1940 massacre of some 15,000 Polish officers in the forest of Katyn, near Smolensk in western Belorussia.

For the first time in the Soviet Union last week, documents from Soviet archives were made public attributing responsibility for the killing to Stalin's NKVD police.

The memory of Katyn has poisoned bilateral relations for nearly a half-century, and there is some expectation that Moscow might officially acknowledge responsibility in a symbolic gesture during Mr. Jaruzelski's visit.

Mr. Jaruzelski and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev are also expected to discuss German reunification and the related "Two-plus-four" conference.

The conference, involving Moscow, the United States, France and Britain with the two Germanies, has agreed that Poland should take part when the issue of the German border comes up.

Warsaw is seeking Moscow's support for guarantees on the intangibility of the current German-Polish border along the Oder-Neisse rivers.

But Mr. Jaruzelski will be facing Moscow's irritation over support in Poland for Lithuania.

Last week, Moscow unilaterally closed the Polish-Lithuanian border, and denounced a visit by a Polish Solidarity parliamentary delegation to the Lithuanian capital of Vilnius in late March as "interference in internal Soviet affairs".

The other sensitive issue is an outstanding four billion-ruble (6.6 billion dollars) debt. Moscow says it is an outright debt owed by Poland, but Warsaw says it should be "cancelled" because it grew out of trade calculations that were advantageous to Moscow in the 1970s.

Talks over the issue again broke down in deadlock when a Polish delegation visited Moscow last weekend.

KHARTOUM (APRIL 10) - All Sudan's achievements, except for a brief period after independence in 1956, have been the work of its various military regimes, junta leader Omar el Beshir told officers and men at a garrison here on Tuesday.

Each time, the armed forces had taken power "to eliminate corruption and make up for the failures of the governments formed by political parties", General Beshir said.

He seized power at the end of last June from the elected civilian government of prime minister Sadek el Mahdi, and banned all political parties.

Previous military regimes included that of Gen. Ibrahim Abboud, 1958-64, and of Marshal Gaafar Nimeiry, 1969-85.

In its nine months, the junta had enacted economic and political reforms, restored security and, in the past few months, won victories in the southern civil war against the rebel Sudan People's Liberation Army, Gen. Beshir said.

Referring to last week's disclosure of an alleged plot by former officers and politicians from the banned parties, he said his regime would "triumph over all attacks and insidious rumors".

DAR ES SALAAM (APRIL 10) - The director of the Tanzanian Posts and Telecommunications Corporation (TPTC) has announced the suspension of two more employees as part of a campaign against theft and illegal transactions.

Francis Kasambala was quoted Tuesday in a government-owned paper that a postal officer had been caught removing magazines from an embassy private mail bag and putting them into another postal box on behalf of someone known to the culprit.

A parcel delivery counter clerk was caught handing a package to a wrong adressee to facilitate the removal of the contents from the parcel outside the postal offices, the Daily News quoted the postal chief as saying.

"We are sending an appeal to members of the public to give information in confidence to enable us apprehend the culprits", Mr. Kasambala added, noting that the apprehension of the two had been the result of a tip-off.

Their suspension brings the number of employees so far removed from the corporation to five following the suspension of three last week.

A fortnight ago, newly-appointed communications and works minister Pius Ng'wandu gave the TPTC leadership until April 15 to remove all bad elements from the corporation in order to restore public confidence in the organization.

TOKYO (APRIL 10) - Japanese machinery makers landed orders totaling 2,000 billion yen (13.7 billion dollars) in February, up 11.6 percent from January and up 29.4 percent from a year earlier, the Economic Planning Agency said Tuesday.

Private machinery orders, excluding wildly fluctuating factors, rose 7.9 per cent to 983.1 billion yen (6.5 billion dollars) for the first rise in four months, the agency said. It also marked a 24.5 percent increase from a year earlier.

The total excludes orders for ships and order from power utilities to serve as an indicator of private capital spending.

Overall orders from the public sector rose 14.4 percent from the previous month while those from the private sector rose 11.8 percent. Orders from abroad gained 16.7 percent.

BERLIN (APRIL 10) - The West German monopolies commission said Tuesday it had given the green light for Siemens to take a controlling stake in computer maker Nixdorf.

Siemens' position in the computer market would be strengthened by the deal but would not affect competition in the market, and the new company Siemens-Nixdorf-Information Systems would not have a dominant market position, the monopolies comission said.

Siemens, West Germany's second largest industrial group, said in January that it planned to take a 51 percent stake in Nixdorf, in serious financial trouble, to create Europe's leading computer maker.

The new company, to be based in Munich, will have an annual turnover of some 12 billion Deutsche marks (6.5 billion dollars), comparable to that of current European number one, Bull of France, following its acquisition of U.S. computer concern Zenith for 6.5 billion dollars.

Nixdorf had the worst year in its history last year, with turnover down 100 million Deutsche marks (58 million dollars) to 5.25 billion (three billion dollars).

It did not reveal what its losses were, but West German press reports put them at around 20 percent of turnover.

Nixdorf, founded in 1952 by engineer Heinz Nixdorf, was for many years one of the leading lights of West German industry but started heading downwards following Mr. Nixdorf's death in 1986.

President Klaus Luft was forced to step down in November, making way for Horst Nako who pledged to turn the company round.

During a computer fair in Hamburg last month, Mr. Nasko said the group could see the light at the end of the tunnel as orders were up four percent in the first two months of the year.

TAIPEI (APRIL 10) - The Taiwan Central Bank said Tuesday it would use its foreign exchange reserves to finance selected overseas investment projects undertaken by local enterprises.

Those eligible for the loans, available from Wednesday, would include both government and private firms seeking mergers and acquisitions abroad and launching investment projects beneficial to Taiwan, the bank said.

Those applying should be engaged in the exploitation of energy resources, acquiring high technical know-how and expertise in management, environmental protection and biological equilibrium, expanding Taiwan's international sales and upgrading the country's financial operations, it added.

Loans in U.S. dollars for up to 80 per cent of the required capital to a maximum of five years are available through four designated financial institutions -- the Bank of Communications, the Export and Import Bank, the Internationl Commerical Bank of China, and China Development Corp.

The financing is aimed to "effectively utilize the foreign exchange reserves to expand the country's economic foundation for further economic progress," the Central Bank said.

Taiwan has foreign exchange reserves worth about 72 billion U.S. dollars, one of the highest in the world, and the Central Bank had been attacked for failing to make the best use of the holdings.

There would be capital outflow in the initial period (after loans are extended), the bank said. But it added that in the long run, returns from overseas investment projects would have a positive impact to the country's balance of payments "after they enhance the productivity and widen sales network of Taiwan-made goods."

KABUL (APRIL 10) - The Afghan government Tuesday at a special ceremony here handed over to the Soviet Embassy a Red Army soldier recently freed by Afghan troops from a mujahedeen guerrilla base.

Alexei Tekhanov, 23, was handed over to Soviet Ambassador Boris Pastaukhov by Deputy Foreign Minister Abdul Baqi Samundari, a few days after he was freed during an operation in Kabul province.

The soldier, dressed in a blue track suit, cried during the ceremony but otherwise looked fit, witnesses said.

Mr. Tekhanov was captured in August 1986 by the Jamiat-i-Islami rebel group and was taken to a hideout in Kabul's Karabah district, 30 kilometers (18 miles) north of the capital.

Moscow has said some 300 Soviet soldiers were being held captive by the mujahedeen inside Afghanistan and in neighboring Pakistan, but there is no independent confirmation.

Soviet troops were sent to Afghanistan in 1979 to prop up the communist government in Kabul. The last Soviet soldiers were withdrawn in February 1989.

JOHANNESBURG (APRIL 10) - Seven blacks were shot dead and three others seriously wounded when the minibus they were travelling in was ambushed by unknown gunmen in the war-ravaged Natal province early Tuesday, police reported.

The incident occurred near the Natal midlands town of Illovo when the driver was forced to halt his vehicle at a barricade in the road, a police spokesman said.

Some 22 people attacked the vehicle, firing at point-blank range at the 19 occupants. Police later established that at least three different types of firearm had been used.

It was not immediately clear whether the shooting was politically motivated but police said they had arrested a man and further arrests were expected.

PARIS (APRIL 10) - Traffic at airports worldwide has risen for the second year in a row, but some parts of Asia saw a spectacular increase, while the number of passengers travelling through U.S. airports fell, Aeroports Magazine reports.

Passenger and freight traffic rose six percent in 1989 after an eight per-cent advance in 1988, the French publication said, quoting figures from 162 countries compiled by the International Civil Aviation Organization.

Five percent more travellers used European airports, however all three Paris facilities -- Charles de Gaulle, Orly and Le Bourget -- had a 10.5 per- cent increase following a 9.9 percent the year before.

A little less than 45 million visitors flew in and out of Paris, confirming the French capital's record as having the second busiest European airport, after London, which had 62.8 million passengers in 1989. Paris also holds seventh place worldwide.

However Asia experienced huge increases in passenger traffic, particularly in Seoul, which had a 34 percent rise, and Bangkok, with 18.6 percent.

Aeroports Magazine, published by Paris airports, linked the trend to general economic expansion in the region. Hong Kong, an exception, had a rise of only 2.1 percent, partly because of political uncertainty over the British colony's future as a part of China.

In the United States, one percent fewer travellers used airports last year, mainly because of a saturation of capacities both on the ground and in the air, as well as higher air fares. However Chicago, Los Angeles and Dallas all bucked the trend, with increases of 2.1, 3.7 and 7.5 percent, respectively.

But U.S. airports remained among the world's busiest. New York's Kennedy, La Guardia and Newark airports took the overall world record, with 74.4 million passengers, followed by Chicago's two airports with 67.76 million.

London took third place, followed by Tokyo, Los Angeles, Dallas, Paris, Atlanta, San Francisco and Denver.

BONN (APRIL 10) - The Soviet Union wants talks with western countries on reducing the list of high technology items whose export to the eastern bloc is restricted, Deputy Prime Minister Stepan Sitarian said here Tuesday.

Mr. Sitarian told a meeting of the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe (CSCE) devoted to economic issues that Moscow was ready to agree to the principle of on-site inspection of transferred technology if the West were prepared to ease its position.

NICE, FRANCE (APRIL 10) - The heart of a young U.S. serviceman, killed in a bar fight here last month, has been successfully transplanted into a native of this southern resort city, the man's doctors announced here Tuesday.

The operation took place on March 19, three days after the death of Edward Cheever, 29, who was on leave from his base in Schlassenberg, West Germany.

The recipient, Robert Ruiz, 32, a victim of coronary disease, was up and walking four days later after the operation at the Arnault Tzank Institut in nearby Saint-Laurent-du-Var and is doing well in a rehabilitation clinic, his family said.

Mr. Cheever, who was with three friends from his base, died after falling in a scuffle at a bar.

PARIS (APRIL 10) - The French capital got a preview of what the metro might be like in the year 2000 when an experimental prototype was unveiled here Tuesday by city transport officials.

The 46-meter (yard) long "boa", as it is called, will start actual test runs in June.

It has none of the old separations between cars but, like its namesake, is one long, continuous train that can hold up to 890 passengers -- five percent more than those now in use.

Other technical innovations include independent wheel action and "non-synchronous" traction, spokesmen said.

If tests prove successful, the city will order enough to replace the current 1,400 metro trains between the years 1998 and 2010, when the present cars will average 30 years old.

Designers estimate the cost per train at 25 million francs (4.3 million dollars), 15 percent less than the cost of the traditional model.

BUCHAREST (APRIL 10) - A daughter of former Romanian monarch Michael I arrived in Bucharest Tuesday with a seven-vehicle convoy of humanitarian aid from her home in England.

Princess Elena lives with her husband and two children in Durham, northeastern England. Her sister Sophia was to arrive Wednesday with a similar convoy from Switzerland.

Michael I, the former Romanian monarch, is due in Bucharest Thursday on his first visit home since he left for exile after his forced abdication on December 30, 1947, his office in Geneva confirmed Tuesday.

The former king and his wife, Anne de Bourbon-Parme, will be on a private visit of "a week to 10 days", the first few in the capital and the rest around the country.

They will be accompanied by the eldest of their five daughters, Margareta.

The former king, now 68, lives in Versoix, near Geneva.

He has not come out in support of any party in the current Romanian electoral campaign, but has said repeatedly in recent weeks he was waiting for "the Romanians to call him" home to renew the "constitutional link" broken at his abdication.

The Romanian presidential election is scheduled for May 20.

PARIS (APRIL 10) - French President Francois Mitterrand "personally" thanked Libyan leader Moamer Kadhafi on Tuesday for his "decisive role" in the release of three hostages, the president's office said in a statement here.

Mr. Mitterrand thanked "all those who had contributed to the freeing" in Beirut early Tuesday of French woman Jacqueline Valente, her Belgian boyfriend Fernand Houtekins and their daughter Sophie-Liberte.

He had learned "with joy" of the "happy ending of the affair".

Mrs. Valente and Mr. Houtekins, seized in November 1987 from their yacht in the eastern Mediterranean, and their two-year-old daughter born in captivity left Beirut for France on a special government plane Tuesday.

They had been held for nearly two and a half years by Abu Nidal's Fatah Revolutionary Council, a radical pro-Libyan Palestinian group. Colonel Kadhafi on Tuesday praised the group for its "humanity".

BONN (APRIL 10) - West German food retailer Asko Deutsche Kaufhaus said Tuesday it was holding talks with an unnamed British conglomerate which was interested in taking a stake in the West German company.

The spokesman refused to confirm a West German newspaper report that the British group was Lonrho plc and that it was considering taking a 10 percent stake in Asko.

In London, a Lonrho spokesman dismissed the report as "pure speculation."

The London newspaper the Evening Standard said Tuesday that Lonrho was looking to acquire a 35 percent stake in Asko for 250 million pounds (416.6 million dollars).

Lonrho already holds a 50 percent stake in West German road transport group Kuehne und Nagel and distributes Volkswagen cars in Britain.

Asko has come under criticism for the complex structure of its shareholding and under pressure from the banks has agreed to put its capital structure in order despite the failure of a bid to reach a deal with Dutch competitor Ahold.

ABIDJAN (APRIL 10) - Ten years after Liberia's President William R. Tolbert Jr. was assassinated in a bloody coup, his family, spread out over three continents, dreams of returning home when the "conditions are right."

Christine Norman, the late president's fourth child and a former deputy education minister, said "most Liberians living abroad" would like to return to their West African country once they are guaranteed "genuine freedom, security and the right to help without hindrance."

"We thank God for our father, a creative and self-disciplined man who died for his country," Mrs. Norman told Agence France-Presse. Mr. Tolbert was killed in an April 12, 1980, coup led by then Master-Sergeant Samuel Doe, who has been in power since.

Mrs. Norman added that there are presently several hundred thousand Liberians living in self-imposed exile. Coastal stretches of Liberia, which became an independent republic in July 1847, were settled in the 19th century by freed black slaves.

Now the 46-year-old teacher works in Abidjan, Ivory Coast, where she and her husband Lawrence with their three children and four foster children have lived since 1985.

Her father, William Tolbert served as vice president for 19 years before becoming head of state in July 1971 following the death of William V.S. Tubman.

While president he stressed regional integration and travelled extensively around the world. At home, Mr. Tolbert championed the ideal of equal opportunity through efficiency and productivity in his concept of the "Wholesome Functioning Society."

Mrs. Norman described her father as an honest man who took seriously his roles as president and an ordained Baptist minister.

He served as president of the Liberia Baptist and Educational Convention and was the first Black African elected president of the Baptist World Alliance in 1965.

Critics said as a politician he favored Americo-Liberians, descendants of the North American slaves, over the indigenous tribal groups.

Mrs. Norman said Liberians themselves would have to say if they liked him or not, but she was certain that most respected him.

"The coup really shocked many of us," she said, reliving her eight months under house arrest after the new military regime sentenced her to life imprisonment for treason and corruption.

Her mother, Victoria, spent one month in prison and another three months under house arrest.

Liberian authorities announced months after the coup that A.B. Tolbert, a brother and legislator, was "missing as a result of the coup." He has not been seen since.

Mrs. Norman, her mother, brother and four sisters left Liberia from 1981 to 1985 and are currently living in the United States, Europe and Africa.

The Tolbert children are honoring their father this year by organizing memorial services to commemorate what would have been the late president's 77th birthday May 13.

They also plan to set up a foundation to promote Liberia and foster peace.

It will publish the late president's speeches and biographies of Mr. Tolbert and other influential Liberians.

Mrs. Norman, who prefers not to discuss politics, said she was "saddened" by a December 24 rebel incursion which has left hundreds dead in northeastern Liberia and caused some 160,000 Liberians to seek refuge in neighboring Ivory Coast and Guinea.

The incursion was launched by a former government official, Charles Taylor, wanted in Monrovia on embezzlement charges.

"But I still have hope for Liberia because of its history. It was a country founded by God for free people to live in peace and love," she said, adding the future could hold good things for her homeland.

"The best thing that could happen is for all to Liberians look at their history, find the good things and build upon them," she said.

"They should also search history and see the wrong things that have been done and correct them, and ask God for forgiveness."

KARACHI (APRIL 10) - Troops were deployed in Karachi Tuesday as tensions ran high in Pakistan's largest city amidst growing concern over leaders of rival political forces.

Troops blocked the road leading to the Aga Khan Hospital after rumours spread that Najib Ahmad, a leader of the student wing of the ruling Pakistan People's Party (Ppp) had died there.

Najib is undergoing treatment at the hospital after a shootout with rival militants of the rival Mohajor Qaumi Movement (Mqm).

Mqm leader Altaf Husain is on a hunger strike designed to force the Pakistani government to free his party associates arrested as suspects in the attack on Najib.

Najib was being kept alive by a respiratory machine and authorities were said to be hesitating to announce his clinical death for fear of sparking off riots by Ppp militants.

Ppp sources said though willing to talk to Mqm, the government was firm not to give in to ethnic body's ''unreasonable demands''.

Unidentified snipers Tuesday claimed their 17th victim in Karachi when a young man was shot dead. The industrial city of seven million inhabitants is controlled by Mqm.

Security was reportedly tightened in Hyderabad, another Mqm stronghold about 150 kilometers to the northeast, and in Sukkur, further north, where ethnic tension was said on the rise.

ADDIS ABABA (APRIL 10) - The official Ethiopian News Agency (ENA) on Tuesday rejected as a "groundless accusation" a charge by Eritrean rebels that Ethiopian government forces bombed the Red Sea port of Massawa and the town of Afabet last week.

The Eritrean People's Liberation Front (EPLF), which has held Massawa since launching an offensive on February 8, said Saturday that three bombing raids on rebel-held Eritrean towns by government forces killed 54 people and wounded 123.

The ENA statement Tuesday accused the "anti-unity group" of trying to justify "evils it has committed on the people up to now", and said the rebels had the "sinister target" of seeking more support from "anti-unity" forces abroad and inviting foreign intervention.

In its statement Saturday the EPLF called on the international community to act to prevent the "senseless killing of civilians".

Since the rebel capture of Massawa, which has never been explicitly acknowledged by the government, Addis Ababa has switched relief operation deliveries destined for an estimated 4.3 million people at risk of starvation from Massawa to Assab.

The EPLF has appealed to the United Nations to continue to use Massawa for food deliveries.

LA PAZ (APRIL 10) - Bolivian cocaine is being rerouted to the United States via Argentina and Japan because the United States has virtually shut down traditional routes through Central America, a military officer said here Tuesday.

General Lucio Anez Rivera, commander of the military's Special Anti-drug Force, told the Fides news agency that an investigation into the new route led to major seizures of cocaine by Bolivian and Argentine authorities at their border.

The cocaine is processed in laboratories hidden away in Bolivia's Amazon jungle and then shipped to the United States via Argentina and Japan to avoid what he called an "iron curtain" that has gone up against drug shipments in the northern part of South America.

Colombia's war on drug cartels, tighter anti-drug surveillance in Brazil's Amazon jungle and U.S. anti-narcotics efforts in northern Peru have forced the cocaine traffickers to find alternatives to their traditional Central American routes, he added.

Gen. Anez Rivera also pointed to growing reports that cocaine was being exchanged for weapons in Bolivia, leading experts to believe that drug traffickers were getting ready to unleash new violence here.

If push comes to shove, he said, "Bolivia's Government and Armed Forces are well prepared to fight and win."

WASHINGTON (APRIL 10) - The United States Tuesday congratulated Hungary for staging its first free parliamentary elections in 45 years.

State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler said of Sunday's poll: "We warmly congratulate the Hungarian people on the successful completion of Hungary's first free parliamentary elections since 1945.

"We join with all Hungarians in celebrating this triumph of democracy."

Sunday's election was won by the Democratic Forum of Jozsef Antall who favors a free market economy in his country.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 10) - The United States, predicting that Israel could have a new government by Wednesday, is poised to jump back peace mediation within a week with a trilateral meeting in Washington, officials said Tuesday.

They said Secretary of State James Baker is eager to get the peace process moving again and would be ready at a moment's notice to host the foreign ministers of Israel and Egypt.

That meeting, as outlined in a 5-point peace plan Baker proposed last year, would determine the framework of direct negotiations in Cairo between Israeli and Palestinian delegations.

Assuming that the trilateral meeting goes well, the Cairo negotiations could start within a few weeks, the officials say, as long as an agenda is worked out and the Palestinian names are approved in the interim period.

Peres, who has been working to form a government since his coalition partnership with Likud collapsed in mid-March, has said he intends to proceed swiftly with Baker's 5-point plan.

In a brief meeting on Monday, Bethlehem Mayor Elias Freij issued a plea to Baker to re-engage himself in the peace process as soon as a new government emerged, State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler said.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 10) - The United States Tuesday warned Moscow against a further escalation of tension in Lithuania after President Mikhail Gorbachev reportedly refused to rule out direct presidential rule in that republic.

President George Bush, asked by reporters if he thought Moscow was tightening the screws on Lithuania, said "I've made our position very clear -- peaceful resolution of this question, because we do not recognize that the use of force would accomplish anything other than to set back relations."

"And I think they know that loud and clear by now, very clear," Mr. Bush said on Air Force One as he traveled to Toronto, Canada, to meet with Prime Minister Brian Mulroney.

Meanwhile, State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler reiterated the U.S. call for Moscow and Vilnius to settle the Lithuanian crisis through negotiations.

"What is not needed is a further escalation of tensions," she said.

She refused to say, however, if the United States thought the statement attributed to Mr. Gorbachev by the official news agency Tass had, in fact, raised tensions in Lithuania.

Tass reported that Mr. Gorbachev, in a speech Tuesday to a youth congress, said direct presidential rule was a possibility but only as an extreme measure if the situation there developed into civil conflict.

Miss Tutwiler said Washington wanted to avoid "inflammatory language" and did not wish to comment on each specific development in the crisis that began when Lithuania declared itself independent March 11.

Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze said several times during his visit here last week that "dialogue was the only answer and a peaceful way would in fact be found to resolve the issue," Miss Tutwiler said, suggesting that Washington would hold him to his word.

AMMAN (APRIL 10) - Jordan's King Hussein Tuesday urged a royal commission drafting a national charter to embark on its mission mindful of the need for democratic institutions and developing a tolerant democracy embracing all political currents in the country.

In a speech delivered to the commission representing all political forces in the country, Hussein said he launched the idea of the national charter ''to serve as a complementary contract to parliamentary life and political parties''.

He added: ''I have launched th idea and defined the objective, but only in the certainty that I acted through my absolute conviction, and that of all the people, that constitutional parliamentary life is our common choice, and the path from which there will be no turning back.''

The national charter, to be drafted by the 60 members of the commission is expected to serve as a framework for the legalisation of political parties and a criteria within which these parties would act.

Hussein warned against repeating the experience of political parties in the 1950s which ''did not conform to legitimate and universally accepted conventions''. Hussein said the positions of these parties ''were governed by the positions and dictates of their leaders from abroad''.

He was apparently referring to parties which sought to topple the monarchy such as the baathist party led by Syria and Iraq and the pan-Arab parties led by Egypt in the 1950s.

In an apparent reference to Islamic fundamentalists who are the strongest bloc in parliament, Hussein said: ''The most important principle of democracy is that nobody has a monopoly on truth, and to make such a claim is a type of closed-mindedness and fanaticism that destroys democracy.''

WASHINGTON (APRIL 10) - The Soviet Union has placed orders for a further 125,000 tons of subsidized U.S. wheat for delivery by mid-May, the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) said Tuesday.

The order is the first Soviet request for U.S. wheat since its last allocation virtually ran out on January 19.

On February 23, USDA announced a new allocation for the Soviets of up to one million tons of subsidized U.S. wheat.

The subsidies, which are paid to U.S. exporters, are offered under the U.S . Export Enhancement Program (EEP), a subsidy program designed to counter "export restitutions" offered by the European Economic Community (EEC) to its exporters.

The latest announced Soviet orders brings to more than 2.9 million tons of U.S. wheat purchased by the Soviets during the current marketing year, which began last October 1.

In addition, the Soviets have purchased more than 16.3 million tons of corn, plus soybeans, soybean meal and grain sorghums, said USDA.

The general sales manager of USDA's Foreign Agricultural Service, Paul Dickerson, said that following the latest order, the Soviets have an outstanding allocation of 887,950 tons of wheat under the price subsidy system. They have no outstanding allocations under this program for other commodities.

BERN (APRIL 10) - Swiss bank authorities introduced tough new measures to fight the laundering of the ill-gotten gains of illegal drugs peddlars, the president of the Federal Banking Commission announced Tuesday.

Hermann Bodenmann said currency dealing would now be handled exclusively by the Union Bank of Switzerland, the Swiss Bank Corporation and the Credit Suisse.

The three banks must name branches authorized to deal in currency and set limits on the amount of money that dealers can put through the banks.

Yearly audits will be carried out and banks must sever ties with any dealers suspected of laundering drug money.

Mr. Bodenmann, describing the measures as a "first step" in the war on drugs money, said the commission would issue further directives on counter and cash transactions at all banks.

The commission also noted that a 1987 agreement aimed at making it more difficult to open Swiss accounts anonymously had failed to reduce the number of unknown customers of Swiss banks, which have a long tradition of secrecy.

In March the Swiss parliament passed a law stipulating a penalty of a year in jail or a 600,000-dollar fine for anyone hindering attempts to trace the origin of suspicious money.

LUGANO, Switzerland (APRIL 10) - The Supreme Soviet of Latvia could proclaim independence next May 3, the president of the Baltic republic, Anatoli Gorbunov, said here Tuesday.

Mr. Gorbunov said Latvians wanted to learn from the experiences and "mistakes" of neighbouring Lithuania, which unilaterally declared independence from the Soviet Union a month ago, and above all to leave the way clear for negotiations with Moscow.

The problems of declaring independence were similar for all three Baltic republics, added Mr. Gorbunov, who is to attend a 'Latvia in Europe' symposium here from Wednesday to Saturday.

However, Latvia would need a transition period, he said, since nearly 50 per cent of the population is not ethnic Latvian and their interests should also be taken into account.

Janis Peters, president of the Latvian cultural council and also a member of the Supreme Soviet in Moscow, for his part recalled that since the three Baltic states had never joined the Soviet Union, they could not leave it.

Like Lithuania and Estonia, Latvia - annexed by Moscow under secret protocols to a 1939 pact with Nazi Germany - was simply calling for the restoration of its sovereignty, Mr. Peters said.

TEHERAN (APRIL 10) - Iran will do everything it can to secure the release of all hostages, the influential Teheran Times newspaper said here, renewing a strong appeal for their freedom "regardless of any political consideration."

The paper, seen as close to the Iranian government, said in an editorial to appear Wednesday that the release in Beirut Tuesday of three Western hostages could be "a prelude to the freedom of all hostages, regardless of their nationality, religion and beliefs."

The pro-Libyan Palestinian group Fatah Revolutionary Council freed a French woman, Jacqueline Valente, her Belgian companion, Fernand Houtekins, and their two-year-old daughter Sophie-Liberte.

But four of Mr. Houtekins' family members remain in the hands of the FRC. In addition 17 Westerners are believed held in Lebanon, several by pro-Iranian Shiite groups.

"The Islamic Republic (of Iran) will use all within its might to facilitate the release of hostages ... mainly out of human and Islamic considerations " the English-language Teheran Times said.

In addition to those both the West and Iran who are being held by political factions, "there are also a large number of Moslems held on no legal basis by the Zionist state (Israel)" and deserve be considered hostages, it added.

"The issue of hostage-taking should come to an end once and for all with no discrimination. All those who wish to see men in peaceful coexistence are conscience-bound to defend these defenseless people ... All hostages regardless of any political consideration should be freed."

The paper urged "the establishment of a new forum for dialogue and understanding" in which "nobody feels suppressed enough to embark on hostage-taking to have others hear what he has to say."

The Teheran Times in late February issued an initial appeal for the hostages to be released, after which there was a flury of speculation here and in Beirut that they could be freed by the end of the year.

PARIS (APRIL 10) - The Church of England has contacted Libya seeking help for the release of Terry Waite, the church envoy taken hostage in January 1987 in Beirut, the Libyan ambassador to the United Nations, Ali Triki, said Tuesday.

After the British request, "we made a move and we hope that those who currently hold hostages accept this appeal and really release all the hostages," Mr. Triki said in an interview with Radio Monte Carlo.

He gave the interview after an extremist Palestinian group close to Libya, the Fatah Revolutionary Council (FRC), released three western hostages Tuesday following an appeal from Libyan leader Moamer Kadhafi.

The hostages were Frenchwoman Jacqueline Valente, her Belgian companion Fernand Houtekins and their daughter born in captivity, Sophie-Liberte.

"Libya certainly used its good relations with some Palestinians to help" in releasing the three hostages, Mr. Triki said.

"We shall also do the utmost to help release other hostages," he added, expressing the hope that the remaining hostages would be set free before the end of Ramadan, the Moslem fast period.

A total 21 Western hostages remain in captivity, including four Belgians captured with Mr. Houtekins and Mrs. Valente and still held by the FRC.

PRETORIA (APRIL 10) - A South African shot up by bandits in Mozambique and left for dead has been found alive by Mozambican troops, an official spokeswoman said here Tuesday.

Andre Gouws, 32, was driving from the Lebombo border post on the main N4 highway from Pretoria to the Mozambican capital Maputo with a friend Monday when their car was ambushed by an armed gang some 20 kilometres (12 miles) from the frontier, Department of Foreign Affairs (DFA) spokeswoman Elsa Dry said.

The friend, Kenneth McCarter, 31, walked back to the border post, saying the gang had robbed them and shot Mr. Gouws in the legs.

Mr. McCarter took Mozambican government troops back to the spot Tuesday and they found Mr. Gouws hiding in the bush during a search requested by the DFA.

Despite two bullet wounds in the leg and one in his shoulder he tried to run away when he heard the voices of the Mozambican patrol, fearing the gang had returned, but turned back when Mr. McCarter called his name, Mrs. Dry said.

He was taken to a hospital in Nelspruit in the eastern Transvaal where a spokesman said his condition was "satisfactory."

It was not immediately clear if the bandits were soldiers from the rebel Mozambique National Resistance (RENAMO), which until March 1984 was bankrolled by South Africa.

RIYADH (APRIL 10) - Saudi authorities will maintain restrictions on the number of pilgrims Islamic countries are allowed to send to holy sites in Mecca and Medina this July, the Saudi interior minister announced Tuesday.

Prince Nayef bin Abdel Aziz told reporters the quotas "will be in effect as the circumstances that make them desirable remain."

The quota system, authorizing each country 1,000 pilgrims per million inhabitants, was adopted in 1988 by the Organization of the Islamic Conference and is aimed largely at Iran, with which Saudi Arabia has had no relations since April 1988.

Iran has boycotted the annual pilgrimage to holy sites in Saudi Arabia for the past two years to protest a reduction in the number of Iranian pilgrims, from the 150,000 who traditionally made the journey, to 45,000.

Violent disturbances in Mecca in July 1987 left 402 people dead, including 275 Iranians, according to Saudi officials.

Iran charged Saudi security forces with having opened fire on a peaceful demonstration outside the Grand Mosque. But authorities here said the victims were crushed to death in a stampede at an Iranian political gathering.

Even before the deaths in Mecca, Saudi-Iranian ties had been strained by Saudi distaste for the militant brand of Shia Islam practised in Iran.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 10) - President George Bush said Tuesday that he was not disillusioned by the lack of progress on strategic arms reductions in the latest series of superpower talks, adding that his upcoming summit with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev would serve as a catalyst for agreement.

Asked about the implications of last week's apparent stalemate on the strategic arms reduction talks (START) when Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze met with U.S. Secretary of State James Baker, Mr. Bush said they were to "go back and work hard."

He added: "We've got a time frame now in which there's an awful lot to be done, so I can't even predict how much will be done by the time the summit rolls around.

"But it's a good thing the summit date is set. It's important that we continue to talk to Mr. Gorbachev and obviously this will serve as a bit of a catalyst or goal for getting things done.

"But I don't want to over-promise and suggest that we're going to have all the details worked out by the time of the summit."

Moscow and Washington had originally hoped to thrash out their differences on the strategic arms questions in time for their Malta summit last December so that such a treaty could be implemented by the end of 1990.

Asked whether he was disappointed out the outcome of the Shevardnadze-Baker talks on this issue, Mr. Bush said: "I am not disappointed. But I mean ... look ... you deal with what's on the table and I'm determined to see that there's no misunderstanding about the American position and suggest that we're going to have all the details worked out by the time of the summit."

Mr. Gorbachev is due to visit the United States May 30 to June 3 for his summit meeting with Mr. Bush.

BOGOTA (APRIL 10) EFE - Leftist Colombian guerrillas Tuesday killed five policemen and wounded another seven in a raid on a town in the northwest of the country, authorities reported.

Rebels of the pro-Cuban National Liberation Army (ELN) stormed San Calixto 400 km northwest of the capital, early Tuesday, destroying the town's police station, robbing banks, daubing propoganda on walls and haranguing the town's terrified inhabitants.

The guerrillas retreated to nearby mountains after holding the town for five hours. Five policemen died in the raid and seven others were wounded, officials said.

The ELN, Colombia's only leftist rebel group to rule out peace negotiations with the government, had recently sworn to step up attacks on outlying areas and the country's infrastructure.

Colombian troops killed three ELN rebels last week as they attempted to blow up the country's main oil pipeline, a frequent target of the group.

SAN SALVADOR (APRIL 10) EFE - El Salvador's state of siege, imposed five months ago during a massive rebel offensive, was to end midnight Tuesday following a government decision to let the measure lapse as peace talks resume.

President Alfredo Cristiani's government said it would not extend the state of siege, saying the rebel threat had diminished despite continued clashes between guerrillas and security forces.

The only measure still in effect under the state of siege was a restriction on public meetings, after the government earlier lifted press censorship and a curfew.

The state of siege was imposed November 12, one day after Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front (FMLN) rebels launched their largest offensive of the decade-old civil war.

More than 2,000 people were killed in the offensive, many of them civilians caught in heavy Army bombardments after the guerrillas moved into residential districts of the capital.

On March 16, the FMLN announced a partial cease-fire, suspending attacks on civilian officials, commercial businesses, telephone offices and the transport system.

Last week the FMLN and the government signed a United Nations- brokered agreement to renew direct peace talks broken off just before the offensive.

The talks are expected to resume next month.

Some 75,000 people have been killed since the FMLN took up arms in 1980.

GUATEMALA CITY (APRIL 10) EFE - Leftist Guatemalan guerrillas Tuesday announced a four-day cease-fire for Easter +as a mark of respect for the Catholic community+.

The guerrilla umbrella group, the Guatemalan National Revolutionary Movement (UNRG), said the cease-fire would start midnight Wednesday (0500 GMT Thursday) and would go through until Sunday.

But the group warned it would break the cease-fire if the Army attacked any of its members, although it believed there was enough sympathy for the cease-fire within the Army for it to hold.

The rebel statement added that at recent peace talks with an independent Guatemalan peace commission in the Norwegian capital of Oslo, the UNRG proposed a bilateral cease-fire, +but regretably this was unacceptable to the other side (the Army)+.

At the Oslo meeting, the UNRG agreed to talks in Madrid next month with an official delegation given full decision-making powers by the Army and the government to negotiate an end to 30 years of political violence.

Human rights groups have said more than 100,000 people have been killed during the war, most of them civilian victims of Army counter-insurgency operations.

DHAKA (APRIL 10) XINHUA - THE RIVER TERRAPIN, A RARE SPECIES OF TURTLE FACING EXTINCTION, HAS RECENTLY BEEN FOUND IN THE SUNDARBANS IN SOUTHWEST BANGLADESH, LOCAL PRESS REPORTS SAID TODAY.

THE SUNDARBANS MANGROVE FOREST ALONG BANGLADESH'S SOUTHWEST COASTAL BELT IS THE LAST STRONGHOLD OF THE WORLD FAMOUS ROYAL BENGAL TIGER AND THE BEST HABITAT FOR ALL OTHER KINDS OF WILD ANIMALS IN BANGLADESH.

THE TURTLE IN QUESTION, KNOWN AS BATAGUR BASKA BY ITS SCIENTIFIC NAME, ALREADY IN LIST OF INTERNATIONAL INSTITUTE OF CONSERVATION OF NATURE ENDANGERED SPECIES, IS USUALLY FOUND IN INDIA, BURMA, THAILAND, VIETNAM, MALAYSIA AND INDONESIA'S SUMATRA.

IN 1982 A PAIR OF THESE TURTLES WERE COLLECTED IN THE SUNDARBANS. SINCE THEN NO FURTHER INVESTIGATION WERE CONDUCTED IN THIS FIELD IN BANGLADESH.

A RESEARCHER FROM A UNIVERSITY OF THE UNITED KINGDOM, S.M.A. RASHID, RECENTLY SUCCEEDED IN COLLECTING FOUR SUCH TURTLES AFTER FOUR MONTHS OF INVESTIGATION IN THE SUNDARBANS.

BATAGUR BASKA CAN BE EASILY IDENTIFIED BY A DISTINCT BEND OVER ITS NOSE WHICH IS NOT FOUND WITH OTHER SPECIES. THE COLOR OF THE SHELL IS A COMBINATION OF OLIVE GREEN WITH A TOUCH OF DEEP BROWN WHILE THE LOWER PART IS YELLOWISH.

THE SIZE OF THE RIVER TERRAPIN IS 60 CENTIMETERS IN LENGTH, 45 CENTIMETERS IN BREADTH, 22 CENTIMETERS IN HEIGHT AND ITS WEIGHT CAN REACH UP TO 25 KILOGRAMS.

THEY ARE HABITUALLY SHY IN NATURE AND LIVE ON PLANTS.

EL SEGUNDO, CA (APRIL 10) PR NEWSWIRE - INFONET today announced its Virtual Private Network+ (VPN+) product. VPN+ provides users with private dedicated ports on INFONET's public data network allowing them to move large volumes of data communications at a fixed-monthly charge.

"VPN+ blends the high-performance and fixed-cost characteristics of a private network with the economies of scale of a public network," stated Michael Radice, INFONET's vice president of product marketing. "When a company's data volumes reach 200 million characters a month, the variable costs of a basic public network no longer makes economic sense. Yet, the company may not be ready to make the major investment in a private network. Here's where VPN+ provides an ideal solution," he explained.

INFONET can tailor a VPN+ configuration, based on its high- performance networking technology, to customers' specific needs. Private-port speeds of 9,600, 14,400 and 19,200 bits per second are available. INFONET also offers high-capacity multiplexer equipment capable of supporting the T1 or E1 format.

INFONET designs, develops, installs, manages, and maintains VPN+ for its customers. The company has support organizations in 34 countries to implement VPN+ sites abroad and to train customer users in remote locations.

Once a customer's VPN+ is installed and running, INFONET monitors its performance electronically, from its Network Control Center. The center maintains a real-time view of worldwide VPN+ data traffic 24 hours a day, every day.

INFONET's VPN+ service is available now. The company offers one- year and multiple-year VPN+ contracts. Contract pricing depends upon several factors including locations and numbers of networked sites. Customers obtain both lower and predictable data communications costs permitting them to accurately budget and forecast their network service costs while achieving significant savings.

Established in 1970, INFONET is the leading standards-based, international value added networking company. It provides communication and computer services and directly supports those services in 34 countries. The company is jointly owned by MCI and the telecommunications administrations of major European and Asia Pacific countries.

LOS ANGELES (APRIL 10) PR NEWSWIRE - The California Department of Insurance today denied proposals by Sir James Goldsmith and Axa Midi Assurances of France to acquire control of Farmers Group, Inc.

"The Commissioner's decision to deny the applications of Axa Midi Assurances of France and Sir James Goldsmith's Hoylake Investments to acquire control of Farmers recognizes that the proposed takeover of Farmers would have placed policyholders at significant risk," said Leo E. Denlea, Jr., chairman and chief executive officer of Farmers Group, Inc.

"Specifically, the department's decision confirmed our view that the proposals by Axa Midi are contrary to the interests of Farmers and its constituents," said Denlea.

Today's decision by the California Department of Insurance followed February hearings to determine whether the proposed hostile takeover of Farmers' parent company, B.A.T Industries (AMEX: BTI), by Goldsmith's takeover vehicle, Hoylake Investments, and the subsequent sale of Farmers to Axa Midi, would be in the interests of Farmers' policyholders.

"We have consistently maintained that Axa Midi lacks the size and financial resources to buy Farmers, the third largest auto and homeowners insurer in the U.S. and the largest California based insurer," added Denlea.

"The commissioner's decision shows that the regulatory system works to protect policyholders from being put at risk by takeovers such as the one proposed by Axa Midi and Hoylake," said Denlea.

In order for Goldsmith to proceed with his hostile bid for B.A.T, the British Takeover Panel has said he must gain clearance for his proposed plans for Farmers in each of the nine states in which Farmers owns an insurance company.

Illinois, Idaho, Oregon and Washington have also held hearings on the proposed takeover and have yet to announce their decisions. Hearings began today in Texas. Insurance Departments in Arizona, Kansas and Ohio have yet to set hearing dates.

PLEASANTVILLE, NY (APRIL 10) PR NEWSWIRE - The Reader's Digest Association, Inc. (NYSE: RDA) announced today its French subsidiary will launch Budgets Famille (Family Budgets) next October, a monthly magazine to help families manage their finances.

This will be the first magazine start-up in France for the U.S.- based global publisher since it began publishing a French-language edition of Reader's Digest in 1947.

Budgets Famille will contain news, feature articles and tips on topics ranging from savings and borrowing strategies to the best ways families can budget for their children's education as well as leisure activities like vacation.

"We've designed our new magazine to be of service to readers -- in the same tradition as Reader's Digest," said Henri Capdeville, managing director, Reader's Digest France.

Selection, the company's French language edition of Reader's Digest, currently has a monthly circulation of 1.1 million.

"Based on conversations with our customers about Budgets Famille, we know there is strong interest in a magazine devoted exclusively to this subject " Capdeville added. He noted that while there are other magazines published in France that focus on personal finances and investments, none cover the combined topic of families and money.

"That's why we think our magazine will provide an ideal target market for advertisers," he added. According to Capdeville, Budgets Famille will be targeted to upper-and middle-income 30- to 45-year old French readers.

"We intend our magazine to set the standard for all others in this category in France," he said.

Reader's Digest is a global publisher and direct mail marketer of magazines, books and home entertainment products. The launch of Budgets Famille is part of the company's plan to expand its special interest magazine business throughout the world through start-ups and acquisitions.

MORRISTOWN, NJ (APRIL 10) PR NEWSWIRE - Memorex Telex Corporation and AT&T (NYSE: T) today announced that Memorex Telex has agreed to purchase substantially all of the assets of AT&T's Synchronous Terminal Products business. The purchase includes selected marketing, sales and development operations and assets that support AT&T's line of synchronous terminal equipment.

Under the agreement, AT&T will continue to manufacture its line of synchronous mainframe computer-compatible equipment for Memorex Telex for at least two years and provide the company with access to AT&T Bell Laboratories-developed technology and software.

Memorex Telex assumes worldwide responsibility for sales and support of the 6500 Multifunction Communication System (MCS) product line, with AT&T retaining responsibility for sales and service of 6500 MCS products as part of AT&T's networked computing applications or in telemarketing solutions.

In return, AT&T will receive royalties from Memorex Telex for the next five years on worldwide sales of all equipment designed to connect with the IBM-defined 3270 environment, and the sale of personal computers. In addition, AT&T will have an equity position in Memorex Telex.

AT&T's 6500 MCS product line includes a family of data terminals, printers and intelligent controllers that operate in the 3270 environment as well as other computer environments. Memorex Telex is a worldwide supplier of industry-compatible computer equipment, services and accessories, including large storage systems and a full line of 3270 displays, printers and controllers.

The new Memorex Telex engineering operation will remain in Naperville, Ill., with other new Memorex Telex employees being integrated into the company's sales and marketing operations throughout the United States.

AT&T's Synchronous Terminal Products unit manufactures advanced 3270 systems, including terminal displays, printers, intelligent controllers and associated software that allows connectivity to IBM's mainframes as well as other host computers.

Memorex Telex's 3270 product line centers around its 1174 Network Controllers that support up to 96 terminals via coaxial connections and four simultaneous 3270 host connections, up to 32 ASCII hosts or terminals with access via token ring networks. The company also offers a full range of 3270 display terminals and printers.

LUDINGTON, MI (APRIL 10) PR NEWSWIRE - The world's largest barrier net is being prepared for installation in Lake Michigan this week for a second year of operation at the Ludington pumped storage hydroelectric facility. The plant is jointly owned by Consumers Power Company and Detroit Edison and is operated by Consumers Power.

The net design has been modified from its 1989 configuration to improve effectiveness in keeping fish from the plant and overcome problems that occurred in its first year of operation.

One difficulty last year was maintaining an adequate seal between the lake bed and net bottom line. To address this, 65 fixed bottom anchors, consisting of pilings driven into the lake bed, are being added. This will help prevent fish from swimming under the net.

A bottom skirting up to 20 feet wide has been added around the entire net. The net will be in 45 feet of water at the greatest depth.

To overcome barrier net submergence, which allowed fish to swim over the top of the net, a top skirt up to 25 feet wide has been attached. The barrier net's top line now contains approximately four times more floatation than the 1989 design.

Finally, the new net is made of stronger components than the earlier version. Improved cleaning methods will be utilized to combat the buildup of algae on the net. Navigational buoys to aid local boaters and help direct boat traffic safely away from the area will again be put in place.

Lakeshore Contractors Inc. of Muskegon, Mich., is installing and will maintain the net. Barnes-Williams Environmental Consultants of Binghamton N.Y., will monitor the effectiveness of the barrier net.

The Ludington plant is a major power producer for Michigan, generating low-cost electricity for homes and businesses throughout the state. Water is drawn from Lake Michigan into its 1.3-square-mile reservoir at night when demand is low and released during the day when electric demand is high. This process produces electricity which is sent to customers of Consumers Power and Detroit Edison. The plant saves customers about $40 million each year by displacing higher cost generation.

Consumers Power Company, the principal subsidiary of CMS Energy Corporation (NYSE: CMS), is Michigan's largest utility serving almost 6 million of the state's 9 million residents in 67 of the 68 Lower Peninsula counties.

NEW YORK (APRIL 10) PR NEWSWIRE - S.C. Johnson & Son, Inc.'s 'F-1+' (Highest Grade) commercial paper rating is affirmed by Fitch and a long-term 'AA' debt rating is assigned to the company's recently issued $25 million 9.38 percent senior notes due 2019. The commercial paper rating is removed from General Review, where it was placed on May 7, 1989, along with all other issues rated by Fitch. Approximately $130 million of commercial paper is currently outstanding; up to $200 million is authorized for issuance. This is the first time that Fitch has been requested to rate the company's long-term debt.

The 'AA' long-term debt rating and the maintenance of the 'F-1+' on commercial paper reflects the company's consistently high profitability, above average returns on invested capital, historically conservative usage of financial leverage, favorable levels of investor protection, and the very strong market position of many of the company's products, as well as the self liquidating nature of the commercial paper program.

Many of the company's products are market leaders, including RAID insecticide, OFF! insect repellent, EDGE Shaving gel, PLEDGE furniture polish, FUTURE floor polish, and GLADE air freshener. Key to Johnson's success has been its marketing effort and strong commitment to research and development.

Johnson's commercial paper program is primarily designed to support its RAID brand of insecticides. Commercial paper is sold during the winter/spring seasons to finance RAID's inventory build up and is paid off during the fall season.

S.C. Johnson & Son, Inc., a leading consumer products and specialty chemicals company, was founded in 1886 and is headquartered in Racine, Wisc. Operations are conducted in 21 states and 46 foreign countries.

ROYAL OAK, MI (APRIL 10) PR NEWSWIRE - Forming Technology Co. (Form Tech) a division of Masco Industries (NASDAQ: MASX), has earned the elite Q-1 Preferred Quality Award from Ford Motor Company (NYSE: F).

Form Tech is principally engaged in precision hot forging and is the first U.S. company engaged in this type of business to earn Q-1 recognition.

The award was presented to Allan Leech, president, and Alex Garcia, plant manager of Form Tech by Alexander J. Trotman, executive vice president, Ford North American Automotive Operations, at a recent luncheon hosted by Ford.

The Q-1 Award evaluation criteria entail a comprehensive review of all of the supplier's quality practices and business performance.

In its review of Form Tech's process capability, Ford witnessed a technologically advanced manufacturing operation controlled by statistical methods focused on preventing defects. These methods increase quality and productivity by reducing the need for redundant testing, inspection, product rework, and material scrappage.

Form Tech's dedication toward continuous improvement in all areas of quality was another important point necessary to achieve the quality level required to earn Q-1. This kind of detailed effort is vitally necessary to support Ford's reputation as a manufacturer of quality automobiles which are able to compete with the finest cars built.

Form Tech is a leading producer of automatic closed-die hot and cold forgings that weigh from a few ounces to 15 pounds. With six highly specialized hot forming machines making forgings at rates from 50 to 120 pieces per minute, it is considered the most productive independent forge shop of its kind in the world.

Form Tech produces automotive transmission and differential gear blanks and wheel spindle and hub forgings to near-net shapes.

WILMINGTON, DE (APRIL 10) PR NEWSWIRE - Du Pont (NYSE: DD) today reported it has reached agreements with two companies to sell three process and laboratory instruments businesses.

The sales are part of the Polymer Products Department's strategy to focus on core businesses.

Terms of the sales were not disclosed.

The company signed a letter of intent to sell its thermal analyzer business to a newly formed company led by management and employees of the existing business and Chemical Venture Partners, an affiliate of Chemical Banking Corp. Most of the 130 employees associated with the business are based in the Wilmington area and will be offered jobs by the purchaser.

Du Pont developed thermal analyzers to evaluate the effects of temperature changes on polymers and other materials. The company began selling the instruments in the 1960s and is one of the largest suppliers of thermal analyzers to industrial, government and academic laboratories. Thermal analyzers are produced in Glasgow, Del.

Two other instrument businesses -- process instruments and air and noise monitoring instruments -- will be sold to Ametek Inc. Many of the 80 employees associated with these businesses will be offered jobs with Ametek.

The process instruments business supplies chemical and refining markets with photometric and moisture analyzers to measure levels of chemicals and moisture in production operations. These instruments are produced at Glasgow.

The air and noise monitoring instruments business supplies industrial and government markets with air sampling pumps and audio dosimeters that measure and monitor personal exposure to air contaminants and noise. These instruments are produced in Kennett Square, Pa.

The three instruments businesses, along with other polymer products businesses, are part of Du Pont's Polymers segment.

CAMBRIDGE, MA (APRIL 10) PR NEWSWIRE - Biogen, Inc. (NASDAQ: BGEN) today reported record revenues and earnings for the first quarter of 1990.

For the three months ended March 31, 1990, the company reported record revenues of $14,143,000 and expenses of $12,351,000, resulting in net income of $1,737,000, or one cent per share following dividend payments on its preferred stock.

For the first quarter last year, the company reported net income of $144,000, or one cent per share based on revenue of $8,103,000 and expenses of $7,956,000.

During the quarter, Biogen expanded its hepatitis licensing program through a royalty-bearing sublicensing agreement signed with Merck & Co., Inc. Under the agreement, which is part of a broader cross-license program between SmithKline and Merck, Merck obtained rights to the Biogen hepatitis B patents covering the manufacture and sale of recombinant hepatitis B vaccines worldwide (except Japan). Biogen's revenues for the first quarter reflect a significant contribution from the sublicensing agreement.

Jim Vincent, Biogen chairman and chief executive officer, explained, "With the cross-license program in place, both SmithKline and Merck can focus on expanding the market for the recombinant hepatitis B vaccine, a product with important healthcare benefits. Annual sales of recombinant hepatitis B vaccines exceed $175 million worldwide and should grow rapidly based on expanded use in the United States.

"More than 300,000 cases of hepatitis B, resulting in over 5,000 deaths, are reported each year in the United States alone, and the disease costs society more than one-half billion dollars annually. The disease is preventable through vaccination and there is increasing pressure from major health organizations for widespread, possibly universal, vaccination."

Jim Vincent continued, "The results of the first quarter demonstrate further progress with our strategy to fund research and development activities with revenues generated from products on sale by Biogen, its licensees and partners. Highlights from the quarter, apart from the expansion of the hepatitis B licensing program, include increasing royalties based on sales of Intron-A(R) alpha interferon by Schering-Plough and the introduction of Imunomax(R) -gamma recombinant gamma interferon for treatment of renal cell (kidney) cancer by Shionogi & Co. in Japan.

"Our revenue this quarter from royalties and product sales exceeded $10 million for the first time and represents roughly 70 percent of total revenue."

Biogen is a leading biotechnology company principally engaged in developing genetically engineered pharmaceuticals. As a result of its early research, Biogen now derives revenues from five products being sold by its licensees in various countries. Biogen currently directs its research and development into areas where the company has particular strength -- AIDS, inflammation and selected cancers.

CHICAGO (APRIL 10) PR NEWSWIRE - Medical Management of America Inc. (AMEX: MMA) today announced that all six nominees for its board of directors were elected to one-year terms at its annual meeting and that projected revenues and earnings in 1990 are showing improvement over 1989 results.

In reporting on 1989 fiscal year-end results, James H. Desnick, M.D., chairman and president, received several questions from stockholders attending the meeting.

One stockholder, commenting on the company's recently announced stock repurchase plan, asked whether MMA was truly committed to remaining a public company. In response, Desnick made the following statement:

"There is no question that we are committed to our position as a publicly traded company. The stock repurchase plan, as previously announced, is a straightforward employment of company funds in what we consider a solid investment."

Commenting later, Desnick added, "MMA management considers our stock to be undervalued. And there appears to be some support for this assessment in the financial community given that our stock was identified last week by USA Today as having had the seventh largest percentage price increase on the American Stock Exchange in the first quarter of 1990."

In another response to a stockholder question, Desnick stated that the company was performing ahead of expectations, particularly the past two months, and felt that this trend would continue, barring any unforeseen circumstances. In explaining why he expected an improved 1990 performance, Desnick cited several factors.

"Our California facilities and managed practices have seen improvement over the past two months on top of the progress made in the first quarter -- both in terms of patient load and surgery center revenues. Escalating revenues in combination with consolidated administrative functions and the financial economies gained by combining large ophthalmic practices -- as we have done -- are bearing fruit.

"Further, we expect our surgical center in Miami, Fla., to be approved and operational this spring. On an annualized basis, this new facility should contribute in excess of $1.3 million in additional revenue to the company. It is expected to make a substantial contribution to net income in its first year of operation, as well," Desnick explained.

At the company's annual meeting, the following board members were re-elected: James H. Desnick, M.D., Bruce A. Flashner, M.D., George T. Simon, John H. Weston Smith, and George Weinstein. Richard Desnick was elected as a new member of the company's board of directors.

NEW YORK (APRIL 10) PR NEWSWIRE - Isramco, Inc. (NASDAQ: ISRL) reported today that drilling on the Yam 2 had reached the 15,200-foot depth and was proceeding within the objective sequence which, according to seismic studies, could be approximately 1,500 feet thick, lying between the 15,000 to 17,000-foot levels. The Yam 2 is being drilled in the Mediterranean Sea approximately 10 miles off the coast of Israel.

Samples from the cuttings that at current levels the well has entered Tithonian era formations, which confirms the geological studies made in preparation for the drilling.

In reporting on the progress of drilling, Dr. Joseph Elmaleh, chairman, said that the well encountered a hydrocarbon gas "kick" while drilling through a 9-foot thick sandstone formation at the 13,000-foot level. After the Yam 2 has been drilled to total depth, electric logging will be run to evaluate the commercial potential of gas in the 13,000-foot zone and an other potentially productive zones found.

Elmaleh also said that Isramco is finalizing the Bessor prospect, onshore in the Negez Desert, to present it to the partners for drilling in the second half of 1990.

Isramco, Inc. is operator of the Negev Venture 2, which in association with Dr. Armand Hammer, chairman of Occidental Petroleum, a group of North American investors and several Israeli companies is conducting the exploration for oil and gas reserves offshore of Israel in the Mediterranean and onshore in the Negev Desert.

MORRIS TOWNSHIP, NJ (APRIL 10) PR NEWSWIRE - Allied-Signal Aerospace Company's Bendix Field Engineering unit today announced it has received an eight-year, $99 million contract to manage the U.S. Space Station Freedom training facility and control center in Houston.

The contract includes an additional two-year option valued at $41 million and is the first contract to be awarded for Space Station Freedom operations.

In addition, Bendix Field Engineering received a five-year, $300 million extension of its contract to support ground systems for the U.S. space shuttle at the Houston facility.

Bendix Field Engineering's services for the space station will include overall management of the facility as well as operation and maintenance of the ground communications, computer and display systems.

"The space station's training facility will closely simulate the actual station so that astronauts can become thoroughly experienced in all aspects of their work, from conducting scientific studies to operating life-support systems," said Donald E. Smith, vice president and director for the Houston operations of Bendix Field Engineering.

For the space shuttle, Bendix Field Engineering has been providing ground systems support at Johnson Space Center since 1986. The current $300 million contract extension includes three two-year options raising the total value of the extension to $700 million.

PAOLI, PA (APRIL 10) PR NEWSWIRE - Ametek Inc. (NYSE: AME) announced today that it had reached an agreement to purchase the Du Pont Co.'s (NYSE: DD) Process Instrument business and its Air and Noise Monitoring Instrument business for an undisclosed amount of cash.

The transaction, in which Ametek will acquire the technology, manufacturing equipment and inventories of Du Pont's Process Instrument business in Glasgow, Del., and the Air and Noise Monitoring Instrument business located in Kennett Square, Pa., should be completed within 60 days. The combined businesses employ less than 100 people, many of whom are expected to join Ametek.

Process Instruments includes units for analysis of liquids and gases in process streams, emission monitoring systems and moisture measuring instruments, based on several electronic and photometric technologies. They provide critical data in oil and gas refining, chemical processes and in pulp and paper production. Ametek plans to expand the business to a new facility located in the vicinity of the current plant, as a sister plant to its Thermox Instruments division headquartered in Pittsburgh, which produces a broad line of gas analysis and monitoring instruments.

The Air and Noise Monitoring instruments, compact electronic sampling and recording devices designed to monitor ambient air quality and individual employees' noise level exposure in various work environments, are used in many industries and by government regulatory agencies. Ametek plans to combine the production of these instruments with the several lines of hand-held and portable quality control and production monitoring electronic instruments built by its Mansfield and Green division near Clearwater, Fla.

The company indicated that increased need for air and emission monitoring required under the new Clean Air Act should increase market opportunities for these instrument lines. Ametek, a Fortune 500 industrial manufacturer reported 1989 earnings of $38.3 million on sales of $587.8 million.

NEW YORK (APRIL 10) PR NEWSWIRE - Following in the wake of the tremendous landmark Topps auction last August, Guernsey's/Fans (Famous American Name Sales, Inc.) is proud to present their first auction devoted exclusively to sports collectibles, to be held on Saturday, April 28, and Sunday, April 29, at New York City's Pier 90, on 12th Avenue and 50th Street.

Included in this sale will be significant material from all major American sports: baseball, boxing, basketball, football and hockey, and the material will cover all aspects of collectibles, from rare trading cards, original art, bats, balls, uniforms, to paper documents, photographs, jewelry and trophies, covering an entire century of sports history. Thousands of items will be sold in this marathon weekend, with a full day of previewing before the sale, on Friday, April 27, from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m.

The sale will be divided into several categories, beginning on Saturday morning with baseball-related items. Within this field, hundreds of lots will be sold, among which are the following: Lou Gehrig's retired Yankee number which hung in Yankee Stadium; original artwork for Billy Martin's unissued 1951 Bowman trading card; the extremely rare Honus Wagner card; the most complete set of baseball press pins ever amassed; many baseballs autographed by Cy Young, Mel Ott, Babe Ruth, etc.; Lou Gehrig's 1939 All-Star pin, the most important single piece of memorabilia extant; a 1938 autographed Lou Gehrig bat; the original back of Babe Ruth's jersey containing his number which hung in Yankee Stadium; an original Lou Gehrig signed check; complete sets of rare and early tobacco cards; a fascinating collection of personal autographed letters from Wagner, Mathewson and Pennock; and many more significant items.

Boxing materials will also comprise a major section of the auction, featuring a significant collection of recently discovered Joe Louis memorabilia, including fight-used gloves, trunks, personal letters, photos documents and fight licenses. Also to be sold is Bundini Brown's enormous collection of Mohammed Ali artifacts, among which are warm-up jackets and robes, programs, trunks, gloves, photos, and other significant ephemera. Also in the boxing category are an original LeRoy Neiman painting of Sugar Ray Robinson; a "Slapsie Maxie" world championship medal; and many other important boxing collectibles.

In addition to the aforementioned collectibles, each section of the sale will also have a significant number of original paintings and illustrations. Examples such as an original Willard Mullen drawing of Mickey Mantle; the original Babe Ruth "Sultan of Swat" painting; over 30 Burris Jenkins sports-related drawings; over 130 drawings by Amadee, the sports illustrator for the St. Louis Dispatch; and a large grouping of illustrations spanning most of the century. Also to be featured are prominent contemporary artists, representing the finest modern sports art known today, including Jeff Rubin, Susan Kurtz, Andy Jurinko, Robert S. Simon, and several others.

All activities will take place at Manhattan's Pier 90, a beautiful glass-enclosed structure on the Hudson River, on 12th Avenue and 50th Street. Guernsey's and Fans will hold one day of previewing on Friday, April 26, from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. The auction will begin at 10 a.m. on both Saturday and Sunday, April 28 and 29, and will run into the early evening both days. All items to be sold will be fully documented and photographed in a massive catalog, which will be approximately 200 pages and should surpass even the Topps catalog, now a collector's item itself. The catalog, which serves as admission for two to the entire weekend, is available for $25 in person, or $29 by mail, from: Guernsey's, 108-1/2 East 73rd St., New York, N.Y., 10021. Collectors may bid by mail, phone or in person.

DETROIT (APRIL 10) PR NEWSWIRE - A senior executive of First Federal Savings Bank and Trust (FFSBT) has voluntarily taken and completely passed a "lie detector" test which a nationally prominent polygraph examiner said completely clears the executive of any criminal wrongdoing in a $6.5 million loan.

The loan has been the subject of intense news media attention. No charges have been filed against the executive. Joseph P. Michael, FFSBT's senior loan officer, was examined by the nationally recognized polygrapher, William E. Robertson. Robertson retired after more than 20 years of FBI service, during which time he also lectured on polygraph interviewing and interrogation at the FBI Academy in Quantico, Va.

The announcement was made by a longtime personal friend of Michael, Detroit Attorney David Griem, who also represents Michael.

"Joe Michael clearly passed this exam hands-down in the professional opinion of William Robertson," Griem said.

According to Griem, the polygraph exam established that: -- There was no criminal wrongdoing by Michael in the Ewald loan. -- Michael received nothing personally from Ewald in return for the loan.

-- Michael had no prior knowledge of Ewald's hidden criminal record when the loan was made.

-- Michael had no knowledge of the false documents used by Ewald to secure the loan.

"This thorough and complete 'lie detector' test of Joe Michael should finally put to rest the incorrect and offensive innuendo which has been unfairly directed at Joe Michael," Griem said.

Michael voluntarily initiated the exam by one of the most nationally respected polygraph examiners after repeated speculation about Michael's possible involvement with Ewald.

FFSBT discovered last fall that a $6.5 million commercial loan made to Henry Ewald of Farmington Hills was based on fraudulent real estate documents. Ewald was recently charged with bank fraud in connection with the loan.

FFSBT has recovered $3.5 million of the loan and is suing the title insurance company who insured the loan for the balance.

SEATTLE (APRIL 10) PR NEWSWIRE - Tan Sahsa, the national airline of Honduras, has selected three new Boeing 737-400 jetliners for fleet modernization.

The carrier will take delivery of its first two 737-400s in August 1990 and the third in December. All three aircraft were obtained from GPA under a long-term lease/purchase agreement.

Tan Sahsa will use the advanced-technology 737s on its routes to destinations in the United States, Mexico and Central America.

Tan Sahsa's 737-400s belong to the family of three new-generation 737 twinjets that are among the quietest, most fuel-efficient aircraft in the world.

The Boeing 737-400 is the largest of the new-generation series and carries 146 to 170 passengers in a variety of configurations. It entered commercial service in October 1988. The newest and smallest member, the 737-500, recently completed flight testing and deliveries to airlines began in February 1990. It seats 108 to 132 passengers. The 737-300, first of the series, began commercial service in December 1984. It can carry 128 to 149 passengers.

Many of the world's biggest airlines -- including Air France, Lufthansa, KLM and British Airways -- are among the 62 customers that have joined Tan Sahsa in selecting the new-generation Boeing 737s for fleet modernization. Airlines worldwide have now ordered more than 1,600 of the advanced-technology twinjets.

One reason for this popularity is the flexibility it brings to operators, allowing them to match the exact size 737 to their traffic needs. This helps airlines avoid the financial burden of operating an airplane that may be too large for traffic loads and therefore uneconomical. As new markets develop, flight frequencies increase or traffic grows, airlines can make pick any model of the 737 family -- and still use the same flight crew.

The high degree of 737 commonality keeps the costs of maintenance and spare parts to a minimum. Overall, operators using the new-generation 737s benefit from the lowest direct operating costs available in this type of aircraft.

STAMFORD, CT (APRIL 10) PR NEWSWIRE - A New Jersey court decision affecting General Reinsurance Corporation (NYSE: GRN) has been widely reported.

The case involves asbestos-related claims made by an insurance company owned by Owens Illinois, against its reinsurers, including General Re.

General Re's involvement relates to the reinsurance written between 1977 and 1982. General Re said that the claim is in the ordinary course of its business and that the loss, net of reserves and reinsurance, would not be material to the financial condition or the annual earnings of General Re.

The decision, which is at the county court level, will probably not be available for a week or so. When it is recorded, it will be reviewed to assess the prospects for an appeal.

STAMFORD, CT (APRIL 10) PR NEWSWIRE - Crompton & Knowles Corporation (NYSE: CNK), a producer and marketer of specialty chemicals and equipment, announced today that 1990 first quarter earnings, ended March 31, 1990, rose 30 percent to a record $6.9 million, or 56 cents per share, from $5.3 million, or 45 cents per share, in 1989. Sales increased nearly eight percent to $94.4 million for the first quarter from $87.8 million in the same quarter last year. Last year's earnings per share numbers were restated to reflect a two-for-one stock split in May 1989.

Earlier today the company also announced a 35 percent increase in its quarterly dividend to 21 cents per share of common stock from 15-1/2 cents per share. This is the third year in a row that the company's dividend has been increased by 35 percent.

"All of our businesses had improved sales and good order activity," said Vincent A. Calarco, the company's chairman, president and chief executive officer. "This marks the 20th consecutive quarter - or fifth consecutive year -- of improved earnings from the company's continuing operations and gives us confidence that Crompton & Knowles will have another record year in 1990."

Sales and operating profits rose in both of Crompton & Knowles' two business segments:

Specialty chemicals continued its strong performance with a seven percent rise in sales. Domestic dyes sales increased during the quarter despite some softness in overall U.S. textile industry demand. European demand for dyes remained strong across the board. Pricing has remained firm in the U.S. as well as overseas.

Sales in the company's specialty ingredients business also rose, surpassing last year's first quarter and up significantly from the fourth quarter. Several new food products incorporating ingredient systems developed by Crompton & Knowles were brought to market by the company's customers in the first quarter.

Specialty process equipment and controls, the company's segment devoted to designing, manufacturing and installing systems from plastics extrusion, had another outstanding quarter as sales increased 10 percent over the prior year and the order backlog rose to $27 million from $25 million at the end of 1989.

PHILADELPHIA (APRIL 10) PR NEWSWIRE - Philadelphia Electric Co. (NYSE: PE) said today that a record 85 percent of the electricity the company produced in the first quarter of 1990 was generated by nuclear power.

PE said the high nuclear output was due to the continued excellent performance of the company's six nuclear reactors.

Joseph F. Paquette Jr., PE chairman and chief executive officer, said: "The fuel cost to the company to generate the 7.3 billion kilowatt-hours of electricity by nuclear power in the first quarter of the year was approximately $200 million less than the cost to produce the same amount of electricity with oil-fired generation.

"Nuclear power generation also has significant environmental benefits in that it does not contribute to acid rain or global warming. With the amount of nuclear generation now on our system, the company will be less dependent on fossil fuels which require expensive clean air pollution control systems."

The company operates coal burning plants at Cromby (Chester County) and Eddystone (Delaware County) which currently meet the most stringent standards for sulfur-dioxide (SO2) emissions proposed in the Clean Air Act now being debated by Congress. PE has already spent $300 million for SO2 scrubber systems.

PE owns and operates two nuclear units at its Limerick Generating Station in Montgomery County, Pa.; it operates and jointly owns two units at the Peach Bottom Atomic Power Station in York County, Pa., and is part owner of two units at the Salem Generating Station in New Jersey, operated by Public Service Electric and Gas Co.

The six nuclear units combined operated at 85.2 percent of full capacity for the first quarter of the year. Limerick's two units led the way with Limerick Unit 1 operating at 95.4 percent of capacity and Limerick Unit 2 at 93 percent. Peach Bottom Unit 2, off line during March for a mid-cycle maintenance outage, operated at 55.5 percent, and Peach Bottom Unit 3 at 87.4 percent. The 1989 average capacity factor for all boiling water reactors in the United States was 57.6 percent.

PE's generation projections for the year are 67 percent nuclear, 19 percent coal, 5 percent oil, 4 percent hydro-electric and 5 percent purchased power from the region's power pool.

Nationally, nuclear power accounts for about 20 percent of the country's electric generation.

EAST HARTFORD, CT (APRIL 10) PR NEWSWIRE - AT&T (NYSE: T) and Pratt & Whitney today announced that AT&T has been awarded a contract to provide the aerospace manufacturer with global messaging services.

AT&T EDI and AT&T Mail will be used to link Pratt & Whitney with hundreds of customers and suppliers worldwide.

The application of electronic messaging services at Pratt & Whitney is an integral component of the company's program to reduce the time to market significantly for a jet engine, according to W.D. Lewis, Pratt & Whitney vice president - Management Information Systems.

"We view this as a strategic alliance with AT&T," Lewis said. "Electronic messaging is becoming a powerful productivity tool at Pratt & Whitney for our global business operations.

"We'll be able to exchange with suppliers information on everything from casting and forging materials to nuts and bolts. It will allow us and our customers to process product orders and invoices more efficiently," Lewis said.

"AT&T's Global Messaging Services provides Pratt & Whitney with a bona fide competitive advantage in a fiercely competitive marketplace," said George Cunningham, AT&T division manager - messaging. "This solution enhances Pratt & Whitney's value to its customers and builds a stronger relationship with suppliers."

AT&T EDI is the electronic data interchange service that Pratt & Whitney will use to give their trading partners the ability to exchange purchase orders, shipping notices, invoices, payments and other business documents. AT&T Mail will be used for general messaging, making use of a variety of delivery options including facsimile, telex U.S. Postal Service or courier.

AT&T's commitment to standards, like the international X.400 standard, its ability to provide an integrated technology-based solution, and its customer support were major ingredients that influenced the sale, according to Lewis.

Terms of the contract were not disclosed. The award followed a competitive bidding process conducted by Pratt & Whitney. Pratt & Whitney is a subsidiary of Hartford-based United Technologies Corporation (NYSE: UTX).

ERIE, PA (APRIL 10) PR NEWSWIRE - David A. Nelson, president and chief executive officer of AMSCO International Inc., the parent corporation of the American Sterilizer Co., today announced plans to relocate certain corporate functions of AMSCO International to Pittsburgh in One Mellon Bank Center.

Nelson said that Pittsburgh was selected over other locations considered for the headquarters of AMSCO International for a number of reasons. "We looked at different locations and seriously considered several of them. Pittsburgh was selected because of its reputation as an international business center, the depth of its business community, its quality of life, and because its location is central to AMSCO's major operating units."

Commenting on the announcement, Frank V. Cahouet, chairman of Mellon Bank Corp. (NYSE: MEL), stated, "We are extremely pleased that AMSCO International Inc. has chosen to relocate its corporate headquarters to Pittsburgh, and, more particularly, that they will join a growing list of prestigious tenants in One Mellon Bank Center. I think their decision to relocate to Pittsburgh is another milestone for the city and reinforces the strengths of the area which we, sometimes, take for granted. We wish AMSCO continuing growth and prosperity in Pittsburgh."

AMSCO, with 1990 sales estimated at $330 million, serves the healthcare, laboratory, scientific and industrial communities through its AMSCO Healthcare, AMSCO Scientific and AMSCO Service groups. The company is a world leader in sterilization and infection control technology, and the manufacture of operating tables and surgical illumination systems.

It's expected that AMSCO International will occupy its Pittsburgh headquarters in the second half of the year.

SAN FRANCISCO (APRIL 10) PR NEWSWIRE - Four California mining companies have been recognized for innovative and creative accomplishments in land reclamation with awards presented here.

The Excellence in Reclamation awards, the first of their kind, were presented by the California Mining Association for "significant achievement in planning, practice and environmental protection."

Announcement of the winners highlighted awards ceremonies at the association's annual meeting ending Friday, April 6, at the Sir Francis Drake Hotel here.

Association President Arzell Hale paid tribute to the award winners for a dramatic illustration of the commitment of the mining industry to the twin goals of preservation and reclamation.

Three sand and gravel operations and a diatomite mine were judged best in the development of outstanding and cost-effective techniques that assure protection of the environment both during and after mining.

The awards program was developed by an association subcommittee chaired by Ray Krauss, environmental manager for Homestake Mining Company's McLaughlin Mine at Lower Lake. Awards were designated for the Best Reclamation Plan, Best Reclamation and Best Second Use of Mined Land.

Judged the best Reclamation Plan entry was that of M.J. Ruddy & Son Inc., submitted on behalf of the Central Valley Rock and Gravel Association Inc.

Unique for a multi-faceted approach to reclamation and protection techniques, the plan will be implemented at the sand and gravel mine near the community of Winton on the Merced River. It won endorsement from the Sierra Club and a major environmental group in the Modesto area.

Improvement of salmon spawning habitat in the riverbed, provision of secure nesting elements for migratory and indigenous fowl and creation of a greenbelt to attract other wildlife are integrated into the reclamation design for the 160-acre site. The river will be contoured to avoid flooding and the banks planted with oaks, willows and grasses.

Bruce Johnston, chairman of the board of Ruddy, and Chuck Falkenstein, president, announced that construction on the new mining operation will start this spring.

Placing second in the Best Reclamation Plan category was the entry of Los Banos Gravel Co. owned and operated by Ted Falasco in Merced County. The plan was prompted by increasing concern for conservation and expansion of wetlands and is based on a "constructed wetlands" concept and diversity of habitat.

Proposed is a renegotiable contract with the Department of Fish and Game to review the plan over a four-year period. The reclamation plan has been recommended for approval by the county planning department and will be considered by the county planning commission in May.

CalMat Co. won Best Reclamation for the completed plan prepared for a Saticoy sand and gravel operation in an agricultural area near Ventura.

A phased process allowed continuing reclamation to occur. As overburden -- material removed to access the sand and gravel deposit -- was removed from one excavation it was used to fill a previous extraction area. Topsoil which had been stockpiled from the mining project, was returned to the filled excavation areas, contoured and strawberries planted. Succeeding crops were planted as excavation proceeded on the remainder of the 140 acres.

Advantages to the strawberry farmer were closer access to the water table for below surface-elevation plantings and protection from wind and frost. The reclamation was first approved in 1979, and mining began soon after. Within seven to nine years, the sand and gravel operation was completed along with full reclamation.

Grefco Inc. took Best Second Use award for the South Coast Botanical Gardens on the Palos Verdes Peninsula in Los Angeles County. The entry was submitted jointly by Grefco, the original mine operator, and South Coast Botanic Gardens Foundation Inc., a volunteer, non-profit support organization overseeing master development of gardens for the county Department of Arboreta and Botanic Gardens.

The present garden site was operated as a surface mine by a predecessor company for almost 30 years in production of a million tons of diatomite, a porous, light-weight material used for filters, insulation and insecticide. The second use of the area was as a county sanitary landfill. The present garden use began with large-scale plantings in 1961.

Serving as judges for the awards program were: Prof. Robert Twiss, UC Berkeley, landscape architecture; Johanna Wald, senior attorney, Natural Resources Defense Council; Robert Grunwald, State Mining & Geology Board; Nevada County planning director Tom Parillo, and Dave Brown, consultant, Environmental Solutions Inc.

The California Mining Association, headquartered in Sacramento represents the state's major mineral producers. California is among the leading non-fuel mineral producing states in the nation, recording nearly $3 billion annually in production of commodities as diverse as borax, gypsum, cement, gold, diatomite, clays and lanthanides as well as stone products and sand and gravel.

ROCHESTER, NY (APRIL 10) PR NEWSWIRE - Rochester Telephone Corp. (NYSE: RTC) announced today that it has completed the acquisition of the Viroqua Telephone Co. of Viroqua, Wis. Viroqua becomes the fifth Wisconsin telephone company to be purchased by Rochester Tel within the last year.

Incorporated in 1897, Viroqua serves about 3,000 access lines in western Wisconsin. The company's headquarters in Viroqua is located 26 miles southeast of LaCrosse.

Rochester Tel exchanged shares of its common stock for all the outstanding stock of Viroqua Telephone. No purchase price was disclosed in the transaction, which was first announced last October.

Since last June, Rochester Tel has acquired 11 telephone companies in the Midwest -- five in Wisconsin, five in Illinois and one in Indiana. The other Wisconsin properties are the Urban Telephone Corp. of Clintonville; the Mondovi Telephone Co. of Mondovi; the Lakeshore Telephone Co. of Cecil; and the St. Croix Telephone Co. of New Richmond.

So far this year, Rochester Tel has signed letters of agreement to acquire four other companies -- in Illinois, Kansas and Alabama. When these transactions are completed, the company will serve more than 660,000 access lines.

Rochester Tel's principal operating territory is a six-county area in Western-Central New York. It operates four other telephone companies in New York state, five in Pennsylvania, two in Michigan and two in Indiana.

DENVER (APRIL 10) PR NEWSWIRE - Ryder Truck Rental, the world's largest truck leasing and rental company, announced today that it will donate the use of its statewide network of 100 independent dealers and company-owned facilities to gather and distribute non-perishable food items for donation to needy Colorado families.

Ryder will kick off its new REACH (Ryder Employees Against Community Hunger) program at 9 a.m. tomorrow when a Ryder truck and driver will deliver seven and a half tons of food donated by the Campbell Soup Company from Campbell's plant in Paris, Texas, to the Volunteers of America's Denver City Harvest at 2636 Larimer Street, a food distribution center serving about 100 community meal programs across Colorado.

Ryder will collect donations of canned and packaged food from customers and other residents at all of its Colorado locations. Ryder trucks will deliver the food to the company's branch offices in Ft. Collins, Colorado Springs, Grand Junction, Pueblo and Denver, where donations will be consolidated and shipped without charge to the Volunteers of America City Harvest Center for further distribution.

"Ryder Truck Rental's locations form an ideal network for collecting donated food," said Conrad Langlitz, Ryder account manager in Denver, who initiated the REACH program. "Ryder dealers and employees will encourage every customer and caller to donate non- perishable foods when they come in to rent Ryder trucks."

In turn, Langlitz said, Ryder will offer participating customers discounted truck rental rates and other incentives, such as trip planning. Dealers will also provide receipts on request for the tax-deductible donations.

"The beauty of the REACH program is that Ryder Truck Rental's network of facilities and delivery capabilities will enable the Volunteers of America to provide donated food to thousands of needy citizens with virtually no collection and distribution cost," said Jim White, special projects director of the Volunteers of America in Denver.

"Our community programs, ranging from the Southwest Safe House for Battered Women in Durango to the Senior Citizens Meal Site in Nederland, are currently feeding up to 3,000 people a week," said White. "The retail value of donated food for these programs exceeds $100,000 a week, and transportation costs can be significant. Ryder's involvement will make an enormous difference."

Bob Smith, Ryder Truck Rental's district manager in Denver, said the REACH program will be an ongoing effort. "Our employees are really excited about helping less fortunate people in Colorado," he said. "Ryder feels so strongly about the REACH program that we'll challenge other companies to join us and make the effort even more effective." WINDSOR LOCKS, CT (APRIL 10) PR NEWSWIRE - The Dexter Corporation (NYSE: DEX) and Solvay & Cie S.A. (BSE: SOL) of Brussels, Belgium, announced today the formation of a joint venture for the development, manufacture and sale internationally of specialty engineered polypropylene-based compounds formulated primarily for use in the automotive industry.

A U.S. partnership, owned 50 percent each by Dexter and Solvay, has been formed to conduct operations in North America. Over the next few years, it is expected that additional companies will be formed to conduct business in Europe and Asia.

In making this announcement, K. Grahame Walker, president and CEO of Dexter, commented: "In combining Solvay's proprietary catalyst and polymer technology with Dexter's current market position and compounding capabilities, our joint venture will offer a new generation of engineered thermoplastics based on polypropylene to match the demand for higher-performing, cost-effective plastics for automotive and other markets."

Walker also said that Dexter's world-class compounding facility at Grand Prairie, Texas, the largest TPO supplier to the North American car market, and the new automotive applications center to be located near Detroit, will form the nucleus of the North American operation. The applications center, still in its engineering stages, may ultimately become the headquarters of the U.S. operation.

Walker also announced that Lawrence P. Doyle, president of Dexter plastics division, has been appointed president of the new U.S. joint venture company.

Solvay & Cie S.A. was founded in 1863. In 1989, the Solvay Group had sales in excess of $7 billion and employed over 44,000 people worldwide. Solvay's operations focus on the alkalis, peroxygen, plastics, processing and health business sectors.

Founded in 1767, The Dexter Corporation, a Fortune 500 company, is the oldest firm listed on the New York Stock Exchange. As a major specialty materials supplier, Dexter manufactures products that serve the aerospace, automotive, electronics, food packaging, industrial and medical markets. With more than 30 locations in 16 countries on five continents and employing approximately 5,400 people, Dexter had consolidated net sales and earnings for 1989 of $848.8MM and $43.0MM, respectively.

ST. LOUIS (APRIL 10) PR NEWSWIRE - INTERCO Incorporated (NYSE: ISS) announced today the operating results for the fourth quarter and fiscal year ended Feb. 24, 1990.

The company said that because of the commitment to offer for sale its Apparel Manufacturing Group and General Retail Merchandising Group, the financial results for these groups are reported as discontinued operations.

The results for the Footwear Group and the Furniture Group are reported as continuing operations, including the results of Ethan Allen to the date of its sale in the second quarter of fiscal 1990 and Senack Shoes, Inc., the majority of which was also sold at the end of the second quarter.

The operating results for the fourth quarter ended Feb. 24, 1990, compared with the prior year, were as follows:

Net sales from continuing operations were $380.3 million, compared with $483.1 million one year ago. Core companies' (Broyhill, Lane, Converse and Florsheim) net sales were $373.6 million, compared with $366.7 million last year.

Earnings from continuing operations, before interest expense, asset dispositions and income taxes were $41.0 million, compared with $27.4 million in the prior year. Within this total, core companies' earnings, before corporate expense, were $40.7 million, compared with $21.3 million a year ago.

Net loss, including discontinued operations, was $23.3 million, compared with net loss of $5.9 million last year. Last year's net loss included an after-tax gain of $33.9 million realized from the sale of assets.

The improvement in fourth quarter earnings before interest expense, asset dispositions and income taxes was due entirely to improved results by the footwear segment as contrasted to a soft performance a year ago.

The operating results for the fiscal year ended Feb. 24, 1990, compared with the prior year, were as follows:

Net sales from continuing operations were $1.66 billion, compared with $2.01 billion one year ago. Core companies' net sales were $1.47 billion compared with $1.57 billion last year.

PITTSBURGH (APRIL 10) PR NEWSWIRE - Mellon Bank, N.A., and Ameritrust Co. N.A., today announced that they have signed an agreement in which Mellon will acquire the automated teller machine (ATM) processing business which operates as the InstaNet shared regional network.

Under the agreement, Mellon's Network Services Division, headquartered in Pittsburgh, will offer ATM processing services to 19 financial institutions formerly serviced by Ameritrust, headquartered in Cleveland. In addition, Mellon will provide the network link between Ameritrust's ASSET network and the InstaNet shared regional network. Ameritrust will continue to own and operate the 270 ATM ASSET network.

The InstaNet network consists of 441 ATMs located in the Greater Cleveland area, which generate eight million transactions per year.

Terms of the agreement were not disclosed. The agreement is effective immediately with conversions scheduled to begin this summer. ATM and cardholder service will not be interrupted during the conversion process.

"We are pleased that Ameritrust chose Mellon as their ATM processing partner and are especially excited that they are working closely with us to introduce our services to their ATM processing clients," said Janet Hartung, senior vice president and head of Mellon's Network Services Division.

According to A. Jay Meyerson, executive vice president of Consumer Banking at Ameritrust, "We made the strategic decision to exit the ATM processing business and concentrate on building our retail franchise. We were impressed with Mellon's high level of service, flexibility and the broad array of additional services that they bring to the marketplace. We look forward to working in partnership with them."

This agreement represents the second major expansion of Mellon's ATM processing business in the past month. In March, Mellon announced that it had acquired State Street Bank and Trust Co.'s ATM transaction processing business in New England. Under that agreement, Mellon's Network Services Division will provide automated teller machine (ATM) processing for State Street's own proprietary system and for 48 financial institutions in the Greater Boston area previously served by State Street.

"Providing gateway services to InstaNet for Ameritrust and providing processing services for the InstaNet financial institutions will significantly increase our total processing volumes," Hartung explained. "In anticipation of such growth, last year Mellon invested more than $2 million in new Tandem computer equipment. This major investment has positioned us for an aggressive expansion of our business, wherever a market opportunity exists."

"After the conversions are completed, the institutions served by Network Services will have the option of adding additional ATM services," Hartung explained. "Immediately available services include access to Money Station and the CIRRUS national network with optional services such as Mobil Oil Point-of-Sale (POS) and the MasterCard and Visa ATM Networks to be offered."

This transaction strengthens Mellon's position as one of the nation's largest EFT processors. Mellon's Network Services Division serves more than 350 financial institutions throughout the United States with ATM driving, transaction processing and card production services. These services, marketed under the brand name Mellon Ally, include gateway links to more than 20 regional and national ATM networks, point-of-sale support and extensive consulting services.

With assets of $31.5 billion at Dec. 31, 1989, Mellon Bank Corp. (NYSE: MEL) is one of the nation's largest bank holding companies. Through its subsidiaries, it provides wholesale, middle market and retail banking, as well as numerous service products including trust and investment, data processing and cash management.

Ameritrust Co., N.A., is the principal subsidiary of Ameritrust Corp. (OTC: AMTR), a major regional bank holding company with assets of more than $11 billion and more than 200 offices in Ohio, Indiana and Michigan. The holding company provides the full range of commercial bank services and operates one of the largest trust companies in the country.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 10) PR NEWSWIRE - The International Federation of Air Line Pilots Associations (IFALPA) yesterday added seven U.S. airspace locations to its "critically deficient" list, also known as the "Black Star" list, after the Federal Aviation Administration reduced an important air traffic separation standard in those areas.

The seven locations in the United States added to the list are the Terminal Control Areas over the following airports: Charlotte, N.C.; Cleveland; Dallas-Fort Worth; Los Angeles; Memphis, Tenn.; Philadelphia; and Phoenix, Ariz.

Prior to yesterday, the only other Black Star location in the United States was Cyril E. King International Airport in St. Thomas, U.S. Virgin Islands.

The Black Star list is an internal information service provided by IFALPA for airline pilots operating international routes. It warns airline pilots of certain serious deficiencies at international airports, navigational facilities, or volumes of airspace used by commercial flights. IFALPA is an international coordinating group for 70 airline pilot organizations representing 65,000 airline pilots worldwide.

As a result of the IFALPA action, all 70 member pilot organizations worldwide will be notified of the following:

1. Pilots should exercise increased outside visual surveillance during arrivals and departures in these seven areas, and,

2. Pilots should give careful consideration of the point at which they will accept responsibility for visual separation during approach and departure, due to the reduced positive separation standards and the resultant increase in pilot workload.

NEW YORK (APRIL 10) PR NEWSWIRE - Manufacturers Hanover (NYSE: MHC) has announced the implementation of a funds transfer disaster recovery system that guarantees that the bank can recover from a disaster occurring at its primary processing site on a same day basis and starting from point of failure.

Manufacturers Hanover is the first bank to develop this system and is well ahead of the New York Clearing House regulatory requirement which calls for implementation by June 1991.

Implemented by GEOSERVE, the bank's global services group, the new system offers advantages that no other bank can provide. Michael J. Pasiecki, senior vice president in charge of GEOSERVE Wholesale Computer Services explains, "By taking advantage of technological innovations, we can recover from a business interruption within four to six hours and we offer our customers same day recovery without the risk of lost transactions."

Samuel Newman, senior vice president and business manager of GEOSERVE's Funds Transfer Group explains the system's competitive advantages in two major areas: "First, our same day recovery permits us to recover from the point of failure, meaning that we can reconstruct what has taken place before the disaster and begin the processing at a new remote site starting from the point of failure.

"Secondly, we have contracted with Comdisco Computing Services Corporation for a dedicated same day recovery capability on a standby computer system. Most banks only subscribe to traditional commercial hot site services which provide access on a first-come first-served basis. We think it's worth the added expenditure to assure our customers that we will have immediate and guaranteed availability at the contingency facility beyond traditional hotsite services."

The nature of the funds transfer business makes it very difficult for a major user to adjust for a disaster at its main clearing bank. The customer typically provides instructions on when to send funds, days, weeks or months in advance, and it is nearly impossible to redirect payment at the last minute. "Our new capability is very important to our customers," states Newman. "It gives them the comfort of knowing that MH can continue processing even in the event of a major disaster."

Manufacturers Hanover had previously taken steps to minimize the situations that could cause the loss of the local processing site by providing redundancy for all key components of the funds transfer system.

In addition to maintaining multiple systems in case of hardware failure, MH has uninterruptable power supply (UPS) and its own power generators in case of power failure and maintains backup telephone lines through separate telephone company switch facilities in case of a problem with the local telephone switching facility.

Manufacturers Hanover, one of the largest banks in funds transfer, processes an average of 36,000 business transactions a day totaling $200 billion. As a leader in technology, the Bank continues to be in the forefront of the funds transfer industry. With its newly implemented same day recovery system, Manufacturers Hanover is setting the standards for business continuity and customer protection in payments processing.

ANNAPOLIS MD (APRIL 10) PR NEWSWIRE - UNC Incorporated (NYSE: UNC) announced today that it has been awarded a four-and-one-half-year contract to conduct environmental programs for the U.S. Army Toxic and Hazardous Materials Agency, located at Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md.

The company estimates that revenues from the contract may exceed $15 million. Work on the contract, which will begin in late May, will be performed by UNC's subsidiary, UNC Remediation, headquartered in Grand Junction, Colo.

UNC Remediation will be tasked to accomplish environmental services at domestic active Army installations. The work will include investigations, regulatory compliance support, training and remedial design as well as emergency disposal of hazardous materials. This work will also be done at Army bases marked for closure.

Commenting on the award, Dan A. Colussy, chairman and chief executive officer of UNC Incorporated, said, "This contract represents an opportunity for UNC to apply its extensive environmental restoration expertise to help the Army meet its challenging responsibilities particularly as it prepares an increasing number of bases for other than military use."

UNC, through its subsidiaries, provides environmental services for government and private-sector clients. The company has cleaned up more than 2,800 contaminated government, industrial, commercial and residential sites during the past four years.

UNC Incorporated, listed on the New York Stock Exchange, is engaged in providing high technology products and services in the aerospace aviation, defense, and environmental industries.

SCHAUMBURG, IL (APRIL 10) PR NEWSWIRE - Motorola, Inc. (NYSE: MOT) today reported record sales and earnings for the first quarter of 1990.

Sales rose to $2.53 billion, up 16 percent from $2.17 billion in the first quarter of 1989. Earnings were $127 million, or 98 cents per share, compared with $123 million, or 95 cents per share, a year earlier. Net margin on sales was 5.0 percent against 5.6 percent a year ago.

George Fisher, chairman and chief executive officer, said, "In the communications arena, the cellular telephone business continues to expand rapidly. Higher orders for two-way radio and paging products indicate that our investments in these technologies also should result in sizable growth, although short-term profitability for two-way radio systems was under pressure," he said.

"There are some promising early indications of renewed strength in the semiconductor industry," Fisher said. "We are confident that our focus on quality, efficient short-cycle production, and customer satisfaction should enable us to gain greater shares of growing electronics markets. That confidence is reflected in our plans to increase investments in new plant and equipment, as well as in research and development."

Gary L. Tooker, president and chief operating officer, reviewed the following results of Motorola's major operations for the first quarter, compared with the first quarter of 1989:

Sales in the communications sector rose 11 percent, orders increased 22 percent, and backlog at the end of the quarter was 26 percent higher than a year ago. Operating profits were lower because of investments in radio data communications and product and systems development engineering.

Order growth in the United States was led by the radio common carrier, industrial and government markets. International increases were highest in Europe and Asia. In Taiwan, liberalization of telecommunications laws resulted in several major orders for Bravo(R) pagers.

ARDIS, a new joint venture with International Business Machines Corp., began operations at its headquarters in Lincolnshire, Ill. The new company, formed to provide a nationwide data information service, gives companies access to their computer data bases and information systems through two-way radio data terminals.

In the semiconductor products Sector, sales advanced 13 percent, orders rose 14 percent, and backlog was 17 percent higher. Operating profits were lower.

Orders were higher throughout the world, led by the Asia/Pacific region. Growth was highest in the industrial, distribution, communications and consumer market segments. Most product categories experienced higher demand. Digital signal processors, memories, microcontrollers, gate arrays and special function digital-analog circuits posted substantial order growth.

General systems sector sales climbed 53 percent, orders increased 21 percent, and backlog was down 3 percent. Operating profits were higher.

Motorola received cellular system licenses in Mexico and Chile, and expanded its digital cellular (GSM) activities in Norway, Sweden and the United Kingdom. An order in excess of $60 million was received from Cellnet for expansion of the analog system in the UK. On the subscriber side, the PT500(TM), a lower-priced version of the MicroTAC(TM) personal telephone, was introduced. Plans for a new manufacturing facility in Scotland also were announced.

The Computer Group announced a new line of MultiPersonal(TM) Computers, based on the Motorola 88000 RISC microprocessor, AT&T's UNIX(R) operating system, and the X Window(TM) graphics standard developed by MIT. These systems are targeted at the commercial market.

In the information systems group, sales rose 6 percent, orders increased 20 percent, and backlog was 9 percent higher. Operating profits were lower. International activity for Codex was especially strong and included major orders from banks in Belgium, Chile and Mexico. Sales of high-speed leased-line modems were higher than expected. Universal Data Systems sales were paced by high-speed V.32 modems.

Sales in the government electronics group were 6 percent higher, orders declined 17 percent, and backlog was unchanged. Operating profits increased, due to improved contract performance and lower expenses.

In the automotive and industrial electronics group, sales declined 5 percent, orders were 12 percent lower, and backlog was down 9 percent. Operating profits were lower. The group's performance reflected the overall softening of the U.S. automotive industry.

DALLAS (APRIL 10) PR NEWSWIRE - Oryx Energy Co. (NYSE: ORX) and its operating partner, Santa Fe Minerals Inc., today announced an $18.5 million subsea completion in the Gulf of Mexico on Garden Banks Block 224.

The 14.6-mile underwater flowline from the wellhead to the platform will be a record length for the Gulf of Mexico and the second longest in the world.

Garden Banks Block 224 is expected to begin production in early 1991, at a rate of 20 million cubic feet of gas per day (MMcf/D).

The subsea completion, in 745 feet of water, will be connected to an Oryx Energy-operated platform now under construction on High Island Block A-384 to the north/northwest. This is the second subsea completion for Oryx Energy and the first for Santa Fe Minerals, Inc.

Subsea completion technology allows more economical development of off-shore oil and gas reservoirs that cannot be reached from existing platforms. Because of the water depth on Garden Banks Block 224, this subsea completion will result in considerable capital savings over installation of a conventional platform. Last month Oryx Energy announced its first subsea completion, a $4 million project on High Island Block A-370 that will produce between five and 10 MMcf/D beginning in the fourth quarter of 1990.

Oryx Energy has a 50 percent working interest in the Garden Banks Block 224 project. Santa Fe Minerals Inc., has the other 50 percent working interest and is the operator. The two companies acquired the lease (OCS-G-6364) for $7.3 million in 1983 at OCS Lease Sale 74.

The Dallas-based Oryx Energy conducts its domestic operations through Sun Energy Partners, L.P. Oryx Energy, the managing general partner and 98 percent owner of the partnership, is the largest independent oil and gas producer in the world, with assets in excess of $5 billion and proved reserves of more than one billion equivalent barrels. Oryx Energy trades on the New York Stock Exchange with the symbol ORX and the partnership with the symbol SLP.

DEERFIELD BEACH, FL (APRIL 10) PR NEWSWIRE - CheckRobot Inc. (NASDAQ: CKRB) announced today that it has received its largest order ever for Vision (TM) Systems from Advanced Promotion Technologies, Inc.

Advanced Promotion Technologies, a joint venture company consisting of CheckRobot Inc., Procter & Gamble (NYSE: PG), Dun & Bradstreet (NYSE: DNB) and PNC Corp. The approximate $1 million order covers systems which will be used for Vision's first roll-out phase. The Vision System is manufactured by CheckRobot for Advanced Promotion Technologies.

The Vision System is used for electronic marketing in supermarket chains. The system gives supermarket shoppers paper and electronic coupons, recipes and instant rebates at the checkout counter. The Vision Value Club another component of the Vision System, is a frequent shopper program designed to reward shoppers for buying sponsoring products at participating retailers' locations.

"Vision's results have been very impressive. Consequently, Advanced Promotion Technologies has decided to substantially increase the number of Vision System installations," says Charles J. Beech, CheckRobot's president and CEO. The first Vision installations are scheduled for the 69-store Big Bear chain in Columbus, Ohio. Big Bear has already announced that it intends to install Vision in all of its stores. Vision systems will also be installed in Kroger and Safeway stores the next few months on a test basis.

CheckRobot also announced today that Schlumberger Technology, a subsidiary of Schlumberger Ltd. (NYSE: SLB), has purchased approximately 10 percent of Advanced Promotion Technologies. The new partner, Schlumberger, produces the special smart cards used with the Vision Value Club. Smart cards are plastic cards, the same size as credit cards, with powerful computer chips embedded in the plastic. Schlumberger Ltd. is a $5 billion international corporation with operations in over 150 countries.

Beech also said that the company is continuing its efforts to obtain financing for the period following the end of its current fiscal year in May. The company has been negotiating with one of its principle stockholders, OmniCorp International, for a portion of such financing and it understands that its other principle shareholder, MARCo Holdings, is attempting to raise funds to exercise its options to purchase additional equity of the company on an expedited basis. The company is also exploring the possibility of an equity private placement to other parties.

CheckRobot develops and markets ACM (R) automated checkout machines. The systems are designed to improve customer service and profitability for the supermarket industry. Using enhanced laser bar code scanners and a proprietary merchandise security system, the ACM allows shoppers to quickly scan and check out merchandise before paying centrally located cashiers.

HARRISBURG, PA (APRIL 10) PR NEWSWIRE - Bell of Pennsylvania will pay nearly $42 million -- almost all of it in refunds to consumers -- to settle allegations that it used deceptive marketing techniques, Attorney General Ernie Preate Jr. and Consumer Advocate David M. Barasch announced today.

"This settlement is one of the largest of its kind in the nation," Preate said at a news conference here. "An estimated two million Pennsylvania consumers will get refunds totaling more than $36 million."

Preate and Barasch said agreements filed today settle coordinated legal actions brought against Bell in March 1988 by the Office of Consumer Advocate and the Attorney General's Bureau of Consumer Protection.

The actions alleged that Bell used deceptive marketing techniques to sell optional telephone services -- such as Touch Tone, Call Waiting and wire maintenance plans -- to consumers.

"Our extensive negotiations with Bell have produced a settlement that not only provides for refunds to consumers, but also insures that Bell's sales practices will be in conformance with state law and regulations," Barasch said.

Said Preate: "This is an excellent settlement that's in the best interests of Pennsylvania's consumers, and avoids what likely would have been a long and costly courtroom battle."

Under terms of separate agreements filed today, Bell will pay a total of $36,350,000 in refunds to consumers, $5 million to a newly established Telephone Education Fund and $450,000 to the commonwealth.

Preate and Barasch said Bell will not charge rate-payers for any part of the settlement.

The refunds will be paid as follows:

-- $35.2 million to consumers who signed up for Bell's Touch Tone service or any of its "Custom Calling" services (Call Waiting, Call Forwarding, Three-way Calling and Speed Calling) from Jan. 1, 1985, through March 31, 1988.

These consumers will get a credit for each of the covered services they ordered during that time, Barasch said.

He said an estimated 1.5 million consumers ordered one or more of the affected services during the period covered by the settlement.

-- $1,150,000 to consumers who signed up for either of Bell's wire maintenance plans (Basic Optional Wire Maintenance or Guardian) between Jan. 1, 1987, and March 31, 1988.

Preate said an estimated 408,000 of these consumers will receive refunds of almost $3 each.

Bell also will pay a total of $5 million over five years into a new Telephone Education Fund.

Under terms of the agreements, Bell denies that it engaged in any unlawful conduct. Preate and Barasch noted that the agreements are not admissions of wrongdoing.

NEW YORK, (APRIL 10) PR NEWSWIRE - Asset Growth Partners, Inc. (AGP), headquartered in New York City, announced today record net earnings of $543,745, or 12 cents per share, on record revenues of $6,321,673 for the year ended Dec. 31, 1989.

Net earnings of $543,745 increased by $1,034,474 as compared to a $490,729 loss in the same period of 1988. Revenues for the 12-month period increased by 823 percent from the $684,851 recorded for the 12 months 1988. The significant increases in both revenues and earnings is attributable to AGP's subsidiary, Dynasound Organizer, Inc., which the company acquired on April 7, 1989.

Dynasound Organizer, Inc. designs, manufactures and distributes branded storage cases for audio and video cassettes, compact disks, computer diskettes, and video games. Dynasound is a licensee from Nintendo for its video game organizer product.

AGP is a merchant banking firm that owns operating companies and provides investment banking services to mid-market businesses.

AGP has applied for listing with NASDAQ. AGP is currently traded OTC.

BURBANK, CA (APRIL 9) PR NEWSWIRE - Warner Bros. Inc. and Pathe Communications Corp. (NYSE: PCC) have reached an agreement whereby Warner bros. will provide long-term support services to Pathe and MGM/UA Communications Co. for theatrical, television and home video distribution on a worldwide basis of existing titles, including the United Artists and Pathe Libraries and future theatrical motion pictures produced by Pathe and MGM/UA.

The agreement is subject to the completion of Pathe's announced acquisition of MGM/UA and certain other conditions.

Under the terms of the agreement, Warner Bros. and its parent, Time Warner Inc. (NYSE: TWX) will, concurrent with Pathe's acquisition of MGM/UA, arrange for (or provide on a bridge basis) a $650 million bank loan to MGM/UA, secured by the UA film library and guaranteed by Time Warner. MGM/UA will use the loan proceeds to purchase certain assets of Pathe Communications, which in turn will use the funds in connection with its acquisition of MGM/UA.

Giancarlo Parretti, the president of Pathe and Yoram Globus, Pathe's co-president, said: "We are delighted to be working with the first-rate people at Warner Bros. This agreement represents a major step for Pathe towards implementing its plans to create an international major entertainment company."

Stated warner Bros. Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Robert A. Daly and President and Chief Operating Officer Terry Semel: "We are gratified that Pathe has chosen the worldwide distribution and marketing team at Warner Bros. to support its product. We are pleased to be able to help viewers everywhere enjoy the treasures of films owned by Pathe and MGM/UA."

WESTVILLE, NJ (APRIL 10) PR NEWSWIRE - Mars Graphic Services Inc. (AMEX: WMD) today reported consolidated results of operations for the three months and year ended Feb. 28, 1990.

Sales for the year ended Feb. 28, 1990, were $24,419,362 compared to $16,053,844 for the year ended Feb. 28, 1989. Net income for the year ended Feb. 28, 1990, was $807,514 or $.48 per share (1,734,255 shares) compared to $238,217 or $.15 per share (1,617,600 shares).

Sales for the three months ended Feb. 28, 1990, were $6,868,528 compared to $3,936,603 for the three months ended Feb. 28, 1989. Net income was $152,917 or $.09 per share (1,817,580 shares) compared to $51,881 or $.03 per share (1,617,600 shares) for the three months ended Feb. 28, 1989. The results for the year ended Feb. 28, 1990, include the results of DiMark Inc., the company's wholly owned subsidiary, for the period from Aug. 4, 1989, (the date of the business combination) through Feb. 28, 1990.

Set forth below are the pro forma results of operations for Mars and DiMark which reflect the results of operations for the periods as if the businesses had been combined for the entire periods presented. Due to the difference in fiscal year ends between Mars and DiMark, the pro forma results reflect the three months and year ended Feb. 28, 1990, for Mars and the three months and year ended Dec. 31, 1989, for DiMark. The pro forma results also give effect to matters directly relating to the business combination, including amortization of goodwill and customer list interest on indebtedness to finance the transaction and amortization of a covenant not to compete.

Mars and DiMark occupy a prominent position in the direct-response industry. The combination of Mars and DiMark created one of the few vertically integrated direct-response marketing organizations in the country. The firm provides a comprehensive range of services including printing, product development, creative, data base marketing, production and administration to financial services, publishing and consumer products companies. Mars is traded on the American Stock Exchange under the symbol WMD. The company's registered trademark "We Make Deadlines" is reflective of its commitment to timeliness and service.

DENVER (APRIL 10) PR NEWSWIRE - Cyprus Minerals Co. (NYSE: CYM) announced today that its affiliate, Cyprus Metals Exploration Corp., has entered into a 50-50 joint venture agreement with MMS Resources Inc., the U.S. affiliate of Mitsui Mining & Smelting Co. Ltd., and Mitsui & Co. Ltd. Mitsui & Co. will, in the near future, incorporate a U.S. subsidiary to which it will transfer its interest in the agreement. The venture will evaluate certain Cyprus zinc prospects and conduct exploration activities in the western United States with the goal of identifying, and eventually developing, zinc prospects in the U.S.

The joint venture agreement was signed at Cyprus Minerals' headquarters in Denver, taking effect immediately and extending for a period of 10 years, with possible extension periods of three years following the initial term of the agreement.

Cyprus Minerals currently produces zinc at the Pinos Altos mine near Silver City, N.M., and has zinc prospects in other areas of New Mexico. Cyprus also is engaged in the development of a zinc/silver mine in northern Mexico, which is a joint venture project with Mexican partners and is not included in the agreement.

Mitsui Mining & Smelting Co. Ltd., headquartered in Tokyo, is a producer of zinc, copper, rare metals, precious metals, electronic and chemical raw materials, and auto parts. Mitsui & Co., Ltd., also headquartered in Tokyo, is a general trading company.

Cyprus Minerals, headquartered in Englewood, Colo., is a producer of copper, molybdenum, lithium, coal, talc, iron ore, gold, and zinc.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 10) PR NEWSWIRE - The Student Loan Marketing Association (Sallie Mae) (NYSE: SLM) today reported net income for the 1990 first quarter of $71.0 million, up 16 percent over net income of $61.3 million for the 1989 first quarter and 4 percent over net income of $68.0 million in the 1989 fourth quarter.

Earnings per common share were 69 cents for the 1990 first quarter, up 16 percent from 60 cents in the 1989 first quarter and 4 percent from 66 cents in the 1989 fourth quarter. Earnings per common share data for the year-ago period are restated to reflect the two-and-one-half for one split of Sallie Mae's common stock effected in May 1989.

At March 31, 1990, total assets were $37.0 billion, up 22 percent over March 31, 1989, and 4 percent over Dec. 31, 1989. Student loan purchases for the 1990 first quarter totalled $1.4 billion, compared to $1.0 billion in the 1989 first quarter. Total student loans owned at the quarter's close were $16.8 billion, up from $13.7 billion at March 31, 1989, and $16.0 billion at Dec. 31, 1989. Warehousing advances outstanding at the quarter's close were $9.0 billion, up 13 percent from March 31, 1989, and 5 percent from Dec. 31, 1989. At the quarter's end, forward commitments outstanding, the pipeline for future asset growth, were $11.9 billion, including $9.7 billion for the purchase of student loans.

During the quarter, Sallie Mae borrowed $3.7 billion as it took advantage of opportunities to issue debt at attractive spreads to Treasury bills. Most of Sallie Mae's loan assets are tied to the 91-day Treasury bill auction rate. Fox noted that while earnings on the investment of these borrowed funds were minimal in the quarter, the longer term effect of these favorable financings will be better margins on our core business -- the Guaranteed Student Loan Program.

Also during the quarter, Sallie Mae reduced by nearly 700,000 the number of common shares of stock outstanding, as part of the corporation's ongoing management of the relationship of its equity accounts to its debt. During the period, legislation was reintroduced and passed in the U.S. Senate to convert all of the corporation's common stock into a single class of unrestricted voting common stock. Sallie Mae cannot predict whether or when this legislation will be enacted by Congress.

Sallie Mae opened a regional sales office in Cleveland to enhance service to financial institutions in that state. Additionally, the corporation announced that it would build a new loan servicing center in Killeen, Texas.

Sallie Mae, a federally chartered, stockholder-owned (NYSE) corporation, is the major financial intermediary serving the education finance market. By buying insured student loans and providing other financial services to financial and educational institutions, Sallie Mae replenishes local supplies of student credit. The corporation owns nearly 30 percent of all guaranteed student loans outstanding today.

DALLAS (APRIL 10) PR NEWSWIRE - Lomas Financial Corp. (NYSE: LFC) today announced that Lomas Mortgage USA, its wholly owned mortgage banking subsidiary, has signed an agreement to acquire a $3.5 billion mortgage servicing portfolio and related assets from Bright Mortgage Co. The acquisition was facilitated and approved by Resolution Trust Corp.

The Bright Mortgage servicing portfolio acquisition will increase Lomas Mortgage USA's mortgage servicing portfolio to $24.5 billion from $21 billion. The transaction also will add 94,000 loans to Lomas Mortgage USA's servicing portfolio, bringing the total loans serviced to approximately 615,000.

The acquisition is the largest Lomas Mortgage USA has made in recent years.

Lomas Mortgage USA, which currently processes 800 loans per employee, compared with the industry average of about 600, expects the acquisition will boost that figure to 900 loans per employee.

According to Executive Vice President Terry J. Deyoe, who headed Lomas' 25-member due diligence team, "The purchase of Bright's mortgage portfolio represents an 18-percent portfolio increase, and reflects not only the viability and quality of our mortgage servicing operation, but also Lomas Mortgage USA's commitment to future growth. If you look back to 1979, you'll find that of that year's Top 10 mortgage servicers, Lomas is the only company still in the Top 10. And with this major acquisition, Lomas remains firmly positioned among the nation's premier mortgage banking institutions."

Lewis Greene, RTC's representative and financial institutions specialist in Dallas, noted that the Bright Mortgage portfolio transaction is a significant achievement for the federal agency and demonstrates the marketing ability of the RTC.

NEW YORK (APRIL 10) PR NEWSWIRE - Ed McCabe, who helped found and build the ad agency Scali, McCabe, Sloves, Inc., into an international creative force has joined Beber, Silverstein & Partners as creative partner and director of the Miami-based firm's New York office.

Joyce Beber, chairman, said the 18-year-old agency has changed its name to Beber, Silverstein, McCabe & Partners, Inc.

McCabe, 51, garnered worldwide attention for his Perdue Farms ads featuring Frank Perdue and for his agency's work on Volvo, Revlon and Hertz accounts, among others. He will divide his time between Miami and New York, where the agency has just moved into new, expanded offices at 1500 Broadway.

McCabe left Scali, McCabe, Sloves in 1986 to pursue new creative challenges, some of which are chronicled in his book Against Gravity, due out this June.

He added that key factors in his decision were Miami's burgeoning creative energy, its strategic location as a gateway to Latin America and other global markets, and the region's growing potential for advertising-related services.

Beber, Silverstein & Partners has offices in New York, Washington and Miami. Founded in 1972 by Joyce Beber and Elaine Silverstein, the agency has an estimated $70 million in billings. The company represents such clients as Knight-Ridder, Humana Inc., Lykes Bros., Florida Power & Light Co., Coty, Florida Gold Orange Juice and First Florida Bank. The agency also handles Broadway-related entertainment advertising. Last year, the firm acquired Bruce Rubin Associates, Inc., a Miami-based public relations firm.

PALM DESERT, CA (APRIL 10) PR NEWSWIRE - The more than 1,000 delegates attending the American Automobile Association's annual meeting here today endorsed legislating an end to collision damage waiver sales to rental car customers.

AAA said collision damage waiver (CDW) sales are often fraught with misinformation and consumers generally don't understand the implications of buying or rejecting the waiver.

"Consumers often have no access to usable, reliable information on the need for a CDW since provisions concerning vehicle liability are typically buried in car rental contracts," said J. Kay Aldous, AAA senior vice president for public and government affairs.

The collision damage waiver is not insurance, as many car renters assume. In most instances if the customer pays for the waiver, the rental car company agrees not to sue the customer if the car is damaged. If the customer does not purchase the collision damage waiver, the rental car contract typically specifies that the renter is liable for damage to the car.

"Legislation banning CDW sales should prohibit rental car companies from charging for losses, unless a customer intentionally damages the vehicle or engages in similar criminal conduct," Aldous said.

The National Association of State Attorneys General and the National Association of Insurance Commissioners support elimination of CDW sales.

CLEVELAND (APRIL 10) PR NEWSWIRE - The board of directors of Edgell Communications today announced the appointment of Richard B. Swank as chief executive officer of the company.

Swank, 58, will succeed Robert L. Edgell, who announced his resignation as the company's chief executive on March 30. Swank's appointment is effective immediately.

Swank has spent his entire career in the information industry and has extensive experience in magazine, directory and direct response publishing. Most recently, he was president of Richard Swank & Associates a general business consulting group in Redding, Conn.

From 1984 to 1988, Swank was executive vice president of The Dun & Bradstreet Corporation and headed The Reuben H. Donnelley Corporation and Technical Publishing Company subsidiaries of Dun & Bradstreet. He also was responsible for Donnelley's joint-venture interest in Thomson Directories Ltd. in the United Kingdom and Donnelley Information Publishing, a new business venture in the United States.

Prior to 1984, Swank was president of The Reuben H. Donnelley Corporation. In the mid-1970s, he was vice president and general manager of Donnelley-Europe, a multi-country consumer direct marketing organization.

During his career at Dun & Bradstreet and Donnelley, Swank held a number of senior management positions in the areas of market development and corporate planning.

Swank began his business career in 1955 at the Meredith Corporation as an advertising sales manager for "Better Homes & Gardens" magazine.

Swank will work from Edgell Communications' Cleveland headquarters. He stated that Edgell Communications management at all levels will remain in place as is. Richard J. Moeller will continue as president and chief operating officer; Orlando G. Fladmark, executive vice president; and Arland E. Hirman, vice president, treasurer and secretary. Fladmark is also president of Beckley-Cardy, Edgell Communications' school supply business.

Edgell, 67, who is a founder of the publishing company and who led a management buyout of the company's business magazine, exposition and school supplies distribution operations in 1987 from Harcourt Brace Jovanovich, Inc., will work with and assist Swank. Edgell will continue to be personally involved in the foodservice, lodging, pharmaceutical and cosmetology fields and in the art exposition businesses of Edgell Communications. These are areas in which he has been particularly active.

Edgell Communications employs more than 1,400 employees. It is one of the nation's major publishers of business and professional publications. The company's operations also include Edgell Expositions, which produces business and consumer expositions, and Beckley-Cardy, a distributor of school supplies to elementary and secondary schools nationwide.

MONROE, MI (APRIL 10) PR NEWSWIRE - Detroit Edison's Fermi 2 power plant automatically shut down early this morning when a component apparently failed, causing partial loss of power to the reactor protection system. At no time was there any danger to plant personnel or the public.

The power loss resulted in a loss of pressure to operate the main steam isolation valves, causing them to close. All systems worked as designed to safely shut down the reactor.

An investigation into the reason for the automatic shutdown is now being conducted. Plant restart is expected to begin in a few days.

Prior to the shutdown, the plant had operated for 107 consecutive days since restarting Dec. 23, following its first refueling outage.

A few hours after the shutdown, an estimated 20,000 gallons of slightly radioactive water leaked from a break in a weld in a one-inch feedwater heater line. The water spilled onto the turbine room floor and drained into the radioactive wastewater recovery system, which processes it for reuse.

No one was contaminated as a result of the incident and normal radiation protection procedures were followed.

PITTSBURGH (APRIL 10) PR NEWSWIRE - Westinghouse Electric Corp.'s (NYSE: WX) net income increased 11 percent in the first quarter of 1990 compared to the same period last year, Chairman John C. Marous announced today.

First-quarter 1990 net income was a record $210,000,000 or $1.43 per share on revenues of $2,862,000,000 compared to net income of $189,000,000 or $1.30 per share on revenues of $2,887,000,000 for the first quarter of 1989.

After adjusting 1989 revenues for the divestiture of the transmission and distribution business, first-quarter 1990 revenues show a 10 percent improvement for ongoing businesses.

Operating profit was $294,000,000 in the first quarter of 1990 resulting in an operating profit margin of 10.3 percent as compared to operating profit of $281,000,000 and a margin of 9.7 percent in the same quarter last year.

Other income increased in the quarter because of gains from the sale of two radio stations and the sale of the minority interest in a foreign nuclear venture. The prior-year quarter included a gain from the sale of the minority interest in a cable television programming service.

"The first quarter met our expectations, and we are on target for the year. I am very pleased by the first-quarter operating profit margin. This marks 27 consecutive quarters of reported increased earnings over prior-year periods," Marous said.

"The earnings improvement in the quarter combined with a substantial increase in orders for Electronic Systems and Power Generation are positive signs for the corporation."

Segment Information Revenues and operating profit for Financial Services were up substantially for the first quarter because of significantly higher levels of outstanding loans and marketable securities.

Broadcasting's operating profit was down in the first quarter primarily because of the softness of the Northeast market. Revenues were about even with the prior-year quarter.

Operating profit for Energy and Utility Systems was up in the first quarter this year on significantly higher revenues in the Power Generation Business Unit.

SEATTLE (APRIL 10) PR NEWSWIRE - Boeing Commercial Airplane Group today delivered its 6,000th jetliner, a 767-200 for Britannia Airways, Boeing said.

The first Boeing commercial jetliner, a four-engined 707-120, was delivered Aug. 15, 1958, to Pan American World Airways.

The 6,000 Boeing jetliners are more than the rest of the world's jetliner production combined, except for the Soviet Union. Currently, 5,319 Boeing jetliners are in the inventory of 444 owners, including airlines, private operators, government agencies, manufacturers, brokers and leasing companies based in 124 countries throughout the world.

Boeing is the largest aerospace manufacturer in the world. During the 32 years of jetliner production by the company, six major types have been developed. These include the long-range 707, which effectively initiated the world's transoceanic jet age, the 727, the 737, the giant 747 and the medium to long-range twinjets, the 757 and the 767.

Today the company is looking forward to building a larger, long-range twinjet currently identified as the 767-X.

Boeing has received 7,700 orders for its jetliners from 253 customers. The order backlog stands at 1,700. The fleet of Boeing-produced jetliners has accumulated 187 million revenue hours, flown 81.3 billion statute miles and carried more than 8.1 billion passengers.

Although jetliners have been the major product of Boeing since the mid-1950s, Boeing has been in the business of building airplanes since it was founded in 1916. Including early biplanes, early piston-powered passenger airplanes, military bombers and refuelers, and the jetliners, the company has turned out more than 33,600 airplanes.

Of these, about 10,300 were Kaydet biplane trainers for the U.S. Army, built at the company's Wichita, Kan., plant in the 1930s and 1940s. The famous Model 314 flying boats, called "Clippers" by Pan American, were the largest production airplane in service in the late 1930s and early 1940s, but the Boeing B-17 bomber, the famous "Flying Fortress" of World War II, was the airplane that made the Boeing name a household word in the 1940s. Boeing itself built 6,981 of these, while another 5,745 were built under license by others.

Since the mid-1950s, Boeing has dominated the world of jet transport. With its family of jetliners, covering all ranges from short to extra-long and all passengers sizes from 100 passengers to more than 500, with the most capable production facilities and the most complete customer service network of any manufacturer, Boeing will continue to be the leader.

Its current production rate of 31 jetliners per month is more than the other two producers of large jetliners combined; and by mid-year, the Boeing rate will reach 34 per month.

RESEARCH TRIANGLE PARK, NC (APRIL 10) PR NEWSWIRE - Rhone-Poulenc Ag Company announced today that it is taking voluntary action to temporarily halt the sale of its crop protection chemical aldicarb for use on potatoes.

This voluntary action is being carried out in cooperation with the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency. Recent testing of potatoes taken from major potato-growing regions showed that a small number of samples from one field contained residues of aldicarb at higher levels than the company would expect from proper use of the crop protection product.

Stephen A. Schmotzer, director of environmental, regulatory and public affairs for Rhone-Poulenc, said, "Although proper use of the product for nearly 17 years has not resulted in any adverse health effects, some recent data have shown an unexplained isolated incidence of residue levels higher than acceptable in a few potatoes."

Based on extensive historical data and recent testing of potatoes harvested in 1989, and currently in the marketplace, consumption by the public presents little if any health risks, said Schmotzer.

"While we believe the continued use of aldicarb is safe, we have a responsibility to the public to conduct additional research on our time, not theirs. We are undertaking this testing and research to determine the reasons for the unexplained residue levels. We also have an obligation to take this action now because farmers are beginning to plant this year's potato crop," Schmotzer said. "Because aldicarb is such an important crop production tool for so many potato growers, we did not want to put the growers in an awkward position."

Schmotzer continued, "Our company is especially eager to spare the American consumer, as well as growers, a needless and damaging 'food scare' of the type we've seen in the past. In nearly 17 years of product use, we've never had any report of anybody becoming sick or suffering adverse health effects from eating potatoes."

Aldicarb pesticide is a granular product used for the control of insects, mites and nematodes that damage crops. Aldicarb does not cause long-term or chronic health effects such as cancer or birth defects. It has been registered for use in the United States since 1970.

PARSIPPANY, NJ (APRIL 10) PR NEWSWIRE - AT&T today announced a comprehensive productivity package that helps System 25 Release 3 PBX users manage time and expenses. Integrated Solution II combines voice messaging, call accounting and system administration in a single UNIX(R) System processor.

"With Integrated Solution II, AT&T brings a cost effective, easy-to- use package to System 25 users that could literally change the way they conduct business," said Chuck Levine, product management/marketing vice president for AT&T's small business equipment unit.

Audix Voice Power is a messaging system that can improve customer service by lowering the number of lost calls, allowing callers to leave messages instead of playing "telephone tag" and answering automatically, even when the attendant is busy.

Call Accounting software helps manage telecommunications expenses by producing cost allocation reports for different departments. The system automatically gathers detailed records of all System 25 activity and produces up to 20 reports.

Advanced Administration software makes management and programming of the System 25 easy and inexpensive -- in many cases eliminating the need for a dedicated administrator.

AT&T supports the hardware/software package with comprehensive technical support and a complete customer education program provided by AT&T's dedicated small business sales and service team. Integrated Solution II works only with AT&T's System 25 Release 3, a PBX for businesses with up to 200 telephones.

Pricing for Integrated Solution II begins at $15,000. The package is available from AT&T's sales force. For more information call 1-800-247-7000.

NEW BRUNSWICK, NJ (APRIL 10) PR NEWSWIRE - A Chicago arbitration judge has found that Amgen Inc. (NASDAQ: AMGN) failed to comply with its contractual obligations to Ortho Pharmaceutical Corporation, a subsidiary of Johnson & Johnson (NYSE: JNJ), for the development and marketing of erythropoietin, the anti-anemia drug.

Amgen was ordered "to negotiate quickly and in good faith" to obtain FDA approval for Ortho and supply Ortho with product so that it can begin serving pre-dialysis kidney patients in the United States, in accordance with a 1985 contract between the two companies.

Monetary damages claimed by Ortho over Amgen's breach of its contract will be dealt with separately, according to the opinion by the Honorable Frank J. McGarr, so as not to further delay Ortho's market entry. Counterclaims by Amgen relating to a hepatitis B vaccine and Interleukin II will also be addressed later.

The 1985 agreement between Ortho and Amgen granted Ortho the right to market EPREX for all therapeutic uses other than kidney dialysis patients in the United States, a market that was reserved to Amgen.

Ortho Pharmaceutical Corporation first entered the market, internationally in 1988. Through its Johnson & Johnson affiliate, Cilag, EPREX is now marketed in 30 countries outside of the United States.

Amgen's product license application was approved by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration in June 1989 for patients experiencing anemia due to chronic renal failure. "This initial approval in the U.S. was made possible by the inclusion of Ortho's clinical trial data," according to Dennis N. Longstreet, president of Ortho Biotech, a division of Ortho Pharmaceutical. "Our clinical evidence also led the FDA to approve a lower dosage level," he added.

Ortho Biotech has also filed an application with the FDA for the use of EPREX in HIV-positive patients on AZT therapy. Over the past ten months, while awaiting FDA approval, Ortho Biotech has provided EPREX free of charge to nearly 1,000 AIDS patients under the FDA's Treatment IND program which allows seriously ill patients to receive the drug prior to marketing approval.

In addition, Ortho Biotech is developing EPREX for the treatment of anemia associated with cancer chemotherapy, surgical blood loss and autologous blood transfusions.

ROCKY MOUNT, NC (APRIL 10) PR NEWSWIRE - The Board of Directors of Boddie-Noell Restaurant Properties, Inc. (AMEX:BNP) today declared a $.34 per share dividend for the quarter which will be paid on May 15, 1990 to shareholders of record on April 30, 1990. The annualized dividend would equal $1.36 per share, providing a return of 12.65 percent based on Friday's closing price of $10 3/4.

Restaurant sales for the period increased 7.35 percent over the comparable quarter in 1989. This increase is mostly attributable to the unseasonably mild weather experienced throughout most of the first quarter. Traditionally, restaurant sales volume is lowest in the first quarter of the year.

Revenues were $1,222,317 for the quarter compared with $1,227,480 in 1989. Rental income in both years reflects the minimum rent prescribed by the master lease agreement. Net earnings were flat at $.24 per share. Cash available for distribution to shareholders was $950,203 at March 31, 1990.

LANCASTER, PA (APRIL 10) PR NEWSWIRE - First-quarter 1990 net earnings for Armstrong World Industries, Inc. (NYSE: ACK) will come in stronger than some financial analysts who follow the company have been estimating, Armstrong's chairman and president said today.

This year's first-quarter earnings from continuing businesses will include an unusual gain resulting from the sale of woodlands. In an agreement of sale reached with an undisclosed buyer, Armstrong is selling its substantial holdings of Georgia woodlands in two steps. The first step already was completed when a portion of the property was conveyed to the purchaser on Mar. 30. The remainder is to be conveyed in early June, subject to certain conditions. The portion of the sale completed Mar. 30 -- somewhat less than half the total sales price -- resulted in an after-tax gain to Armstrong of $16.5 million (representing 40 cents per share of Armstrong common stock on a primary basis, or 35 cents on a fully diluted basis).

The company's 1989 first-quarter earnings from continuing businesses included a gain of $2.7 million (or 6 cents per share of common stock) from a settlement of litigation involving insurance coverage for asbestos-related claims.

Armstrong also said today that it had elected to adopt, effective Jan. 1, 1990, Financial Accounting Standards Board's Statement No. 96, "Accounting for Income Taxes." The cumulative effect of the change in accounting will increase 1990 first-quarter net earnings by an estimated $8.0 million (representing 19 cents per share on a primary basis, or 17 cents on a fully diluted basis).

Armstrong is a manufacturer and marketer of interior furnishings, including floor coverings (resilient flooring and ceramic tile), building products, and furniture. It also makes and markets a variety of specialty products for the building, automotive, textile, and other industries.

TUSTIN, CA (APRIL 10) PR NEWSWIRE - Computerized Lodging Systems (CLS) has joined forces with MAI Basic Four, Inc. (NYSE: MBF), to form one of the largest vertically focused organizations serving the hospitality industry.

Based in Long Beach, Calif., CLS is the nation's leading provider of business systems to the hospitality sector. The move greatly increased hospitality industry market share for MAI Basic Four, which supplies turnkey computer solutions to several industry-specific niches.

Under MAI Basic Four's new corporate structure, the hotel systems market will be focused on a newly created independent hospitality business unit (IBU). The company recently reorganized from computer manufacturer to systems integrator and value added reseller (VAR), supplying proprietary and industry-standard hardware and software together with an established library of unique, industry specific application packages.

The hospitality unit is one of eight MBF IBUs that function as VARs for MAI Basic Four and other hardware platforms. Other IBUs offer tailored systems to the manufacturing, specialty-textile/apparel/retail, healthcare construction/property management/membership, wholesale distribution and credit union sectors.

Each IBU has profit-and-loss responsibility and a charter to provide turnkey computer solutions to industry-specific niches. In addition to its sales and responsibilities, CLS as the hospitality business unit will oversee product development, enhancement, installation, service and support activities for all of its customers.

David Berkus, president of CLS, now assumes responsibility for the new business unit. Berkus founded CLS in 1975 to provide solutions to the hospitality marketplace. The new IBU provides tailored computer solutions to resort and business hotels, motels, RV parks, country clubs, condominium rentals, sports and convention facilities and time- share properties.

CLS holds an estimated 21 percent share of the U.S. hotel systems market, and has more than 1,300 installations worldwide.

"Our acquisition of CLS, the major VAR in its field, reinforces our new status as a 'super VAR', said William Weksel, chairman and CEO, MAI Basic Four. "We're now offering, from a unified source, an unsurpassed array of proven vertical solutions -- hardware, software, maintenance and support -- to a number of industry markets in locales worldwide."

With annual revenues of more than $22 million, CLS is one of the country's largest suppliers of industry-specific business systems. CLS offers solutions for the hospitality sector ranging from reservations to back office functions. Twice named to Inc. magazine's list of America's 500 fastest growing companies, CLS maintains a staff of 230 in locations around the globe.

Berkus said the acquisition strengthens CLS' ability to serve the hospitality sector by drawing on the extensive capabilities and resources of MAI Basic Four, a $400 million public company with a strong international presence.

MILWAUKEE (APRIL 10) PR NEWSWIRE - A.O. Smith Corporation (AMEX: SMC) today reported 1990 first-quarter earnings of $4.0 million or $.50 per fully diluted share on sales of $237.2 million.

"The first-quarter results were in line with expectations," Robert J. O'Toole, president and chief executive officer, said. "We remain committed to our earnings objectives for the year assuming the economy cooperates.

"Despite a 14 percent sales decline, we were within a few cents of meeting last year's first-quarter earnings per share," he said.

"We were extremely pleased that three of our four major units reported higher earnings," O'Toole pointed out. "This is a very positive trend, and as automotive products sees improved volumes, we believe we will gain even more earnings momentum."

The electrical products company's earnings were significantly improved over the first quarter of 1989, despite lower sales of hermetic motors used in air conditioning applications. The company benefited from lower raw material prices, increased plant efficiency and significant cost reductions throughout its operations.

The water products company's earnings were 59 percent higher than the same period in 1989, while sales increased 9 percent. The increased earnings were due to pricing improvements, better model mix, and benefits derived from reduced operating costs.

Smith Fiberglass Products' sales and earnings were slightly higher than the first quarter of 1989.

First-quarter volume for the automotive products company was 22 percent lower than the same period in 1989, significantly affecting the unit's earnings.

A.O. Smith, with its subsidiaries and affiliates, is a diversified manufacturer headquartered in Milwaukee. Its product lines include auto and truck structural components, fractional horsepower and hermetic electric motors, residential and commercial water heating systems, fiberglass reinforced piping systems, inorganic protective industrial coatings, agricultural feed storage systems, agricultural financing, industrial/municipal water and bulk storage systems.

NEW YORK (APRIL 10) PR NEWSWIRE - Apple Bancorp, Inc. (NYSE: APK) today announced that its board of directors has unanimously (with one director absent) determined that the unsolicited offer of Stanley Stahl to purchase any and all of the outstanding shares of Apple common stock at $38 per share is not in the best interests of Apple and its stockholders and recommends that stockholders reject the Stahl offer and not tender any of their shares.

The company said that among other factors considered by the board in reaching its decision was the opinion of Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette Securities Corporation, Apple's financial advisor, that the Stahl offer price is unfair to Apple stockholders (other than Stahl) from a financial point of view.

The company also announced that, to maximize value for its stockholders, the board of directors had directed Apple's management, with the assistance and advice of its financial and legal advisors, to, among other actions, identify and commence discussions with third parties concerning a possible sale or merger of the company.

The company further announced that the board of directors had amended Apple's shareholder rights plan. Previously, the plan had provided that the "flip-in" right, which under certain circumstances permits stockholders to purchase additional shares of the company's common stock at half its market value, would not apply when, as a result of a cash tender offer for all outstanding shares of the company's common stock, the offeror owns 80 percent or more of such outstanding shares. As amended, the plan provides that the flip-in right will continue to apply even if an offeror owns 80 percent of the company's outstanding shares following a tender offer if the company's board of directors has received an opinion from a nationally recognized investment banking firm that the price to be paid in such tender offer is inadequate or unfair to stockholders of Apple (other than the offeror) from a financial point of view. The company said the shareholder rights plan had also been amended to permit the board of directors to redeem the rights for a period following the time when a stockholder becomes an "acquiring person" under the plan.

The company also said that, as permitted under the rights plan, the board of directors has postponed until April 27, 1990, the date on which rights under the plan will separate from shares of the company's common stock and be distributed.

The company stated that the board determined that it was not in the best interests of the company and its stockholders to hold the 1990 annual meeting of stockholders until the company has had a fair opportunity to pursue alternatives to maximize stockholder value. Accordingly, the annual meeting will be held later in the year instead of in late May as previously had been anticipated.

The company also announced that it is commencing litigation in the United States District Court for the District of Delaware alleging that the Stahl tender offer violates disclosure requirements of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 and rules promulgated thereunder, including requirements applicable to "going private" transactions, and is materially misleading.

The company is also filing a claim in the Delaware Court of Chancery seeking a judgment that certain of the foregoing actions taken by the board are fully in compliance with Delaware law.

NEW YORK (APRIL 10) PR NEWSWIRE - The Moroccan delegation and the Bank Steering Committee chaired by Banque Nationale de Paris and Citibank have, following meetings in Paris, reached an agreement in principle aiming to restructure the external commercial bank debt of the Kingdom of Morocco.

This agreement represents an application to the Kingdom of Morocco of recent initiatives for alleviating the debt burden of middle income countries.

The agreement consists of two phases:

-- The immediate rescheduling of the entire stock or debt incurred prior to Sept. 9, 1983, amounting to approximately U.S.$3.2 billion.

-- The introduction, on a voluntary basis and with the support of multilateral financial organizations and friendly countries, of mechanisms for debt and debt service reduction, as soon as the Kingdom of Morocco has entered into a medium-term economic and financial program.

The principal features of this agreement are as follows:

-- During the first phase, 86 percent of the debt (A debt) will be rescheduled over a 20-year period including 10 years' grace; the remaining 14 percent (B debt) will be rescheduled over 15 years with 7 years' grace. The applicable interest rate will be LIBOR plus a reduced margin of 13/16 percent;

-- In the second phase, the banks will be invited to choose one or more of the following three options:

-- A debt buyback by the Kingdom of Morocco on terms to be set by the latter;

-- A new money option amounting to 15 percent of a bank's base debt;
-- An exchange of debt into reduced rate instruments. The A debt (which would remain at a 20-year tenor with 10 years' grace) will have a fixed interest rate of 6-5/8 percent for a period of 6 years (extendable to 8 years), followed by a return to a market rate of LIBOR plus 13/16 percent. The B debt will have a final maturity of 10 years, including 4 years' grace and will have a fixed interest rate of 6-3/4 percent during the tenor of the debt. These instruments will carry a rolling 12-month interest guarantee during the reduced rate period.

Finally the restructuring agreement provides flexibility enabling the Kingdom of Morocco, at its initiative, to offer bank creditors debt buybacks and debt exchanges as soon as the first phase becomes effective.

The implementation of this agreement will reduce Morocco's debt burden, thus meeting part of the financial needs of its economy and supporting its efforts towards adjustment and economic growth.

These negotiations have taken place in an environment of confidence and understanding, reflecting the desire of both the Kingdom of Morocco and the international banking community to facilitate the access of Morocco entitles to international financial markets.

NAPERVILLE, IL (APRIL 10) PR NEWSWIRE - Varlen Corp. (NASDAQ: VRLN) said today that it expects first- and second-quarter results to be below last year's record performance, but that based on an anticipated upturn in the economy in the second half of 1990, the company should have another strong year.

Richard L. Wellek, president and chief executive officer, said he expects results for the first half of the 1990 fiscal year to be adversely affected by a more than 40 percent decline in U.S. automotive production early in the year, and a slowdown in the rate of building and re-building rail cars.

Other factors contributing to a decline in first-half earnings are delays in government funding for research projects, a reduction in research and development expenditures by the industrial sector and the effect of a recent laboratory equipment products acquisition which Wellek said had not yet contributed positively to Varlen's income flow.

"Although we have great hope for this new operation, it was unprofitable when acquired, and our challenge this year is to turn it into a strong performer," Wellek said.

"Although some of our markets, such as the automotive industry, are showing signs of strengthening, they are still below last year's levels," he noted.

Wellek said, however, that a number of the company's economic markets are projected to improve during the second half of 1990, "and if this happens, Varlen should have another good year, despite the slowdown in the first half."

The Varlen chief executive said the company has been awarded new automotive contracts which are expected to take effect during the second and third quarters.

Wellek also noted that Varlen anticipates a second-half increase in light vehicle and large truck production which should benefit its subsidiary companies in a number of markets.

"We also expect to achieve real growth from our recent acquisitions and new product programs that will generate increased revenues as the year unfolds," he said.

In recent periods, Varlen accelerated its restructuring efforts by completing four strategic acquisitions, selling three businesses, and announcing plans to divest other operations that were under-performing or in markets without sufficient potential.

Recent acquisitions include:

-- Consolidated Metco (ConMet), a manufacturer of lightweight precision parts and components primarily for large, over-the-road truck and trailer manufacturers.

-- A freight car draft gear product line by Varlen's Keystone Railway Equipment subsidiary.

-- An automatic transmission clutch plate asset acquisition by Varlen's Means Industries subsidiary.

-- The laboratory equipment businesses of HEICO Corp. by Varlen's Precision Scientific subsidiary.

Recent dispositions include: Rockford Bolt & Steel Co., Jackson Screw Co. and Loose Leaf Metals Co., Inc. Also designated for sale are Varlen's Chrome Crankshaft of California, Chrome Crankshaft of Illinois, Chrome Locomotive and Forsyth Engineering subsidiaries.

Varlen Corp. is a diversified manufacturer of precision industrial products, primarily serving the transportation and laboratory equipment markets. It has operations in six states.

GLEN COVE, NY (APRIL 10) PR NEWSWIRE - In a letter to shareholders today, Maurice G. Hardy, president and chief executive officer of Pall Corporation (AMEX: PLL), reported on management's latest review of the outlook for fiscal year 1990.

The letter detailed changes in the revenue outlook for the ten business sectors on which the company reports.

None was significant and overall growth of about 16 percent, and unit growth of about 13.5 percent, are unchanged. Hardy pointed out that higher interest rates, particularly overseas, and unpredictable currency fluctuations, especially the weakening of the Yen and Pound Sterling, have clouded earnings expectations. He said, "We will try to make this up, but we could well be 5 to 10 cents off the pace we expected. Actual results for the third quarter, which ends April 28th will give a better indication."

The following is the full letter to shareholders: "As you know, the world is going through a fascinating but turbulent period. Global competitors and global opportunities arise and change at a very rapid rate.

"We have been putting our worldwide operations in place, particularly in North America, Europe and Japan, for more than 20 years, and we are now expanding our presence in the Pacific Rim from a distribution viewpoint and in Europe from a manufacturing viewpoint. We are well positioned for continued long term growth in all of our markets.

"Since the last report you had from us, currency rates have again changed. The Yen has suffered a drastic fall which has added to the earlier weakening of the Pound Sterling. At the same time, interest rates, particularly overseas, have risen sharply.

"Health Care growth expectation has changed from 19 percent over last year to 17 percent. Part of this is due to a delay in approval of our leukocyte filters in Japan.

"This is now expected in mid April. The rest is due mainly to household water filter sales, which will be just about nil, as our OEMs find starting inertia difficult to overcome. This market may yet be good, but not for at least another year. The Bioprocessing industry continues, as you know, to fall short of expectations. However, here too we expect a strong future, and we are doing important development work.

"Aeropower, on the other hand, will be higher mainly because of the success of the refocusing of U.S. Industrial Fluid Power operations and growth in the commercial aircraft market.

"The biggest currency impact is on the Film/Fiber/Magnetic/Tape/

Electronics segment of our Fluid Processing business.

STAMFORD, CT (APRIL 10) PR NEWSWIRE - A Xerox Corporation (NYSE: XRX) shareholder has filed a civil lawsuit charging certain past and all current members of the company's board of directors with violations of their duties to the company and its public shareholders when they approved investments in VMS Realty Partners, a Chicago real estate investment firm, and affiliated VMS companies.

The shareholder derivative action seeks payment of unspecified damages to Xerox by the board members for "all losses and damages suffered or to be suffered" as a result of the VMS Realty investments.

The suit, filed on behalf of the corporation in the state superior court here, also asks the court to require the directors to indemnify and hold Xerox harmless from any loss or judgment that might result from other lawsuits or actions related to the company and VMS Realty.

William Steiner of Great Neck, N.Y., brought the action. The court papers say he is the owner of 300 shares of Xerox common stock.

The Steiner suit claims that Xerox and its shareholders have suffered damages in excess of $400 million.

Last week, Xerox said it will take a first quarter write-off of approximately $400 million in connection with its VMS Realty investments.

On Feb. 13, VMS announced it had ceased all but essential payments to its creditors because of severe cash flow problems.

A subsidiary of Xerox Credit Corporation, XCC Investment Corporation, acquired a 25 percent equity interest in VMS Realty Partners in 1987. Xerox Credit is a unit of Xerox Corporation's Xerox Financial Services, Inc.

SAN SALVADOR, EL SALVADOR (APRIL 10) UPI - The Agriculture Ministry and the Red Cross began a campaign to control swarms of aggressive ''killer bees'' that have fatally attacked two people, a Red Cross spokesman said Monday.

The campaign involves Red Cross volunteers and 20 specialists from the Agriculture Ministry, Red Cross spokesman Carlos Mendoza said.

''The campaign is not aimed at destroying the swarms but at capturing them and moving them to safe places where they are not a danger to the population,'' Mendoza said.

The Red Cross has treated 40 people this month in thr western provinces of Santa Ana and La Libertad for serious stings from the aggressive insects, called Africanized bees but popularly known as killer bees for their aggressive swarming behavior, he said.

Two people have died as a result of the attacks, Mendoza said.

The Africanized bees are a cross between the American variety and African bees accidentally released in Brazil during the 1950s. Although the insects' sting is no more dangerous than that of their American cousins, the hybrid variety is more aggressive and more sensitive to noise.

''When one of the bees stings a person, it leaves its barb and dies, but the other bees smell their dead companion and attack in a swarm,'' Mendoza said.

It is the large number of stings that typically proves fatal to humans. Stings are treated using anti-histaminic steroids, Mendoza said, and patients are kept under observation for eight days.

''Sometimes patients go into toxic shock, hypertension and acute renal insufficiency, which often creates a need for renal dialysis and intensive care,'' Mendoza said.

Mendoza said a swarm descended on a soccer stadium Sunday in Santa Tecla, 6 miles west of the capital, and stung three fans and a sports commentator. The bees have also been detected in San Salvador.

The bees also have been reported in eastern San Miguel province, where they have seriously hurt a number of people and killed several household pets, Mendoza said.

CAPE CANAVERAL, FL (APRIL 10) UPI - NASA's $1.5 billion Hubble Space Telescope is expected to answer fundamental questions about the universe during its 15-year lifetime. Here are some of the topics the telescope will study during its mission:

- The age of the universe: The universe is believed to have flashed into existence in a "big bang" explosion that created space, time and energy. Current estimates of the age of the universe are uncertain by a factor of two, placing the big bang event between ten billion and 20 billion years ago. Astronomers typically split the difference and say the cosmos is roughly 15 billion years old. Data from the space telescope should reduce the uncertainty to just ten percent or so.

- The distance scale of the universe: The space telescope's instruments will allow astronomers to refine the distance scale of the universe, which in turn will refine knowledge about its expansion and ultimate fate.

Astronomical distances beyond about 300 light years are uncertain to a large degree and data from the space telescope should help astronomers more precisely determine how far distant galaxies are from Earth.

- The fate of the universe: The universe has been expanding since the big bang, but the rate of that expansion is not precisely known. By determining how fast galaxies are moving away from each other, and thus how the expansion rate may be slowing down, astronomers may be able to determine whether the universe will continue to enlarge forever or whether the galaxies eventually will stop their rush into space and collapse back upon each other in a "big crunch" prior to another big bang.

- Galactic evolution: With ten times the clarity of ground-based instruments, the space telescope will be able to study stars and galaxies created shortly after the big bang. A major problem for modern cosmology is determining how such lumpy aggregations of matter managed to form in an early universe that was almost perfectly featureless and uniform. The space telescope may detect light from galaxies in the process of being formed to answer this fundamental question.

- Planetary abundance: While most scientists agree the planets in Earth's solar system are not unique, there is no direct evidence of the existence of planets orbiting other stars. Working above Earth's obscuring atmosphere, the space telescope's instruments will be able to precisely monitor the positions of various stars. If the stars appear to move, or wobble slightly, it probably would be because of the gravitational interaction of a large planet.

- Black holes: A high-priority early project for the space telescope is to study the light emitted from several leading black hole candidates. Black holes are massive collapsed stars whose gravity is so intense not even light can escape. The black hole, therefore, is not directly visible. But as dust and debris are sucked into the dark star, it is accelerated and heated to extreme temperatures, triggering bursts of high-energy radiation. Such beacons should be detectable by the space telescope.

- Quasars: Astronomers do not know what to make of quasi-stellar radio sources, or quasars, the most energetic objects known in the universe. They are believed to be compact objects, but because they are so clearly visible at enormous distances, scientists believe they are driven by energy sources that are not explainable with humanity's current knowledge of physics. One possibility is that quasars are the active cores of infant galaxies powered by massive black holes. Data from the space telescope may help resolve the mystery.

- Solar system studies: The space telescope's sensitive cameras will routinely take snapshots of the planets in Earth's solar system comparable in detail to those taken by passing space probes. By monitoring the atmosphere of Jupiter over long periods, for example, the telescope will be able to study the behavior of its atmosphere in unprecedented detail, perhaps giving scientists insights into the forces that shape Earth's environment.

MOSCOW (APRIL 10) UPI - Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze predicted a ''genuine breakthrough'' in U.S.-Soviet relations at the Washington summit with the signing of a dozen agreements, including trade and economic accords.

Shevardnadze also reiterated in an interview Monday with Novosti news agency that a united Germany cannot be in the NATO Western military alliance but that a compromise solution ''is quite possible.''

Shevardnadze pledged that in the remaining weeks before the May 30-June 3 summit, both sides would do their utmost to settle differences on air- and sea-launched cruise missiles so a treaty to reduce strategic weapons can be completed.

He said his next meeting with Secretary of State James Baker - in mid-May in the Soviet Union - would be dedicated to overcoming the final hurdles for the strategic arms reduction pact known as START.

Shevardnadze also looked beyond a pact on strategic arms, saying, ''I hope that during the summit meeting it will be possible to coordinate a draft of a joint statement of intent ... to lay down the guidelines for further progress in the further reduction of armed forces and armaments.''

''We are on the threshold of a peaceful period in humankind's development '' he said.

But the foreign minister was unequivocal that a new era will dawn in bilateral relations between the two superpowers when Presidents Mikhail Gorbachev and George Bush sit down in Washington this spring.

''We are in for a genuine breakthrough in this field,'' Shevardnadze said. ''Around a dozen agreements are to be signed during the meeting, including a trade and economic agreement, an agreement on mutual investments, the creation of cultural centers, cooperation in space research for peaceful purposes and the peaceful use of nuclear energy.''

Although arms accords generally form the centerpiece of big power summits, Soviet aides said at Malta that economic agreements are important for development of perestroika, or Gorbachev's plan for economic and social restructuring.

At the Malta summit, the United States pledged to remove restrictions on Soviet imports and credits for the Soviet Union if the improvements in human rights and emigration policies of the Soviet Union continue.

At Malta, longtime Soviet adviser Georgy Arbatov contrasted the willingness of the Bush administration to discuss economic benefits with reluctance during the Reagan era.

After the summit ended, Arbatov said the Reagan administration came with ''empty pockets'' and few ideas in contrast to the full agenda that Bush presented during meetings on the Maxim Gorky cruise ship.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 10) UPI - Soviet officials assured Washington in pre-summit talks that there are no more ''prisoners of conscience'' in Soviet prisons or exile, Assistant Secretary of State for Human Rights Richard Schifter said.

Schifter, who took part in last week's discussions, said in an interview Monday that U.S. officials have no reason to doubt the Soviet claims, but are still investigating some 25 cases.

Some of the cases, Schifter said, involve violations of Soviet criminal law by people who also may have been political dissidents.

During the Washington talks, the Soviets produced a list of about 40 cases of alleged prisoners of conscience in the United States, mainly political activists - such as Black Panthers or Puerto Rican nationalists - who also were convicted of criminal acts.

Last week's talks included the announcement that President Bush and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev will hold their second summit May 30-June 3. At past summits, the U.S. side has publicly pressed the Kremlin on human rights, to the obvious annoyance of the Soviets.

A list of more than 800 Soviet prisoners of conscience was handed over to Moscow in 1987, Schifter said. In almost every case, the individual has been released from jail or exile, he said, and the use of psychiatric care to silence or punish dissidents has essentially disappeared.

Reacting to Schifter's comments, David Aasen of Amnesty International U.S.A. said, ''We still have about 50 cases in the Soviet Union that we either are investigating or have adopted as prisoners of conscience.''

Three years ago, he said the human rights group was concerned with ''about 500'' cases in the Soviet Union and he agreed with Schifter there has been a dramatic improvement.

One senior U.S. official said the shift of power from the Soviet Communist Party to the executive branch of the Soviet government - with Gorbachev taking over a more powerful presidency - has meant that dramatic changes, including human rights, have taken place much faster than anyone in the Bush administration imagined possible three months ago.

With human rights removed from the list of major U.S. grievances, Schifter said, the talks with Moscow have moved into other areas:

-Emigration. Last year, the Soviets issued about 200,000 exit visas, many to minority groups, including Jews and Volga Germans. A similar number is expected this year and the Soviets also promise action this month on emigration law changes that, when complete, could result in Washington extending most-favored nation trade status to the Soviet Union.

-Refuseniks. Schifter said there are still about 50 Soviet citizens who have been refused permission to leave on national security grounds.

-Rule of law. Soviet legal officials have been invited to study in the United States on how to transform their legal code into one that meets international standards of justice.

-Treatment of the handicapped and elderly. A Soviet delegation is to visit the United States to study such things as wheelchair ramps and other aids for handicapped people. Another group will study U.S. treatment of the elderly. U.S. officials describe the Soviet treatment of the handicapped as ''primitive and backward.''

LOS ANGELES (APRIL 10) UPI - The first several hundred of 12,000 striking Kaiser Permanente employees returned to work Tuesday after approving a new three-year contract with the nation's largest and oldest health maintenance organization.

''They started calling (workers) at 8:30 p.m.'' for midnight shifts, Kaiser spokeswoman Kit Niemeyer said.

She said nursing assistants, sterilization technicians and housekeeping workers were among the first to return to work at seven hospitals and 45 clinics in Los Angeles and Orange counties.

The remaining workers were expected to return to work gradually until all are back on their jobs by Thursday, Niemeyer said.

The workers, who manned picket lines for a week, voted 4,118 to 2,595 Monday to approve the contract, said Janet Coffman, a spokeswoman for Local 399 of the Service Employees International Union.

More than 60 percent of the eligible members voted, she said.

''We feel great,'' she said. ''The strike was a good strike, and (workers) felt they earned this contract.''

Kaiser Permanente officials also were pleased with the ratification of the pact.

''We were quite happy, obviously, and relieved,'' said Allan Mann, a management spokesman. ''We're anxious to get our employees back to work.''

The new contract provides for 5 percent to 6 percent salary increases in the first year and 3 percent to 7 percent wage hikes during each of the second and third years.

The contract also allows employees to use a floating personal holiday on the Martin Luther King Jr. holiday and gives workers extra pay for bilingual skills, for ''longevity'' and for night, overnight and weekend shifts.

Union officials said the contract approved Monday was not substantially different from a proposal rejected by a 2-to-1 margin last month, but the offer was presented to workers at the request of federal mediators. Union leaders did not recommend passage or rejection to the local's rank and file.

''There were some improvements, but we knew it was important for the members to decide whether those improvements were significant enough to live with the contract for three years,'' Coffman said.

Company officials said the vote was a victory for all concerned - workers, the company and Kaiser plan members.

''As a major employer, we need to retain and recruit qualified employees '' by providing a fair contract, said Al Bolden, Kaiser vice-president of human resources.

''We also have an obligation to our health plan members to manage our labor costs and to do our part to contain rapidly increasing health care costs,'' he added. ''We believe that this contract fulfills both obligations and represents a true victory for all conerned.''

Union members walked off their jobs April 2 at Kaiser's Southern California medical facilities. Union officials said they thought the strength of their picket lines led to the improvements in the contract.

''We think the improvements in the contract were due to the fact that we maintained a very strong strike,'' Coffman said. ''We crippled the system.''

Seib said Kaiser, despite the walkout, ''managed very well.''

Kaiser Permanente serves 6.2 million members nationwide and 2.2 million in Southern California. About 90 percent of its members are enrolled through group plans or through their employers.

(APRIL 10) UPI - Ryan White was remembered Monday night with a candlelight vigil at Monument Circle in Indianapolis. About 200 people gathered for the service. White died of AIDS Sunday in Indianapolis after waging a five-year battle against the disease and the ignorance and discrimination that surrounds it. The 18-year-old traveled the world to educate people about the fatal virus and opened the public's eyes to the fact that NO one is safe from the risk of AIDS. He will be buried Wednesday.

In Los Angeles, an ailing defense attorney forced a delay until at least Tuesday in the jury selection process at the re-trial of former teacher Raymond Buckey in the longest and most costly criminal case in U-S history... the McMartin Pre-School molestation case. Attorney Danny Davis has repesented Buckey for six years. He notified the judge that he re-injured his back and could NOT get to court Monday. The judge reportedly is considering replacing Davis.

The Salvadoran Agricultural Ministry and the Red Cross Monday launched a campaign to control swarms of aggressive ''killer bees'' that have fatally attacked two people in the Central American country. A Red Cross spokesman says the relief organization has treated 40 people this month in western provinces for serious stings from the Africanized bees. The insect's sting is NO more dangerous than that of a regular bee, but the strain itself is more aggressive and sensitive to noise.

(APRIL 10) UPI - The Boston Bruins may have a long summer to admire the regular season title they won by finishing with the most points in the NHL.

The suddenly vulnerable champions, riddled by injuries to key players, are finding the Hartford Whalers more than they can handle.

The Whalers, who finished fourth in the Adams division, used a 5-3 victory Monday to roll to a 2-1 series lead in the first round of the Stanley Cup playoffs.

The matchup was one of four series played Monday in the Wales Conference. The Montreal Canadiens nipped the Buffalo Sabres 2-1 in overtime in the other Adams Division clash to take a 2-1 advantage in their series.

In the Patrick Division, the New York Islanders beat the New York Rangers 4-3 in double overtime to pull to within 2-1 in their series, and the New Jersey Devils edged Washington 2-1 to take a 2-1 lead in that series.

The Campbell Conference resumes play Tuesday night with Calgary at Los Angeles, Edmonton at Winnipeg, Chicago at Minnesota and St. Louis at Toronto. The Kings, Jets and Blackhawks lead their series 2-1, while St. Louis has a 3-0 lead.

All series are best-of-seven and switch sites after Game 4.

-- AROUND THE NHL --

ADAMS DIVISION

WHALERS 5, BRUINS 3

At Hartford, Conn., Dave Babych and Pat Verbeek scored 1:37 apart early in the third period to spark Hartford. The Whalers exploited the Bruins' defense, which was without all-star defenseman Ray Bourque, who was sent back to Boston earlier in the day with a hip-pointer.

Verbeek scored twice to pace Hartford, while defenseman Brad Shaw added a goal and three assists. Dave Babych and Kevin Dineen had the other goals. Bob Carpenter, Dave Christian and Randy Burridge had the Boston goals.

''When Raymond's on the ice, as he usually is killing penalties, you can be sure that if he gets his hands on the puck, it's out of the zone,'' Boston Coach Mike Milbury said. ''Hartford made a few adjustments and made us pay for our penalties.''

Bourque is also expected to miss Game 4 of the Adams Division semifinal series Wednesday night in Hartford.

''I'd love to see him out for the rest of the series,'' said Pat Verbeek, who scored twice to pace Hartford. ''He's such a dominant player that they had to miss him.''

CANADIENS 2, SABRES 1, OT

At Montreal, Brian Skrudland scored at 12:35 of overtime to lift Montreal to a 2-1 triumph over Buffalo.

''I remember my last overtime goal when we won the Stanley Cup against Calgary,'' Skrudland said. ''But this one is just as important. Anytime you score in overtime it is great.''

Skrudland took a pass from Shane Corson, who was skating behind the Buffalo net, and beat goalie Daren Puppa with a wrist shot to the far side.

''I never even realized that the puck went into the net,'' Skrudland said.

''I saw Skrudland at the side of the net but there wasn't anything I could do,'' Puppa said.

Montreal's Stephane Richer tied the score 1-1 with his second playoff goal at 10:39 of the second period after the Sabres opened the scoring on a power play at 7:15 of the first period.

Montreal lost the services of forward Mats Naslund. He left the game after the second period suffering from a groin injury. Buffalo forward Scott Arniel left the game in the third period. He was groggy after he collided with Montreal's Petr Svoboda.

PATRICK DIVISION

ISLANDERS 4, RANGERS 3, 2OT

At Uniondale, N.Y., Brent Sutter scored his second power-play goal of the game 59 seconds into the second overtime to give the Islanders their seventh victory in seven sudden-death playoff games they've played against the Rangers.

Sutter scored after Jeff Finley made a cross-ice pass through two Rangers. He beat goaltender John Vanbiesbrouck low to the far side 67 seconds into a five-minute major penalty to Troy Mallette after the Ranger rookie boarded Jeff Norton late in the first overtime.

Norton, who was removed on a stretcher with eight seconds left in the first extra session, became the second Islander sent from the series with a concussion. Center Pat LaFontaine was hospitalized with a concussion in Game 1.

DEVILS 2, CAPITALS 1

At Landover, Md., Ken Danyeko and Brendan Shanahan each scored a goal to lead the Devils despite the fact that New Jersey took only 10 shots-on-goal during the game, a club-record low. Washington took 11 more shots-on-goal than New Jersey, but Devils goaltender Chris Terreri, the winner in Game 2, was brilliant in the net.

Dino Ciccarelli scored his sixth goal at 17:46 of the second period to set a club record for goals in a playoff series.

(APRIL 10) UPI - Sam Horn, provided a fresh start by his new team, used Opening Day to display his talents.

Horn, a player who toiled in the farm system of the Boston Red Sox for eight seasons as a quantity of minor consequence, pounded out four hits, including two three-run homers and collected six RBI to lead the Baltimore Orioles to a 7-6 victory in 11 innings over the Kansas City Royals.

''This is just a reward to myself,'' said Horn, who earned a spot on the Orioles' roster only last Saturday. ''(Manager) Frank (Robinson) and the coaches and the rest of them all made me feel at home from the first, and this was the first time I was able to come out and show what I could do.''

The designated hitter provided more offense for the Orioles Monday afternoon than he did in all of last season. In 1989, Horn played in 33 games and had no homers and only four RBI.

Kansas City Manager John Wathan said, ''Just too much Sam Horn today, that was the big problem. He was always a good power hitter but didn't get too many chances in Boston.''

Baltimore's Joe Orsulak scored on Danny Tartabull's two-out error in the 11th inning, extending the Royals' Opening Day losing streak to five games.

Jay Aldrich picked up the victory, while Gregg Olson earned a save for one inning of work. Jeff Montgomery was victimized by Tartabull's error for the loss.

Horn said he told his mother, who is recovering from a stroke in San Diego he was going to dedicate the season to her.

''This was the first chance for me to do something for her,'' Horn said. ''I'll call her tonight, but I just hope she gets to see the highlights.''

Horn hit a three-run homer in the second inning off Bret Saberhagen and added a score-tying three-run shot in the eighth.

Elsewhere in the AL, Boston dropped Detroit 5-2, Chicago clipped Milwaukee 2-1, Texas topped Toronto 4-2, Seattle downed California 7-4 and Oakland defeated Minnesota 8-3.

In the NL, it was: Pittsburgh 12, New York 3; Los Angeles 4, San Diego 2; St. Louis 6, Montreal 5 in 11 innings; Cincinnati 8, Houston 4 in 11 innings and Philadelphia at Chicago was postponed due to rain.

-- AROUND THE AL --

Red Sox 5, Tigers 2

At Boston, Dwight Evans delivered a three-run double and Wade Boggs went 3 for 4 with three runs scored to pace Boston to its first Opening Day victory since 1985. Roger Clemens, who didn't allow a hit until the sixth inning, earned the win. The right-hander worked 6 2-3 innings while giving up three hits and two runs. Lee Smith notched the save after working out of a bases-loaded jam. Jack Morris, in his 11th consecutive Opening Day start, allowed all five runs and took the loss.

White Sox 2, Brewers 1

At Chicago, Scott Fletcher's seventh-inning sacrifice fly scored Robin Ventura to provide the winning margin while five Chicago pitchers held Milwaukee to just four hits. Barry Jones went 1 2-3 innings in relief to get the victory and Bobby Thigpen collecting the save. Tony Fossas took the loss for the Brewers.

Rangers 4, Blue Jays 2

At Arlington, Texas, Nolan Ryan threw five hitless innings for his 290th career victory and Harold Baines drove in three runs to defeat the defending AL East champions. Ryan embarked on his 24th season at age 43 and moved closer to the 300-win plateau. Ryan, who struck out four, found relief help from Mike Jeffcoat and Jeff Russell. Todd Stottlemyre took the loss.

Mariners 7, Angels 4

At Anaheim, Calif., Ken Griffey Jr. collected four hits including a three-run homer that capped a five-run fifth inning. Dave Valle contributed three hits and two RBI in Seattle's 15-hit attack. Winner Brian Holman, in his first Opening Day start,allowed just three hits over five innings as Seattle won its opener for the first time in four seasons. Loser Bert Blyleven, making his 12th Opening Day start - the fourth-most in history - departed after surrendering five runs and seven hits in five innings. Mike Schooler finished for a save.

A's 8, Twins 3

At Oakland, Calif., Dave Henderson and Terry Steinbach hit back-to-back seventh-inning homers and Dave Stewart picked up his third consecutive Opening Day victory to lead the world champions. Stewart lacked his usual sharpness but scattered seven hits over his 5 2-3 innings, and Rick Honeycutt pitched 3 1-3 innings to earn a save. Alan Anderson was the loser, giving up four runs on seven hits.

(APRIL 10) UPI - Willie McGee of the St. Louis Cardinals, who spent most of the 1989 season on the disabled list with nagging injuries, proved it is not that difficult to recover from the lack of playing time.

''I hit so much during the winter and during the season, that it's just a matter of me swinging at strikes,'' said McGee after he singled home Milt Thompson with one out in the 11th inning Monday, sending St. Louis to a 6-5 victory over the Montreal Expos.

''I'm here, I'm on this team and I got a job to do,'' said McGee, who went hitless in his first four at-bats before coming up big in his last two. ''When that situtation comes up, I'm going to do my best.

Thompson drew a walk off reliever Mark Gardner and Vince Coleman sacrificed. McGee then grounded a single to center, making a winner of Ken Dayley. McGee also helped the Cardinals tie the score with a two-run double in the ninth.

Montreal Manager Buck Rodgers said he did not consider walking McGee with first base open.

''With two outs, I would have walked him,'' Rodgers said. ''It was a rookie out there (Gardner). He walked the leadoff man on four pitches.

''I didn't want to box him in. I wanted him to use all his pitches. He just didn't get the job done.''

Delino DeShields collected four hits in his major-league debut. DeShields, the Expos' No. 1 draft choice in the June 1987 draft, grounded out in his first at-bat then added three singles and a double.

''It's one of the best games ever,'' DeShields said. ''I had a couple of two-home run games in A ball.

''But losing cuts it in half. I want to win. That's the name of the game.''

Elsewhere in the National League, Pittsburgh crushed New York 12-3, Los Angeles topped San Diego 4-2, Cincinnati downed Houston 8-4 in 11 innings and Philadelphia at Chicago was rained out.

In the American League, it was: Boston 5, Detroit 2; Chicago 2, Milwaukee 1; Baltimore 7, Kansas City 6 in 11 innings; Texas 4, Toronto 2; Seattle 7 California 4; Oakland 8, Minnesota 3.

-- AROUND THE NL --

Pirates 12, Mets 3

At New York, Andy Van Slyke led a 17-hit attack with two home runs and a double, helping Pittsburgh open the NL season with a rout. Van Slyke, who collected four RBI, helped hand Dwight Gooden his first loss in five Opening Day starts. Doug Drabek lasted five innings and picked up the victory.

Dodgers 4, Padres 2

At Los Angeles, Hubie Brooks broke up Bruce Hurst's no-hit bid in the seventh inning and belted a three-run home run in the eighth, lifting the Dodgers. Fred Lynn, 38, homered for San Diego in his first NL at-bat. John Wetteland, who allowed one run in two innings of relief, gained the win.

Reds 8, Astros 4, 11 inn.

At Houston, Barry Larkin hit a two-out, bases-loaded triple to highlight a four-run 11th, leading Cincinnati. Houston's Glenn Davis was hit by three pitches, tying a major league record for most times in one game. Randy Myers pitched 1 2-3 innings to earn the victory.

(APRIL 10) UPI - Magic Johnson scored a season-high 38 points and set career bests for both free throws and free-throw attempts, helping the Los Angeles Lakers roll to their eighth straight victory, a 113-106 triumph over the Dallas Mavericks.

''It was a great win,'' Lakers Coach Pat Riley said. ''This is as competitive as I've ever seen us during the regular season. Magic and James (Worthy) are doing a great job.''

Johnson, who made eight of 13 shots from the field and hit 19 of 22 foul shots, said Los Angeles is gearing up for the upcoming NBA playoffs.

''Every victory is a big one,'' said Johnson. ''We just want to be consistent and now we have won eight in a row.''

Asked about his career-bests at the free throw stripe, Johnson said, ''I'm getting to the line a lot - more than at any other time in my career. I think it is because of my improved three-point shooting.''

Johnson buried three three-point baskets Monday.

Vlade Divac scored 21 points and pulled down 11 rebounds in his second career start for the Lakers at center, replacing the injured Mychal Thompson, who suffered a hyperextended knee in last Friday's victory over the Phoenix Suns.

Riley said he was pleased with Divac's performance.

''Vlade did a heck of a job against James Donaldson,'' Riley said. ''He (Divac) held his own. He showed us something tonight.''

A.C. Green added 15 points for the Lakers.

Rolando Blackman paced the Mavericks with 19 points and Sam Perkins scored 18 points. Derek Harper added 16 points before being ejected for his second technical foul with 4:56 to play in the game.

The Lakers held a comfortable 15-point lead, 109-94, with 2:24 to play in the game, but Riley had to send both Johnson and Green back into the game when Dallas scored 10 straight points to trail 109-104 with 31.1 seconds remaining.

Mel McCants sank a pair of free throws 1.5 seconds later. Perkins then followed with a dunk, but Johnson closed out the scoring with a pair of free throws with 11.2 seconds left for the final margin.

A pair of free throws by Divac started the Lakers on a 10-0 run that brought the Lakers from a 37-41 deficit with 6:06 to play in the first half to a 47-41 advantage with 4:03 remaining.

Johnson capped the first-half rally with a 49-foot buzzer beater that swished through the basket to send the Lakers to the locker room with a 56-48 lead.

The Mavericks went on a 14-3 run to take the lead 64-63 with 6:10 remaining in the third quarter. But Los Angeles answered with an 11-0 run and hald a 78-71 lead after three quarters.

The Lakers improved their league best record to 58-17, four games up on Detroit in the battle for home court advantage in the playoffs. Los Angeles, which has seven games remaining in the regular season, holds a five-game lead over division rival Portland.

Los Angeles will make its 14th consecutive post-season appearance, the longest streak of any NBA club.

Dallas dropped to 42-33 in losing its ninth straight game to the Lakers, the Mavericks longest active losing streak against any NBA team.

-- AROUND THE NBA --

Elsewhere in the NBA, Sacramento slipped by Seattle 106-105 and Phoenix beat Utah 119-115 in overtime.

KINGS 106, SUPERSONICS 105

At Seattle, Antoine Carr scored 12 of his 23 points in the fourth quarter to help Sacramento snap a seven-game losing streak. Seattle lost ground to idle Denver and Houston in the battle for the final two playoff spots in the Western Conference.

SUNS 119, JAZZ 115, OT

At Phoenix, Kevin Johnson scored nine of his 37 points in overtime and Phoenix converted an NBA record 61 free throws. Washington held the previous mark of 60, accomplished against New York in 1987. Kevin Johnson hit 23 of 24 free throws, a club record.

NACO, AZ (APRIL 10) UPI - Border Patrol agents seized nearly 3,200 pounds of cocaine in a remote area near the Mexican border, the largest such seizure to date by the agency, authorities said.

Agents found the cocaine about 4 a.m. Monday inside a vacation trailer, parked near Naco, about 65 miles southeast of Tucson, and arrested three men, Border Patrol spokeswoman Jacqui Parker said. The agents also seized two AK-47s assault rifles and a 9mm semiautomatic pistol, she said. No one was injured.

The 3,192-pound haul, with an estimated street value of $150 million, was the largest seizure ever made by Border Patrol agents, Parker said. Last fall, agents in McAllen, Texas, seized 2,900 pounds of cocaine, breaking the Tucson-area agents' record of 2,645 pounds set in June 1989, she said.

The border area in Arizona is a "major smuggling corridor into the United States for cocaine and marijuana," Parker said. The agents in Monday's bust became suspicious when they saw footprints leading from the Mexican border to the trailer, she said. Agents watched the trailer for two hours and then knocked on the door.

Two Mexican nationals without immigration documents and one American inside the trailer surrendered, she said. "I'm sure they were surprised," she said. "At four in the morning they probably were expecting someone who was going to pick up the coke and move it."

Parker said the men were held in the Federal Correctional Institute in Tucson on suspicion of possessing cocaine with the intent to sell. Their identities were not immediately released. Agents of the federal Drug Enforcement Administration were investigating the case.

BEIJING (APRIL 10) UPI - Mongolia's ruling Communist Party opened a special congress Tuesday to choose new leaders and stake out further democratic reforms that could lead to the nation's first multi-party elections, reports from the Mongolian capital said.

The Mongolian People's Revolutionary Party, the communists who have ruled the country for seven decades, relinquished a constitutional monopoly on power last month after months of pro-democracy demonstrations in the capital, Ulan Bator.

But while several opposition parties have been formed from the opposition front that led the protests, the government has not yet authorized multi-party elections. The opposition has called for such elections and for other political and economic reforms.

Foreign diplomats in Ulan Bator reached by telephone from Beijing said the special congress opened Tuesday and was expected to last three days. Diplomats say the continuing reforms are expected to lay the groundwork for the first multi-party elections, possibly this year.

The Soviet news agency Tass, reporting from Ulan Bator, said 926 delegates representing 94,000 party members were attending and the new party general secretary, Gombojavyn Ochirbat, would deliver a report on ''the nearest tasks to deepen the restructuring and renovation of the party.''

The congress is expected to elect a new policy-making Central Committee and possibly a new ruling Politburo. The entire Politburo resigned earlier this year in a stunning series of concessions to the opposition movement.

Tass said the congress would outline efforts ''to deepen the restructuring and self-renovation of the party, adopts its platform and elect its central governing bodies.''

Despite its effort so far to cooperate with the opposition, the government during the weekend issued new restrictions on public protests, including obtaining permission seven days in advance.

But several thousand people promptly defied the regulations to demonstrate Sunday in Ulan Bator's central square to demand a swifter pace of reform. The largest opposition group, the Mongolian Democratic Party, also conducted its first organizing congress.

The opposition has demanded an end to official privileges and an end to the dominating role of the Soviet Union in the nation of 2 million, sandwiched between Siberia and China.

Mongolia was the second nation to go communist, in 1921. Its leaders had been prodded by Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev to join in the reforms that have swept the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe.

BOSTON (APRIL 10) UPI - A Superior Court judge passed to a higher court the question of whether a former lawyer for Charles Stuart should have to testify in the investigation of Stuart's murder case, it was reported Tuesday.

In a memorandum asking the Appeals Court to rule on the whether lawyer John Dawley may use his client-attorney relationship to remain silent, the judge also related details of the grand jury probe that previously had been unconfirmed.

The document confirmed that prosecutors are urging Suffolk County Superior Court Judge James Donohue to order Dawley to testify before the grand jury. Dawley is believed to have spoken to Stuart for about two hours the day before the Boston furrier jumped to his death in an apparent suicide.

Stuart and his pregnant wife, Carol, were shot Oct. 23, after they left a birthing class at a downtown hospital. Stuart, who called authorities for help over his car phone, told police the attacker was a black gunman. Stuart jumped from the Tobin Bridge Jan. 4 as police were about to arrest him as the chief suspect on evidence provided by a brother, Matthew.

Investigators now believe Charles Stuart shot his wife in the head, killing her, and eventually their unborn son, and then shot himself in the abdomen to divert suspicion.

Donohue wrote that the grand jury has heard testimony that Dawley met with Matthew Stuart and other family members on Jan. 2 and was told that Charles was responsible for the murder.

The grand jury is widely believed to be focusing on the role of Matthew in the shooting. He told police he was an unwitting participant in the crime, meeting Charles by prearrangement in the Mission Hill section to assist only in an insurance fraud.

The grand jury heard testimony, according to an account of the memorandum in the Boston Herald, that, "Mr. Dawley met with Charles Stuart at his law office (Jan. 3) for approximately two hours. After speaking with Charles Stuart, Mr. Dawley withdrew from representation and suggested several names of prominent defense lawyers for Mr. Stuart to retain."

The jury was told that Matthew met his brother at the shooting scene and was given a bag of valuables, including a hand gun, that Charles later claimed were lost in the robbery. Matthew was to be paid $10,000 from the insurance claim.

Much of the information in the document had previously been attributed to sources and it is the first time any of the grand jury testimony has been publicly acknowledged.

Donohue urged the Appeals Court to act quickly on the issue, although there was speculation the question could be taken up by the state Supreme Judicial Court because it may involve precedent in the area of client-attorney relationships.

(APRIL 10) UPI - The shuttle Discovery awaits blastoff to take the Hubble Space Telescope into orbit... three hostages abducted in 1987 are released in Beirut... those stories and more, next... from the wires of United Press International.

The weather is iffy for launching the shuttle Discovery on schedule from Cape Canaveral this morning.

Air Force meteorologists predict a 60 percent chance of acceptable weather at blastoff time... although low clouds, rain and high winds could force a delay.

But otherwise, the shuttle is ready to fly. Already this morning, engineers have pumped one-half-Million gallons of super-cold liquid oxygen and liquid hydrogen rocket fuel into Discovery's giant external tank.

Many people believe this mission has the showcase payload of the shuttle era. Discovery will put the one-BILLION 500-Million-dollar Hubble Space Telescope into operation high above the Earth's hazy atmosphere.

The giant telescope's near-perfect optics will help astronomers try to answer humanity's most fundamental questions about the birth and fate of the universe. Astronomers will be able to study stars, galaxies, planets and other celestial bodies in far more detail than ever before.

NASA plans for the Discovery crew to release the telescope into space tomorrow. If the launch goes as planned today... skipper Loren Shriver and his crew will spend the rest of the day checking out Discovery's systems and testing the ship's 50-foot-long robot arm. Astronomer-turned-astronaut Steven Hawley plans to use the robot arm to release the telescope into space.

(APRIL 10) UPI - Soviet Foreign Minister Shevardnadze has great expectations for the next superpower summit. He's predicting a ''genuine breakthrough'' in U-S-Soviet relations, with the signing of a dozen accords.

But that's NOT all. Shevardnadze told the Novosti news agency yesterday, that- quoting here- ''we are on the threshold of a peaceful period in humankind's development.''

Shevardnadze and Secretary of State Baker are to hold talks next month in the Soviet Union in a bid to overcome the final hurdles for a strategic arms limitation agreement, called START.

Shevardnadze says both sides will try their hardest to work out differences on air- and sea-launched cruise missiles so that a deal to reduce strategic weapons can be completed.

He expects President Bush and Soviet President Gorbachev to sign one dozen agreements at the May 30th summit in the United States, including trade and economic accords.

Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan says the United States has made progress in reducing the demand for illegal drugs.

Sullivan spoke in London yesterday at the opening of a world conference aimed at finding ways to reduce demand for drugs and promote co-operation in fighting the production and distribution of cocaine. Sullivan said his goal for the meeting is to publicize U-S efforts to reduce the demand for drugs.

Sullivan denied that anti-drug efforts have failed in the United States... where the number of hard-core drug users and drug-related violence continues to rise.

The health secretary pointed out one study. He says for the last two years casual drug use among high school seniors has dropped significantly... which means fewer of them are likely to become heavy users in the future.

The 112-nation conference, which ends today, was convened by Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher in association with the United Nations.

(APRIL 10) UPI - Hundreds of thousands of people in Soviet Georgia rallied yesterday to protest the treatment they have received from Moscow.

At least 150-thousand mourners held an all-night vigil outside the government building in Tbilisi... in memory of the 21 victims of last year's Soviet military crackdown in the Georgian capital.

About 60-thousand others gathered at the Georgian National Stadium. An independence leader told the crowd the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics is nothing but a modern incarnation of the Russian Empire.

About 30-thousand others demonstrated near the Soviet army's Transcaucasian command post.

Many of the demonstrators pledged support for Lithuania's bid to secede. One speaker vowed a general strike by the Georgian people if the Kremlin uses force to prevent Lithuania from seceding.

However, Georgian nationalist leaders say they disagree with the Lithuanians's bolt for freedom and will follow the Estonian example of a phased transition to independence.

The rallies ended with long lines of people waiting at the government building to file past what has become a giant flower-covered shrine to last year's dead.

(APRIL 10) UPI - Lawyers for oil giant Exxon are planning a hard-fought battle against federal charges stemming from the nation's worst oil spill.

The oil company yesterday pleaded innocent to all five environmental charges during an arraignment yesterday in Anchorage, Alaska. Exxon lawyers contend that the oil spill that coated 12-hundred miles of the Alaska shoreline in March 1989 was a ''tragic accident.''

The spill occurred when the Exxon Valdez hit a reef, dumping about 11-Million gallons of oil into Prince William Sound. The oily mess ruined fishing, killed tens of thousands of animals and damaged parks.

Justice Department officials say if convicted, Exxon faces penalties totaling 700-Million dollars, plus restitution of damage to the environment.

But Exxon lawyers vow to challenge any fines, if the company is convicted, by challenging a law that allows penalties to be set higher that the maximum statutory fines.

Researchers say vitamin-B may correct a metabolic defect that can ultimately lead to strokes.

Scientists at Oregon Health Sciences University studied 99 people at high risk for strokes. These are people who had already suffered a ''mini'' stroke, or had histories of diabetes, high blood pressure, smoking or hardening of the arteries.

Dr. Bruce Coull says one-third of the high-risk patients had high levels of an amino acid in the blood called homocysteine. Scientists say even mildly elevated levels of the amino acid can lead to hardening of the arteries, which in turn increases the risk of stroke.

He says that a metabolic defect causes a slight-to-moderate increase in the amino acid. But the researchers discovered that supplements of various B vitamins... biotin, B12, or folic acid... appear to stimulate the breakdown of the amino acid in the body.

Writing in the American Heart Association journal Stroke, the researchers called for longer term studies.

(APRIL 10) UPI - An extremist group freed three hostages in Lebanon this morning.

A French woman, her Belgian boyfriend and their baby daughter were freed in front of the French Embassy in west Beirut after negotiations between Belgian officials and the extremists.

A security official at the embassy gate says all three are fine.

Witnesses say gunmen in two cars dropped off 31-year-old Jacqueline Valente, her boyfriend, 42-year-old Fernand Houtekins , and their baby girl, Sofie.

Valente, her two older daughters and five Belgians were snatched from a pleasure boat off the coast of the Israeli-occupied Gaza Strip November 8th, 1987. The extremist group accused the captives of spying for Israel.

Valente's older daughters were freed in Libya two years ago... and she reportedly gave birth twice in captivity.

Christian Voice of Lebanon radio says the three will go to France aboard a special flight later Tuesday.

The Fatah Revolutionary Council... headed by Abu Nidal... said Sunday it had agreed to respond to an appeal by Libya's Colonel Gadhafi to free Valente and her children. The group said it would free Valente, Houtekins and their baby girl, Sofie. The group did NOT explain why the other baby would not be freed.

It has NOT been clear why Gadhafi took an interest in this group of hostages.

Besides the French-Belgian group of hostages, 18 other Westerners, eight of them Americans, remain held in Lebanon by pro-Iranian extremist groups.

ANCHORAGE, AK (APRIL 10) UPI - Facing fines that could total $700 million or more for the nation's worst oil spill, Exxon attorneys vowed to mount a vigorous defense to federal charges resulting from the wreck of the Exxon Valdez.

Attorneys for the oil company appeared before a federal magistrate Monday to plead innocent to all five environmental charges and ask for a jury trial of the charges stemming from the March 24, 1989, tanker accident that dumped nearly 11 million gallons of oil into Prince William Sound and the Gulf of Alaska.

The country's worst oil spill coated 1,200 miles of shoreline, including national parks and wildlife refuges, ruined fishing, killed tens of thousands of animals and left oil in the environment more than one year later.

Lawyers for Exxon Shipping Co. and its parent, Exxon Corp., appeared in a packed courtroom for arraignment. Exxon Shipping Co. lawyer James Neal of Nashville told a federal magistrate, "We enter pleas of not guilty to all counts." Exxon Corp. lawyer Patrick Lynch of Los Angeles responded "not guilty" five times as U.S. Magistrate John Roberts read each charge.

If convicted on all counts, Exxon could face $700 million in fines - roughly twice the estimated losses from the spill - plus restitution for environmental damage, Justice Department officials said.

Lawyers for the oil compnay, however, told the court that if the Exxon companies were convicted, the oil company would challenge the Alternative Fines Act that sets penalties higher than the maximum statutory fines. Exxon, the defense attorneys said, vows to fight any federal attempt to levy fines beyond the $1.6 million statutory maximum for the five charges. "We hope we don't get to that point," Neal said.

The indictment against the Exxon companies was returned Feb. 27 after plea bargaining negotiations with the Justice Department collapsed. While no new plea bargaining talks were under way, an oil company lawyer did not rule out a possible negotiated settlement before trial.

Four federal prosecutors, three of them from the Justice Department environmental crimes section, took part in the arraignment, but all government lawyers declined to comment on any aspect of the case.

Neal, a veteran of several high-profile cases, including the Watergate prosecution to defense of the Twilight Zone movie deaths, said Exxon would mount a vigorous defense.

"We recognize this was a tragic accident," he said, noting that Exxon took responsibility for the spill and spent $2 billion on the cleanup. "We didn't intend to spill any oil."

Three of the charges, however, neither require nor allege that Exxon intended to spill oil. The Clean Water Act count accuses Exxon of negligence in the spill. The Refuse Act charge said Exxon put pollutants into the water without a permit. The Migratory Bird charge accuses the oil company's actions killed more than 36,000 birds.

The two felony counts do require intent. The indictment said Exxon, in violating the Ports and Waterways Safety Act, "did willfully and knowingly fail to ensure that the wheelhouse of the Exxon Valdez, while underway, was constantly manned by persons ... competent to perform that duty." The Dangerous Cargo Act said Exxon knowingly employed crewmen who were "physically and mentally incapable of performing the duties assigned them."

The government blames Exxon for the tanker leaving shipping lanes about the time the captain left the bridge of the ship, placing the vessel "under the direction of an officer who lacked the required Coast Guard certification for pilotage in Prince William Sound and a helmsman who was known by Exxon Shipping Co. to be incompetent at performing his assigned duties."

Exxon issued a statement saying the spill was a tragic accident "because nobody willfully grounded the ship or caused the spill. We believe that conclusion is thoroughly supported by the testimony and the verdict in the trial of Captain (Joseph) Hazelwood."

Hazelwood, 43, of Huntington, N.Y., the skipper of the ill-fated tanker, was convicted in state court last month of the negligent discharge of oil, but jurors acquitted him of the more serious charges of being drunk and reckless.

(APRIL 10) UPI - Stock prices on the Tokyo Stock Exchange closed lower Tuesday amid concern that the Group of Seven major industrialized nations were not firm in their commitment to support the yen. Trading was light.

The blue-chip Nikkei Average of 225 selected issues, which jumped 3.8 percent, or 1,119.15 points, Monday, fell 773.25 points or 2.5 percent to 29,624.68. The broader-based Tokyo Stock Exchange Index of all listed major shares, which climbed 80.01 points Monday, fell 43.03 points to 2,186.24.

An estimated 550 million shares changed hands, compared with 788 million shares Monday. Declines outpaced advances 609 to 255, while 80 issues remained unchanged.

The dollar, which climbed 1.70 yen on the Tokyo Foreign Exchange to close at 158.15 yen, played a key role in the market's tumble. Analysts said the yen's fall against the dollar created a nervous mood among investors and many sold shares to benefit from Monday's gains.

Japan's markets were given a short-lived boost Monday from Japanese news reports and official statements that the G-7 meeting in Paris decided to give strong support to the yen.

The yen's failure to rally on overseas markets indicated the international support for the yen was not as solid as Japan had hoped, and that dampened investor confidence, analysts said.

Stocks fell across a broad front. On the trading floor, Hitachi paced the actives, followed by Matsushita Electric, Canon, Nippon Steel, and Mitsubishi Heavy Industries.

Elsewhere, construction stocks, steels, railways, and petroleum issues all lost ground along with financials, foods and nonferrous metals.

Elsewhere in Asia, prices closed lower in light trading on the Hong Kong Stock Exchange.

The Hang Seng Index, which slipped 1.39 points Monday, fell 12.41 points to 2,942.33. Utilities fell 5.08 points, financials rose 1.83, industrials lost 16.74 and Properties closed down 36.82 points.

Turnover amounted to a light 791.4 million shares, compared with 911 million shares Monday.

Analysts said regional trading in secondary stocks accounted for most of the turnover, with little interest directed towards blue-chip issues.

With the approach of Easter, "the institutional investors are happy to sit on the sidelines and wait," said a senior dealer at Morgan Grenfell. "They are waiting for some stimulus to move the market, but this is unlikely before the weekend," he added.

Prices closed higher in light trading on the Singapore Stock Exchange, ending a four-day slide as a round of bargain hunting boosted prices.

The key Straits Times Industrial Index, which lost 3.00 points Monday, rebounded 3.80 points to 1,509.60. The narrower All Singapore Index rose 1.48 points to 415.66.

Turnover amounted to 59.6 million shares, compared with 61.2 million shares Monday.

Analysts said the market, which had dropped substantially for the past few days, was boosted by some bargain hunting despite the drop in Tokyo.

On the trading floor, Singapore Fodder paced the advancing issues, followed by Fraser and Neave (ordinary shares) and Shangri-la Hotel.

Oriental Holdings paced the declining issues, followed by Singapore Airlines and Singmarine.

In Australia, prices closed lower in light trading on the Sydney Sharemarket amid the renewed weakness in the volatile Tokyo market.

The blue-chip All Ordinaries Index, which gained 15.3 points Monday, fell 16.4 points to 1,511.9. Turnover amounted to 62.2 million shares, compared with 60.1 million Monday.

Analysts said investors feel the market is weak and they are looking for any opportunity to abandon their positions. The Tokyo stock performance, gave investors the opportunity to sell.

On the trading floor, News Corp. dropped ten cents to $10.50, Boral lost six cents to $3.33 and Pacific Dunlop lost five cents to $4.87.

A cut in mortage rates failed to boost banking issues as National Bank lost two cents to $6.30.

In the resource sector, WMC Mining fell ten cents to $5.00, MIM Mining lost four cents to $2.28, and Pasminco eased four cents to $2.16.

(APRIL 10) UPI - Two people were killed when a private plane collided in flight with an Atlantic Southeast Airlines plane last night near Alabama's Gadsden Municipal Airport. Officials say two people aboard the small plane were killed, but the Atlantic Southeast commuter plane made a safe emergency landing at Gadsden. None of its four passengers and three crewmembers was hurt.

Tokyo's financial markets retreated today when it became clear that Japan was NOT getting the global support it sought. Yesterday stock prices on Tokyo's market were buoyed by Japan's optimistic interpretation of a weekend meeting of seven major industrialized nations. But as market activity moved around the globe, it became apparent the world's central banks were NOT going all out to boost the yen.

The founder of the militant anti-abortion group Operation Rescue pleaded NO contest yesterday to charges in an illegal blockade of a women's clinic in Los Angeles last year. MIAMI (APRIL 10) UPI - An angry bankruptcy judge rejected General Development Corp.'s request to post all its assets as collateral and borrow $10.5 million from bankers, calling it a "grossly overreaching and outrageous" plan.

The company told U.S. Bankruptcy Judge A. Jay Cristol Monday that it needed to borrow the money from a consortium of bankers for 15 days to prevent the company's collapse.

Cristol exploded when a GDC lawyer revealed that the collateral for the loan would be "all the assets of the debtor." "A billion dollars in assets to secure $10.5 million!" said the incredulous Cristol. "I'm becoming sick to my stomach over what I'm hearing."

Cristol was outraged by the prospect that if GDC failed to repay the loan, the bankers would end up with all the company's assets and unsecured creditors would get nothing. GDC sought Chapter 11 protection Friday night estimating it had assets of $860 million and liabilities of $830 million.

At Monday's hearing, Cristol asked GDC attorney Thomas White if the company was maintaining that the loan plan was the only way to stay alive while it shops for long-term financing. "Yes, your honor," White said. "Then you're going to have to close up," the judge snapped.

Cristol told the company to "do some heavy negotiating" and come back Friday with a "more balanced, more reasonable" plan. "I'm not going to let this company buy ten or 15 days of existence at the unsecured creditors' expense," Cristol said.

Cristol also refused to let the company retain two top-drawer law firms, Wilmer Cutler & Pickering of Washington, D.C., and Greenberg Traurig Hoffman Lipoff Rosen & Quental of Miami. Kevin Gleason, staff attorney for the U.S. Trustee Office, had objected that the phalanx of lawyers would be getting money that should go to creditors.

The judge told the lawyers to decide by Friday which firm is going to be GDC's lead counsel. "I don't think the creditors should have to pay to transport lawyers from Washington, D.C.," he said.

General Development also suspended road and sewer work at its developments Monday and laid off 239 additional employees at four of its Florida communities. That leaves it with about 3,200 employees, compared to 4,500 before the filing.

"Until financing is arranged and a reorganization plan is approved, we can't spend any money on construction work," said company spokesman Otis Wragg III.

The comany also said it expected to add some of its subsidiaries to the Chapter 11 filing. Those include General Development Utilities, Florida Home Finders and its time-share operations, Vistana Resort and Glen Ivy Financial.

Standard & Poor's Monday lowered the company's subordinated debt rating from CCC to D, indicating default status.

PITTSBURGH (APRIL 10) UPI - A lawsuit has been filed against PNC Financial Corp., accusing the banking firm of misrepresenting the quality of its loan portfolio after its stock fell.

Two shareholders Monday filed a class-action suit in U.S. District Court at Pittsburgh against PNC and seven of its directors and officers for unspecified damages.

The suit, filed on behalf John Paul Decker and Ominsky Joseph & Welsh P.C. Defined Benefit Plan, claims PNC Chairman Thomas O'Brien and other company officials violated federal securities laws by misrepresenting and concealing the "deterioration of the quality of PNC's loan portfolio." The suit claims there was a reduction in the quality of commercial real estate ventures and loans to Third World borrowers.

As a result, the suit alleges, people who bought PNC's common or preferred stock between Jan. 17, 1989, and April 5, 1990 - the day before the Pittsburgh firm said it would boost its reserves against loan losses by as much as $116 million - suffered damages.

PNC stock dropped after the company's disclosure Friday that first-quarter profits would be reduced by 35 percent to 40 percent to provide for possible loan losses.

PNC's general counsel declined to address the specific allegations in the suit, saying he had yet to see the complaint. But Joseph Richardson said such suits aren't unusual or unexpected when a company's stock takes a fall as PNC's did last week.

After falling $6.12 per share last Thursday and Friday, PNC's stock rebounded by 75 cents Monday to close at $34.75. Richardson said he could not recall a shareholder lawsuit against PNC during his tenure as general counsel, which began in the late 1970s.

ATHENS, GREECE (APRIL 10) UPI - Conservative New Democracy Party leader Constantine Mitsotakis became Greece's new prime minister Tuesday and was asked to form a government that would apparently improve relations with the United States.

Mitsotakis was appointed during a one-hour meeting with President Christos Sartzetakis, who asked him to form a Cabinet. Party sources said the Cabinet would be sworn in Wednesday.

Party sources said the new Cabinet will have 29 members, with former Prime Minister Tzannis Tzannetakis as deputy premier and Antonis Samaras as foreign minister.

Ties with the United States, less than warm during Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou's eight-year rule, were expected to improve considerably under the conservative leader.

Mitsotakis said last year that if elected he would immediately renew an agreement with the United States involving four major military bases and some 20 minor installations on Greek soil. The U.S. plans to dismantle them but the future of the rest depended on the outcome of Sunday's elections.

An Athens radio station said Mitsotakis was invited to Washington shortly after Sunday's elections but there was no official confirmation from New Democracy or the United States.

Papandreou was not invited to Washington during his administration.

Final results in the general elections, the third in 10 months, showed New Democracy received 46.9 percent of the popular vote, giving it 150 seats, or one seat shy of a majority in the 300-member Vouli, or Parliament.

The conservatives received the single seat they needed when Costis Stephanopoulos, leader of the small Democratic Renewal party, with just one seat in Parliament, pledged to support Mitsotakis. Stephanopoulos was formerly a New Democracy leader.

New Democracy's nearest rival at the polls was the Pan-Hellenic Socialist Movement, or PASOK, led by Papandreou. PASOK received 38.6 percent of the popular vote, which translated into 123 seats in Parliament.

Papandreou, ousted from office in June after eight years of PASOK rule, belatedly conceded victory to Mitsotakis late Monday when he congratulated the conservative leader by telephone, political sources said.

In other election results, the communist-led Alliance of the Left received 10.3 percent of the popular vote, or 19 seats in the Vouli, and the smaller parties and indepedents between them received 4.2 percent of the vote, or 8 seats in Parliament.

Political analysts said the appointment of the first conservative government since 1981 would have immediate implications in the country's foreign relations.

Mitsotakis told reporters after winning the polls that his first priority would be to tackle the economic crisis, arising partly from an acute lack of funds in the treasury.

New Democracy is also expected to choose a conservative head of stste when presidential elections are held within about two weeks by a vote in the new Parliament.

In three earlier rounds of presidential balloting in March, the Vouli failed to choose a new head of state because a two-thirds majority of 200 votes was needed in the first two rounds and 180 in the third.

GENEVA (APRIL 10) UPI - U.S. and Soviet negotiators began a final round of talks Tuesday aimed at completing a treaty to sharply reduce chemical weapons so it can be signed at the May 30 summit in Washington.

Officials on both sides were optimistic the pact would be finished in time.

''The two powers are committed and negotiators are confident they can do the job,'' an American official said. ''This is the last planned session before the summit.''

''All but 100 percent certain,'' a Soviet delegate echoed privately. ''There are still some problems but we are confident of completing the task.''

Moscow especially dislikes U.S. plans - based largely on concern over nations like Libya and Iraq having chemical weapons while the superpowers destroy theirs - to deploy limited numbers of the most modern chemical arms while destroying nearly all old stockpiles.

''We need a credible deterrent to chemical adventurism,'' U.S. Deputy Assistant Defense Secretary Billy Richardson said before the latest and 15th round of the talks in Geneva.

The chief U.S. negotiator, Stephen J. Ledogar, issued a brief statement saying the talks would concentrate on completing a treaty and on ''procedures for openess,'' referring to mutual compliance monitoring of production, storage and destruction facilities.

The two major powers intend their own chemical arms accord to promote a global ban that has been under discussion for two decades at the multilateral 40-nation Disarmament Conference in Geneva.

Washington and Moscow plan to cut their arsenals by 80 percent at once and then go down by a further 18 percent - to just 2 percent of original stockpiles - when there is an international convention.

They would keep the remaining 2 percent until all nations either possessing or able to produce chemical weapons have signed that convention and are verifiably known to be honoring its provisions.

U.S. and Soviet experts believe that, while much can be verified to ensure compliance, a treaty will also require a certain degree of trust between the two sides.

That applies in particular, they said, to sophisticated binary weapons comprising two chemical substances that are relatively harmless on their own but lethal when combined in a missile warhead or howitzer shell.

Besides a chemical arms treaty, other delegations were optimistic about completing a parallel ''verification protocol'' in time for the summit to finally allow ratification of old 1974 and 1976 nuclear testing agreements.

Those accords set limits of 150 kilotons, or 150,000 tons, of TNT equivalent on underground nuclear tests and any explosions for peaceful purposes.

That is widely considered a far outdated ceiling, because most modern nuclear weapons are one-tenth that size and advanced seismic instruments can detect an underground blast down to as low as 5 kilotons or even less.

The two governments say START agreements on reducing long-range strategic nuclear weapons - the most important talks of all - are now unlikely to be ready for the summit even in a preliminary form.

The difficulty in reaching a START agreement is aggravated by the fact that the Washington summit has been moved up from the the end of June to the the end of May, but differences over sea-launched cruise missiles and heavy mobile missiles on land in any case rule out quick agreement.

Officials said that a START treaty is aslso vastly more complicated and demands iron-clad provisions for verification of compliance.

LONDON (APRIL 10) UPI - Four prison officers were injured at Strangeways Prison Tuesday when rebellious prisoners hurled debris at them as they tried to clear wreckage from the inmates' 10-day siege, the Home Office said.

The protest at Strangeways Prison in Manchester was being pursued by about 20 inmates who were the target of a noisy campaign that included loud rock music and sirens.

Uprisings were quelled Monday at eight jails where revolts broke out in solidarity with the rebellion at Strangeways, 200 miles northwest of London, said a spokesman for the Home Office, which oversees the nation's 125 penal institutions.

One inmate remained on the roof at Dartmoor Prison, a medium-security facility, shouting he wanted a transfer because of alleged brutality by guards.

Another inmate held a post atop Long Lartin Prison near Evesham, about 110 miles northwest of London.

At Strangeways, prisoners camping out on the prison roof threw garbage at guards as they attempted to clean up wreckage from the uprising, which began April 1.

''They went into an area to clear it of debris and they came under attack. Missiles were hurled at them from the roof,'' the spokesman said.

Ambulances took the men to North Manchester General Hospital, where one remained with minor injuries.

Paul Taylor, who claimed to have organized the Strangeways uprising, shouted at reporters through a makeshift megaphone. He denied he was convicted of rape or that he had been involved in protests at other institutions.

The protest, which has claimed one prisoner's life, has spread to other prisons.

Officials said they believed an uprising in Bristol was incited by convicts who were transferred from Dartmoor Prison, where a similar uprising occurred Saturday and where at least one prisoner was confirmed dead.

The British Broadcasting Corp. showed footage of massive destruction inside the Dartmoor jail, which was built in 1810 to house prisoners of war during the Napoleonic period.

Inside one multi-story wing, all 120 cells had been wrecked, with a mountain of furniture, doors, railings and debris hurled onto an anti-suicide net, causing it to collapse.

Authorities also reported some trial proceedings had been disrupted because of difficulties in getting inmates from the troubled jails. Aside from Bristol and Dartmoor, the other facilities affected were in Stokeheath, Pentonville, Brixton, Hull, Cardiff and Leicester.

BOSTON (APRIL 10) UPI - Although many people regard summer as the season when tick bites are most likely to cause Lyme disease, experts warn that spring is actually the most dangerous time.

May and June are the worst months for taking a vacation in areas known to have abundant populations of the tiny deer tick that spreads the disease, said Andrew Spielman of the Harvard University School of Public Health. ''If you want to go to Nantucket, try the month of August,'' Spielman said.

The idea that summer is the peak period for Lyme disease is just one of a number of misconceptions that have grow up amid a flurry of media attention, Dr. Allen Steere said during a recent seminar at the New England Medical Center.

As a result, Lyme disease has now become ''one of the most overdiagnosed and overtreated infections around,'' said Steere, who directs the Lyme Disease Clinic at the medical center.''There has been too much hysteria.''

Steere believes doctors too often treat patients who do not have Lyme disease as if they did. And he says many patients would rather believe they have the disease - which is generally treatable if caught early - than something with similar symptoms, but more serious, such as multiple sclerosis.

Although the federal Centers for Disease Control says Lyme disease is now the most common infection in the United States borne by insect carriers, the reported cases totaled only 13,795 from 1980 through 1988 - which hardly puts it in the same league as sexually-transmitted diseases.

Another misconception that researchers want to clear up is that the disorder can be transmitted sexually, or by mosquitoes, or by anything except certain types of ticks.

Lyme disease was first recognized as a distinct disorder by Steere in the late 1970s after a number of children living in and around Lyme, Conn., developed an unusual joint disease that doctors first thought was juvenile rheumatoid arthritis.

In 1977, Spielman discovered the disease was spread by a tick that most often feeds on the white-footed mouse during the nymph and larva stages of its life cycle and the white-tailed deer during its adult stage.

Humans get Lyme disease from tick bites - most often when the ticks are in their nymph period in the spring and hard to spot because they are smaller than a pinhead.

If the ticks can stay attached to human skin for more than a day, they can inject into blood an infection-causing bacteria shaped like a corkscrew. Within a week or so, the infection typically causes flu-like symtoms and a distinctive-looking rash that spreads like a red bull's eye around the bite.

Most people can be treated successfully for the disease at this stage with oral antibiotics such as tetracycline or penicillin. But if it goes undiagnosed and untreated, the disorder can cause such problems months later as arthritis-like joint pain, meningitis, weakness and memory lapses.

After two or three years, untreated Lyme disease can lead to chronic arthritis.

Cases of the disease have been reported in 43 states, but the incidence is highest in three areas: Northeast and Mid-Atlantic coastal states from Massachusetts to Maryland; Wisconsin and Minnesota in the Midwest; and California and Oregon.

Steere said even though deer ticks in some parts of the country have

''amazingly high'' rates of Lyme disease infection - 50 percent on New York's Shelter Island, for example - the chance of getting the disease from a known tick bite is far lower than many people think.

A study of those who remembered being bitten by a deer tick showed that only one in 30 actually developed the disease.

Although antibiotics given prior to a tick bite can prevent the disease, Steere says he thinks the development of a vaccine ''is probably a long way off.''

There have been scattered reports of birth defects in infants whose mothers got Lyme disease while they were pregnant. But Steere said a study of 463 babies from areas where the disease is widespread and areas where it is not failed to turn up any clear association.

Wild animals do not become ill from Lyme disease, but domestic animals do. An unpublished study of blood samples from 2,900 dogs in Massachusetts has provided the first indication that there may be natural barriers to the spread of the infection, said Paul Etkind of the Massachusetts Department of Public Health.

Etkind said there were fewer Lyme disease infections than expected among dogs that lived at altitudes above 2,000 feet. Researchers speculated that the lower humidity found at higher altitudes may make it harder for deer ticks to survive there.

WARSAW, POLAND (APRIL 10) UPI - About 2,000 workers led by Solidarity founder Lech Walesa staged their first protest rally Tuesday against Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki, complaining of the slow pace of economic reforms.

''Mr. Prime Minister, I was right saying that it (the pace of reforms) has lasted too long,'' Walesa said during the rally at which workers drew up a statement calling for the firing of directors who are impeding progress.

Walesa on March 31 had warned Mazowiecki of a possible shipyard workers' strike, but last week reversed himself, saying the threat was only a ''slip of tongue.''

Solidarity sources said the workers in the historic Gdansk shiyard, where the East bloc's first independent labor movement was born in 1980, are disgruntled over wage increases that are not coming as quickly as in other sectors of the economy.

Walesa expressed his bitterness at the pace of events in the shipyard, where there have been no immediate benefit from the government's economic stabilization plan.

He drew an ovation when he said shipyard workers struggled for the rights of all of Poland during a bloody revolt in 1970 and in 1980, and now they were rewarded with nothing.

''This yard fought for the whole country and thanks to it the tranformations in the country were initiated ,'' he said. ''May Poland understand that we struggled for everybody and we got nothing for it.''

The protest took place as favorable economic figures were released showing that for the first time since the economic stabilization program was put into effect Jan. 1, wage increases were higher than price increases in March.

Exports to the West grew by 32 percent in the first quarter of 1990 compared with a year earlier, bringing more badly needed hard currency for Poland's painful reforms.

But on the down side, the economy remained in the grip of a recession, with production in the first quarter 30 percent lower than last year and the demand for consumer goods down 47 percent. At the end of March there were 260,000 unemployed.

U.S. millionairess Barbara Piasecka-Johnson tried to set up a joint venture with the management but the workers opposed it on grounds she proposed to pay too little. The government then drew a plan to turn the shipyard into a private company in which the workers will be able to be shareholders. The plan needs the approval of the management.

The statement on behalf of 2,000 disgruntled workers warned of another rally April 30 during which a ''decision will be made what to do'' if their demands are not met.

Among the workers' demands: punishing former communist Prime Minister Mieczyslaw Rakowski, who they blame for the current crisis because he ordered closure of the shipyard by 1990, firing the directors in the shipyard who went along with his order and stimulating economic cooperation with Soviet purchasers.

GENEVA, SWITZERLAND (APRIL 10) UPI - The European Community blamed the United States and developing countries criticized the rich nations in general Tuesday for lack of real progress at the Uruguay Round trade liberalization talks. The negotiations were launched in late 1986 and are faltering badly despite a scheduled conclusion deadline of December this year.

Ministers from around 25 key trading nations planned to meet in Mexico April 19 and 20 to try and decide on ways to break deadlocks on major issues like agriculture and singled out at a current review meeting in Geneva.

Delegates from the 106 participating countries exchanged charges on responsibility for the difficulties at the review session within the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade - the framework for the Uruguay Round - which began Monday.

European Community negotiator Tran van Thinh said a package deal by December "is not a myth" but will require a major effort. Singling out the United States, he said there is "a growing trend towards unilateralism which represents a new threat" to the multilateral trading system.

"The United States is trying to solve its problems on its own" through trade laws demanded by senators impatient at the failure to correct them on a multilateral basis, Tran said.

Developing countries for their part issued a joint statement citing "no substantive progress in areas of particular interest" to the Third World because advanced nations only emphasize issues important to themselves. "Should this state of affairs not be immediately rectified, the consequences will be extremely serious for the Round," the statement said.

An overall "framework and guidelines" was scheduled to be ready by the end of July, it said, "but we have only 100 days till then and everything that is fundamental has yet to be done."

"The negotiations do not show an adequate recognition of the commitment on differential and more favorable treatment" for developing countries, the statement said.

It charged that advanced nations in some areas are not honoring "the principle that developing countries will not be required to make concessions which are inconsistent with their development, financial and trade needs."

The statement said the richer nations have also failed to honor a commitment made at the launching of the trade liberalization talks that, as the negotiations progressed, they would freeze and roll back restrictions on tropical products and primary goods from the developing nations.

"Virtually no progress has been registered in negotiations in the textile sector as well," the Third World statement said. "The success of the Uruguay Round cannot be achieved without a balanced result of rights and obligations," it said. "Developing countries will not bear responsibility for failure if current imbalances persist."

KATMANDU, NEPAL (APRIL 10) UPI - The foreign minister said Tuesday King Birendra's powers would be changed ''according to the will of the people'' and promised an investigation to determine the excesses committed under the previous government.

The latest concessions came after Birendra dismissed his hard-line government Friday and appointed a new administration headed by Prime Minister Lokendra Bahudar Chand in an attempt to stop protests rocking the Himalayan kingdom. The monarch also legalized political parties following a 29-year ban.

Foreign Minister Pashupati Shumshere Rana told reporters Tuesday that negotiations were under way to expand the Cabinet by including representatives of the opposition Nepali Congress Party and a coalition seven leftist parties.

''All three sides in the Nepalese society - the Nepali Congress, the Panchayat (royally approved existing government) and the left - are attempting to work together to form the new Nepal. Participation of all sides is required,'' Rana said. ''The government is formed. The next step is to enlarge it.''

He said the government is waiting for the Congress and the coalition to send representatives to participate in a constitutional reforms commission that will determine the king's power.

''The role of the crown in the future is going to be accomodated and changed according to the will of the people and the changing times,'' Rana said without elaborating.

Traditionally, the king's power has been absolute.

In addition, he said a judicial commission appointed by the government would investigate reported excesses committed by the dismissed hard-line government.

''It will look at the whole nature of any excesses that may have been committed,'' Rana said. ''I assure you of one thing - that this judicial commission will have the full scope of powers to suggest any kind of punishment it sees fit on those who have committed any excesses.''

He would neither confirm nor deny reports that former hard-line Prime Minister Marich Man Singh Shrestha and Minister of State for Home Affairs Niranhanb Thapa were under ''government protection.''

Sources within the Congress party and the leftist parties, meanwhile, said both groups have selected five representatives to join the government.

Congress, which was in power 29 years ago when the monarchy banned parties has selected Seikh Idris, of the party's central executive, Yog Prasad Upadhaya, the party's assistant secretary general, and Hari Bol Bhattarai, who was Katmandu mayor from May 1987 until he was suspended for participating in multi-party political activities.

Sources within the seven-party leftist coalition said it had chosen Bharat Mohan Adhikari, of the Nepal Communist Party (Marxist) Politburo, and R.K. Mainali, senior member of the coalition.

Opposition leaders warned that new unrest could spread if an interim government with broad party representation is not appointed immediately.

''The government and Parliament should be dissolved immediately to prevent chaos and confusion,'' said Girija Prasad Koirala, secretary-general of the Nepali Congress Party.

''If this is not done, the situation will turn bad,'' he said.

Opposition leaders Koirala and Sahana Pradhan, chairwoman of the seven-party left alliance, said Tuesday the present government was illegal because it was appointed under the partyless panchayat system.

''We do not endorse this government. It does not represent the people,'' Pradhan said. ''We demand the immediate dismissal of the Chand government and that a new interim govenment be formed with proper representation of political parties.''

Pradhan said restoration of the multi-party system and legalizing political parties was the ''first phase of our achievements. There is more to be gained in our struggle for full-fledged democracy in the country.''

She also said the powers of the king will be diminished.

''When the people are united, they are strong and powerful,'' she said. ''Naturally, the king has to surrender to the people's demand. It depends upon how the people act in the future.''

LAROSE, LA (APRIL 10) UPI - Fire swept through a newly set-up mobile home early Tuesday, killing six children and injuring their parents, authorities said.

A fire official said the blaze probably was caused by an electrical cord and that lives may have been saved by smoke detectors, which the home did not have.

The father and mother rescued two children, including the twin of a nine-month-old victim. Both parents were injured in the rescue efforts, Lafourche Fire District No. 3 Manager Shull Autin said.

The father, Johnell Davis, 34, suffered serious burns in rescuing a six-year-old daughter, Marie. He was reported in stable condition at Lady of the Sea Hospital in Galliano.

The mother, Loriane Davis, 29, injured her knee jumping from the trailer window with the surviving 9-month-old twin, Jester. She was treated and released.

The Davis children killed in the fire were Cassondra, 12; Jonel, 11; Kerry Ann, 9; Larraine, 6; Carla, 3, and Jeston, 9 months. The Davises had just set up their trailer in a mobile home park Wednesday but electrical power had not yet been connected. They were using power from a neighboring trailer by way of an extension cord.

"We believe it was linked to an electrical cord supplying power to the trailer," Autin said, adding there were no smoke detectors in the trailer. "We believe if there had been smoke detectors in the trailer, their lives would have been saved."

Four of the victims were found in one room and the other two in other parts of the trailer. Firefighters received the call at 12:39 a.m., Autin said. The trailer was engulfed in smoke and flames when they arrived, he said. An investigation continued.

SRINAGAR, INDIA (APRIL 10) UPI - Moslem separatist kidnappers Tuesday killed the Hindu chief executive of a state-run watch factory after the government rejected their demands to free three jailed militants, halt searches and end a curfew, police said.

There was no word on the fate of two Moslem hostages also held by the Kashmir Students Liberation Front.

The slaying of H.L. Khera apparently triggered the sternest warning yet to Pakistan from Prime Minister V.P. Singh over its alleged support for a popular uprising against Indian rule of predominantly Moslem Kashmir.

Intervening in a parliamentary debate on the defense budget, Singh directed his remarks at Islamabad in saying: ''You will not get away with it. You will have to pay a very heavy price. We have the capability to inflict this cost.''

He called on his fellow countrymen to be ''psychologically ready'' for anything, contending Pakistan could try to use the unrest in Kashmir to realize its claim to all of the region.

The violence started in mid-January and has claimed more than 180 lives.

India and Pakistan have battled for Kashmir in all three wars they have fought since 1948. India, whose government is dominated by Hindu politicians, currently controls two-thirds of the Moslem region.

Pakistan, which is overwhelmingly Moslem, denies charges it is arming and training separatists from India's side of Kashmir. But Pakistan openly supports the separatists' demand for self-determination and is raising money for what it calls ''freedom fighters.''

In a related development, paramilitary police in Tuesday shot dead one person and wounded two others when they fired on people protesting a curfew imposed after the kidnappings on Friday. The curfew was meant to help security forces searching for the hostages and has continued without a break, creating serious food shortages and other hardships.

A police intelligence source said more than 500 young men had been arrested since the curfew began and searches were launched on Friday, disputing official reports that only 200 were in custody.

Police said Khera's bullet-riddled body was found on a road in front of Srinagar's fire station, near the militant stronghold neighborhood of Batmaloo, about an hour after expiration of a 2 p.m. deadline set by the abductors for acceptance of their demands.

A senior police official denied reports the militants pushed the victim out of a car and shot him before speeding away. He pointed out the curfew was in effect and the area swarming with security forces.

The official said police believed Khera was shot elsewhere and his cloth-wrapped body quietly carried to the road from an alley.

''There was not a single blood spot at the site. So, we presume he was shot elsewhere and the body carried to the road,'' he said.

Batmaloo was immediately sealed off by troops, who entered homes looking for the kidnappers and their two other hostages, Kashmir University Vice Chancellor Mashir-ul-Haq and his private secretary, Ahmad Ghani, police said.

Khera, a 48-year-old Hindu, was the general manager of state-run Hindustan Machine Tools, which owns a watch factory in Srinagar, the summer capital of Jammu and Kashmir state, 400 miles north of New Delhi. He was seized separately from the other two hostages.

The abductors originally set 3 p.m. Monday as the deadline by which they demanded the government release three jailed militants in exchange for the lives of the hostages.

Late Monday night, however, a kidnapper called Dr. Abdul Ahad Wani of the Kashmir University law department and said the deadline was being extended by 11 hours.

Wani, in an interview Tuesday, quoted the caller as saying the government would also have to end the curfew and house-to-house searches. The caller added that as a sign of goodwill, authorities should release immediately one of the three jailed separatists, Fayaz Ahmadar.

Wani said he then spoke briefly to Haq and quoted the non-Kashmiri Islamic scholar as saying that he was ''well'' and was observing Ramadan, the Moslem month of fasting.

LONDON (APRIL 10) UPI - Police in Wales questioned three people Tuesday in connection with a fire aboard a ferry that killed one passenger and injured about 32 others, authorities said.

A Dyfedpowys police spokesman said investigators were interviewing for a second time three Irishmen who were among the 297 passengers aboard the Irish Sea ferry Noronna when fire broke out early Monday as the vessel cruised about 8 miles off the coast of Wales en route to Ireland.

One male passenger who was asleep in a ferry cabin died before firefighters were able to contain the blaze.

Helicopters lifted passengers from the vessel to Welsh hospitals for various injuries. At least two passengers remained hospitalized Tuesday, with one listed in critical condition, the spokesman said.

Police detained the men for questioning after finding them at a nearby airfield making arrangements to fly to Ireland, the British Broadcasting Corp. reported.

They had been interviewed earlier along with all other passengers and crew. Police said they were trying to clear up discrepancies in the men's stories.

The ferry fire was the second suspicious blaze aboard a ship in three days.

Scandinavian authorities suspect arson in a fire Saturday that engulfed the Scandinavian Star ferry off the Norwegian coast, killing an estimated 170 people.

A third ship that was damaged by fire was pulled by tugboats into Portsmouth Harbor on the south coast of England Monday. Investigators said the fire was believed to have been caused by a broken fuel line in the engine room.

One passenger died of an apparent heart attack in the blaze aboard the French ferry Reine Mathilde and a crew member was treated for injuries.

CAIRO, EGYPT (APRIL 10) UPI - Republican leader Robert Dole and four other senators will visit Iraq's Saddam Hussein Thursday in an effort to defuse tension over Iraqi threats against Israel, Dole said Tuesday.

Dole, R-Kan., said Egypt's President Mubarak, who met with Saddam last weekend on a similar mission, had arranged for the meeting in Baghdad.

He said his Senate delegation, which arrived in Cairo from Damascus on Monday as part of a regional tour, will postpone its stop in Israel to make the Iraq visit.

''We don't want anything to happen now (between Iraq and Israel),'' Dole told reporters after just over an hour of talks with Mubarak. ''We want to keep everybody on board.''

There was, however, no immediate confirmation from Baghdad of plans for the meeting.

Tension between Iraq and the United States reached a new peak last week when Saddam threatened to wipe out half of Israel with poison gas if Israel repeated a 1981 air raid on a nuclear reactor under construction near Baghdad.

Relations were further harmed recently when U.S. and British customs agents foiled an alleged Iraqi plot to smuggle U.S.-made triggers for nuclear bombs.

Dole said he also intended to raise with Saddam the question of nuclear and chemical weapon proliferation in the Middle East.

''That's one of the reasons we want to go to Iraq, so we can hold discussions with Saddam Hussein on these issues,'' Dole said.

Dole credited Mubarak with making the senators' trip to Bagdhad possible.

''We had a most constructive visit with President Mubarak. ... He is greatly admired and greatly respected in the United States,'' Dole told said after his talks with the Egyptian leader.

''We were discussing Iraq and our relationship, and in fact we were trying to see Saddam Hussein. ... President Mubarak picked up the phone and he arranged that meeting on Thursday, so he did very good work,'' Dole said.

Mubarak visited Saddam in Baghdad over the weekend and said afterwards that the Iraqi leader had no intention of starting a war with either Iran or Israel, but wanted only peace.

Saddam has accused the United States and other Western governments of waging an anti-Iraq camapign in the wake of the Iraqi's leader sanctioning the execution last month of London-based journalist Farzad Bazoft.

Dole said he thought the Mideastern visit of the five-member delegation - which includes Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, assistant minority leader Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, and Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, was ''very important and very timely.''

In a related development, a U.S. diplomat expelled by Iraq left Baghdad late Monday after Iraq's foreign ministry ordered him out in a tit-for-tat expulsion, the Bahrain-based Gulf News Agency reported.

GNA quoted Iraq-based diplomatic sources and identified the diplomat as Zachary White, a second secretary at the U.S. mission in Baghdad.

Dole, asked if he thought Iraq's decision to expel the diplomat marked an escalation in tensions between the two countries, said: ''I'm not certain it's an escalation ... but as you know, these things do happen from time to time.''

Iraq expelled the U.S. diplomat in retaliation for Washington's expulsion of an Iraqi diplomat posted to the United Nations mission in New York. U.S. officials accused the Iraqi of plotting to assassinate two Iraqi dissidents opposed to Saddam's rule.

White was the second U.S. diplomat to be expelled from Iraq since the two states resumed diplomatic ties in 1984.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 10) UPI - Archbishop Pio Laghi, the Vatican's diplomatic ambassador to the United States government and the U.S. Catholic Church, is being recalled to Rome, the National Conference of Catholic Bishops said Tuesday.

Laghi, who has served first as apostolic delegate to the U.S. church and then as pro-nuncio, following establishment of diplomatic ties between the Vatican and the U.S. government, will head the Vatican Congregation for Catholic Education.

In his 10 years in the United States, Laghi has played a crucial role in influencing appointments to the hierarchy of the American church and is widely given credit for molding those appointments in a more theologically conservative manner than his predecessor, Archbishop Jean Jadot.

''Since he was appointed to the United States in 1980, Archbishop Laghi has played a leadership role in what he himself has called 'a very dynamic church,'' Archibshop Daniel Pilarczyk, president of the bishops' conference said in a statement.

''That dynamism has been fed by Archbishop Laghi's own energy, and his leaving is our loss,'' Pilarczyk said.

Church officials said they had no indication of when a successor to Laghi would be named.

ATLANTA (APRIL 10) UPI - The Atlanta Falcons intend to make Illinois quarterback Jeff George the first pick in the NFL draft unless they trade the choice, team officials said Tuesday.

''We've seen him. We like him. We think he's the best choice,'' said Ken Herock, Falcons' vice president of player personnel. ''Unless someone comes up with a blockbuster (trade) offer, he's the pick. Our goal now is to try to sign him to a contract.

''We keep looking at films of the kid, and he looks better and better. I don't even know if we'd trade the pick now.''

George, who will bypass his senior season at Illinois, said he expects to begin negotiating a contract with the Falcons.

''I'm waiting to hear from my agent now about our plans to come to Atlanta (for negotiations),'' George said Monday from his campus apartment. ''Maybe once we get there, things will come together. I know the Falcons are anxious to get us down there, and I'd like to make it soon, too.''

Herock would not say whether the Falcons would trade either George or current quarterback Chris Miller after the April 22-23 draft.

Miller said he does not feel threatened by a possible challenge to his No. 1 role.

''Apparently, they feel he's the best player in the draft,'' Miller said. ''But sometimes you draft a quarterback to develop him and sometimes you draft a quarterback to do something else with him, like trade him.

''I'm not concerned or upset about it.''

HOLLYWOOD (APRIL 10) UPI - The radioactive reptiles of ''Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles'' shell-shocked their competition at the nation's box office snapping up an astonishing two-week gross of $50.9 million.

The action-fantasy featuring a wise-cracking quartet of terrapins collected $18.8 million in its second week in release, down 26 percent from its eye-popping debut of $25.3 million across 2,226 theater screens.

Produced by Golden Harvest, ''Turtles'' set new box office records for New Line Cinema, its releasing agency.

Moreover, Turtlemania helped lead the North American box office to a $120.3 million spurt last week, more than double the $59.5 gross for the same week in 1989.

The box-office bonanza was abetted by the Easter Week school holiday and the appearance of four new pictures in the top 10.

Second in the weekly rankings was ''Pretty Woman,'' the Pygmalionish romantic tale of a successful businessman (Richard Gere) who falls in love with a Hollywood hooker (Julia Roberts).

''Pretty Woman,'' showing on 1,707 screens, dropped only 10 percent from its premiere week to gross $11.2 million for a two-week total of $44.2 million, the biggest winner for Gere in many years.

Sliding into third place in nerdy style was ''Ernest Goes to Jail,'' the latest in the continuing misadventures of Jim Varney's comic character. Varney, with a mouth like a torn pocket and a voice that would etch glass, locked up $6.1 million at 1,943 theaters to lead the three other newcomers.

Right behind ''Ernest Goes to Jail'' in fourth place was ''The First Power '' an occult thriller starring Lou Diamond Phillips as a Los Angeles cop mixed up with the spirit of an executed killer.

''The First Power,'' playing in 1,332 theaters, grossed $5.6 million in its opening frame.

Dropping from No. 3 the previous week to No. 5 was ''The Hunt for Red October,'' which torpedoed another $5 million for a six-week tally of $83.5 million.

The third new film among the top 10 was ''I Love You to Death,'' a black comedy based on a true story of a wife determined to kill her husband for his infidelities.

Starring Kevin Kline and Tracy Ullman, it opened in 1,072 houses to gross $4 million and land in the No. 6 spot.

''Cry Baby,'' the fourth new picture, was ranked eighth with a tearful gross of $3 million in 1,229 theaters.

Of the big splash Oscar films, only the best picture winner, ''Driving Miss Daisy,'' appeared in the top 10, capturing the seventh position. It grossed $3.2 million on 1,528 screens for a 17-week cumulative gross of $86.9 million.

So far this year the 23,000 theaters in the United States and Canada have grossed $1.1 billion as against $1 billion in record-setting 1989.

The top 10, this week's gross, total gross, weeks in release:

1. ''Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles,'' $18.8 million, $50.9 million, 2 weeks.

2. ''Pretty Woman,'' $11.2 million, $44.2 million, 3 weeks.

3. ''Ernest Goes to Jail,'' $6.1 million, 1 week.

4. ''The First Power,'' $5.6 million, 1 week.

5. ''The Hunt for Red October,'' $5 million, $83.5 million, 6 weeks.

6. ''I Love You to Death,'' $4 million, 1 week.

7. ''Driving Miss Daisy,'' $3.2 million, $86.9 million, 17 weeks.

8. ''Cry Baby,'' $3 million, 1 week.

9. ''Opportunity Knocks,'' $2 million, $6.4 million, 2 weeks.

10. ''Joe Versus the Volcano,'' $1.4 million, $33 million, 5 weeks.

#90100u1363 04/10/1990 ~United Press International
GENEVA, Switzerland (APRIL 10) UPI - Surging West European air traffic has already caused catastropic air and airport congestion and is now near unmanageable levels, the International Air Transport Association said Tuesday.

Despite the danger and financial losses involved, however, spending by governments on supporting infrastructure remains inadequate, an IATA-commissioned report by experts said.

It said commercial aviation in Western Europe provides 2.5 million jobs and represents around $75 billion in annual economic activity.

Passenger growth has jumped 10 percent annually in recent years and European airlines spend some $5 billion on new planes each year to meet the growing demand.

''To provide supporting infrastructure, governments are annually spending $1.5 billion in capital resources,'' the report said.

But it added, ''This level of government investment is inadequate to support the present system or to permit significant growth. Congestion already produces unacceptable levels of delay, inconvenience and widespread penalty costs.''

''The proportion of flights delayed by more than 15 minutes almost doubled between 1986 and 1989 to approximately 24 percent,'' the report said.

''The cost of these delays to the airlines and the traveling public has been estimated at $1.5 billion annually,'' it said. ''Total loss due to delay, inefficient routings arising from poor route structure and military airspace restrictions ... has been estimated at $5 billion.''

Despite efforts to improve flow management, the report said, the current air traffic system ''will be unable to cope with increases in air travel past 1995.''

''Similarly, without capacity enhancements, travel through at least 10 major European airports will be seriously constrained by insufficient capacity between 1995 and 2000,'' it said.

It estimated that by the year 2000 annual losses to national economies due to constrained air travel growth will be almost $10 billion.

But this can be avoided, the report for IATA said, with ''selected increases in government capital expenditure'' and if ''operating efficiencies needed to meet public demand for air travel'' are put in place.

''Sufficient airspace capacity exists to accommodate likely growth to the year 2010 if it is efficiently organized,'' it said. ''Beyond that time, new technologies will be required.''

There must also be a commitment to quickly implement existing airport development plans, the experts stated.

The report said the 10 airports which ''without enhancements'' will be choked by as much as 85 percent down to 25 percent above current capacity are, beginning with the worst, Madrid, Frankfurt, London-Gatwick, London-Heathrow, Barcelona, Milan-Linate, Duesseldorf, Dublin, Stockholm-Arlanda, and Athens.

Others, extended 20 to 5 percent beyond current capacity, are Palma de Mallorca, Geneva, Manchester, Marseille, Copenhagen and Hamburg.

''High-speed rail travel will have a significant impact on selected routes '' the report conceded.

''However, systemwide, due to the network nature of air travel, its overall effect will be to reduce air travel by less than 5 percent in the year 2010,'' it estimated.

The number of air passengers, on the other hand, will likely double between now and the year 2000 and triple by 2010, it said.

HONG KONG (APRIL 10) UPI - Britain's minister responsible for Hong Kong said Tuesday four European nations would join London in offering residents in the British colony passports before Hong Kong reverts to Beijing in 1997.

Francis Maude, minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, said France had pledged to provide passports or right of abode to 1,500 employees of French firms in Hong Kong and their families.

Maude told reporters that Germany, Belgium and Luxembourg were about to announce similar plans as part of a bid to shore up waivering confidence among Hong Kong's 5.8 million people concerned about coming under Chinese rule in 1997. Consulate officials in Hong Kong said Tuesday they had no knowledge of such plans.

Britain's ruling Conservative Party announced on April 4 a plan that would grant up to 225,000 Hong Kong people British passports to stem a so-called ''brain drain'' which has seen about 1,000 people - mostly middle-class professionals - emigrate from Hong Kong each week.

Maude said during the past three months, Britain had approached 20 nations about granting right of abode to Hong Kong people before the 1997 transition.

''There are some very firm commitments and more yet to come,'' Maude said. ''Not all the potential commitments need to become real commitments for one to be talking about a doubling of the total numbers (of foreign passports).''

Maude said he hoped the European plans would be more easily implemented than the British scheme, which faces an assault from both the opposition party and rebel Tories when it goes before Parliament April 19.

''The French government is implementing a scheme which will provide passports or right of entry to up to 1,500 employees of French companies and their families,'' he said. ''Germany, Belgium and Luxembourg are about to finalize schemes of broadly the same nature and a number of other European countries are actively considering what they can do.''

China has repeatedly pledged it would consider all ethnic Chinese in Hong Kong after 1999 to be Chinese nationals whether they held foreign passports or not. But Maude said he expected no opposition from Beijing over an international plan to keep key people in Hong Kong.

''We have explained to China that Hong Kong is in its nature an international place it depends for its success on this sort of international endeavor,'' he said. ''It is perfectly natural for other countries to take an interest in the employees of their own companies which are operating here.''

NEW DELHI, INDIA (APRIL 10) UPI - The upper house of Parliament Tuesday extended for another six months direct rule of Punjab by the central government, which contended that Sikh extremist violence precludes the holding of state Assembly elections.

Two-hundred and eight members of the Rajya Sabha, or the upper house of Parliament, voted for the constitutional amendment, permitting continued federal control of the state.

The lone dissenting vote was cast by J.S. Aurora, a member of a moderate wing of the Sikh Akali Dal party.

The extention of so-called president's rule has been bitterly criticized by the head of a militant faction of the Akali Dal, Simranjit Singh Mann, who has described it as violation of democratic rights and warned it would inflame Sikh anger against New Delhi.

Justifying the need for extending federal rule of Punjab, Home Minister Mufti Mohammad Sayeed told Rajya Sabha members it was necessary to bring peace to the state before assembly elections can be held, perhaps within six months.

Sikh extremists have been fighting since 1983 to create in predominantly Sikh Punjab the independent theocratic nation of ''Khalistan.'' They say they face discrimination from the Hindu-dominated central government.

The government of former prime minister Rajiv Gandhi first imposed presidential rule in Punjab on May 11, 1987. Gandhi dismissed a moderate Akali Dal government, alleging it had failed to curb Sikh separatist violence.

VATICAN CITY (APRIL 10) UPI - The Vatican is studying the possibility of a visit by Pope John Paul II to Cuba, possibly as early as December, the Italian news agency ANSA reported Tuesday.

ANSA quoted Vatican sources as saying the trip to the communist country was ''at least 90 percent certain.''

However, doubts including ''the current pace of change in international relations and a possible return of tensions between the church and the government of Fidel Castro,'' could mean the proposed visit may be pushed back to 1991, ANSA said.

HARTFORD, Conn. (APRIL 10) UPI - Another stumbling block has been removed to allow Northeast Utilities to acquire bankrupt Public Service Co. of New Hampshire and operate the Seabrook nuclear power plant, a company spokesman said Tuesday.

Northeast and Connecticut's second largest utility, United Illuminating Co., have reached an agreement under which UI will drop its opposition to the acquisition in exchange for reduced transmission rates.

UI had feared the takeover would give Northeast a monoply of transmission lines in New England but Northeast has agreed to allow UI to pay a reduced rate to use the lines to sell power over the next 20 years.

Northeast spokesman Jeff Kotkin called the agreement significant bec'ue UI will now support the takeover before federal and state regulatory boards in Connecticut and New Hampshire.

Final hearings are also under way in U.S. Bankruptcy Court in Manchester, N.H., to complete the takeover.

Because two-thirds of Northeast's business is in Connecticut, ''We want to make sure they feel comfortable with it and the second largest utility company feels comfortable with it,'' Kotkin said.

UI, which must use Northeast transmission lines to sell power to other utilities, had been a major opponent to the proposed $2.3 billion takeover and had filed objections with the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission.

In a motion filed with the federal commission in January UI charged Northeast had at times refused to provide certain transmission services and had put ''onerous and monopolistic terms and conditions on transmission services.''

Under the agreement regarding Seabrook, UI agreed to support Northeast as operator of the plant. UI owns 17.5 percent of Seabrook, which received its full-power license last month. After the acquisition of Public Service Northeast will own nearly 40 perent of Seabrook.

Last month, Northeast, with 400,000 customers, reached a separate agreement with another previous opponent, New England Power Co., a subsidiary of New England Electric System.

UI serves a densely populated 17-town area around New Haven and Bridgeport.

Northeast, the largest utility in New England, serves 1.25 million customers in Connecticut and western Massachusetts.

NAIROBI, KENYA (APRIL 10) UPI - The United States has no proof that cluster bombs dropped on Ethiopian rebels last week by government forces were supplied by Israel, an embassy spokesman in Kenya said Tuesday.

''We have no clear physical evidence that Israel has provided such weapons to the government of Ethiopia,'' the spokesman read from a prepared statement. ''We have raised the subject of Israeli weapon shipments to Ethiopia (with Israel) and we've been told Israel is not supplying and would not supply cluster bombs.''

Bombs dropped in four days of raids ending Sunday killed 73 and wounded 360 rebels and civilians at the Red Sea port of Massawa, according to the Eritrean People's Liberation Front. The EPLF is a rebel group fighting a 7-year-old war of independence in northern Ethiopia.

Cluster bombs contain smaller bombs that detonate close to the ground and spread shrapnel over an area the size of a football field.

Until now, cluster bombs, developed by the United States for clearing jungles in Vietnam, were thought to have been available only to the U.S. and Israeli military. Israel was given them on the condition they be used only in self-defense.

Ethiopia's western neighbor, Sudan, has repeatedly claimed in recent months that Israel is supplying arms and military advisers to the former Marxist regime in Addis Ababa, replacing Soviet advisers who are pulling out. Sudan said in February that Israel had established naval bases on Ethiopian offshore islands and called on the Arab world to oppose Israeli destabilization tactics in the Horn of Africa.

Israel has consistently denied supplying arms of any kind to the Ethiopian government.

Western diplomats in Nairobi said Ethiopia might have developed cluster bombs technology independently.

The Ethiopian government has tried for almost two months to dislodge the EPLF rebels from Massawa, 470 miles from the capital. The port's loss to the rebels in February dealt a severe blow to government forces in the north, cutting off sea access to the whole of Eritrea and Tigre provinces.

The cluster bomb attacks followed rebel rejection late last month of a government call for peace talks in Nairobi, which were to have started

Sunday.

LONDON (APRIL 10) UPI - Stock prices closed lower in light trading Tuesday on the London International stock exchange amid investor worries over the effects of rising inflation.

The blue-chip Financial Times 100-stock index, which gained 6.6 points Monday, closed down 10.2 points to 2,217.5. The narrower top 30 industrial average lost 9.8 points to 1,732.5.

Volume amounted to around 367 million shares, compared with 305 million shares Monday.

Analysts said prices fell amid worries heightened by a warning from major British company chiefs that the government's tight monetary policy was hurting profitability.

In addition, analysts said, the 773.25 point drop in the Tokyo Nikkei Average stopped investor sentiment from receiving a much needed boost.

On the corporate front, B.A.T Industries PLC tumbled 24 cents to $11.84.

California state insurance regulators ruled Monday against a bid by French company Axa Midi Assurances to acquire Farmers Group Inc., the U.S. insurance subsidary of Britain's B.A.T Industries PLC.

Axa Midi is the partner of Hoylake Investments Ltd., an investment group led by Sir James Goldsmith, in its complex $21 billion bid to acquire tobacco giant B.A.T Industries and its subsidiaries, including Farmers.

Under the agreement, if Axa Midi were to secure U.S. approval for its proposed $4.5 billion acquisition of Farmers, Goldsmith would pursue the takeover bid for B.A.T and, if successful, sell the U.S. insurance operations to Axa Midi.

Goldmsith also said he would sell all of B.A.T's non-tobacco interests.

Anglo Group fell 16 cents to $3.65 in sympathy.

British Airways PLC gained 4 cents to $3.23 after reporting a 10.8 percent increase in revenue passenger miles for March.

BICC PLC lost 14 cents to $3.07 after an annual meeting in which company executives warned that profits were being squeezed by the government's economic policies.

A recent profits warning undermined Carlton Communications, which fell 13 cents to $8.54, while better-than expected profits lifted TVS PLC 6 cents to $1.89.

Meanwhile, analysts noted the slump in global oil prices bogged the oil sector. Crude oil prices have fallen about $2 a barrel over the past week on news of oil surpluses in Europe and the U.S. and overproduction by members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Elsewhere in Europe, prices on the Frankfurt Stock Exchange closed broadly lower in moderate trading.

The closely watched German Stock Index, which lost 1.2 percent of its value, or 23.98 points, Monday, fell 1.3 percent, or 23.35 points, to 1,898.51, its lowest level since March 16.

Market watchers said the weakness in the Tokyo market sent prices lower.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 10) UPI - President Bush appointed Richard Armitage, a former assistant defense secretary, to be special negotiator for sensitive talks on the future of U.S. bases in the Philippines, the White House said Tuesday.

With the critical talks approaching, White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said in a brief statement that Armitage would take the new job soon. Bush last year nominated Armitage as secretary of the Army but later withdrew the nomination at the request of Armitage, who cited family concerns.

There was widespread speculation, however, that Armitage did not want to go through Senate confirmation hearings where he was certain to be questioned about reports he had been aware as assistant secretary of defense for international security affairs - a post he held from 1983-1989 - of the secret U.S. sale of weapons to Iran that turned into the Iran-Contra scandal.

Armitage does not need Senate confirmation as special negotiator, the Pentagon said.

''The president is pleased that he has accepted the assignment,'' Fitzwater said.

Pentagon spokesman Pete Williams said Defense Secretary Dick Cheney was ''delighted'' with the appointment.

The lease renewal talks with Philippine President Corazon Aquino for the two largest military installations outside the United States are expected to be difficult. Aquino, who already has fended off several coup attempts, refused to meet with Cheney during his recent visit to the Pacific island nation.

Fitzwater, saying that ''discussions are expected to begin soon on the future of the U.S. military facilities,'' stressed their importance to security in the region and added that the administration remained hopeful the talks would be fruitful.

''We look forward to productive talks leading to the conclusion of a mutually beneficial new agreement,'' he said.

The Pentagon said earlier that the negotiations would begin in mid-April, possibly next week.

The United States has rented Subic Bay Naval Base, a repair facility for the 7th Fleet, and Clark Air Base, home of the 13th Air Force and largest American air base outside the continental United States, for $900 million until 1991.

Both bases are on the main island of Luzon.

The land for the bases was acquired after the United States seized the Philippines from Spain in the Spanish-American War. They were developed after World War II and are home to about 15,000 servicemen and about 23,000 of their dependents.

The bases employ about 43,000 Filipinos and put about $300 million annually into the island nation's economy.

Strategically, the Philippines stand as the U.S. bulwark to growing Soviet naval forces in the Western Pacific and the gateway to the Indian Ocean, where U.S. aircraft carrier battle groups have patrolled continuously since the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan in December 1979.

Estimates of relocating the bases range from $3 billion to $15 billion.

(APRIL 10) UPI - The parent company of United Airlines announced today it has signed an agreement for an employee buyout of the airline. U-A-L Corporation officials in Chicago say the agreement signed with the three major airline unions is the same one agreed to Friday as a result of around-the-clock negotiations. The package worth a total of four-point-three-six-BILLION dollars would make United the largest employee owned company in the world.

SALEM, OR (APRIL 10) UPI - A backache turned into instant motherhood for Robin Osbourn, who said she had no idea she was about to have a baby - until she did.

Osbourn, 21, of Bend, awoke Sunday morning at a Newport motel, nauseated and with her lower back throbbing. The pain persisted as she rode in the back seat of a car to Salem. It ended abruptly when she gave birth to a 7-pound, 12-ounce boy Sunday evening in the parking lot of a Salem grocery store.

"I thought it was just a backache," Osbourne said Monday of the pain that led to the surprise birth of son Robert Kyle. "All I knew was I was a mess and I thought my innards were out on the floor."

She said she was engaged to the baby's father in September but ended the relationship three months ago. Both said they don't know what will happen now, but Osbourn is happy to have her son.

Osbourne had worked a full day Friday as a certified nursing assistant for Care Associates, an in-home elderly care agency. With her friend, Levetta Marrs, and Marrs' boyfriend and son, Osbourn spent Saturday on the coast at Newport, relaxing and watching whales.

Marrs stopped at the Salem store on the way home to buy a soft drink. "It just felt like a gush of water. Then something fell on my feet," Osbourn said. Marrs scooped up the baby, slapped his bottom and placed him on Osbourn's stomach until an ambulance arrived.

The baby's 27-year-old father said he will stay in touch and help out financially. Osbourn will stay in Salem with relatives until her six weeks of maternity leave ends. "It's just a new thing. One minute you don't have a kid, the next minute you do - pretty weird," Osbourn said.

LIMA, PERU (APRIL 10) UPI - Independent candidate Alberto Fujimori, who stormed to the forefront in Peru's political scene with a neck-and-neck second-place finish in a weekend vote, appeared Tuesday to be gaining backing that could propel him into the presidency in a runoff election.

Fujimori is expected to get the support of the American Popular Revolutionary Alliance, the party of President Alan Garcia, whose candidate came in third in Sunday's presidential election. He also was likely to win the backing of two leftist coalitions. Garcia was constitutionally barred from seeking re-election.

The political commission of Garcia's party scheduled a meeting to discuss its position in the second-round vote.

If Fujimori holds his supporters from the first round of balloting Sunday, the votes from the other parties would give him enough to win the presidency.

Writer Mario Vargas Llosa barely edged Fujimori in the general election with each getting near 30 percent of the vote, according to vote projections. But since neither received more than 50 percent, the election was thrown into a second vote between the two top candidates.

Lima newspapers were filled with headlines and stories suggesting Vargas Llosa was ready to quit the race and hand the presidency to Fujimori, 51, an agriculture engineer whose parents immigrated from Japan.

Supporters of Vargas Llosa denied the speculation.

''There is nothing about a resignation that has not been considered up to now,'' said Enrique Ghersi, head of political ideology for the Liberty Movement that Vargas Llosa helped to create and that backed his candidacy.

Federick Cooper, a spokesman for the group, said ''the possibility has not been discussed.''

Vargas Llosa on election night called for talks with Fujimori to reach an agreement to avoid a second-round. But he did not say he was willing to resign the race and Fujimori rejected any agreement that would cancel the vote, which could be the end of May or first part of June.

Vargas Llosa, 54, is an internationally known novelist who entered politics at the head of a center-right coalition. He proposed a severe economic ''shock'' program of cutting government spending, freeing exchange rates and slashing subsidies to control Peru's inflation that reached 2,775 percent in 1989.

But the program appeared to frighten voters, who turned to Fujimori as the alternative to Vargas Llosa, the left and the party of the highly unpopular Garcia.

Official results from the election were not expected for at least two weeks. The projections by pollsters are based on vote totals from local polling places selected as representative of their area.

JERUSALEM (APRIL 10) UPI - Labor Party leader Shimon Peres, anticipating approval Wednesday of his newly formed coalition government, said he was optimistic the Middle East peace process would move forward and the Palestinian uprising will subside once he takes office as prime minister.

In interviews with Israeli newspapers this week, Peres expressed confidence that his coalition government would receive the support of the Israeli Parliament, or the Knesset, during a vote of confidence scheduled for Wednesday.

Peres' center-left Labor Party appears to have the support of at least 61 members of the 120-seat legislature. If he can command a majority during the special Knesset session, Peres will take over the government from transitional Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, who heads the right-wing Likud Party.

In an interview with the daily Al Hamishmar published Monday, Peres said he would move rapidly to advance the peace process by replying to Secretary of State James Baker's plan for holding talks with a Palestinian delegation.

''We will give a positive answer to Baker. We will hold the first meeting of the (foreign) ministers,'' he said referring to a proposal by Baker to meet with Israeli and Eygptian foreign ministers to discuss the framework of the Israeli-Palestinian dialogue.

Shamir's refusal to accept the Baker proposal, which called for the participation of Palestinian deportees and Arabs with residences in East Jerusalem, led to the March 13 breakup of the Likud-Labor coalition and a vote of no confidence two days later that brought down Shamir's government.

Peres, however, declined to give details of his plans.

The Labor leader also was optimistic that his newly formed government would improve Israel's situation.

''We will establish diplomatic relations with the U.S.S.R.... There will be a dramatic change in the international standing of Israel and its economic standing,'' he told Al Hamishmar. ''There is a good chance that the (Palestinian) intifada will die down.''

Peres told Yediot Aharanot that the pro-democracy movements of Eastern Europe would spread to the Middle East.

''What happened in Eastern Europe was an objective necessity. The undemocratic regimes have reached the end of the road,'' he said. ''Who would have believed three years ago that Jordan would hold democratic elections to its Parliament... Also the Palestinians who are living among us have learned the advantages of democracy.''

Peres said he envisaged Israel playing a leading role in a newly democratized Middle East.

''All in all, the states in the region understand today that the solutions are not to be found on the battlefield,'' he told Yediot Aharanot. ''My vision relates to the next 25 years in which Israel will again shine as it shined during the first 25 years of its existence.''

Barring last-minute defections, Peres appeared to have assembled enough votes for a majority in the Knesset during the special session in the middle of the Jewish Passover holiday. In addition to Labor's 38 seats, Peres had the backing of the small left-wing and Arab parties as well as one religious party and one Likud Party member who had been persuaded to break with his party.

As a Labor victory appeared more certain, reports surfaced that the ultra-Orthodox Shas party may support Labor or abstain from voting Wednesday.

Peres, a protege of Israeli founding father David Ben-Gurion, has served in many senior government posts, including defense minister and prime minister from 1984 to 1986 under a Labor-Likud coalition government.

INDIANAPOLIS (APRIL 10) UPI - Mourners disregarded dreary weather Tuesday to pay their respects to the family of teenaged AIDS victim Ryan White at a funeral home in suburban Carmel.

White, 18, died Sunday at Riley Hospital for Children in Indianapolis after a five-year struggle against acquired immune deficiency syndrome. His fight against the disease, and the fear and ignorance spawned by it, gained him international admiration.

Funeral director Brian Buchanan, of the Flanner & Buchanan Mortuary, said he was prepared for a large turnout during the 2 p.m.- 8 p.m. visiting hours.

"The weather is not that good today, but judging on the telephone calls we're receiving, we're expecting a lot of people. The phones have been ringing constantly. Non-stop."

White's funeral is to be at 2 p.m. Wednesday at Second Presbyterian Church in Indianapolis. Classes at Hamilton Heights High School, where White was a junior, will be held but students will be excused to attend.

White did not live in Indianapolis and was not Presbyterian, but the funeral site was chosen because of its size. "It can certainly handle over 1,000," Buchanan said. The Rev. Ray Probasco, a Methodist minister and friend of the White family, will preside at the ceremony.

Police and special security were on hand at the mortuary to handle traffic during visiting hours. "It's a large funeral home, but we hope to keep people moving," Buchanan said.

Buchanan said the funeral home is preparing for "several celebrities." "We'll probably have a special place for them so they and the family can have a place by themselves," he said. "We kind of have to play that by ear as the situation goes along."

Willie Nelson, football player Howie Long and other celebrities visited White's hospital room during his stay, although he was heavily sedated and on a respirator.

Singer Elton John arrived in Indianapolis April 2 when news of the youth's failing condition broke. He has remained in the city, dedicating a song to White during a performance Saturday at Farm Aid IV and Monday helping with funeral arrangements, said Pam Perry, spokeswoman for the Indiana University Medical Center, which includes Riley Hospital.

Singer Michael Jackson, another friend, visited Ryan's mother, Jeanne, and sister, Andrea, Sunday at the White's home in Cicero, about 25 miles north of Indianapolis.

"Our main concern is for the immediate family. In a situation like this, it's sometimes difficult for the family to go through the normal grieving process. ... Our main concern is to provide a forum for them to be able to do that with as little disruption as possible," Buchanan said.

White was diagnosed with AIDS in December 1984 after contracting the virus from a blood-clotting agent used to treat his hemophilia. He was told he might live six months to one year but he survived more than five years. During those years, the teenager traveled the world to help lessen fear, ignorance and panic about AIDS.

White was hospitalized March 29 with an AIDS-related respiratory ailment that ultimately proved fatal. Upon his death, praise for White and condolences for his family came from across the country.

BONN, WEST GERMANY (APRIL 10) UPI - The Soviet Union and its former communist European allies were among 35 states that approved Tuesday a document calling for multi-party democracy and free-market economy.

The document was passed by consensus at the Bonn Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe, attended by Canada, the Soviet Union, the United States and all European states with the exception of Albania.

"It is rather astonishing that the Americans managed to get everyone to agree on the principles," a senior Western delegate said. "The Soviets were a little uneasy at first, but they finally agreed to the principles - the American ten commandments really," said the official who asked not to be named.

Alan Holmer, who heads the U.S. delegation to the conference, said earlier that "there are no losers in this agreement." "This is a win-win agreement which should help expand economic growth and economic development," Holmer said Monday after the 35 participating states informally agreed on the concluding document, which includes several paragraphs suggested by the U.S. delegation.

The conference, which began March 19 and ends Wednesday, focuses mainly on the economic aspect of East-West cooperation.

In the document, participating states expressed their commitment to "multi-party democracy based on free, periodic and genuine elections" and to "the rule of law and equal protection under the law for all..." They also agreed they would try to achieve or maintain "free and competitive market economies where prices are based on supply and demand."

Holmer said that although not legally binding, the principles "can have a powerful political and moral force and can be used by businessmen and politicians to push for reform."

DETROIT (APRIL 10) UPI - United Auto Workers President Owen Bieber, denouncing another year of exorbitantly high pay for top auto executives, called Tuesday for fundamental changes between management and labor to put UAW workers on a more secure footing.

In opening a three-day conference in Detroit for the union's skilled trades workers, Bieber said the nation's automakers - not the auto workers - are responsible for improving product quality and bolstering the competitive position of U.S. manufacturers.

''America's industrial challenge is not a little bit management's fault and a little bit the union's fault,'' Bieber told some 1,200 union delegates at the Westin Hotel. ''It's management's failures, plain and simple, that have put us in the precarious situation we face in so many sectors today.''

Bieber said creating a firm foundation of a secure work force will be the goal of the union's negotiations for new labor contracts that begin this summer covering about 450,000 workers at General Motors Corp., Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corp.

The current three-year pacts expire at those carmakers Sept. 14.

''Threatening workers with cutbacks and insecurity'' will only perpetuate the ''downward spiral our companies are on,'' Bieber noted.

Addressing skilled trades workers in particular, the union leader said that if automakers are intent on maintaining or raising the quality levels of their products, they must make those employees a major part of their competitive strategies and encourage more apprenticeships.

''Attempting to shortchange or bypass the trades will have the opposite effect,'' Bieber said.

Tensions between labor and management were heightened by the release Monday of proxy statements by GM and Ford that gave the 1989 pay of their top executives, as high as nearly $6.6 million, including bonuses and exercised stock options.

''The big buck syndrome in Detroit is a disease that's still in need of a cure,'' said union leaders. ''The auto industry has real and pressing problems, but the companies signal only arrogance and business-as-usual attitudes through these excessive payments to senior executives.''

Third-ranked Chrysler is to release its proxy statement Friday disclosing the remuneration of its top executives for 1989.

BOSTON (APRIL 10) UPI - Men who have demanding jobs but little control over what they do may be especially likely to develop high blood pressure, researchers said Tuesday.

A first-ever study of high-stress, low-control work found men with such jobs three times more likely than others to have high blood pressure, said Dr. Peter Schnall of Cornell University Medical College in New York.

''The traditional notion of stressful work is that of an executive job,'' said Schnall. But while high-powered executives may experience momentary increases in blood pressure, he said they may be less likely than blue-collar workers to undergo prolonged blood pressure changes because they have more control over their work.

The Cornell study, published in the Journal of the American Medical Association, also found that stressful jobs that offer little opportunity for decision-making may lead to physical changes that enlarge the heart.

Schnall's team found that men in the 30- to 40-year-old range with high-demand jobs generally had hearts that were slightly larger than normal, although that was not the case in the older workers studied. He said heart enlargement may result when job stress stimulates the central nervous system and makes the heart beat faster.

The reason that younger workers appeared more likely to have enlarged hearts than older men might stem from the fact that the study excluded everyone over 45 with signs of heart disease - including heart enlargement he said.

In the study, researchers looked at 215 predominantly white men aged 30 to 60 who worked at seven urban job sites, including a stock brockerage firm, a warehouse, a newspaper typography shop, a hospital, a sanitation collection facility, a health agency and a liquor marketer.

Based on repeated blood pressure measurements taken while they were at work, the men were divided into two categories: 87 were classified as having high blood pressure, while the other 128 had blood pressure in the normal range. None had any obvious signs of heart disease.

After questioning the men about the demands of their jobs vs. their ability to make decisions and exercise control, the researchers decided that 28 percent of the high blood pressure group and 17 percent of the others had what they called ''job strain.''

While workers age 30 to 40 who faced daily job strain had only a slightly higher rate of high blood pressure than other workers, the risk rose dramatically with age. Men age 41 to 50 with high-stress, low-control jobs had 2.5 times the high blood pressure rate of other workers, and the rate was five times higher by the time such workers reached 51 to 60.

Schnall's team plans to follow the workers for five years, charting changes in blood pressure and heart mass. A group of women with job strain is being added to the study, he said.

In an editorial accompanying the report, Dr. Redford Williams of Duke University called Schnall's research ''another step toward a better understanding of how the brain contributes to the disease process.''

When the results are combined with other research on the brain-body relationship, ''perhaps the idea that the brain plays a role in physical disease will soon seem less 'revolutionary' and more like 'normal science ''' Williams said.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 10) UPI - The Justice Department said Tuesday it may try to seize the personal assets of crooked savings and loan executives, as well as institutional thrift holdings.

David Runkel, spokesman for Attorney General Dick Thornburgh, said the attorney general discussed the issue over breakfast with Timothy Ryan Jr., the newly confirmed director of the Office of Thrift Supervision.

Runkel said the Justice Department was exploring the idea of using ''pre-judgment attachments'' to seize personal and institutional financial assets ''derived from S&L wrongdoing.''

It is an option that is ''under serious consideration,'' Runkel said. Such seizures would be attempted before there was a final judicial determination of possible wrongdoing.

Runkel was not able to explain exactly how the proposed process would work. He said he assumed officials would need an order from a judge.

Seizure could be made of thrift assets and personal holdings of company executives, Runkel said, adding, ''it would prevent assets from being dissipated.''

Runkel said he could not promise that authorities would be able to freeze ''substantial funds'' but added, ''It's a possibility.''

Authorities have had a consistent problem with recovering money from looted thrifts, Runkel said.

He noted that in the Dallas banking region, authorities have gained convictions against some 49 people but recovered only $12.5 million in assets - compared to the cost to taxpayers ''in the hundreds of millions of dollars.''

''That has been our problem all along in these S&L cases,'' Runkel said. ''Our effort here would be to have some of those assets frozen,'' including money and personal property of thrift executives.

The ''pre-judgment attachment'' process was approved in the thrift bailout bill on Aug. 10, 1989, Runkel said. The legal procedure cannot be used in cases originating before then, Runkel said, because the law did not contain a retroactive provision.

Hundreds of thrifts have collapsed during recent years because of a combination of risky investments, weakening real estate markets and insider fraud.

The congressional General Accounting Office estimated last week that the cost of the taxpayer bailout would be $325 billion over 30 years and others have said it could reach $500 billion. Last July, the administration's Office of Management and Budget placed the cost at $257 billion.

Ryan was recently confirmed by the Senate as the nation's top savings and loan regulator, despite admissions of past drug use and a lack of financial experience. He was confirmed by a vote of 62-37 after a major lobbying campaign by the Bush administration.

Runkel said Thornburgh directed Justice Department staff aides and FBI agents to meet next week with officials of the Office of Thrift Supervision to discuss the issue further.

NEW DELHI, India (APRIL 10) UPI - Bombs exploded inside two police stations in the Indian capital Tuesday, injuring at least 10 officers and shattering windows, police said.

The two bombs detonated almost simultaneously around 1:30 p.m. inside the Tilak Nagar and Rajouri Garden police stations, a police official said.

He said the two blasts in the western district of New Delhi left 10 police officials injured - six in Rajouri Garden station and the other four in the nearby Tilak Nagar station.

''There was a deafening noise from the upper floor and the building was filled with smoke,'' said another police official from the Rajouri Garden facility.

He said the impact of the blast broke window panes and toppled items from tables.

The Press Trust of India news agency said the bomb was planted in a toilet. It said the bomb at the Tilak Nagar station was left in a garbage can beneath a staircase.

The official said police would look into the possibility of the involvement of extremist groups. Police gave no further details and no group claimed responsibility for the bombings.

India has been rocked by separatist violence in northern Punjab state and neighboring Moslem-dominated Jammu and Kashmir state.

Sikh extremist groups have been waging a bloody campaign since 1983 to create an independent theocratic state in Punjab. More than 7,000 people have died in the struggle, which has occasionally extended to other parts of northern India.

There have been no known cases, however, of Kashmiri Moslem separatists staging attacks outside of Kashmir.

Moslem separatist groups have been waging a bloody campaign since 1988 for the secession of the Kashmir region. The campaign turned into a mass uprising in mid-January following firing on demonstrators by security forces.

NEW YORK (APRIL 10) UPI - Singers Patti Labelle, Richie Havens and Ashford and Simpson joined other musicians Tuesday to record a music video in tribute to the hundreds of students killed in China's Tiananmen Square massacre last year.

The video, to be released June 4 - the date that marks the first anniverary of the brutal crackdown on the pro-democracy movement in China - is the brainchild of a Chinese-American musician, Philip Woo, who said he felt young people in the United States need to be enlightened about the tragedy.

''I feel that young people here are not aware of events that affect them and are not involved enough in things,'' said Woo, 33, who plays keyboards for the soul group Maze.

''I think people should be concerned about what happens in the world. Tiananmen Square was the first domino that gave inspiration to other people to shoot for these pro-democracy movements'' in Eastern Europe, Woo asserted.

''I want (this song) to be on all the major video networks so that people who aren't exposed, and who aren't bookish and newspaperish, will see this.''

Proceeds from the music video and a separately released song were to go toward the construction of a monument in Washington, D.C., a traveling exhibition of photographs and a tour of exiled students.

Woo said he hoped his video, simply titled ''Tiananmen Square,'' would help educate the American public about the story behind the massacre by chronicling the history of the reform movement in China.

''I think a lot of people are not aware of the story that went on. They only saw the newscasts, the tragedy,'' he said.

Woo, who composed the music and was producing the video, said he felt a ''personal need'' to pay tribute to the hundreds, possibly thousands, of people killed when Chinese army troops swept into the square to crush the student-led pro-democracy movement.

''Even even thought I'm born and raised in America, I feel kinship with my distant brothers in China because we're both thinking on the same thing. We're thinking about peace, equality, human rights.

''I think these are basic things that people have the desire for and I think that's the reason I'm doing this whole thing,'' he said, adding that he was footing the entire cost of the video himself - about $30,000.

Among those singers expected to perform in the music video, which went into production Tuesday, were Patti Labelle, Ashford and Simpson, Richie Havens, and the Hooters, Woo said.

CAPE CANAVERAL, FL (APRIL 10) UPI - The shuttle Discovery's launch on a historic flight to put the $1.5 billion Hubble Space Telescope in orbit was delayed one to two weeks Tuesday because of last-minute trouble with the ship's power steering system.

"It's going to take time to sort that out and we don't have a specific target for a new launch date, but it's going to be probably between a week and two weeks down the road," launch director Robert Sieck said at a news conference.

Discovery's countdown had proceeded smoothly to the T-minus five-minute mark, when the shuttle's three hydraulic power units were started. But 20 seconds later, commander Loren Shriver reported problems with auxiliary power unit No. 1. A few minutes later, launch was postponed for the day.

"We will scrub for today because of a problem with auxiliary power unit No. 1," NASA launch commentator George Diller said shortly after Discovery's countdown stopped at the T-minus four-minute mark. "We will now have an analysis of the data and look at our options."

It was a frustrating disppointment to Shriver, 45, co-pilot Charles Bolden 43, flight engineer Steven Hawley, 38, Bruce McCandless, 52, and Kathryn Sullivan, 38, who climbed out of the still-fueled space shuttle about 45 minutes after the countdown was stopped.

It was equally frustrating to scientists associated with the space telescope project, but they took the delay in stride. As one astronomer put it: "The universe is 15 billion years old. What's a few more days?"

Launch director Robert Sieck said Monday that Discovery must be launched by Friday at the latest or the mission will be delayed eight days or so because of required work to open the shuttle's payload bay doors to recharge the space telecope's batteries.

Shriver and his all-veteran crew had been scheduled for liftoff on the 35th shuttle mission at 8:47 a.m. Tuesday, but the countdown was stopped at the T-minus four-minute mark when one of the shuttle's three "APUs" failed to perform properly.

The auxiliary power units, which are not fired up until the T-minus five-minute mark in the countdown, are crucial because they provide the muscle needed to move the shuttle's wing flaps, rudder and rocket nozzles for steering during the thundering climb to space and during re-entry.

While the shuttle can fly with just one operational APU, conservative flight rules require all three to be performing properly before a ship can be cleared for liftoff. Whenever it gets off the ground, the costly telescope promises to revolutionize optical astronomy.

Shriver and company plan to spend their first day in orbit checking out Discovery's systems and testing the ship's 50-foot-long robot arm, which astronomer-turned-astronaut Hawley plans to use the day after launch to release the telescope into space.

Veteran spacewalkers McCandless and Sullivan, meanwhile, plan to check out the suits and tools they would use for an emergency spacewalk if the telescope's electricity-producing solar arrays fail to unwind properly or if its antennas do not unfold as planned.

But no such problems are expected and Hawley plans to use the shuttle's mechanical arm to release the telescope into space around 2:10 p.m. on the second day of the mission.

"There's no question, I will feel more nervous about doing this than anything I've ever done on any of the flights I've flown before," Hawley, veteran of two previous space missions, said in an interview.

Assuming all goes well, Shriver then will back the shuttle away from the telescope while engineers at the Goddard Space Flight Center in Greenbelt, Md., carefully activate the instrument's many systems.

The astronauts, meanwhile, will conduct a series of relatively minor experiments for the remainder of their five-day mission before gliding to a landing at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif.

Able to detect the glow of a two-cell flashlight a quarter of a million miles away, the Hubble Space Telecope's near-perfect 94.5-inch mirror and its five primary instruments will detect light emitted from stars and galaxies shortly after the "big bang" explosion thought to have created the cosmos.

The big bang is believed to have occurred between ten billion and 20 billion years ago, but the exact age of the universe is uncertain by a factor of two, prompting astronomers to split the difference and say the cosmos is roughly 15 billion years old.

One of the major goals of the 15-year space telescope mission is to refine the age of the universe to within 10 percent and to gather evidence that may help astronomers prove whether the universe will continue to expand forever or one day collapse in a cataclysmic "big crunch."

BONN, WEST GERMANY (APRIL 10) UPI - Decades of environmental neglect in East Germany have resulted in the worst atmospheric pollution of any European country, massive damage to forests and widespread water contamination, according to a study released Tuesday.

The study by the West German official Statistical Office said that every year, East German industry pumps 2.2 million tons of dust and 5.2 million tons of sulfur dioxide into the atmosphere. It said that few measures were taken to correct the situation and that, as a result, the country had the most polluted atmosphere in Europe.

In 1987, 31.7 percent of East Germany's forested area was damaged. In 1988 the figure shot up to 54.3 percent. The East German Agricultural Ministry recently gave an even higher figure, saying as much as 90 percent of the forests were damaged.

The West German study also said one-fifth of all water in East Germany is so polluted that it could not be purified into drinking water. The study said 67 percent of all factory waste water was still polluted when released into lakes and rivers because of ineffective purifying processes.

It said East German authorities spent far too little money to rectify the situation, and said the high level of pollution was the direct result of their decades of environmental neglect.

Less than 0.4 percent of the East German gross national product was spent on environmental protection last year, compared with 0.9 percent in the United States and 1.1 percent in West Germany, the study said. Experts have estimated the cost of an effective anti-pollution drive in East Germany at more than $60 billion.

The disastrous environmental situation has been attributed to high polluting, outdated factories, the widespread use of low-quality coal and an almost complete lack of environmental protection technology.

HOUSTON (APRIL 10) UPI - Conoco Inc., one of the nation's major oil companies, said Tuesday that it will require all new tankers to have double hulls, which some industry critics argue could have prevented last year's Alaska oil spill.

The Du Pont subsidiary said it will "construct only doubled-hulled tankers in the future, starting with immediate orders for two such vessels, to decrease the environmental risk from the transportation of crude oil."

The requirement is "possibly the first by a U.S. company," Conoco said. The oil industry's American Petroleum Institute in Washington said it knew of no other U.S. oil company requiring doubled-hulled tankers, although some have such vessels in operation.

In addition, Conoco said it would provide double containment systems for all newly constructed and renovated gasoline outlets and encourage independent dealers affiliated with Conoco to do the same.

"We're in business by the public's consent," Conoco President Constantine Nicandros told a news conference in announcing the tanker policy as part of a new company nine-point environmental program.

Environmentalists have charged the March 24, 1989, spill of 11 million gallons of crude oil into Alaska's Prince William Sound, the worst U.S. oil spill in history, could have been prevented if the Exxon Valdez tanker had double hulls.

Exxon Corp. President Lee Raymond said last month the company had made no decision on requiring double-hulled tankers but noted it probably would not build any new tankers for a couple of years. Raymond said Exxon was awaiting the completion of a study on double-hulled vessels by the National Academy of Engineering.

There has been an environmental backlash in the wake of the Alaska spill, including invigorated opposition to drilling for oil in Alaska's Arctic national wildlife reserve, believed to contain the nation's largest remaining reserves. Perhaps in response, the U.S. oil companies have heightened their environmental awareness.

The API and its member companies Monday announced the adoption of "a comprehensive set of guiding environmental principles, renewing and reemphasizing their commitment to safe and ecologically sensitive operations."

Conoco also pledged to make a one-third reduction in refinery toxic air emissions by the end of 1993, to set up a program to reward top managers for environmental work and penalize them for lack of performance in this area and to create year-long environmental fellowships to let outsiders work within the company.

(APRIL 10) UPI - A problem with the shuttle Discovery's hydraulic steering system forced a postponement of the blast-off for the mission to launch the BILLION-dollar Hubble Space Telescope. And mission controllers told engineers to prepare for what is termed an ''extended scrub turn-around''... an indication that the lift-off could be delayed more than 24 hours. The countdown was stopped at the T-minus-four-minute mark because of a problem with auxiliary power unit Number One, which provides power to operate the shuttle's wing flaps, rudder and rocket steering nozzles during the thunderous blast into space.

Three Westerners who were being held hostage in Lebanon are free. Gunmen in two cars dropped off a French woman, her Belgian boyfriend and their daughter this morning in front of the French Embassy in Beirut. The captives were released following negotiations between Belgian officials and the Abu Nidal extremist group. Authorities say another child born to the woman during the hostage ordeal died from an intestinal illness.

Authorities in Copenhagen, Denmark, removing the charred bodies of victims of a weekend fire aboard a Danish ferry predict that the death toll could go as high as 200. Police had recovered 109 bodies from the burned-out cabins and passageways aboard the ''Scandinavian Star.'' Fire and maritime officials are criticizing the safety measures aboard the ship. It's suspected the fire was deliberately set.

South African police say unidentified gunmen ambushed a mini-bus carrying commuters in a black township in violence-wracked Natal Province today, killing seven passengers and wounding three others. Authorities say one man has been arrested in the incident, in which more than 20 blacks opened fire on the mini-bus, killing seven people instantly. More than 100 people have died in black-on-black violence in the province in the past three weeks.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 10) UPI - The FBI, under sharp attack for widespread discrimination against its black and Hispanic employees, presented a medal Tuesday to a Hispanic agent wounded during a shootout four years ago.

The FBI presented its medal of valor ''for exceptional acts of heroism in the face of life-threatening situations'' to Edmundo Mireles, an agent in the bureau's Miami office.

Mireles, 37, was wounded during a Miami-area gun battle with two bank robbery suspects on April 11, 1986. During the gunfight, two FBI agents were killed and the two suspects were shot to death. Several other FBI agents were wounded.

More than 145 rounds were fired during the shootout after FBI agents on surveillance began chasing two suspects near a bank just outside Miami.

The award was presented to Mireles by FBI Director William Sessions. Mireles, who received two standing ovations, also was praised by Attorney General Dick Thornburgh and CIA Director William Webster, who led the FBI at the time of the shootout.

Mireles was accompanied by his wife, Elizabeth - also an FBI agent in the Miami bureau - and their young son.

During their speeches, neither Sessions, Thornburgh, Webster or Mireles mentioned the discrimination controversy involving the FBI.

Several current and former FBI agents have testified before a House Judiciary subcommittee that the FBI's institutional discrimination against Hispanics has gotten worse since they won a class-action lawsuit in 1988.

A federal judge in El Paso, Texas, ruled that the FBI had engaged in systematic discrimination against Hispanic employees.

The agency has come under sharp congressional attack that recently prompted Sessions to order a broad internal inquiry into the discrimination allegations.

A number of black employees also have accused the FBI of ingrained institutional racism.

Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., a former FBI agent who heads a House subcommittee on civil rights, recently said: ''It is scandalous that some in FBI management continue to use petty retaliation against those who took on the bureau and won.''

WASHINGTON (APRIL 10) UPI - Defense Secretary Dick Cheney has asked the Air Force to explain why it incorrectly told him both 2,000-pound bombs dropped on Panama by F-117A stealth fighters had hit their targets, the Pentagon said Tuesday.

Cheney learned that one of the two bombs dropped in the Dec. 20 invasion fell ''way off target'' only after making inquiries to the Air Force based on a reporter's photographs of the bomb craters, Pentagon spokesman Pete

Williams said.

''I think the secretary was initially told (by the Air Force) in a good-faith manner that both bombs had hit their targets,'' Williams said when asked at the Pentagon briefing whether the Air Force had deliberately lied to Cheney.

''I don't believe there was any - as far as I can tell - any intent to mislead the secretary,'' Williams said.

''He's asked the Air Force for an explanation and he's confident he'll get one,'' Williams said. ''The secretary is eager to know the course of this (new) information, how it moved through the chain (of command).''

Immediately after the U.S. invasion, Cheney had defended the use of the high-technology F-117As stealth fighters in the attack, saying the pinpoint bombing accuracy of the $106 million planes probably saved both American and Panamanian lives.

Two F-117As were assigned to drop a 2,000-pound bomb each near the military barracks at Rio Hato to stun the Panamanian Defense Forces before a parachute drop by U.S. Army Rangers.

Williams said one of the bombs was on target, hitting about 55 yards from the barracks, but the other was ''way off target'' and the miss, ''as far as we can tell, is (due to) pilot error.''

''Both the secretary and I discovered this in the course of answering a question from a prominent member of the Pentagon press corps,'' Williams said, adding that New York Times reporter Michael Gordon had taken photos of the bomb craters and asked why they were so far apart.

Williams said last week Cheney had just learned of the off-target bomb.

The second bomb, which is believed to have fallen about 300 yards from the barracks ''hit an empty field basically,'' Williams said. ''Seen no indication that the off-target bomb killed anyone.''

Williams said there was ''kind of a last-minute split-second confusion'' by the two F-117A pilots as they approached the PDF barracks, resulting in one of the bombs being dropped far from the first.

But Williams maintained that the mission of the stealth fighters was a success, arguing that the huge explosions created by the bombs probably still had the effect of stunning and confusing PDF soldiers.

The Air Force Monday said an inquiry is under way to determine how it had received the wrong information.

''There certainly was no attempt on the part of the leadership, military or civilian, to keep any information from (Defense Department) leadership. All information was freely provided,'' the Air Force statement said.

''There was some confusion regarding some reporting up the chain of the exact impact point of one of the bombs. While that had little or no impact on the outcome of the mission, we are looking into the causes of this reporting confusion,'' it added.

NASHVILLE, TN (APRIL 10) UPI - Award-winning songwriter Paul Overstreet has been flayed by some critics for the content of his work.

No, not for using suggestive lyrics or dirty words, but for being ''Mr. Goody Two Shoes.''

''I think everybody has a choice and they make their own choices. I make mine. Nobody should be critical of what I write because that is my choice. It's the way I choose to make my life,'' Overstreet said.

''Some writers don't like the messages within songs. They would rather hear cheating songs and they will criticize the music because of that. I just feel sympathy for them. They would say the songs didn't affect them, have no impact, which is quite the opposite. It has an impact or they wouldn't be writing in a negative way.''

For the record, Overstreet was named Songwriter of the Year in 1987 by the Nashville Songwriter Association International and by Broadcast Music Incorporated. He and co-writer Don Schlitz were given Song of the Year honors in 1987 by the Country Music Association for ''On The Other Hand,'' a song popularized by Randy Travis. The two writers repeated the feat the next year for ''Forever and Ever Amen,'' also recorded by Travis.

In addition, Overstreet has penned numerous No. 1 songs. His RCA album ''Sowin' Love'' has put Overstreet out front as an artist in his own right with three top-five hits.

Overstreet was asked if he limited himself with his self-imposed ban on writing negative songs.

''You could look at it that way. But it also causes me to really stretch to say something in a different way. I think boundaries are good. If we don't have boundaries, it can get real chaotic. If you allow yourself everything, you can spread yourself thin. Boundaries give you definition and that has really helped me.''

Overstreet freely admits to living the wild life when he first came to Nashville but changed his lifestyle. He says he is now deeply religious.

''I don't miss the sad songs I used to write. I don't miss the misery I used to put into songs, or the complaints. If you look at it, it's saying how bad things are. It's saying how you feel, how your heart feels. It's how you handle the misery and the failures.

''You have to handle failures. Everybody has to do that. That's OK. You just can't cut that out of the radio because that's part of people. And you are going to have it. But I don't think it's my job. I don't think I have a right to be critical of people who write those songs, who are making a living and doing what they do.''

''Love Helps Those,'' ''All The Fun'' and ''Seein' My Father,''which went No. 1, are examples of Overstreet's positive outlook.

Overstreet co-writes with only a handful of other writers, but the most important one is Schlitz.

''It's hard for me to start a relationship with a co-writer. It takes time and energy and you have to work through a lot of emotional things to get to know each other. Sometimes that's a little more energy than I have to put out,'' he said.

On co-writing, Overstreet said: ''You have to learn not to think the same way but learn what means something to the other person. Learn what their contribution to the song is. When they hit on something that is valuable for them the other writer must know it. Someone who is not familiar with me wouldn't even know what I consider valuable. Somebody who knows me and with whom I have written before would pick up on that.

''Sometimes an idea comes from just a direction. You may say something but not have the whole picture or the complete idea but you've got a direction. With somone you write with enough to know what it is you are trying to litz is real good at that.''

Recently master guitarist Chet Atkins urged country songwriters to spend more time on melody in their songs.

''He's probably got a point,'' Overstreet said. ''It's getting harder for me to be satisfied with melodies. I can appreciate that statement. If you think about how many notes in the scale and you think about how many songs have been written since way back to the Bible, I find it hard to believe that things are not being used over and over.''

About his life and career, Overstreet said if he were to complain

''somebody ought to take a board to me. I guess my heart's desire was to have these songs on the radio and be successful and for people to hear them. And that is exactly what has happened. I'm thankful that the Lord has allowed me to do that.''

(APRIL 10) UPI - The parent company of United Airlines says it has signed an agreement that will make the Chicago-based carrier the largest employee-owned company in the world. The agreement... which was worked out last week in around-the-clock negotiations... calls for an employee buy-out by three major airline unions. The package is worth four-pointBILLION dollars.

Authorities say a bar-room fight that erupted last night ultimately led to four people suffering gunshot wounds... two of them police officers. Officials say two men got into a fight in a Duluth, Minnesota, bar last night. They say the two left the bar and one returned a short time later with a chest wound. The police officers were wounded in a shootout when they went to a nearby hotel to question the other an involved in the fight.

MIAMI BEACH, FL (APRIL 10) UPI - Firefighters and search dogs spent a tedious sixth day analyzing the rubble of the Fontana Hotel Tuesday for signs of five people still missing after last week's fire.

Nine bodies have been recovered since fire gutted the hotel early Friday in the historic art deco district and five residents of the 102-room residential hotel were still unaccounted.

Firefighters, federal agents and construction workers were slowly working their way through the building, shoring up weakened beams and mangled girders to make it safe enough to proceed.

"You've got some overhangs that have burnt out and collapsed. You've got sofas and refrigerators hanging over the top. It can be a little unsafe for those working down below," siad Malcom Brady, chief of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms' arson investigation squad.

Search crews resumed their ghastly work about 8 a.m. and planned to work till 5 p.m. or 6 p.m., looking for clues to the fire's origin and signs of the missing residents.

"They are continuing to sift through the debris and analyzing the remains as they sift through them," said Miami Beach police detective Tom Hoolahan. "We still believe that certain individuals were in and about the building. How accurate that is, we have no way of knowing. They (investigators) just have to wait till they are satisfied in their own minds that they've successfully completed the entire building. Until then, it's purely conjecture."

The fire spread rapidly through the three-story Fontana about 3 a.m. Friday, injuring 21 people. About 150 residents were relocated by the Red Cross. Firefighters said it may be several weeks before the cause of the fire is known.

PARIS (APRIL 10) UPI - France is reducing its military forces in eastern Chad just 10 days after reinforcing them following battles between Chadian government troops and Libyan-backed rebels, diplomatic sources said Tuesday.

France sent 15 combat aircraft to Abeche in eastern Chad on March 30 and flew in an additional 146 paratroopers to the West African nation in what the Defense Ministry described as an ''implicit warning'' to Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi not to challenge the government of President Hissene Habre.

The sources said about 300 of the 500 soldiers stationed in Abeche near the Sudanese border were being redeployed to the Chadian capital of N'Djamena. The airborne troops have already returned to base in southern France, the sources said.

''The trouble situation has become almost normal despite the continuation of sporadic battles, but the risk is much less,'' one source said.

Troops loyal to rebel leader Idriss Deby crossed from their sanctuaries on the Sudanese border with Chad two weeks ago and captured the towns of Tine and Baha on Chad's eastern border.

The rebels also launched hit-and-run attacks at government garrisons in the Chadian cities of Iriba and Guereda before being pushed back by forces loyal to the N'Djamena government.

The number of French soldiers in Chad was reduced from 1,300 men to 1,000 at the end of last year following a peace agreement between Chad and Libya in September 1989.

The French contingent in Chad, known as ''Epervier,'' was deployed there Feb. 15, 1986, in response to a Libyan offensive in northern Chad.

Chad, a former French colony, has fought a sporadic war with Libyan forces since 1973, mainly for control of the mineral-rich Aouzou Strip in the north.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 10) UPI - There were 105,265 cases of worker exposure to radiation at U.S. nuclear power plants in 1988, the highest number of incidents ever in one year, an anti-nuclear group reported Tuesday.

Public Citizen, a group created by consumer activist Ralph Nader, said its review of federal documents showed workers at the nation's 107 commercial nuclear plants were exposed to 41,077 person-rems of radiation, a dose the group estimated as equivalent to 2 million chest X-rays.

The group said the average worker received a dose of about 390 millirem, roughly equal to 20 chest X-rays. There are 1,000 millirem in a rem. More than 12,000 workers in 1988 received at least one person-rem of radiation, a dose equivalent to 50 chest X-rays.

Public Citizen said its review of Nuclear Regulatory Commission records for 1988, the most recent year available, showed the total number of worker radiation exposure incidents has increased 31 percent since 1980, when there were 80,389 reported cases.

"The problem of radiation exposure at commercial nuclear power plants has continued unabated for more than three decades," Public Citizen said in its report, "Glowing on the Job: Worker Exposure to Radiation at Nuclear Power Plants." The group said the large number of worker exposure incidents "represents one of the ongoing, but hidden costs of nuclear power."

Public Citizen called on the NRC to lower its regulatory limits for radiation exposure in the nuclear industry, which prohibits any plant worker from receiving more than three rem every three months or five rem every year.

Nuclear industry officials criticized the Public Citizen report as distorted, saying the group only publicized those statistics that fit their biases.

"Public Citizen has proven once again that they don't let the facts stand in the way of their determined anti-nuclear diatribe," said the U.S. Council for Energy Awareness, the nuclear industry's trade association.

The council said the total number of worker exposure incidents has increased over the past decade because more nuclear plants have begun operation. But it said the number of workers per plant exposed to radiation has declined 22 percent in the period 1984 through 1988.

The council also noted that the average worker dose of 390 millirem cited by Public Citizen was just slightly higher than the 360 millirem dose absorbed by the average American over a year from natural radiation sources such as radon gas and cosmic rays. The 360 millirem figure was calculated by the National Academy of Sciences in a December 1989 report.

NRC officials said their statistics also showed a decline in worker exposure at nuclear plants, with the collective dose to workers at the average plant falling from 714 person-rem in 1984 to 398 person-rem in 1988.

Of individual plants, the Pilgrim plant in Plymouth, Mass., had the highest number of worker exposures from 1980 to 1988, recording 27,701 incidents, almost three times the industry average of 10,271 per reactor.

Other reactors with the worst track records over that eight-year period were Oyster Creek in Forked River, N.J., which had 20,486 worker contamination incidents, and San Onofre, San Clemente, Calif., 20,472.

For 1988, Oyster Creek had the largest number of incidents, with 2,875, followed by Nine Mile Point Unit 1, Scriba, N.Y., 2,626; Peach Bottom Units 2 and 3, Peach Bottom, Pa., 2,102 each; and Pilgrim, 2,073. In contrast, the average number of contamination incidents per reactor in 1988 was 983. Here are the 20 plants identified by Public Citizen as having the poorest overall worker exposure records, with the worst plants first:

Oyster Creek; Nine Mile Point Unit 1; Peach Bottom Units 2 and 3; Surry Units 1 and 2, Gravel Neck, Va.; Fitzpatrick, Scriba, N.Y.: Palisades, South Haven, Mich.; LaSalle Units 1 and 2, Seneca, Ill.; Robinson Unit 2, Hartsville, S.C.; Brunswick Units 1 and 2, Southport, S.C.; Hatch Units 1 and 2, Baxley, Ga.; Maine Yankee, Wicasset, Maine; Dresden Units 2 and 3, Morris, Ill.; Arkansas Units 1 and 2, Russellville, Ark.
